prises that have come to his hand with execution and wisdom, being at this time operating the leading livery and draying barns in the city. Mr. Biram was born in Winona county, Minnesota, on October 5, 1856, being the son of J. and Margaret (Welden) Biram, natives respectively of Ohio and Pennsylvania. They farmed in Minnesota for fourteen years and then removed in 1869 to Nebraska, where they remained until the time of their death in 1893. Our subject commenced the labors of life for himself at the age of fourteen years, farming in Minnesota for one year and then going with his parents to Nebraska, occupying himself there on the range handling cattle from Texas to the Dakotas, becoming familiar with all the skill and lore of the real cowboy until 1874, when he returned to Minnesota, settling in Steele county, where he farmed until 1891, at which time he came to this county. He was occupied in different undertakings until 1900, when he started a draying outfit, and later opened a first class livery barn, both of which businesses he is still conducting in a successful manner, having the bulk of the draying business to handle, and doing a fine business in the livery department. Mr. Biram has fine stock and handsome and up-to-date rigs and exercises an untiring and constant care for the welfare and interests of his patrons, which have given him a good trade.

On March 18, 1881, in Waseca county, Minnesota, Mr. Biram married Miss Katie, a native of Wisconsin and daughter of Rudolph and Emma Babbler, farmers in Minnesota. To this marriage there have been born four children, Rachel, Arthur, Clark, Mable. Mr. Biram is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and also of the Red Men, Nez Perces Tribe No. 75. Mrs. Biram is a member of the Congregational church.

MARION F. MUNCEY. Among the enterprising citizens of Latah county should be included the name of the subject of this article whose worthy labors here have made him a forceful factor in the substantial progress of the county. Marion F. was born in Harrison county, Missouri, on September 10, 1868, being the son of Lafayette and Elizabeth (Moore) Muncey. The father was born in Illinois in 1838, and the mother was born in 1835, in the same state, and her father, Samuel Moore, was born there also. The parents removed their family to Silver creek, Washington, in 1872, and there the father died on March 22, 1879. At that time William, an older brother of our subject, took charge of the farm and Marion labored out and gained what education he could. It was in 1897 that they removed to Garfield, Washington, and there our subject worked until the mother bought the present farm of eighty-five acres seven miles east from Garfield. He has a comfortable home and the land is well tilled and produces abundantly.

On April 26, 1891, Mr. Muncey married Miss Sarah E., daughter of John E. and Elizabeth (Carnahan) Griner, the father a farmer in Latah county, now deceased. To this union there have been born five children, Pollord R., Eugene, Elsie M., Charles W., Elizabeth V., all at home. Mrs. Muncey was born in Pennsylvania on November 25, 1871, and she has the following named brothers and sisters, Henry in Washington; Joseph, deceased; John, in Latah county; George, in Latah county; Mary, deceased; Nettie, wife of Columbus Cockrell, in Latah county; Maggie, wife of E. C. Covey, Ballard, Washington; Phillip, in Nez Perces county; Pollard, deceased; Bertha, wife of William Hayden, in Latah county. Mr. Muncey has the following brothers and sisters: William, in Latah county; Miranda, deceased; John F., at Everett, Washington; Mary S., wife of Pollard Griner, but now a widow. Mr. Muncey is a member of the W. of W. He always devotes time and attention to the affairs of politics, being allied with the Democratic party. He is a man well respected and has the good will and esteem of his fellows.

JACOB L. HARRISON is one of the worthy pioneers who assisted to open up Latah county and he has also, since his settlement here in 1883, steadily labored for its improvement and development, having wrought with commendable zeal, wisdom, and thrift, as his fine farm of sixty acres, seven miles west from Kendrick, on Big Bear ridge, testifies, being an estate well improved and giving annually handsome returns; while personally, Mr. Harrison is a man of integrity and worth and is dominated by sound principles and a discriminating perception and practical judgment that have brought his fine success. In addition to doing a general farming business, he handles some stock and has a good orchard of ten acres.

Mr. Harrison was born in Fayette county, Ohio, on June 25, 1847, being the son of George and Lavina (Collow) Harrison. While still a child he came with the balance of the family to Huntington county, Indiana, where he grew up, gaining a good education from the common schools and assisting on the farm. When he was fourteen years of age, another move was made, this time to Whiteside county, Illinois, and there he remained with his parents until the time of his majority. He stepped forth from the parental roof then for the battles of life on his own resources and as the west gave great indications of opportunity, he made his way to Marshall county, Kansas, took a homestead and for fourteen years we find him toiling in the art of the agriculturist in that locality. It was 1883 that he sold his possessions there and came to Latah county, as stated above, and since that time he has been one of the subsantial and patriotic citizens of this county and a valuable addition to its society.

The marriage of Mr. Harrison and Miss Flora, daughter of Elias and Julia Smith, was solemnized in Marshall county, Kansas, in September, 1873, and they have become the parents of six children, as follows: Lily, Rose, Ivy, Pearl, Mamie, deceased, and Ernest M. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison are members of the Christian church and are faithful supporters of their faith, being exemplary citizens and good people.

XAVIER HEINRICH. While the section where our subject lives was but wild prairie and only occasional settlers were here and there in the territory now embraced in Latah county, he came and settled on his present farm, five miles northwest from Genesee, and began the excellent work of development and upbuilding which he has followed with wisdom and assiduity since, having now the proper reward of such enterprise and thrift. Xavier was born in Germany, the land whence come so many of the best American citizens, being the son of Martin and Mary Anne (Kempt) Heinrich, and the date of his inception of life's career was September 24, 1851. His parents were natives of the fatherland, and there lived and labored until the time of their death. Our subject was a dutiful son beneath the parental roof until twenty-one years had rolled by, and then he stepped forth to do for himself. He first bade farewell to loved ones and native land and embarked for America, where he went to work in Newark, New Jersey, in a bakery for two years. Then he went to California and operated a dairy for three years, after which, in 1877, he came to Idaho, settling on his present place, and securing title to a half section through the homestead and pre-emption rights. He has purchased more until he now has four hundred and forty acres of fine land. He has devoted his attention to farming and stock raising constantly since that early day and he is now one of the prominent and wealthy men of the county. His farms are well handled, his stock is profitable, he has fine improvements in buildings, orchards and so forth, and an air of thrift is evident everywhere. In addition to this fine holding, Mrs. Heinrich owns three hundred and twenty acres adjoining her husband's estate.

The marriage of Mr. Heinrich and Mrs. Catherine Greiser, was solemnized in Lewiston, this state, one June 30, 1880, and they have become the parents of one child, John M., born March 18, 1881. They are all members of the Catholic church. Mr. Heinrich has seen much of the hardship incident to pioneer life, and has demonstrated his ability in the solution of the intricate problems that come before the early settler, by wisely handling the resources at hand and in displaying commendable business ability.

GEORGE TEGLAND. This representative and intelligent agriculturist of Latah county is well entitled to consideration in this volume and is accorded such since he is a man of sound principles and good ability, which has been manifested here for twenty years. He is now the owner and manager of a fine estate of three hundred and twenty acres, five miles north from Genesee, where the family home is. George was born in Kendall county, Illinois, on December 3, 1855, being the son of Ole and Isabella (Marcus) Tegland, natives of Norway. The father emigrated from Norway in 1848, settling in Kendall county, Illinois, where he engaged in farming until 1872, being also married there, in which last year he removed to Story county, Iowa, farming there also until of late years he has retired from active labors and lives with his son in that county. The first twenty-two years of our subject's life were spent in service with his father and then he took up railroading for a year or so, after which he married and settled down in Story county, Iowa, where he purchased a farm and devoted himself to producing the fruits of the soil. In 1882, he sold his property there and migrated to Latah county, taking a homestead where he now lives. Later he purchased another quarter. He has given his entire attention to the management and improvement of his farm and the result is that he has a fine property, well improved, while he is a man of good reputation and is highly esteemed throughout the neighborhood.

On February 28, 1882, in Story county, Iowa, Mr. Tegland married Miss Jennie Borgen, a native of Norway, and to them have been born the following children: Oscar T., Alvin D., Nellie M., Arthur O. and Jessie L. twins, the latter of whom died; the youngest child is also named Jessie L. Mrs. Tegland's parents were, Amund and Dortha (Herselberg) Borgen, natives of Norway, but immigrants to this country in 1869. The father lives here and is a member of the Lutheran church, but the mother died on December 22, 1897, and is buried in the Lutheran cemetery. Our subject and his wife are members of the Lutheran church and he is one of the substantial and well-to-do men of the section.

GEORGE L. MOCHEL. This well known business man has been a familiar figure in Genesee for a number of years and is one of the leaders in the business realm, at the present time operating in partnership with his brother, Benjamin F., mention of whom appears in another portion of this volume, a first class livery and feed stable in the city, having fine rigs, good stock, and manifesting an untiring zeal for the safety and welfare and comfort of his patrons, who are numbered by many scores.

George L. was born in Johnston county, Indiana, on February 5, 1855, being the son of George L. and Elizabeth (Lenertz) Mochel. While a child, he came with his parents to Maryville, Missouri, and there until he had reached the age of twelve, received his schooling from the common schools of the land. At that young age, he started for himself in life, working as a laborer until 1873, then rode the range in the Cherokee nation for one year. Then his adventurous spirit led him to the west, Seattle, Washington, being the point first selected. There he wrought at the carpenter trade, which he had mastered in his minority, for six months, then came to Columbia county in that state, there taking a homestead, which he subdued, improved, and sold in the year 1889. He next brought a herd of cattle to the Big Bend country in Washington, and on account of the hard winter, lost the entire amount, entailing a financial loss of over two thousand dollars. Following this disaster, he came to Genesee, arriving here on August 1, 1891, and rented a large piece of farm land, paying three dollars per acre, and he did well. Then he bought eight acres of land in the city of Genesee and builded him a house, the same being his family home at the present time. In 1900, his brother died, who had established a livery business in Genesee in 1893, and our subject took charge of the same, and is operating it now with good success, it being the leading barn in this section, and handled in a becoming manner with skill and business ability. Our subject soon took in his brother, B. F., and they are proprietors of the business at this time.

The marriage of Mr. Mochel and Miss Lottie S., daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Cope) Billings, was solemnized in Maryville, Missouri, in 1878, and three children have been born to them: Elizabeth C., wife of George Bolliow, and living in Troy, Idaho; Claud J., in Genesee; Charles F., with parents and attending school. Mr. Mochel has served as constable of the home precinct several terms in an acceptable manner, having also been marshal of the city for a term of two years. He takes an active part in politics and displays zeal for right principles. Fraternally, Mr. Mochel is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., both the subordinate and the encampment branches, having passed all the chairs in both departments and also has been delegate to the grand lodge from both. He is also a member of the M. W. of A., having been elected first V. C. of Genesee Camp, No. 6703, and re-elected three times since, also being sent by this camp a delegate to the state convention in 1901.

FREDRICK P. KRESSELT. This substantial and enterprising farmer of Latah county is a native of Germany, being born on July 31, 1875, the son of Frederick C. and Amelia, both natives of Saxony, Germany. Our subject remained at home until fourteen years of age, gaining his education from the common schools, and then was apprenticed to a cabinet maker where he served for three years. His father had died when this son was an infant and his mother had married again. After three years of the cabinet work, Mr. Kresselt decided that America was the place for him and accordingly he came to New York and thence to Palouse, getting here in December, 1892. He worked at odd jobs for a time and then bought a piece of land in 1897. He has sold and bought several pieces of land and he purchased his present farm of one hundred and sixty acres, one mile west from Cora, in March, 1902, having also thirty-five acres of land besides. He has a good farm, well improved and is now handled in a skillful manner.

The marriage of Mr. Kresselt and Miss Rosa, daughter of Julius H. and Laura L. (Gates) Fessenden, was solemnized in Latah county, on February 23, 1897, and to them has been born one son, William P., and one daughter, Minnie Amelia, who died February 1, 1902. Mr. Fessenden was born in Indiana, on November 10, 1848, and was captain and engineer on a steamboat for many years, but is now farming in Latah county. His wife was born near East Portland, Oregon, May 5, 1854. Mrs. Kresselt was born near East Portland, January 5, 1880, and was educated in the common schools. Her brothers and sisters are Edna, wife of Milton Fennimore, at Mountain View, California; Laura, Dolly, Earl, George E., Robert, all at home, and Addie, Mamie, Nora, Willie, deceased. The brothers and sisters of our subject are named as follows,—Ernest, in Latah county; Max, in Germany; Birdie, wife of Paul Rotjig, in Germany. Mrs. Kresselt's father enlisted in the Civil war but was too young and so was refused. He had two brothers, Major and John Fessenden, who fought for their country. Our subject raises the cereals and fruits and is a progressive and thrifty farmer.

WILLIAM A. COMER. The birth of this esteemed gentleman occurred in Hocking county, Ohio, on September 18, 1843. His father, Charles, was a millwright, born in Ohio, in 1817, his grandfather was born in Vermont and his great-grandparents came from Ireland. The mother of our subject, Sophia Roush, was born in Ohio in 1817, and her mother, Eva Harsh, was a native of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Harsh's father was a soldier in the Revolution, moved to Ohio in 1810, and died in 1856, one hundred and six years of age, while Mrs. Harsh lived to be ninety-six years of age. The father of our subject died two months before the latter's birth and his mother died when he was five years of age, so his early life was spent with his grandmother. He remained with her laboring and attending school until eighteen years of age and at the breaking out of the war, he enlisted in Company D, Seventeenth Ohio Infantry, under Captain Charles Rippiey. He was sent to the Army of the Cumberland under General Thomas and participated in the battle of Mill Springs when Zollicoffer was killed in 1862. He fought at Stone River, Chickamauga, Atlanta, Jonesborough, and in many other engagements. At Chickamauga a rebel hit him over the head with a musket, his clothes were shot full of holes, his canteen was shot away and he was wounded in the leg. He was stricken there with paralysis and was discharged, but the doughty and intrepid man was not thus to be deprived of fighting for his country and his interminable grit pulled him through and as soon as he was presentable again he promptly came to the front and reenlisted and staid with the conflict until the close of the war, being in the Fifty-eighth Ohio, Company A. Following the war, Mr. Comer went to farming in Ohio, and in 1868 he went thence to Coles county, Illinois, then to Edgar county, where he farmed and worked at carpentering for five years, and in 1874 we see him in Shelby county, and thence he went to Kanasas in the fall of 1885, settling in Jackson county. Two years later he went to Logan and there homesteaded land. It was on June 15, 1889, that he landed at Garfield and came over into Latah county, and here he has remained since, except for two years and one-half, when he was excursioning through Utah, Nevada, Arizona, and southern Idaho, returning here in the condition expressed by the laconic epithet "Broke." He went to work and now has one hundred and sixty acres of as fine soil as is in Latah county and located one mile west from Cora. He devotes himself to farming and stock-raising, mostly the former.

Mr. Comer married Miss Nancy R. Shoff on September 27, 1867, and she died in 1884, leaving the following named children, Edwin L., in Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Almeda V., wife of Andrew Smith, in Kansas; Eva M., deceased; Lydia E., wife of Charles S. Smith, in Latah county; Jeremiah E., deceased; Laura E., deceased; Nellie A., deceased; Isaac H., deceased.

The second marriage of Mr. Comer was celebrated on March 19, 1886, in Kansas, Alice E., daughter of Martin L. and Abby A. (Brinkerhoff) Hickman, descendants of the early Dutch stock that colonized New York, at that time becoming his wife. To this union there have been born the following issue: John A., Jesse H., Lee M., Ruth U. Mr. Hickman was a carpenter, born in Virginia in 1832 and his wife was born in New Jersey in 1838, while the daughter, Mrs. Comer, was born in Grand View, Illinois, on June 23, 1855. Her brothers and sisters are named as follows: Anna J., deceased; Rachel J., wife of Earby Miller, in Chicago; Lydia B., deceased; Sarah M., in Chicago; Olive E., deceased; Orlo S., deceased; Owen G., in Chicago. Mr. Comer is assistant state lecturer for northern Idaho for the Alliance and is active in politics. He was candidate for state legislature in Kansas on the Union Labor ticket and for probate judge in Latah county in 1892 on the Populist ticket. In addition to his farming Mr. Comer devotes much attention to artist's labors, having gained commendable skill in this line.

ULRICH C. RIETMANN. As one who has conserved the industrial and commercial interests in Latah county, and wherein he has made a brilliant success, we are constrained to mention the gentleman whose name appears above. Mr. Rietmann is an energetic, capable, and progressive business man and manages a first-class butcher shop in Troy, owns and leases the large brick hotel known as the Rietmann House, buys and sells stock of all kinds, has a fine farm near the town, and also handles fruit, and operates a fruit dryer and cold storage plant, besides a number of large warehouses, being one of the leading men of the county and recognized by all as a power in the business world.

Mr. Rietmann is a native of that stanch little republic, Switzerland, and was born in Canton, July 4, 1853, the son of Henry and Babete Rietmann. The parents remained in the native country until the time of their death, highly respected and influential citizens. Our subject received his early education there and at the age of fourteen went to Brazil, South America, and there labored for three years with an uncle, who was a surveyor in that country. After the expiration of that period, Mr. Rietmann came to our western coast but soon went thence to Switzerland, remaining there until 1881. In that year he came and located in San Francisco, taking up the butcher business. It was 1890 when Mr. Rietmann sold his interests in California and came thence to Latah county. He sought out his present location and opened a shop and in the prosecution of that business he has steadily continued with the addition of the industries mentioned above, thus making him one of the leading business men of the county, which is amply demonstrated by the skill with which he handles the many and varied interests that depend upon his manipulation.

The marriage of Mr. Rietmann and Miss Fannie Hilfecker, a native of Switzerland, was solemnized at Troy, in 1893, and to them have been born two bright and promising boys, Carl and Max. Mr. Rietmann is a practical man and is training his boys to the intricacies of business which will doubtless make them able to carry forward with skill and safety even larger interests than their father has thus far done, although he is considered the leader in his vicinity.

JOHN B. YARBROUGH. In Washington county, Oregon, on January 6, 1845, the subject of this sketch first saw the light and he has been a typical westerner since that time, ever laboring for the welfare of the sections where he has bestowed his labor and doing a lion's share in this good work. His parents are James M., born in Kentucky in 1820, whose father, John, with his wife, were born in Virginia. The mother of our subject is Mary E. Smith, born in Carteret county, North Carolina, in 1822. Her father was Lemuel, who married Hannah Gilicon, both natives of North Carolina. John B. remained with his parents until twenty years of age and then started for himself. He was educated in the common schools of the day. His parents removed to Linn county when he was one year old and took donation claims, remaining there sixteen years. Then they sold out and went back to Washington county. Six years later they went to Crescent City, California, but in two years were back in Douglas county, Oregon, and eight years after that they sold again and came to Latah county. The father died here in 1896. When he left home, John B. rented land in Yam Hill county then went to southern Oregon for eight years in the lumber business, where he was successful. One summer was spent in the Klamath country and then he returned to the Willamette valley in 1876, and in 1880 he came overland to Latah county and preempted a quarter section nine miles east from Garfield, where the family home has been since that date with the exception of the years between 1896 and 1901, which were spent in the Couer d'Alene country.

Mr. Yarbrough was married to Miss Samantha, daughter of John and Margaret (Baker) Long, on August 2, 1867, and the following children have been born to them: Chrystina, wife of W. W. Messinger, in the Coeur d'Alenes; John W., in the Coeur d'Alene district; Addison, in Latah county; Eli O., in Coeur d'Alene; Lottie, wife of Calvin Farnum, deceased; Mona, wife of J. Ross, in Coeur d'Alene; James, in Latah; Margaret E., wife of Lew Solley, deceased; Herbert, in Coeur d'Alene; Homer, at home; Leonard, deceased; Gladys, at home. Mrs. Yarbrough was born in Virginia, on March 21, 1852, and her father was born in Pennsylvania, in 1815, and the mother was born in Virginia, on February 17, 1828. Mrs. Yarbrough's brothers and sisters are Napoleon B., deceased, Christopher C., Mary, Ella, America, deceased, Emma, and John. Mr. Yarbrough has brothers and sisters as follows: Andrew J., in eastern Oregon; Sarah J., wife of D. W. Hayden, in Latah county; Martha J., wife of John Woodfin, in Latah county; Mary, wife of Levi Mohr, deceased; James, killed by a saw in a mill in Oregon; Thomas J., in Spokane, Washington; Lafayette, in eastern Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Yarbrough are members of the Universalist church, while he is socialistic in politics and a member of the school board where he labors ardently for good educational facilities. The farm is well improved and a model place, being an abundant producer.

BENJAMIN F. MOCHEL. The subject of this article has always been a man of great energy and activity, as is shown by his life of enterprise and adaptability, while at the present time he is one of the firm of Mochel Brothers, who operate the P. G. livery, feed and sale stable in Genesee, having a fine property and doing a successful business.

Our subject was born in Maryville, Nodaway county, Missouri, on February 8, 1867, being the son of George L. and Elizabeth (Lenartz) Mochel. While still a child, his parents came to California, thence to Bellingham bay, Washington, and then to Seattle, where this son received his first schooling. But fortune had decreed that he should not stay long there, and soon the family were in Dayton, Washington, whence they removed to Marengo, and thence to Walla Walla, then to Pataha City, where the school days of Benjamin F. were completed. Then at the age of nineteen years he started for himself, renting a farm of two hundred and forty acres for two years, after which he went to Lake Chelan, and thence to Genesee. In 1880 he worked on a farm for ten dollars per month, then went to Troy, Idaho, working at the carpenter trade and in the harvest fields, after which he rented eight hundred acres with his brother and father. He bought property in Genesee that he still owns. In 1893 he went to Cornwall, Idaho, and there his father died, and he handled the farm for two years alone, then returned to Genesee, working for a time in the livery for his brother, then going to the Nez Perces reservation where he took a homestead. Four years later he sold this property and returned to Genesee and since that time has been in the livery business with his brother.

In 1885 Mr. Mochel married Miss Sarah J., daughter of Harris and Angeline Fuller, and they have six children, Cora M., Ellen E., Leonard E., Henry A., Louis, and a baby unnamed, all at home and attending school. Mr. Mochel is a member of the M. W. A. He is a man of sound principles, has displayed commendable zeal in the discharge of the responsibilities of life that have rested upon him, while in his business ventures he has shown good ability, wisdom, and enterprise, which have given him both the confidence of his fellows and a good competence.

MARTIN BECHTEL was born in Knox county, Ohio, near Mt. Vernon, on January 19, 1837, being the son of John and Esther (Moyers) Bechtel. The father was a cooper and farmer, a native of Pennsylvania, as were his parents, while the mother of our subject was also born in Pennsylvania, in 1804, and her parents were early settlers in Pickaway county, Ohio. The other children, in addition to Martin, were Abraham, soldier in the Mexican and Civil wars, now deceased; Samuel, deceased; Mary, wife of Dr. Fletcher, in Ohio; John, deceased; Emanuel, in Illinois; Sophia, wife of R. B. Williams, in Garfield; Esther A., wife of Mr. Jackson, in Missouri. At the age of eight years, our subject was left fatherless, and when he was thirteen, the mother sold out and came to McLean county, Illinois. There he attended school and labored on the farm. Mr. Bechtel remained at home until 1861, then responded to the call of patriotism and enlisted in Company C, Twentieth Illinois Infantry, under Captain John O. Pullen, his company organizing at Bloomington, and the regiment at Joliet. They went to Alton, Jefferson barracks, Cape Girardeau, and after scouting for four months took to winter quarters in Birds Point. Then they fought Jeff Thompson and were victors, at Fredericktown. In 1862 he was ordered to Forts Henry and Donelson and fought in both battles, then at Pittsburg Landing, when they were attacked by Johnson and Beauregard, then he fought at the battle of Shiloh. After this he went into camp at Jackson and later was in the following engagements: Britton's Lane, Willow Spring, Champion Hills, Raymond and Vicksburg, at which place he was wounded in the ankle and had his hearing impaired and eye hurt. He fought also at Kenesaw mountain and at Atlanta, at which place he was captured and spent one month and eight days in Andersonville. He was then taken to Charleston, South Carolina, thence to Florence, when he made his escape and was recaptured, then escaped a second time. In February, 1865, he went home and after reporting, he was honorably discharged. For his faithful service and injuries he receives the small pension of twenty-two dollars per month. He was mustered out at Gainesville and discharged at Chicago and went to McLean county and there remained until 1879, when he removed to his present place in Latah county, eight miles east from Garfield. His wife owns eighty acres of good land here and he practices diversified farming.

Mr. Bechtel and Miss Alice Smith were married in Illinois, on October 8, 1865, and they have the following children: Shelton, in Nez Perces county; Ida, at Blackfoot; Noah, in Nez Perces county; Martin, at Blackfoot; Sophia, wife of George Wesley Bird, in Latah county. Mr. Smith was born in Kentucky and married Miss Sarah Currey, a native of Indiana, and their daughter, Mrs. Bechtel, was born in McLean county, Illinois, in April, 1851. Mr. Bechtel is a member of the G. A. R. and while in Illinois was county commissioner of his county, and he has always taken an active part in the affairs of the country and is an advocate of good schools. He made a commendable record in the Civil war and it was such noble and brave men as he who fought out the awful battles that saved the Union from dismemberment and preserved to posterity the free institutions that are now our pride and joy.

ISAAC S. MILLER. This capable and enterprising agriculturist lives eight miles east from Garfield and has a quarter section of fertile land well improved, and producing, under his skillful husbandry, abundant crops of the cereals and hay and fruits, while also Mr. Miller handles considerable stock. He is the son of Hamilton and Sarah A. (Hunt) Miller, and was born in Jay county, Indiana, on November 16, 1845. The father, a Mexican war veteran, was a farmer and born in Fayette county, Ohio, in 1818, being the son of Hugh Miller, who served under Jackson in the war of 1812 and whose father was a native of Ireland and a soldier in the Revolution, being wounded at Bunker Hill. The wife of this veteran of colonial days was a native of Scotland. The mother of our subject was born in Green county, Kentucky, in 1818, and her father, Isaac C. Hunt, was a Methodist preacher, born in Vermont, being the son of G. M. and Polly (Squire) Hunt, natives of New Jersey. Our subject was taken with his parents to Mercer county, Ohio, when four years of age and five years later went thence to Page county, Iowa. That was the home for ten years, or until 1864, he being a member of the Home Guards, and would have gone to the front, but was too young. At the date last mentioned the family came to the Willamette valley and took land and erected a saw-mill. The father continued there until the day of his death, March 27, 1872. Isaac S. had done for himself from his majority, and in 1878 he came to Latah county, and on October 5th of that year he took his present farm and this has been the family home since that time.

On April 19, 1866, he was married to Miss Hannah N., daughter of Benjamin and Ellen (Armstrong) Kinyon, the nuptials occurring in Polk county, Oregon. One child, Hattie Benson, was born to that marriage. Mrs. Miller was born in 1853, and died in 1872.

Mr. Miller contracted a second marriage, the date being February 5, 1874, at which time Eliza H., daughter of Levi and Sarah (Edes) Burden, became his wife. This wedding occurred in Yam Hill county, Oregon. Mr. Burden was born in Illinois in 1826 and his wife was born in Missouri in 1830. Mrs. Miller was born in Polk county, Oregon, on February 21, 1856. The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Miller are Henry, deceased; James R., in Wardner, Idaho; George L., in Latah county; Isabelle, deceased; Abraham L., in Latah county; Minnie, wife of George Davis, in Latah county; Thomas, William, Jasper, John, in Latah county; Effie and Edward, twins, the latter deceased and the former the wife of Jefferson Poe, in Latah county; Lulu, wife of James Davis, in Latah county; Ennis, deceased. Mr. Miller has brothers and sisters as follows: Lewis H., in Yam Hill county, Oregon; Mary, wife of James Berry, in Oregon; Hugh T., a member of Company F, Twenty-ninth Iowa Volunteers, and was killed in the battle of Lincoln Ferry, Texas, in May, 1864; Robert L., in Oregon; Margaret, wife of W. Smith, in Latah county; Hamilton, in Latah county; John C. and Isabelle, twins, the latter deceased and the former in Oregon; Rhoda A., wife of W. Downing, at Weston, Oregon; Ella, deceased; Lulu, deceased. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller are Elmer, in Latah county; Estella, wife of Frank Adair, in Latah county; Lottie, at home; Esther E., wife of H. Gilmore, of Nez Perces county. Mr. Miller and wife are members of the United Brethren church and he has been a member of the school board, and was president of the Alliance Industrial Union.

It is of note that the ancestors of Mr. Miller's mother came over in the Mayflower.

HANS C. J. TWEEDT. The large real estate owner and prominent agriculturist of Latah county whose name initiates this paragraph, is one of the best known men of the county, and has been eminently successful in his business endeavors in this section, which demonstrates his ability, industry, and enterprise, while his uprightness and integrity have as fully been manifested. Hans C. J. Tweedt was born in Bergen, Norway, on November 29, 1846, being the son of Christian J. and Anna (Seim) Tweedt, large farmers in that country. Our subject received a good education and at the age of seventeen years started for himself. Three years later, 1866, he came to America, and spent two years in the vicinity of Madison, Wisconsin, working and then went to Wausau, in the same state, where four years were spent in the timber. In 1874 Mr. Tweedt came to Marion county, Oregon, purchased a farm and tilled the soil there until 1877, when he came to his present location, one and one-half miles northeast from Genesee, this being Nez Perces county then. He took a homestead and soon began to add further land by purchase until he now owns five hundred and sixty acres, which is abundant in producing crops, giving as high as eleven thousand bushels in one year. Mr. Tweedt has a fine twelve room residence, large barn, forty by eighty, with plenty of substantial out buildings, and a blacksmith shop, while a fine orchard and other tasty and valuable improvements make his home one of rural beauty and comfort. On an adjoining farm he has good buildings also. Mr. Tweedt has thirty head of cattle and plenty of stock and utensils for his large estate, and is one of the most progressive and skillful men of the county. In political matters, Mr. Tweedt has always taken an active interest and in 1898 the people called him to serve in the responsible position of county commissioner, running on the Republican ticket against A. Beardsley on the Fusion ticket and gaining the day by a handsome majority. Also the school interests have gained by his service on the boards.

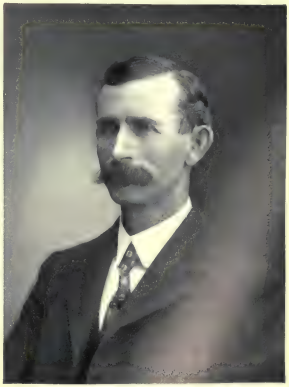
In 1872 Mr. Tweedt married Miss Susana, daughter of John and Amelia Nelson, of Waupaca county, Wisconsin, and they have become the parents of fifteen children, five of whom are dead and ten living, as follows: Carl J., living in Nez Perces county on a fine farm of one quarter section; Emma B., attending the normal and at present teaching school; Louis A., a student at the Idaho University, from which he will graduate in 1903; Christ G., at home; Fred, at home; Annie C., a student at the university; George E., Henry E., Sarah M., Earl A., the last four also at home. Mr. Tweedt is a member of the K. of P., while he and his family are members of the Lutheran church. Mr. Tweedt is well known and well liked throughout the county, and his labors here for years have resulted in much good to the county and its institutions, and he enjoys the confidence of all, which is justly merited.

THEODOR KLUSS. The subject of this article is one of the first settlers in this section, being here long before Latah county had an organization, and is now one of the prominent farmers of the county, well to do, and a man of ability and uprightness in all of his ways, as has been patent from his business enterprises and success here in our midst. He was born in the province of Schlesien, Prussia, on August 15, 1854, being the son of Thomas and Barbara Kluss, natives of the same place, and farmers. The mother died the same year our subject was born and his father was called hence by death in 1867, and both are buried in the home land. The year following the death of the father, Theodor being then fourteen years of age, apprenticed himself to a machinist and learned the locksmith trade. He traveled over most of Germany, Switzerland and Austria, laboring at his trade, and in 1873 longed for new fields, and accordingly came to America. He settled in Madison county, Illinois, and engaged in farming for three years, then sold out and migrated to San Francisco, thence to Portland, and Port Townsend, working for a short time in the latter places, and in the fall of 1877 made his way into the section now embraced in Latah county. He selected a homestead, the place where he now lives, settled upon it, and since that time has been one of the progressive, energetic and intelligent farmers of the country. He has added as much more land to his homestead, giving him one-half section now, which is well improved, and produces abundant crops. The estate is the family home place, and lies four miles north from Genesee. Mr. Kluss is a true representative of that noble and sturdy class known as pioneers and he does credit to himself in the way in which he has demonstrated his ability to aid in the development and advancement of the country.

On August 4, 1887, Mr. Kluss married Miss Mary, daughter of Andrew and Mary Stritzle, and a native of Austria, where also her parents were born and are now living. This wedding took place in Lewiston, Idaho, and the fruit of this union has been four children, as follows: Annie, Rudolph, Mary and John. Mr. Kluss is well to do, having received the proper reward of his faithful labors, and he is active in the matter of politics, taking the part of the intelligent citizen, and he receives the esteem and confidence of his fellows.

JAMES HUTCHISON. Among the leading fruit growers of Latah county must be mentioned the subject of this article, and also it is right that the faithful labors which he has performed for the substantial progress of this county should receive proper consideration. Mr. Hutchison was born near Cape Vincent, New York, on February 23, 1855, being the son of James and Jane (Mores) Hutchison. The first twelve years of his life were spent in Rome, New York; then in company with his parents he came to Waverly, Bremer county, Iowa, where twelve years more were spent in farming, the father being a railroad man. It was in 1881 that our subject came west and settled first on the Snake river, and one year later came to American ridge. After several years of residence there he came to his present home place on Fix ridge, three miles west from Juliaetta. The year 1887 was the date that settlement was made on this place, and the estate shows enterprise and industry on the part of the owner. Mr. Hutchison has fifty acres of orchard, thirty of which is devoted to prunes and the balance to different fruits. He owns one hundred and twenty acres on Big Bear ridge, also a dwelling and several lots in Port Angeles, Washington. He handles considerable stock in addition to his fruit and farming and is one of the leading men of his section.



The marriage of Mr. Hutchison and Miss Sophia, daughter of Rev. Peter and Sophia (Dushing) Desgranges, was solemnized on May 22, 1882, in Moscow, Idaho, and eight children have been born to them: Wallace and Walter, twins, the latter dying when he was five years of age; John and Jane, the former died at the age of seventeen; Caroline, Lottie, Howard, George, all at home. Mrs. Hutchison was born and educated in the state of New York. Mr. Hutchison is a man of ability and commendable activity in his business enterprises, as his accumulations manifest, and he is esteemed and respected by all.

THEODOR KLUSS AND FAMILY.

JAMES HUTCHISON.

JOHN H. HUTCHISON.

JOHN H. HUTCHISON is one of Latah county's most enterprising and capable men, being the largest fruit grower in the county at the present time, and having abundant success in his endeavors because of his skill and wisdom and energy in handling the business, which has grown under his care and direction to the proportions of a business that may well be a source of pride to the entire county.

Reverting more particularly to the personal history of our subject, we note that Mr. Hutchison was born on March 16, 1857, in Steuben county, New York, being the son of James H. and Jane (Mores) Hutchison, natives, respectively, of Scotland and New York state. The father was a bridge carpenter and wrought on structures for railways. When John H. was very young his parents removed to Rome, New York, remaining there until this son was eleven years of age. There also the father died and the mother with her children removed to Iowa, settling near Waverly, Bremer county, where the son remained about thirteen years, being occupied in gaining an education and also in the good work of instruction in the schools. He came west to Whitman county, Washington, in 1880, and for two years he raised sheep there and then retired from that industry and removed to Latah county, where he purchased a right to the quarter section where his house now stands. To that he has added until he owns four hundred and forty acres of fine soil. Mr. Hutchison has improved his estate in a most commendable manner, having an elegant residence, barns, outbuildings, and all conveniences to handle a general farming business. He has an orchard of forty acres, set entirely to prunes, and twenty acres more given to a variety of fruits. His fruit products alone amount to a large industry. He has an evaporating plant one hundred and twenty-eight feet by twenty feet in dimensions, also a large storage house and commodious apartment house for the men, of whom he employs nearly fifty in the busy seasons. Not only does Mr. Hutchison excel in producing large quantities of fruit but at the Spokane fruit fair he won the gold medal in 1894 and also he has won the same at the Kendrick exposition. His work is highly commendatory to him and a source of credit and pride to the entire county.

Fraternally Mr. Hutchison is affiliated with the K. of P. His marriage with Miss Clara E. Barker was solemnized at Moscow, Idaho, on June 23, 1890. She had come from Wisconsin, her native state, with her parents, William F. and Helen M. (Blount) Barker, to Waverly, Iowa, where she was principal of the primary schools and kindergarten for four years after the date of their arrival there, which was 1862. She had also taught in Wisconsin and her entire teaching experience dates over a period of sixteen years. Her father was a general merchant at Waverly for twenty years. After Mr. Hutchison came here he taught one the first schools that was held in the new building on of American ridge. He was the first president of the Potlatch Horticultural Association, also of the fruit fair at Kendrick. In addition to the exhibt which Mr. Hutchison took to Spokane, when he secured the gold medal, he has made four others, and has won various prizes there and elsewhere.

THOMAS H. CHRISTIE. The subject of this sketch is one of the enterprising and progressive business men of Troy, in Latah county, and it is with pleasure that we grant him space in the history of his county, since he has labored here faithfully and has done much for the upbuilding of the county. Mr. Christie is a merchant, handling a mammoth stock of general merchandise in Troy, and he has secured by his sagacious business methods and uprightness, a large patronage.

Recurring to the personal history of our subject, we note, that as so many of our progressive citizens, he came from Norway, his birth being in Christianna, on March 6, 1863, being the son of Halvor and Mary Christie. He came to this country in 1869 with his parents and settlement was made in Jackson county, Minnesota, where he was brought up and educated, laboring also on a farm. It was in 1881 that he came to this country settling first in Lewiston, where he labored for one year. Then he returned to Minnesota and farmed until 1886 when he made a second journey west, that time going to Tacoma, where he labored for the Pacific Elevator Company for one year. In 1887 he came to Genesee. He clerked in a general merchandise establishment there for one year and then opened a retail liquor store, which he operated for four years. 1892 marks the date of his removal to Troy and then he opened his present business, which he has steadily prosecuted since that time with fine success. Recently, Mr. Christie sold his farm interests and is devoting himself to the store altogether.

On February 15, 1892, Mr. Christie married Miss Maggie, daughter of John and Annie Raun, who reside north from Troy, and two children have been born to this union, namely, Mildred and Edna. Fraternally, Mr. Christie is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 29, in Troy and with the Elks of Moscow, Lodge No. 249, and with the K. of P., Lodge No. 11, in Troy. He is a popular citizen and has a good standing among the residents of his section.

PETER JOHANN is one of the prominent men of Latah county, distinguished alike for his enterprising labors and stanch characteristics and intelligence in the affairs of business and the questions of the day, being occupied in the art of agriculture and stock raising, wherein he has made a commendable success. Many of the sturdiest supporters of the stars and stripes and the warmest friends of the principles which they stand for have come to us from the land of Germany, and in the Fatherland the subject of this sketch was born, the date being January 15, 1860, and his parents were John and Anna M. (Shoemaker) Johann. Peter received a good education in the village schools and grew up there until the age of thirteen years had been reached. Five years previous to that time the father had died and the widowed mother came with her family to America, when this son, the oldest, was thirteen. He was faithful in his care of the family that thus early cast responsibilities upon him and he continued in that noble work until he had reached the age of twenty-six. When twenty-one he came at the request of his mother to seek a place in the west, but failing to find what he desired, he returned and remained in the east until 1887, when he again made a tour of the west, on this occasion settling for a time in Union, Washington, whence two years later he came to Latah county and purchased a farm which he tilled for four years. He then sold that property and came to Genesee, purchasing a quarter and renting another and then later purchasing the second quarter, which gives him the fine estate of one-half section, one mile west from Genesee. This property is one of the most thrifty and well kept farms in the county, it being laid out with skill, and improved with taste, and stocked with display of wisdom. His home is a rural retreat of comfort and taste, with a fine residence, good barns and outbuildings, a well selected orchard and everything that could gladden the heart of a lover of home. Mr. Johann has been road supervisor for a series of years and his public life, in which he has done much as delegate to the Bryan conventions in the county, has always been characterized with the same display of acumen, vigor and uprightness that are found in his private walk.

In 1883 Mr. Johann married Miss Johanna, daughter of George and Katherine (Bruns) Bromeling, of Carroll county, Iowa, and five children have been born to them: Annie, Pauline, John M., Mary, and Johanna, deceased. Mrs. Johann was called by death from her happy home and loving family on October 14, 1901. The oldest daughter is keeping house and the family are kept together in the home place, despite this sad loss. Mr. Johann is a member of the Catholic church and in a devoted manner brings his family under the benign influence of his faith. He is a potent factor in the church and labors ardently and wisely for the advancement of its interests.

GEORGE W. GRINER. Eight miles east from Garfield lies the beautiful estate of the subject of this sketch. The home place consists of one hundred and six acres of good land well cultivated and handled to diversified crops, with orchard and fine improvements, while in addition Mr. Griner farms two hundred acres of rented land.

Reverting to the personal history of our subject we note that he was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, on May 8, 1860, the son of John G. and Elizabeth (Carnahan) Griner. The father was a farmer and stockman, born on January 6, 1833, in Pennsylvania, and died March 13, 1900. He served in the Union army under Captains Hayes and Hutchinson. His father was Jacob Griner, a blacksmith, who married Maria Step, born in eastern Pennsylvania. The mother of our subject was born in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, on August 5, 1836, and her parents were natives of the same state. In addition to our subject, this worthy couple had children as follows: William H., in Whitman county; Samuel J., deceased; Oliver, deceased; John E., living in Latah county; Mary, wife of Aaron Fields, now deceased; Susan H., wife of C. J. Cockrell, in Latah county; Maggie J., wife of E. C. Covey, near Seattle; Phillip S., in Idaho county; Pollard R., deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Marion Munsey, in Latah county; Bertha E., wife of William Hayden, in Latah county.

George W. worked on a farm and attended school in Pennsylvania until fourteen years of age and then came west in March with his parents to Pottawatomie county, Kansas. He also attended school in Manhattan, Kansas, and the family remained in that state until 1886, when they made another move, coming first to Spokane and thence to Latah county. Our subject bought his present place and then homesteaded it, having litigation with the railroad company but beating them.

On September 12, 1884, in Kansas, Mr. Griner married Miss Charity A., daughter of John and Julia A. (Hill) Bills, and to them were born the following children: Ernest, Alberta, John I., Elizabeth, Letha, Neva and Georgia A., all being at home except Letha, who is with her grandmother. Mr. Bills was a native of Ohio and his wife was born in that state in 1846. Mrs. Griner died June 13, 1897. Mr. Griner was married a second time on August 5, 1900, in Moscow, the lady becoming his wife being Evabell (Williamson) Foley. Her parents were William W. and Manan (Myers) Williamson, the father being a railroad engineer, born in Ohio in 1832, and the mother born in Buffalo, New York, in 1832, while Mrs. Griner was born in Wisconsin, on December 2, 1863, and she spent some years in teaching school. Her brothers and sisters are Gertrude, wife of Frank R. Porter, in Illinois; George H., in Fort Dodge, Iowa, operating as a railroad engineer; Alta M., wife of Mr. Smith, at Fort Smith, Arkansas. Mr. Griner is a member of the I. O. O. F. at Garfield, and has been affiliated with the W. of W., the A. O. U. W., and the Maccabees. They are members of the Methodist church. In 1892 Mr. Griner was nominated by the Populists for county commissioner, but while he ran ahead of his ticket, he suffered defeat with the entire ticket. He takes a zealous interest in educational matters and is at present endeavoring to arrange for a new school house.

JOSEPH GEIGER. The well known and representative business man whose name appears at the head of this article is one of the prominent men of Genesee, where he owns and operates a fine brewing plant with an output capacity of three hundred barrels per year, and which he handles with skill and display of talent and good business ability. He was born in Baden, Germany, on July 28, 1853, being the son of Joseph Geiger. In the fatherland he was educated in the fine schools to be found there, and at the age of eighteen bade farewell to school-mates, home and native land and launched out into the world for himself. With stout hands and a courageous heart, he was prepared to do good work, and when he landed in America, after a short time spent in visiting friends in New York, we find him busily engaged in railroading in Texas, whence two years later he went to Iowa. Farming engaged him there for a time and then he went to Milwaukee, where he learned the brewing and malting arts, working there until he was a master hand in the science. Then he came to Idaho, took up a homestead and pre-emption, and for twelve years he wrought for their improvement and in the production of good crops. Then he sold out and put up the brewing and malting house that he now owns and operates in Genesee. He has been at this business since 1888, and has accumulated a goodly competence of this world's property owing to his skill and industry, and he is one of the substantial men of the county.

Mr. Geiger married Miss Meta Smith in 1889, and one child was born to them, Anna Geiger. In 1890 Mrs. Geiger was taken from her home and family by the cold hand of death.

In 1893 Mr. Geiger contracted a second marriage, the lady of his choice on this occasion being Charlotte Prager, and two children have been the fruit of this union, Matilda, going to school, and Freddie, the youngest. Mr. Geiger takes an active part in the local politics and matters of government, and is always allied on the side of sound principles and progress. He affiliates with the Catholic church and is a stauch supporter of his faith.

ALEXANDER H. CHARLES. This well known gentleman is one of the prominent citizens of Latah county and a man who is worthy of the trust of his fellows, having been repeatedly called to serve in public office, and to his credit it is to be said that in all this service he has evinced a faithfulness to the trust imposed and for the welfare of the people that has enabled him to discharge in a conscientious and capable way all duties.

Mr. Charles was born in Vernon county, Missouri, on February 26, 1862, being the son of Benjamin and Rachel (Zellar) Charles. He was left an orphan at an early age and secured an education by dint of hard labor, and also mastered the carpenter trade, a goodly showing for one thus thrown out in the world. He followed farming mostly until 1890, when he came to Troy and took up building for a time. He continued at the same for four years and then determined to launch into the mercantile realm, and accordingly he learned the apothecary's art and opened a drug store. He has a fine stock of drugs, paints, oils, stationery, and so forth, and does a good business and is one of the leading mercantile men of the county. In addition to this business, Mr. Charles has a well improved farm one-half mile south from Troy, which supports an orchard of twenty-five acres.

Mr. Charles married Miss Martha, daughter of John and Julia (Summers) Daniels, in Vernon county, Missouri, and they have two children, Maud and Edith. Fraternally Mr. Charles is affiliated with the K. of P., Lodge No. 11, and with the W. of W., Lodge No. 248, both at Troy. Mr. Charles is very active in the political realm, and is now serving his second term as county commissioner from the third district, while also he has served a number of terms as city councilman. He is allied with the Republican party and is faithful in the discharge of duties of both a public character and in business enterprise.

Mr. Charles held a captain's commission in Company M, Idaho National Guards, for three years.

WILLIAM N. THOMPSON. Five miles southwest from Cora, Idaho, is the estate of the subject of this sketch. He bought it some years since and has constantly farmed it, raising abundance of various crops and horses, cattle and hogs. William N. was born in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, on September 17, 1860, being the son of John E. and Easter A. (Love) Thompson. The father was born in the same county in 1837 and his father, Edward Thompson, was a native of Ireland, and the wife of that gentleman was Jeannie Carnahan. The mother of our subject was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, in 1837, and her father was William Love and her mother Mary Thompson. Our subject was educated in the common schools and remained with his parents until he was twenty-one, then migrated to Pottawatomie county, Kansas, and farmed and raised stock. He landed there on March 6, and seven years to a day after that he came thence to Spokane, Washington. He drove a team for the C. & C. Mill Company of that city for a time and then came to Latah county and settled on a piece of land which he afterward abandoned, because it was lieu land. In 1892 he purchased his farm, as described above.

The marriage of Mr. Thompson and Miss Anna, daughter of John and Martha (Carnahan) Dial, was solemnized in Pottawatomie county, Kansas, on November 6, 1884, and they have six children, Millie, John, Orville, Ruth, Elsie and Inez, all at home. Mr. Dial is a farmer and a large operator in stock and was born in Ohio on October 14, 1833, while his wife was born in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, on November 21, 1840. Mrs. Thompson was born in Pottawatomie county, Kansas, on October 4, 1864, and was educated in the public schools and the Manhattan high school. Mrs. Thompson has brothers and sisters as follows: Lewis, in Latah county; Millie, wife of Elmer Whitmore, in Spokane, Washington; Mary, wife of Shafer Carnahan, in Kansas; Samuel, in Oklahoma: Haley, wife of Eli Carnahan, in Kansas; John, in Manhattan, Kansas; William, in Kansas; Grace, Jesse, Lihl and Charles. all in Kansas. Mr. Thompson's brothers and sisters are named as follows: Margaret I., deceased; Sarah J., wife of William Moody, in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; Edward U., in Kansas; John F., in Latah county; Mina B., deceased; Mary L., wife of Lewis Diel, in Latah county; Agnes, wife of John Lindsay, on Meadow creek, in Latah county; Robert and Harry, on the Nez Perces reservation; George, in Latah county. Mr. Thompson is a member of the I. O. O. F., and was delegate to the grand lodge in Spokane in 1901 from Empire Lodge, No. 51, at Garfield. He was a member of the board of education and of the Mountain Home district and succeeded in establishing a fine school. His father's brothers were all Union soldiers and the father was rejected on account of a defect in hearing. His mother had several brothers in the war also.

NAPOLEON B. LONG, deceased. Our volume would not be complete were there omission of a memorial of the good man whose name is at the head of this page, and because of his faithful labors, his worthy life and his own real worth of character and uprightness we with pleasure accord space to him. Mr. Long was born in Buchanan county, Missouri, on April 7, 1844, being the son of John and Margaret (Barker) Long. The father was born in Pennsylvania, in 1815, and the mother was born in West Virginia, on February 17, 1828. Besides our subject, they had children as follows: Samantha, wife of John Yarbrough, in Latah county; Columbus C., in Arizona; Mary, wife of John Butts, in Arizona; Ella V., wife of George Wikoff, in Oregon; America, deceased; Emma, wife of Simon Elcoks, in Oregon; John J., in California.

While our subject was a child the family came to Iowa and shortly came west, settling in the vicinity of The Dalles, Oregon. Napoleon B. enlisted for three years in the First Oregon Infantry, Company G, under Captain A. J. Barland, to fight the Indians. He was a drummer boy, and after eighteen months' service he was discharged. Following the Indian war, the family went to Salem, and thence to Modoc county, California, and there our subject took a mail route from the Rogue river across the mountains, which was a very dangerous employment, especially during the Modoc Indian uprising. Two years later they returned to Linn county, Oregon, and there engaged in farming and labor in the timber. It was in October, 1883, that Mr. Long came to Latah county, his parents having preceded him hither. He purchased a farm and homesteaded a forty, the place being seven miles east from Garfield, where the family now reside.

The marriage of Mr. Long and Emma (Blalock) Seits was solemnized on November 29, 1876, in Modoc county, California, and the following children have been born to them: Freddie Q., deceased; Minnie, at home; Jesse A., married to Amanda Augir, and residing at home; George E., Anna E., Henry L., Robert E., Charles A., Vina E., deceased, Mary M., deceased. Mrs. Long's parents were Abraham and Mary Seits, the father a farmer and born in Pennsylvania in 1810, and the mother born in Missouri in 1831. Mrs. Long was born in Buchanan county, Missouri, on March 30, 1841, and has brothers and sisters named as follows: Nancy, living in Oregon; Henry, in Oregon; Mary E., deceased; Frances, in Oregon; Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Heath, in Okanogan county, Washington; Josiah, deceased; Harriett, deceased; Lincoln, in Oregon.

Mr. Long was not a politician and would never accept office at the hands of his fellows. He was a member of the Farmers' Alliance and of the Farmers' Club. His fine farm of two hundred and forty acres was well kept and he was skillful in his labors. He was an active member and worker in the United Brethren church and was always zealous in the progress of the faith. The death of Mr. Long came suddenly, on May 3, 1902, falling from sudden failure of the heart. He stood beside his faithful wife and as the spirit took its flight he fell forward into her arms. To the ones left behind there is much comfort in the thought that while it was death here, to this noble Christian man it was but "absent from the body, present with the Lord." The One whom he had served so long and faithfully called to the eternal rewards his child, and hope may well brighten the darkness of the valley of the shadow of death.

JAMES E. DAILEY. The esteemed pioneer, whose name heads this article, is one of the substantial men of the county and a leader in many lines, and is accredited with the distinction of living longer in Latah county without using whisky than any other man in the Palouse country. He is a man of sound principles and unswerving integrity and is highly esteemed by all of his fellows. James E. was born in La Salle county, Illinois, on April 16, 1858, the son of Robert and Eleanor (Hughes) Dailey. The father was born in Greene county, Pennsylvania, in 1826, and is now living in Latah county. His grandfather, James Dailey, was a native of the same place and died there. The mother of our subject was born in Greene county in 1836, and is now living in Latah county. Her father, John Hughes, was born and died in Greene county, Pennsylvania, and his father was killed there by the Indians in an early age. Our subject's parents removed to Story county, Iowa, in 1864, and four years later went thence to Hamilton county and farmed. Our subject attended school and later came with his parents to San Francisco, thence to Portland by steamer and on to The Dalles, whence they made their way by teams to the Palouse river, there being no Palouse City then. They took land and at the age of twenty-one James took a portion of his present place, seven miles northeast from Palouse. Since he has purchased more and is one of the substantial farmers of the county and raises abundant crops of hay and the cereals from his half section of fine land. He took part in the defense of the settlers at the time of the Indian outbreak. He was packing to Camas prairie at the time and assisted to take all his people to Colfax.

The marriage of Mr. Dailey and Miss Ida, daughter of Talbott and Sarah (Haynes) Ingraham, was celebrated on January 1, 1882. They have five children: Blanche, deceased; Ward E., deceased; Robert T., at home; Maud I., and Sarah Odna, at home. Mr. Ingraham was a farmer, born in Ohio on May 6, 1833. His grandmother was Jemimah Birch and his grandfather Ingraham was born in Wales. Mrs. Dailey was born in Knox county, Illinois, on November 23, 1864, and gained her education in the public schools. Mrs. Dailey has brothers and sisters as follows: Warren S., in Pennsylvania; Eliza J., wife of Bert Trownfelter and living in Lewiston; Daniel S., deceased. Mr. Dailey's brothers and sisters are named as follows: Louisa, wife of Walter Dean, in Latah county, John L. and Hughes I. on Nez Perces reservation; Anna E., wife of W. W. Davis, of Latah county; Robert R., at home in Latah county: Charles M., also at home in Latah county. Mr. and Mrs. Dailey are members of the Christian church and he is a member of the school board. It is of note that six uncles of Mr. Dailey fought in the Civil war, one, I. I. Hughes becoming captain. Mrs. Dailey had five uncles in the Civil war and three died there, one in Andersonville prison. They were fifers and one was a drum major. In 1875 Mr. Dailey carried the mail from Lewiston to Spokane, Lewiston being the distributing point then. And it is of note that at that time J. M. Glover kept a little store in a box house in Spokane and there was no accommodation for a horse to be found and Mr. Dailey was obliged to feed him on a picket rope.

EDWARD T. PLATT. No man is better known throughout Latah county, both for the ability in business matters and the sound principles that dominate a faithful personal walk, than the subject of this sketch, to whom we grant a representation in the volume of his county's history. He is one of the heavy property owners of the county, has a fine estate of four hundred acres adjoining the town of Genesee, maintains a large and fine orchard, has all kinds of important and comfortable improvements, and is one of the up to date and intelligent and progressive business men of this section of the country.

Edward T. was born in Highland, Iowa county, Wisconsin, on November 1, 1852, being the son of Edward and Susanah (Jones) Platt. He received his early education in the native place and at the age of twenty entered the state normal at Platteville, Wisconsin, where he completed a two years' course. He then followed teaching for two and one-half years in the vicinity of Lemars, Iowa, whence he then went to Allentown, Dakota, and in the spring of 1881 took a trip to his native place. Then he went to Omaha, Nebraska, bought a ticket for Lewiston, Idaho, and at that time a train of sixty-five cars, bringing seven hundred people to settle in that country, came through, consuming one month on the road. This large reinforcement arrived in Lewiston on October 9, 1881, and soon after we find our subject in the vicinity of Genesee, where he engaged to work for John Evans and in the spring of the next year he entered into partnership with this man and together they wrought for five years. Then Mr. Platt bought the James Hansen farm, which he still owns and where the family home is. His residence is one of the most sightly and elegant of the city, overlooking the town and his farm, which comprises four hundred acres and is handled half for stock, of which he owns three hundred head, and half for farming purposes. He has an excellent orchard of one thousand trees, and his buildings, as barns, outbuildings, and all necessary equipment for the farm, are all of the best, and commodious and comfortable. In March, 1902, Mr. Platt sold from his herds two thousand five hundred dollars' worth of fine beef stock, and he is one of the heaviest stockmen in the county. In political matters he has also been a leader and in 1892 he was nominated by the Republican party for county commissioner and was elected by a handsome majority. He has served as justice of the peace and in numerous other offices. In 1889 he was instrumental in assisting to lay out the town of Genesee and handled much of the property. He was one of the organizers of the Genesee Bank and acted as its vice president. He also owns four houses and lots, besides his elegant home, in addition to the other property mentioned.

Mr. Platt married Miss Carrie, daughter of John M. Harris, of Mineral Point, Wisconsin, on November 6, 1875, and the fruit of this union is as follows: John, born April 5, 1877, married and living on the Salmon river, in the stock business: Laura born December 24, 1878, wife of W. Dorchester, also residing on the Salmon river and in the stock business; Susie, born May 27, 1881, wife of W. Hickman, operating a livery in Genesee; William, born July 14, 1884, going to school. Mr. Platt is a charter member of the Genesee Lodge of the K. of P. and has passed all of the chairs. He is also a member of the Free Methodist church, and is a man with the courage of his convictions, both in religious life and business enterprise, while his walk is one of exemplary worth and he is entitled to the generous bestowal of confidence and esteem which he enjoys from his fellows.

HARTZELL COBBS. Doubtless no profession to which the lot of man has fallen is so productive of good or evil as that of the instructor, hence it is that popular sentiment demands, and rightly, too, that the men who fill these responsible positions should be the choicest in demeanor, integrity, ability and sound principles. As one of the leaders in this line of work in this county, we are bound to mention the subject of this article, whose work is in every respect of high order, and has placed him in the enviable position of one of the most prominent educators in this section of the country.

Mr. Cobbs was born in Mahoning county, Ohio, on August 2, 1865, being the son of Amasa and Annie M. (Schaeffer) Cobbs, now deceased. Our subject received his primary education in the schools adjacent to his native place and then he took a term in the Damascus Academy and one year at the Hiram College. He completed his education at the Northeastern Normal College, at Canfield, Ohio, in 1887, then inaugurated his career of teacher in the public schools. Two years were thus spent in the country schools and three years in Petersburg. In the fall of 1889 he came west, teaching first in the country schools, then taking the position of principal of the Russell school in Moscow. Following this he came to Genesee, assuming the principalship of the city schools. This was in the fall of 1894 and since that time he has continued in that department. The work that came to his hand was to grade and properly arrange the rooms and grades for the three hundred pupils that were under his charge, also map out the work for the five teachers who assisted him. This was completed in a fine manner and the Genesee schools are as well graded and in as good shape as any in the entire county. Mr. Cobbs has done a fine work and much credit is due to his faithful efforts. As a sample of his faithfulness in instruction, eight of his pupils applied to pass the examination for teachers' certificates. Five of this number received second grade, one first grade and two received standing for the second grade, but on account of their age were unable to have a certificate. These have made successful teachers and are doing good work in the county. It is the intention to handle the school as a preparatory course to the freshman class of the State University. The school property in Genesee is well furnished, admirably located and under the charge of their efficient and capable principal is a busy and bright place for the assembled youth of the city.

WILLIAM W. DAVIS. An enterprising and capable agriculturist and patriotic citizen, the subject of this article is deserving of consideration in the history of his county, since also he has labored here faithfully for many years in the upbuilding and improvement of the same and doing labors which deserve much credit. He was born in Lane county, Oregon, on May 18, 1860, the son of James G. and Martha (McCulloch) Davis, born respectively in 1826 and in Ohio in 1823. William W. remained with his parents until he had reached the age of eighteen years and then went to work for himself. He had acquired a good education from the district schools and his first move was to Latah county, where he squatted on a piece of land until he was twenty-one and then he took the same as a homestead. He worked for neighboring farmers and also conducted a stock ranch in Lincoln county, Washington. This latter industry he withdrew from in 1892 and put in his first crop in Latah county. Since that time he has continued here entirely and has a fine farm, with good orchard, and which produces abundantly. His farm is located four miles northeast from Palouse.

The marriage of Mr. Davis and Miss Anna, daughter of Robert and Ellen (Hughes) Dailey, was solemnized on July 3, 1893, in Latah county. They have two children, Rosco J. and Roy R. Mrs. Davis' father was born in Greene county, Pennsylvania, in 1826 and the mother in the same county in 1836. The father is a farmer now in Latah county. Mrs. Davis was born in Story county, Iowa, on October 29, 1869, and was educated in the public schools. Her brothers and sisters are named as follows: James E., in Latah county; Louisa A., wife of Walter Bean, in Latah county; John L. and Hughes I., in Nez Perces county; Robert R. and Charles M., in Latah county. Mr. Davis has the following named brothers and sisters: Nancy A., wife of James Fairchild, in Whitman county, Washington; Joseph H., in Colfax; Angeline, wife of W. J. Breeding, in Palouse. Mr. Davis is a member of the Woodmen of the World and he and his wife are members of the Christian church. He is active in politics and holds the principles of the stanch old Jeffersonian Democracy. In school matters Mr. Davis is also zealous and always laboring for the best. His mother's brother was Captain McCulloch, in the Civil war.

DANIEL LACKNER is one of the leading farmers in the vicinity of Princeton, his fine estate of three hundred and sixty acres lying one-half mile east from the town. In addition to his farming Mr. Lackner has also operated as a blacksmith for many years here and he is well known all over this section of the country as a fine workman, a capable and upright man and a loyal citizen. His birth occurred in Ontario, Canada, on December 23, 1866, being the son of Conrad and Caroline (Leusing) Lackner. The father was born in Baden, Germany, in 1824 and the mother was born in Germany in 1835. Her mother died in Ontario, Canada, in 1899, being aged eighty-nine years. In addition to our subject, this worthy couple had other children as follows: Henry, in Ohio; Catherine, wife of Henry Sinkpiehl, living in Ontario, Canada; Lucy, wife of Sam Stauffer, of Ontario; William, in Golden, Oregon; John, in Ontario; Mary, wife of Mr. Purdy, of Ontario; Lydia, in Ontario. When quite young, Daniel was apprenticed to a blacksmith and he worked at that trade until 1883, when he came to the United States, landing first in Detroit, where he labored at his trade for a time. In 1888 we find him in Palouse, whence he came to Princeton and opened a shop for himself. He soon had a good trade and he purchased land until he has the fine estate which was mentioned above. In 1901 he dropped shop work and retired to the farm, where he makes his home at the present time.

On February 7, 1893, at Moscow, occurred the marriage of Mr. Lackner and Miss Dora, daughter of Frank and Mary (Austin) Bull, and four children have been born to them: Nellie, eight years old; Percy, seven years old; Jesse, six years old; and Bertha, four years old. Mr. Bull was a preacher in the Christian church and was born in Ohio in 1856 and is now living at Eugene, Oregon. Mrs. Lackner was born in Anoka county, Minnesota, on October 14, 1875. She is a member of the Christian church. Mr. Lackner has brothers and sisters as follows: William; Etta, wife of Clinton Trotter; Sarah, wife of Bert Scott; Ivan, with parents; all living in Jasper, Oregon. Mr. Lackner is a member of the school board and has been for many years and always labors for the betterment of educational facilities. Mrs. Lackner's uncle, D. Austin, and her grandfather, Isaac Mendenhall, were both soldiers in the Civil war. Mr. Lackner is a man of sagacity and industry and he has done much for the substantial improvement of the county.

OLOF OLSON. This esteemed and capable business man of Latah county is senior member of the firm of Olson & Johnson, hardware and furniture merchants of Troy, Idaho, which is one of the leading mercantile firms of the county, and they handle a full line of general and building hardware and house furnishings, being enterprising and wide awake business men, whose deferential tratment of patrons and wise handling of business with strict integrity and uprightness, have given them the reward of a large trade from the surrounding country.

Mr. Olson was born in Norrland county, Sweden, on January 10, 1855, being the son of John and Martha Olson. His early education was gained in his native land and in 1870, with the balance of the family, he came to the United States. They settled in Pike county, Pennsylvania, and two years later they migrated to Tennessee, and in 1874 a move was made to Pawnee county, Kansas, where they remained, farming. Our subject left that place in 1882, coming to Washington, and labored one year at the carpenter trade, which he had learned previously. This was in Tacoma, and in 1883 he came to Moscow and there operated at contracting and building until 1891, when he came to Troy, as a member of the Vollmer Mercantile and Milling Company. In 1898 this concern dissolved, and with his partner, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Olson bought their hardware stock. To this they have added a complete line of house furnishings, besides making the stock of full assortment. Mr. Olson has considerable farm land south of the town and also a fine residence in the town. He has been the postmaster for the past three years and he has discharged the duties of that important office with capability and in a manner pleasing to all patrons.

The marriage of Mr. Olson and Miss Amanda, daughter of Andrew and Charlotte Johnson, was solemnized in Larned, Kansas, in 1880, and they have been blessed by the advent of five children, named as follows: Alma, wife of Peter Olson; Edla, wife of August Johnson, partner of Mr. Olson; Hilda, Nora and Eloï. Mr. and Mrs. Olson are members of the Lutheran church and they are exemplary people and valuable members of society.

THOMAS STINSON. The varied and excellent talents of our subject have found ample opportunity for operation in the resourceful country of our county and he has put to good use the abilities with which nature has endowed him, as will be seen from the following. Mr. Stinson was born in Tuscola county, Michigan, in 1859, April 29th, being the son of William and Eliza (Brophy) Stinson. While still a child he went with his parents to the province of Ontario, Canada, where the family remained until Thomas was eighteen years of age. He labored on a farm and gained meanwhile his education from the excellent schools of that country. Then they removed to Douglas county, Minnesota, and for eight years our subject operated a threshing outfit, being excellently fitted for it and making, therefore, a good success of the enterprise. It was 1886, when he headed toward the west and settlement was made in Latah county, a homestead being selected one-half mile east from where Troy now stands. He improved the farm in an excellent manner and in addition to that labor he also operates each year in the proper season, a threshing outfit, and at the present time he has about the finest outfit for this purpose that is in the county of Latah. He has become an expert in separating the golden grain from the chaff, which also characterizes Mr. Stinson in all of his business dealings, for he is a man of keen perception and sagacity and has had ample and broad experience. In addition to the callings mentioned above, we must add another to have the full quota of Mr. Stinson's labors, for he is proprictor of the Hotel Rietman, in Troy, and handles it in a becoming manner.

The marriage of Mr. Stinson and Miss Grace, daughter of Albert and Mattie (Stitt) Parker, was solemnized in Troy, on July 17, 1889, and they have one child, Roy H. Mr. Stinson is a member of the W. of W., Lodge No. 248, in Troy. Mr. Stinson is a man of excellent standing among his fellows, has labored faithfully here for the advancement of the interests of the county and is highly esteemed and respected by all, being a man deserving and dominated by sound principles.

SAMUEL T. CHAMBERS. The great-grandfather of our subject was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, as were also his nine brothers, and the same spirit of patriotism and loyalty stirred in the heart of this, his great-grandson, for when the call came for men, stanch and true, to defend the flag and save the Union, Samuel T. was ready and quickly signed the roll and seized the musket which never left his hands until the entire work was done and well done. He was a member of Company B, Twenty-sixth Indiana Infantry, and was ordered to Missouri to reinforce Mulligan, who stood against Price. Our subject fought at Prairie Grove, Utonia, Springfield, Keatsville, and other engagements, and then was sent to Mississippi, where he participated in the siege of Vicksburg until the place capitulated in 1863. He then fought at Yazoo City, Milligan's Bend and at the siege of Mobile. At the battle of Prairie Grove a man was killed on either side of him and one behind him and a bullet took a piece from his ear, but he did not stop fighting. He was mustered out on January 22, 1866, serving about four and one-half years. Following this excellent service, he went again to private life and its duties, visiting Indianapolis first and then his old home, where he went to farming. He remained in Knox county and shipped stock until 1872 and then, having met with reverses, he decided to migrate, and we next find him at Walla Walla, Washington, in 1872. He settled six miles above Colfax, there being but one family where the city of Colfax now stands. He took land and sold and removed three times before 1883, when he came to Latah county and took his present place, three miles east from Princeton. He has a quarter section of good land and raises hay and stock and is numbered with the leading men of the section.

Mr. Chambers was born in Knox county, Indiana, on June 20, 1832, the son of Levi Chambers. The father was born in 1796 and married Miss Beverton, a native of England, who died July 1, 1832. After the death of his mother, Samuel was sent to live with his uncle, James Chambers, and at the age of sixteen he was left alone in the world by the death of these relatives also. He worked on the farm until 1861 and then commenced the military record which we have briefly outlined and which is a credit to him and his family. Mr. Chambers was married on March 22, 1866, in Indiana, Joanna Bell becoming his wife, and they are the parents of the following children: Eudorus and Ulysses, twins; Orpha, wife of G. T. Cochran, in Latah county; Osela, deceased; Corinne, wife of G. F. Bay, in Latah county; Joe, at home. Mrs. Chambers was born in Knox county, Indiana, on October 4, 1839, the daughter of William and Nancy (Lemon) Bell. The father was a farmer, born January 22, 1813, in Harrison county, Indiana. The mother was born in Sullivan county, Indiana, on April 4, 1820, her father's name was Friend Lemon and he was born in Kentucky in 1783. The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Chambers are: F. L. Bell, living in Garfield; Mary E. Stephenson, deceased; Achsah Shields, deceased; Kittie, deceased. Mr. Chambers' brothers are: William C., deceased; Levi, in Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Chambers are members of the Christian church and he has been a director in the school district for many years. He is a member of the G. A. R. at Palouse and is a highly respected man and citizen. For his excellent service for his country Mr. Chambers draws a modest pension.

CHARLES E. BOWMAN. The thrifty farmer whose name appears here, is the possessor of a fine estate in Latah and Nez Perces counties, and is living at the present time one mile east from Genesee, where he has a good farm, well improved and productive of abundant crops. His real estate holdings amount to over four hundred acres and one year's crop has amounted to more than ten thousand bushels of wheat, besides other productions, thus demonstrating the richness of the land and the skill of its owner. He has a fine home, good outbuildings, well selected orchard of choice varieties, plenty of stock and much other property. Mr. Bowman took a homestead in the Nez Perces reservation in 1895, proving up on the same in 1902, thus adding another quarter to his valuable properties.

The birth of Charles E. occurred on June 8, 1857, in Oregon City, Oregon, he being the son of Joshua and Emaline (Loveland) Bowman, natives, respectively, of Pennsylvania and New York. The father died in 1877, aged sixty-seven years, and the mother is still living in Genesee, at the age of seventy-nine, and is well and smart. Until he was thirteen years of age our subject attended the schools in Oregon City and then the father moving farther out, where there were no schools, he was denied any futher schooling, except what was gained from the school life, in which he has manifested a precocity, however, that has given him the meed of fine success and sagacity. The first eighteen years of Mr. Bowman's career were spent in the service of his father and then he started in the battle of life for himself. He bought eighty acres of railroad land and for five years farmed it, then sold out and removed to Genesee, Idaho. Here he rented his father-in-law's place for eight years and then purchased one hundred and twelve acres where he now resides, one mile east from Genesee. In addition to the other items mentioned in his industries, Mr. Bowman devotes much attention to handling and raising cattle, of which he has a large number at the present time.

On June 16, 1881, Mr. Bowman married Miss Emma A., daughter of Daniel B. Markham and a native of Marion county, Oregon, and they have been blessed by the advent of the following children: Roy D. and Rolla E., twins; Clayton C., Hattie M., all living with their parents. Mr. Bowman is active in political matters, being allied with the Democratic party and a great admirer of Bryan and his methods, while also in local matters he is intelligently active and progressive. He is a member of the W. of W. Both he and his family are members of the Methodist church, South, and they are stanch supporters of the faith.

JOHN C. MILLER. From Germany, whence come so many of our most thrifty agriculturists, hails the subject of this sketch, and with industry and wisdom he has labored in his chosen land with manifestation of talent that has brought a bright success in his efforts, proving himself to be a capable and worthy citizen. Mr. Miller was born in Wurtemberg on April 1, 1840, being the son of Frederick and Christiana (Wurst) Miller. The parents were farmers of Germany, and our subject received a good training in the agricultural art and a common school education, and on April 25, 1867, we find him in New York ready to seek his fortune in this new world. He went direct to Detroit, Michigan, and thence to the copper mines on Lake Superior, where he labored three and one-half years. Next he removed to Joliet, Illinois, and worked in the coal mines for two years, then in the vicinity of Peoria he labored on a farm, and in 1872 he went back to Germany and the following year returned to the United States and labored at Chico, California, and later in the mines in that state until September, 1879, he came to Latah county. He searched the country and finally took as a pre-emption his present place and added one half section by purchase, of which he has recently sold one hundred and sixty acres. He improved his farm in a becoming manner, follows the diversified plan of cropping, has erected an elegant residence and commodious barns, with all the accessories needed on a first class estate. He is sowing grasses at the present time and is intending to raise much stock. The town of Viola was located on Mr. Miller's land, the name being first, "Four Mile."

JOHN C. MILLER.

MRS. JOHN C. MILLER.

While in Germany in 1872, Mr. Miller met Miss Loeffler, who came to America with her brother at the time Mr. Miller went to California, and the acquaintance ripened into a courtship which on September 29, 1873, resulted in the happy marriage of Mr. Miller and Miss Katherine Loeffler, in Sacramento, California. The parents of Mrs. Miller, Emmanuel and Christiana, are farmers in Germany. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Miller: Fred C., who has attended the university at Moscow; John H.; Clara P., attending the university at the present time; Louise K., at home; Balee, died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are members of the Lutheran church, and he has served for a number of years on the school board. There is no more thrifty and enterprising farmer in the county than the subject of this sketch, as his excellently kept farm shows, and he is a man of honor and dignity and is the recipient of the esteem and confidence of his fellows.

CHRISTIAN WAHL, deceased. It is very fitting that a memorial of the esteemed gentleman and faithful citizen whose name appears above should be granted place in the history of Latah county, since he was one of the sturdy men who wrought here for the development of nature's resources and assisted materially in building up the county, being also wise and enterprising in his own business ventures.

Christian was born in Baden, Germany, on February 14, 1831, being brought while very young to America by his parents, who settled in New York, where our subject received a fine education, which was very useful in after years. At the age of his majority he started for himself and in 1860 he came to California, via Panama, and for two years he taught school in the Golden state. Following that labor, he and his brother engaged in hop raising for five years, then he farmed for two years, after which he moved to Petaluma and did surveying for a number of years. Thus did his early education, which was thorough, stand him well in hand. In 1872 he came to Lane county, Oregon, farmed there for three years, then moved to Harrisburg, remaining two years, then came to eastern Oregon, spending one year. Later we find him on McKenzie river, Oregon, farming and making shingles, after which he was in Whitman county, Washington, and in 1880 he came to Genesee. He took a timber claim of one hundred and sixty acres, seven miles east from Genesee, and devoted his attention to farming and raising stock. He wrought faithfully until the time of his death, which occurred in 1887, and his remains lie buried in the Genesee cemetery.

Mr. Wahl married Miss Mary, daughter of John and Caroline (Jagar) Churchman, natives, respectively, of Pennsylvania and New York. Eleven children, as follows, were born to this union: Ada C., wife of A. Maxwell, living near Johnson, Washington; John C., deceased; Sherman L., living in west Latah county and a member of the W. of W.; Phillip G., living in Ferdinand, Idaho county; William H., living in Latah county; Saloma A., deceased; Diantha F., living at home; George A.; Edward E. and Edna M., twins; Mathias W., the last three going to school at the university. The family are adherents of the Methodist church and are faithful supporters of the faith.

CYRUS L. KINMAN. William Kinman was born in Fort Knox, on May 6, 1812. His father, Levi Kinman, was born in North Carolina and his mother was a native of Indiana, born in 1794. William was in the Black Hawk war, was a captain in the Mexican war and served in the Civil war as lieutenant colonel until his death, which occurred on September 20, 1863, being killed at the battle of Chickamauga. William Kinman married Miss Ann Shinn, who was born near Camden, New Jersey, on October 26, 1812. Her father was a Methodist preacher and her mother's name was Lipencott. To this marriage of William and Ann born the subject of this sketch, on August 31, 1839, in Pike county, Illinois, and Rose, deceased; Milton, deceased; Sue, living in Morgan county, Illinois; Clarissa, in Canada; Warren, deceased; Newton, deceased; Jennie, in Morgan county, Illinois; Rachel, deceased; William, deceased; Edwin, in Illinois. The parents removed to Jacksonville, Morgan county, when Cyrus L. was fourteen years of age, and they farmed there until the father went into the war in 1862. In April, 1861, our subject enlisted in Company B., Tenth Illinois Infantry, serving four months, until his discharge, and then he re-enlisted as captain of Company I, One Hundred and Fifteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, in 1862. He was in the Army of the Cumberland, under Rosecrans, and fought in the battle of Chickamauga, where his father was killed. In October, 1863, he was discharged and went home to settle up his father's estate. Later he removed to Johnson county, Missouri, and there farmed and raised stock. Nine years later he sold out and went to Sonoma county, California, thence to Oregon and in 1876 he landed in Latah county. He settled six miles east from Palouse and lived there for fourteen years. Then he sold out and bought a section of land near his present home; hard times coming on he lost all but one hundred and seventy-five acres. It was in 1890 that he removed to his present place, seven miles east from Princeton. He raises hay and stock and has a fine home, a commodious barn and is one of the prosperous men of the section.

The marriage of Mr. Kinman and Miss Jennie, daughter of William R. and Elvira (Carlock) Smith, was solemnized on August 14, 1862, in Morgan county, Illinois, and they are the parents of six children, as follows: Nellie, wife of O. B. Danborn, in Spokane; Fredrick, in Latah county; Albert, at Crafton, Washington; Maude, wife of A. E. Daily, in Latah county; Gustave, on Puget Sound; Claude, at home. Mrs. Kinman was born in Morgan county, Illinois, on July 22, 1844, and the other children in her father's family are: Malinda, Elvira, James, all deceased, and Henry. Her father was a carpenter and farmer and was born in Indiana.

Mr. Kinman is a member of the G. A. R., at Palouse, and was at one time a member of the Grange. In 1890 he was nominated by the Republicans for representative to the state legislature and made a fine race, being beaten only by eight or ten votes. He is an ardent advocate of good schools, is always active in the cause and gives his time for the service of the board. He is one of the leading men of the community and is highly esteemed and respected by all.

FRED W. JONES. It is with pleasure that we are permitted to grant to the estimable gentleman mentioned above a representation in the history of Latah county, since he is one of the largest property owners of the county, being one of the heaviest grain raisers in this section, since also he is a man of good business ability, which has been demonstrated in the manipulation of resources in this county, since also he is a man of stanch and unswerving integrity and upright character. Mr. Jones lives one-fourth of a mile east from Genesee, or rather in the eastern outskirts of the town, having a good farm, with an extra fine residence, commodious barns, and all necessary outbuildings and improvements incident to a first class establishment. His land is level as a floor and presents an interesting and striking view when waving in bounteous crops of grain, of which an annual output will reach many thousand bushels. He devotes a portion of the estate to stock in addition to his grain. The entire premises of Mr. Jones present an air of thrift, care and attention and wise handling. He is one of the most thorough and up-to-date farmers in the country.

The birth of Mr. Jones occurred in Oregon City, Oregon, on January 28, 1862, and his parents were Charles and Margaret (Bowman) Jones. The father was a native of Pennsylvania and died in 1883, being buried at Silverton, Marion county, Oregon, while the mother was born in Illinois and still lives with her son, Fred W., in Genesee. The parents removed to Portland, where our subject received a good education before he was sixteen years of age. Then the family removed to Scott's mill, where they remained eight years and then our subject came to Genesee, Idaho, where he purchased the land before mentioned and turned his attention to farming and building up the county and its interests. In political matters Mr. Jones is always active and allied with the side of right.

On November 7, 1888, Mr. Jones married Miss Ethzelda M. Gentry and they have one child, Bessie M., attending school. Mrs. Jones' parents, John and Mary (Simmons) Gentry, were natives of Indiana and Iowa, respectively. The mother died in March, 1901, and the father is still living on his farm close to Genesee. Mr. Jones affiliates with the W. of W. and he and his wife are members of the Methodist church, South. Mrs. Jones is the Sunday school superintendent in her church and takes a prominent part in church work, as does Mr. Jones, who teaches in the same school and also acts as steward of the church. They are prominent and intelligent people, dominated with wisdom and geniality and are highly esteemed and beloved by all.

CHARLES F. SMITH is one of the leading and progressive farmers of this section of Latah county, his estate lying seven miles east from Princeton, and consisting of one quarter section, which is mostly devoted to hay. Mr. Smith has also a dairy and owns his own separator. He is prosperous and one of the prominent men of the community. His birth occurred in Mecklenburg, Germany, on October 25, 1852, being the son of John and Christina (Otto) Smith. The father was a drayman, born in Germany in 1822 and came to America in 1856 and is now living in Michigan. The mother was born in Mecklenburg, Germany, in 1827 and died in 1895. The children of this worthy couple, in addition to our subject, are named as follows: Minnie, wife of Gotlieb Ewald, living in Ludington, Michigan; Sopha, wife of Horace G. Nichols, living in Grand Haven, Michigan; William, living in Grand Haven, Michigan, also; Harry, died in 1872; Edward C., proprietor of the Palm Garden in Grand Haven. The parents came to America in 1856, landed in New York and then at once removed to the mouth of the Grand river, near Grand Haven, Michigan. Work was obtained at the sawmills and later the father started a dray line. Charles F. received his education there and assisted his father until the years of majority had arrived and then he went to logging. This was continued until 1879, when he became foreman of the mill yard for the Grand Haven Lumber Company. It was 1886 that he started west, coming by train to Colfax, Washington, where he landed on September 25th and went thence by team to Latah county. He took a preemption at the mouth of Big Creek and for five years we find him toiling here and then he sold out. He had also kept postoffice, hotel, and packed supplies to the miners. In 1891 he purchased the farm where he now lives, but sold it later and went to Palouse and took up draying. In 1893 he sold that business and went to logging but after a couple of years or so he saw the value of his present place, which lies seven miles east from Princeton, and purchased it back again and Mr. Smith says that if he is living one hundred years from now it will be on this place, so well is he satisfied with the country. The farm is a model of industrious activity and thrift and is well improved in every way.

The marriage of Mr. Smith and Miss Annie C., daughter of James and Susan Welch, was celebrated in Grand Haven, on October 22, 1879, and they are the parents of four children: Forrest S., at Moscow, attending commercial college; Gracie B., died April 27, 1883; Harry S. and Elva M., at home. Mrs. Smith's father was born in England on January 1, 1826, and came to America in 1847, settling in Canada, whence he removed to Michigan in 1877. The mother was born in Canada on April 3, 1833, and Mrs. Smith was born May 25, 1852, in Ontario, Canada, and received her education in the famous schools of that province. Her brothers and sisters are named as follows: Naoma, wife of Solomon Fess, living in Lakeview, Michigan; William, in Grand Haven, Michigan; James, at Spring Lake, Michigan; John, at Grand Haven, Michigan; Samuel, at Lakeview, Michigan; Joseph, deceased; Mary F., wife of Benjamin Brough, at Minica, Michigan. Mr. Smith is a member of the Masonic fraternity at Palouse, Lodge No. 49, and also of the M. W. of A. He has served on the school board for many years and is a zealous advocate of good schools. Mrs. Smith is a member of the Eastern Star.

ENGEL C. SWENSON. Many of the most substantal and thrifty citizens of the United States are the people that come to our borders from the old historic land of Norway, whence the early explorers of this country sailed. Thither came the father and mother, Colbern and Mary Swenson, of the subject of this sketch. They settled in Wisconsin, then removed to Cottonwood county, Minnesota, and are now living in Latah county, the mother aged eighty and the father seventy years of age. 1864 was the date they landed on American soil. It was during their residence in Cottonwood county, Minnesota, that the immediate subject of this article was born, the date thereof being March 15, 1868, and there also he received his education in the country schools. At the age of sixteen years he came west, working as a farm hand for six years. Then he purchased the land where he now lives, having a quarter section at first and later selling a portion. His farm lies four miles east and one-fourth of a mile north from Genesee, and he is one of the thrifty and progressive farmers of the section. In political matters Mr. Swenson is active, and always allied on the side of good men and sound principles. He has served as road supervisor at different times, and all his public duties are performed with the same thoroughness and dispatch that characterize him in his private efforts.

The marriage of Mr. Swenson and Miss Emma, daughter of Stiner and Annie P. Knudson, was solemnized in 1896, and they have two children,—Altha E. and Cordelia S. Mrs. Swenson's parents came from their native land, Norway, to this country in 1867, first settling in Kansas, then migrating to Latah county in 1878, and thence to Nez Perces county in 1897, where they dwell at the present time. Mr. Swenson is a member of the W. of W. and he and his wife are members of the Lutheran church. Mr. Swenson is a man of good ability, sound principles, and has wrought here with display of acumen and wisdom, and is entitled to the esteem of his fellows, which he richly enjoys HOMER W. CANFIELD. Six miles east from Princeton we are greeted with the elegant home of Mr. Canfield, it being a commodious structure of nine rooms, of modern architectural design and tastily set, while about it are the well kept acres of his estate, which produces abundance of tame hay, fruits and grains. Mr. Canfield devotes much attention to handling stock, and is one of the leaders in his community.

The family history of our subject is as follows: Marcus R. Canfield was born in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, on August 23, 1824, the son of Gideon Canfield, who was born May 14, 1776. M. R. Canfield grew up and enlisted in the Civil war, Twenty-seventh Massachusetts, in 1861, and fought bravely for the subjugation of rebellion. Being wounded, he was sent to the hospital and later became hospital steward. He married Miss Margaret A., daughter of Hiram Meacham, she being born in Ashby Falls, Massachusetts, Berkshire county, on October 7, 1834, and to them were born the subject of this sketch, on December 22, 1858, in the home county, and also Ellen A., wife of Mark Hartwell, who is now dead; Raymond R., in New Hampshire; Clara I., wife of Walter Dunbar, at Pittsfield, Massachusetts. Our subject was educated in the public schools and the South Berkshire Institute, having also spent some time as clerk in a drug store at Rockland. In 1877 he came to Bakersfield, California, and worked in a dairy and then went at the business for himself, and one year later sold out and came to Walla Walla, taking up the same business. One year there and then he became a real cowboy for a time, enjoying it hugely. Next we see him assisting in the construction of the O. R. & N. and the N. P., and he helped to raise every trestle from Sand Point to Ainsworth. Next he was on the Palouse, where he took up a half section of land and logged, but becoming tangled in a joint stock mill, he lost twenty-five hundred dollars and then took his present place. He is doing well now, for energy and wisdom are bound to succeed.

On November 1, 1885, at Deep Creek, Nez Perces county, occurred the marriage of Mr. Canfield and Miss Rhoda L. Peterson, and they have five children, —Kate, Oroha, Cecil, Ruby and Maude. Mr. Lorenzo Peterson was a farmer, born in New Jersey. His wife died when Mrs. Canfield was an infant, and she was raised in her uncle's family, that of Frank Peterson, now living in Latah county. Mrs. Canfield was born in Newport, Cumberland county, New Jersey, on September 10, 1864, and her brother and sister are: Rosella, wife of Frank Cosier, in New Jersey; George, living in New Jersey. Mr. Canfield is a zealous advocate of good schools and is a member of the board. In 1896 he was a nominee for county commissioner on the Free Silver Republican ticket, but while that ticket made a good race it was defeated.

JAMES R. VASSAR. This veteran of many struggles on the field of battle in the Civil war, as well as in the battle of life, is now one of the respected and influential citizens of Latah county, living on a farm two miles east from Princeton. He was born in Gentry county, Missouri, on July 14, 1845, being the son of Joshua and Nancy (Summers) Vassar, natives of Cannon county, Tennessee, and dying, respectively, in 1862 and in 1857, the mother being in Barry county, Missouri, at the time of her demise. The parents removed to Newton county, Missouri, when our subject was eight years of age, and in 1856 they went thence to Barry county, having also spent some time in Franklin county, Arkansas. In July, 1864, our subject joined the army, Company G, Fifteenth Missouri Cavalry, serving until the close of the war, being mustered out on July 30, 1865, at Springfield, Missouri. Subsequent to this, he went to Neosha, Newton county, Missouri, worked on a farm and farmed for himself. In 1867 he came to Barry county and followed agricultural pursuits, and in 1886 he came to Spokane, and then to Princeton, where he landed on February 14, 1886. He farmed for a time and then went to Shoshone county and took government land, which he sold later and then bought on Bear creek, and since that time he has traveled some, lived with his son, Thomas, and is now located as described above.

The marriage of Mr. Vassar and Miss Ollie, daughter of Thomas and Susan (Green) Crumley, was solemnized on New Year's day, 1869, and they have become the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, deceased; Nancy, deceased; Thomas J., living in Latah county where his father lives, which place the father presented to his son. Mrs. Vassar was born in Georgia in 1840, and died July 16, 1888. The brothers and sisters of Mr. Vassar are Mary M., wife of George Hoatch, in Kansas; Levi, living in Latah, on Crane creek; Thomas L., living in Barry county, Missouri. Mr. Vassar was a member of the Union League at the close of the war, and is now a member of the G. A. R. He is also a member of the Methodist church and in politics he is a Republican, voting it straight. Mr. Vassar is the recipient of a stipend from the government, for his faithful service and he is a man of uprightness and is respected by all.

JOHN B. HAON is a son of the bright land of France, being born in Lardeche department in 1831, where he passed his youthful days, and where also his parents were born and died, the father being John B. and the mother Janne. The father was a blacksmith and died in 1862. In 1855 our subject migrated to England from Paris, and thence to New York, landing on September 18, 1856. The next spring he was in Chicago, and worked there at brick making. Thence he went to St. Louis, then to Leavenworth, Kansas, and one and one-half years later we find him in St. Joseph, Missouri. In 1860 he started for Pikes Peak, driving team, and mined there for three years. From there he went to Montana, mining there until 1867. After that he mined a couple of years on Napah creek, Idaho, then on to California and back to Montana. It was September, 1870, that he came to Lewiston. He worked at placer mining in the Moscow mountains and in 1871 came to Jerome creek, and there mined. He says that while on this creek at work the Indian outbreak of 1877 and 1878 occurred, and the Indians came by and talked with him, and the Chinaman and others ran to the timber, but he remained and conversed with the savages and was unmolested. In 1878, when the country was surveyed, he took his present place one and one-half miles east from Princeton. He has devoted his attention to mining, farming and stock raising since that time. He has a quarter section of good land and raises much hay, which he sells and feeds to his stock. Mr. Haon is a man of vigor and capabilities that tell in pioneer work, and he is deserving of much credit for the way in which he has labored for the upbuilding of the country.

THOM ANDERSON. Although Mr. Anderson has not been in Latah county as long as some, still he is one of the younger men who add life and energy to its development, being one of the force of agriculturists who have wrought out the wealth of the county and are at the present time pushing it on to greater commercial prominence in the west. Mr. Anderson was born in Norway, whence come so many of the stanch citizens of this free land. His parents were Andy and Anna Mary (Thomson) Peterson, natives of Norway and land owners there, where also both passed away in the fall of 1885. The date of the advent of Thom into mortal existence was September 3, 1862, and the first sixteen years of his life were devoted to assisting his father on the farm and in acquiring the lore of school books. At the interesting age mentioned he hired out as a sailor, and for seven years followed the sea, then in 1885 he came to America, settling in Manistee, Michigan, where two years were spent, whence he came then to Tacoma. He drove team for a time, then went to Seattle and shipped on board the steamboat Union. He worked on this coast plying boat until 1893, then went home to Norway, spending six months in seeing old acquaintances and living over again the joys of childhood. Returning to Seattle, he went to Alaska, and for two years he placer mined for himself in the vicinity of Circle, doing well. Then he went to Dawson and mined with three others on a claim that they purchased, and there they also did well. He returned to Seattle then and sold his dust, then came on to Spokane, and it occurred to him that the best way to save the money was to purchase a farm, and accordingly he came to Genesee and bought eighty acres where he lives at the present time, two and one-half miles northeast from Genesee. He has a fine farm, all finely improved, elegant residence, large barn and outbuildings and everything in first class shape. He raises wheat and oats and is prosperous and a leading figure in the community to which he is a valuable acquisition. Especially in politics is Mr. Anderson interested and is always laboring for measures of general benefit and men of sound principles.

On March 31, 1900, Mr. Anderson married Miss Mary, daughter of Andrew Asplen and Anna (Peterson) Anderson, natives of Norway. The father died in that land in 1901, but the mother still lives there, aged sixty-seven years. One child has been born to our subject and his estimable wife,—Theodore E.

HAMLIN McCOY. One mile northeast from Princeton is the fine home of Mr. McCoy. It consists of a good farm of one-quarter section of fertile land, well improved with good buildings and productive of various crops, as grasses, grains and fruits. Mr. McCoy also handles a first class orchard. He was born in Guernsey county, Ohio, May 7, 1852, the son of Benjamin and Mary A. (Ballard) McCoy. The father was a farmer and a native of Guernsey county, Ohio, born in 1808, and he died in 1875. His mother's name was Sherrick. The wife of Benjamin McCoy was Miss Ballard, born in Guernsey county, Ohio, in 1812, and her death occurred in 1867. Our subject remained with his parents until the father's death, in 1875, and just previous to that he had purchased land with his father and brother, James H. He sold this land in 1875 and removed to West Virginia, where he purchased land and remained until 1888. Then he sold and removed to Latah county, getting here in the spring of that year. The following summer he bought his present place and has resided there since.

The marriage of Mr. McCoy and Miss Phoebe, daughter of Andrew and Drusilla (Forrest) Boyd, was solemnized in the home county in Ohio, on September 9, 1875. The following children are the fruit of this union: Mintie B., deceased; Emma F., wife of A. H. Miller, living near Moscow; Venia I., wife of J. D. Miller, in Moscow. Mrs. McCoy was born in Guernsey county, Ohio, on March 23, 1855, and she has the following named sisters and brothers: George G., at the native place; Mary, wife of George McPeak, in Ohio; Isaiah, died March 5, 1902; Elizabeth, deceased; Jane, deceased; Emma, wife of Thomas Daugherty, in Ohio. The brothers and sisters of Mr. McCoy are named as follows: Samuel, deceased; Cornight C., deceased; Benjamin F., in Cole county, Missouri; John T., died at Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, during the war; James H., deceased; Stephen, in Ritzville, Washington; Phoebe J., deceased; Henry W., in West Virginia; Mary A., died in Missouri; Joshua, deceased; and William R., deceased. Mr. McCoy has five brothers who fought in the Civil war with distinction. One of them, Henry, being a member of Company B, Fifteenth Ohio, received a wound, which disability caused his discharge. Mr. McCoy is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Lodge No. 46, in Palouse. He and his wife are members of the Methodist church. Mr. McCoy has always been zealous for good schools, serving as president of the board in West Virginia, and also on the board much in Latah county.

HERBERT L. HAWKINS. Buell J. Hawkins, a farmer, born in Ohio in 1824, whose father was Amos Hawkins, married Miss Mary A. Custard, and to them were born the subject of this sketch, in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, on July 9, 1853, and also the following children: Charles, deceased; and Rufus, who is living at Aromas, California. Mr. B. J. Hawkins took his family to Crawford county, Kansas, near Ft. Scott, in 1858, where he took up land and farmed. He joined the Home Guards during the war and did good service, but in 1863 his wife died, and after the war he married a second time. Our subject remained with his father until he had reached the age of fourteen, and then started out for himself, having gained his education from the district schools previous to that age. He worked for wages at farming, riding the range and other labors until he reached his majority, then went to farming for himself, also mined for coal. He was a resident of Kansas until 1879, then sold out and went to Redwater, Michigan, where he worked at saw milling for four years. The next move was to the vicinity of Spokane, Washington, in 1883, and three years later he came thence to Latah county. He preempted land on Bear creek and gave his attention to handling it until the present time, having also a hotel at Princeton, now in connection with his farm. His home is now at Princeton, and he has also the mail route from Palouse to Princeton.

On March 7, 1876, occurred the marriage of Mr. Hawkins and Miss Mary E., daughter of William N. and Arilda (Green) Green, and they have been blessed by the advent of the following children: Mirance, attended school two years at Pullman, and now living in Moscow; Charlie, on the Nez Perces reservation; Elsie, wife of Alexander Black, of Princeton; Ethel, Maude, Stella and Herbert, at home. Mrs. Hawkins was born in Springfield, Illinois, on January 15, 1857, and her father was a farmer, born in Ohio in 1823. He was a veteran of the Mexican war, and also served three and one-half years in Company A, One Hundred and Sixth Illinois Infantry, during the Civil war. Her mother was born in Illinois in 1835, the father of this lady being William Green, and his wife, Mary (Hogge) Green. The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Hawkins are Lizzie, deceased; John, deceased; Abraham, in Texas; Agnes, deceased; Mary, deceased; William, in Texas; Millie, wife of Elijah Saunders, of Oklahoma.

Mr. Hawkins is a member of the American Yeomen, and he and his wife adhere to the Baptist church, their membership being at the Fine Grove church. He has been a member of the school board for twelve consecutive years and is always laboring for the welfare of both school and state.

NICHOLAS OLSON. It is a pleasure to grant to the subject of this sketch a representation in the history of his county, for he justly deserves it, having labored faithfully here for many years, being a man of ability and energy, and having maintained a walk of unswerving integrity and uprightness. Mr. Olson is one of the real builders of Latah county, and is one of the heavy property owners in it today, having five hundred acres of land eight miles west from Kendrick, which his skill and energy have made one of the choicest farms of the section, and an abundant producer of valuable crops. His farm is improved in a skillful manner and manifests the taste, wisdom and thrift of its owner at every turn.

Reverting to the personal history of our subject, we note that he was born in the land of Norway, near Burgen, on April 12, 1852, being the son of Ole and Sarah Olson. Norway has furnished some of the most sturdy and patriotic citizens within the border of our free land, and much is due the arduous efforts of this worthy class of people for the development and upbuilding of the country. For twenty years Nicholas remained in his native land, gaining a good education and laboring for his parents on the home farm. Then he bade farewell to the home land, friends and relatives and embarked for America. He labored in the lumber woods of Minnesota and Wisconsin until 1879, when he came to Latah county, or the territory embraced in this county, it being then Nez Perces county, and after due search he selected a homestead, which forms a part of his mammoth estate. He went to work with a will and little by little he added land until the property now is as stated above, one of the finest estates of the county. Mr. Olson has an orchard of thirty acres, and is one of the leading fruit growers of the county.

Fraternally Mr. Olson is affiliated with the A. O. U. W., being popular there as in his other walks of life. It has never been a part of Mr. Olson's conquests to yet sail the matrimonial seas, having always preferred the quieter and more peaceful joys of the celibatarian.

ANDREW LYND. One of the capable and prosperous farmers of Latah county is named at the head of this article, and it is with pleasure that we are enabled to incorporate an epitome of his career in this volume, since he has labored long for the upbuilding of the country and has conducted himself in a commendable manner. Mr. Lynd was born in Lawrence county, Ohio, on September 21, 1848, being the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Tipton) Lynd, the father a native of Ohio, born in 1816, and the mother born in Virginia in 1820. Mr. Tipton was born in North Carolina in 1807 and died in Latah county. The parents of our subject removed to Illinois when he was a lad of five, and thence they went to Kinggold county, Iowa, took land and farmed for three years and then removed to Andrew county, Missouri. Three years were spent there, and then they went to Washington county, Kansas, and in 1858 took a homestead. Our subject attended school there and worked with his parents, also doing freighting on the plains. The family home remained in that place in Kansas until 1883, when the father sold out and migrated overland to Latah county. He took up the farm where Andrew now lives, ten miles east from Palouse. The next year our subject came to Latah county and purchased a piece of land near Palouse and farmed it for eleven years. When the father died the old homestead was sold, and seven years since the subject of this article purchased it. It consists of one hundred and seventy acres, and is well improved, and produces abundance of timothy hay. Also Mr. Lynd owns another quarter section of good land.

The marriage of Mr. Lynd and Miss Mary M., daughter of Henry and Rebecca (Harlan) Gray, was solemnized on November 16, 1873, and they have become the parents of the following children: Alice E., deceased; Albert J., deceased; Millie, teaching in Latah county; Francis M., deceased; and the rest are all at home,—Elsie, Seth J., Harvey H., Reuben E., Homer J., Mary B. Mrs. Lynd was born in Putnam county, Indiana, on October 1, 1856, and she had one brother, Andrew, now deceased. Her father was born in Putnam county, Indiana, on June 9, 1831, and her mother was also born in Indiana, her birthday being January 11, 1832. The brothers and sisters of Mr. Lynd are as follows: Jane, deceased; Mary A. wife of William Bastow; Amanda, wife of P. Hanshaw, of Salem; Charles, in Ellis county, Kansas; Rebecca, wife of Ralph Traver, in Oregon; Elizabeth, wife of F. H. Brown, in Whitman county; Julia, wife of David Gover, in Oregon; Phoebe; Celia, deceased; Effie, wife of J. J. Hafer, in Latah county; Laura, wife of Theo. Smith, of Oregon; Samuel, in Walla Walla; Massam, in Walla Walla; James, in Palouse. Mr. and Mrs. Lynd are members of the Baptist church at Palouse, and for that institution he liberally gave two hundred dollars in gold for the first building. He has always been faithful in the support of the faith. Politically Mr. Lynd is always active and is also a member of the school board. He believes in diversified farming and each year he clears upward of three hundred dollars on his hogs alone, being also prosperous in other lines as well.

JAMES W. ROSS. Ten miles east from the town of Palouse lies the estate of the gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, the family home having been here since 1883. James W. was born in Page county, Iowa, on October 9, 1847, the son of James and Rachel (Jones) Ross. The father was born in Jackson county, Missouri, and his father was a native of Kentucky. The mother died in Wilson county, Kansas, in 1858. In 1857 the parents removed to Missouri, and thence to Wilson county the following year, taking up land where Coyville is now located. Our subject was reared on a farm, attended school and when the terrible strife that rent our land in twain was precipitated he joined the forces of the Union and fought for the country that he helped to save from destruction. 1863 was the year, and James was but sixteen years of age. He enlisted in Company M, Ninth Kansas Cavalry. He was ordered to Kansas City, where he was stationed a few months, and then went to Lawrence, and he was there taken with the smallpox, and this prevented him from going south, but was out and able to chase Price the last time he ventured into Missouri, and at the end of the war was honorably discharged at Leavenworth, Kansas. He then went to Allen county and shortly afterward to Wilson county, and took up farming, continuing the same there until 1883, at which time he sold out and started overland to Latah county, landing here on September 23, having been four months on the road. He purchased the farm above mentioned and has constantly remained here since.

On December 20, 1865, occurred the marriage of Mr. Ross and Miss Rosanna, daughter of Abijah and Nancy (Oaster) Hampton, in Allen county, Kansas, and the following children have been born to them: Nancy E., deceased; Mary L., wife of James Lynd, of Palouse; Anna N., wife of Joe Davis, in Missouri; Albert F., on the Nez Perces reservation; Jordan J., at Wardner, Idaho; Charles E., at Chattaroy, Washington; Lottie V., at Milan, Washington; Minnie, deceased; Daniel E., at home; Gertie M. and Bertie J., twins, also at home. Mrs. Ross was born in Nodaway county, Missouri, on November 13, 1847, and has the following brothers and sisters: Leonard, deceased; Lucinda, wife of E. E. Howard, in Iowa; William, deceased; Joseph, in Iowa. Mr. Ross has the following brothers and sisters: Nancy J., deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; John A., deceased; Benjamin F., in Idaho; Louisa, deceased; George W., in Latah county. Fraternally Mr. Ross is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., while he and his wife are members of the Christian church. He served on the school board for a term and has always manifested a great interest in the advancement of educational facilities, as well as the general welfare of the county.

JOHN W. PLEDGER. This enterprising agriculturist is one of the substantial men of Latah county, capable, upright and ever displaying wisdom and vigor. His estate lies three miles northwest from Princeton, contains one hundred and sixty acres, is well improved and presents a very thrifty appearance. The buildings of all kinds are tasty and commodious, while the land produces abundantly of the cereals and timothy, and Mr. Pledger also devotes much attention to feeding hogs.

Noticing more particularly the personal history of our subject, we see that he was born in Bellville, Canada West, on May 20, 1839, being the son of Charles and Rebecca (Wessles) Pledger. The father was born in London, England, on March 8, 1817, and the mother was born in the Mohawk valley, New York, her parents being John and Elenor Wessles. In 1853 the family removed to Dane county, Wisconsin, where they gave attention to farmnig. Our subject attended school and remained with his parents until 1861, he being then twenty-two years of age. Then he responded to the call of his country and enlisted in the Third Battery of Wisconsin Light Artillery. He was ordered to Louisville, Kentucky, and the first engagement was at Fort Donelson. After this he participated in the battles of Stone River, Nashville, Pittsburg Landing, Tennessee, and Corinth, besides several others. He served his three years and then received an honorable discharge at St. Louis and immediately reenlisted in the Forty-seventh Wisconsin, serving there until the close of the war. After his discharge at Nashville he went to his home in Wisconsin and one year later went to Kansas on the government survey of Osage reservation. After two years of this work he bought a tract of land near Fredonia, Kansas. Later he sold out and went to South Dakota, and there farmed until 1887, the year in which he came to Latah county. He first bought land on Palouse river, and then sold and purchased his present farm, which has since been the family home.

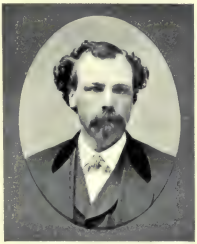
The marriage of Mr. Pledger and Miss Rachel, daughter of James and Polly Gardner, born, respectively, in Maryland on January 24, 1804, and in Ohio on September 22, 1813, was solemnized on January 12, 1875, and they have become the parents of the following children: Martha, deceased; Wallace and Walter, twins, at home; Gertrude and Grace, twins, deceased; John W., at home. Mrs. Pledger's brothers and sisters are as follows: Honor, in Wilson county, Kansas; John, also in Kansas; Joshua, deceased; Lorenzo D., in Kansas; Elizabeth, deceased; Nancy, deceased; Mary, in Kansas; Samantha, at Moscow, Idaho; Lovisa and Louisa, twins, deceased; David, deceased; James B., deceased. Mrs. Pledger was born in Moultrie county, Illinois, on October 10, 1844. The brothers and sisters of Mr. Pledger are named below:

Mary A., deceased; Ruth, living in Minneapolis; Elenor, at Oregon, Wisconsin; Elizabeth, deceased; Mahalah, at Bellville, Wisconsin; Sabra, at White Rock, South Dakota; Joseph, in Wisconsin. Mr. Pledger is an Odd Fellow, holding his lodge relations in Fredonia, Kansas. He and his wife are members of the Methodist church and they are highly respected people and valuable members of society.

FREDRIC F. BURDIC. A worthy scion of a stanch family who braved the storms of ocean in the little Mayflower to settle among the wilds and savages of the new world, and the descendants remaining in Massachusetts and Vermont until this day, the subject of this sketch has also had a part in the opening of this vast country to the settlement of those who sought homes, and he has manifested the same worthy qualities that were so commendably displayed by his ancestors. Our subject was born in Vermont, Windham county, on February 19, 1835, being the son of Jerread and Leurancy (Franklin) Burdic, also natives of the Green Mountain state, who emigrated to Indiana in 1837, in Steuben county, of which state they both passed away in the spring of 1882, and are now buried in the Jamestown cemetery. Fredric F. was educated in the public schools in the interims between labors on the farm, and at the age of twenty-two went to Nebraska, where he worked on a farm for one year and then returned to Indiana and took up study in the school again, realizing that he needed better fortification for the battles of life. After completing his education he went to work on a rented farm and five years later he had been successful enough to purchase the same. He continued there until 1871, then went to Nebraska, purchased a farm in Washington county and to farming and buying and shipping cattle he devoted his energies until 1895, when he desired to search the west further, and accordingly he sold his entire property and came to Latah county and purchased a farm, which he sold two years later, buying where he is at the present time, two miles east and three-fourths of a mile north from Genesee. He has a good estate, fine residence, large barns and convenient outbuildings, with over six hundred apple trees, besides pears, plums, prunes and all other kinds of fruits that flourish here. In political matters Mr. Burdic has always been active, being allied with the Democratic party. He has served as county assessor and in other capacities in Indiana. Once he received the nomination for the legislature, there being two counties in the district, and three men in the field, and although his county was five hundred Republican he carried it by three hundred and eighty-four majority, but the other county changed the vote.

The marriage of Mr. Burdic and Miss Nancy A., daughter of Major Benjamin and Catherine (Jackson) Pratt, was solemnized on December 22, 1857, and they have trod a happy journey together for nearly one-half a century. Mrs. Burdic was born on March 29, 1840, her father being a native of Vermont, and her mother of Ohio. Our subject and his wife have become the parents of four children, as follows: Elvie M., wife of John C. Nordby and living in Genesee; Eugene W., married to Cory Rose, and being a stock and grain buyer of Nebraska, having headquarters in Washington county; Ruric L., married to Mae Sampson, living in Ashland, Oregon, where they own two thousand, eight hundred and sixty acres of land and a fine saw mill; Maud L., teaching school in Genesee. Mr. Burdic is a member of the I. O. O. F., and in religious belief is allied with the Unitarians. Mr. Burdic and his estimable wife, who has been especially helpful and gracious in all the walks of life, are valuable additions to the society of Latah county, and they are highly esteemed by all.

JOHN S. SULLIVAN. From the far away, famous Emerald Isle, whence comes some of the most enterprising and plucky men that ever stood beneath the stars and stripes, hails the subject of this article, and his career here has fraught with numerous incidents of interest, and has ever manifested that genuine grit, sagacity and energy which characterize his race, while his individual exemplification of sterling virtues has placed him among the most substantial and capable men of this section, where he has labored with commendable zeal in the affairs of business, gaining a proper success as the reward of his wisely bestowed labors.



Mr. Sullivan was born in county Kerry, Ireland, in 1847, being the son of John and Mary Sullivan. He spent the earlier years of his life much as the youth of his land do, laboring faithfully and gaining also a good common school education; but when manhood's years began to dawn, it was evident from the extra ways of industry and wisdom that our subject manifested that he was possessed of no ordinary ability. In 1880 he put into execution a long desired plan, that of coming to the United States. He located in Michigan, and by hard labor and careful attention to business, accumulated a good start, then went to California, but not finding conditions there as he desired, migrated to Latah county in 1884. He bought eighty acres, and later took forty as a timber culture, where he now lives, eight miles west from Genesee. He put forth the accustomed labor and skill that he was wont to do and soon the place became a fertile farm and a good home. In 1892 he bought two hundred and twelve acres of land, and raised as high as ten thousand bushels of grain in one year. In 1893, the noted year of flood and water fall, he was destined to lose the entire crop and this misfortune paved the way for him to lose this fine land, for which he had paid as high as fifty-eight dollars per acre. Not to be daunted, however, Mr. Sullivan, in 1896, bought one hundred and sixty acres, paid for it, and in 1900 he purchased four hundred and fifteen acres more, which gives him the large estate of five hundred and seventy-five acres of land, which he holds in company with his boys, and one hundred and twenty acres in his own right. This mammoth domain produces abundant crops, and

JOHN S. SULLIVAN.

GILLIS J. McBANE.

BENEDICK B. REKDAHL.

MRS. BENEDICK B. REKDAHL.

CASPER JOHNSON.

MARTIN ANDERSON.

GOSWIN SIEVERT.

gives annually a handsome return for the labor bestowed.

The marriage of Mr. Sullivan and Mary Sullivan was celebrated in 1870, and they have been blessed with five children, four of whom are living, as mentioned in another portion of this work. Mr. Sullivan and his family are deserving of great credit for the faithful and persevering manner in which they have labored and endured the hardships of starting in this western country, and the fine stretch of fertile land, well tilled and productive, is the reward of this careful and continuous labor. And this bespeaks the keen foresight of our subject, and the careful planning and skill to accomplish the desired end, which demonstrates him of fine abilty and equal energy and executive force.

GILLIS J. McBANE. To this esteemed and well known business man of the city of Moscow, we are constrained to grant a representation in the history of Latah county, since he has wrought here with energy and skill for the development of the county for many years, and has doubtless, as much or more than any other one man, assisted in the upbuilding of the city, having been a practical builder and painter, while also he has displayed those qualities of moral worth and stanch characteristics that have commended him to the esteem of his fellows.

Gillis J. was born in Logansport, Cass county, Indiana, on December 30, 1829, being the first child born there, and the son of Gillis and Elizabeth McBane. The father was a farmer and the first representative from his county to the state legislature. The subject of this sketch received his education in the schools of Logansport, and then learned the carpenter trade, and to this he has devoted the major portion of his life, becoming an expert builder and skillful artisan. In addition he learned the art of painting and wrought at that in connection with building. At the time of the outbreak of the Civil war, he was one of the brave boys who shouldered the musket and fought back the hordes of rebellion until their last gun was silenced and then returned to the quieter walks of industrial life. He enlisted in 1862 as sergeant in Company G, Seventy-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry, which was a part of the Army of the Cumberland. He participated in the battles of Stone River, Decatur, Perryville, Athens, and many skirmishes, being in all the action wherein the regiment participated. On December 30, 1862, Mr. McBane was taken prisoner at the battle of Stone River and placed in Libby prison. He was there for three months, and when finally released was nearly starved to death. Many died from exposure and starvation. The building had no windows and the men were obliged to run and exercise to keep from freezing. In 1864 he was promoted to the rank of sergeant-major, and after the war returned to Logansport and worked at his trade. In 1882 he came to Walla Walla, where he spent one winter, coming on to Moscow in the spring. He took a piece of land on Potlatch creek and sold it when proved up on. Then he transferred his residence to Moscow, and here he has remained since. He has a fine home of eight rooms, situated so that it overlooks the city park, and there he is spending the golden days of his career, having retired from the activities of business, and enjoying the competence that his skill and industry have wrought out of him. Mr. McBane is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 36; of the Crescent Encampment, No. 12; of the Rebekah Star, No. 15; and also of the Major Anderson Post, No. 5, of the G. A. R. Mr. McBane has always enjoyed the quietude and retired pleasures of the celibatarian and has never ventured on the sea of matrimony, and he is now among the most highly respected and esteemed citizens of the county, being the recipient of the confidence and good will of all.

BENEDICK B. REKDAHL, deceased. The subject of this memorial was one of the first settlers in the district where the widow resides today, four miles north from Genesee, and he was a true pioneer in the full sense of the word, and he was a potent factor in development and laboring for the advancement of the country, while his life was always with that stability and uprightness which characterizes the true man. His demise was sincerely mourned wherever he was known.

On September 18, 1848, in the far-away land of Norway, our subject was born, his ancestors also being natives of that stirring land. He remained under the parental roof until 1866, being then eighteen years of age, then sought the new world, and bravely started out to seek his fortune in the industries of the lumber woods in Michigan. Later we find him in Nebraska farming, whence he went to South Dakota, and in 1877 he migrated to Portland, Oregon. In that city he worked one year in the ship yards, then came to Idaho and homesteaded the place where his family resides today. The estate is one-half section of rich soil, four miles north from Genesee. He improved his land and spent each summer working in Portland, until the date of his marriage, then settled on the farm for good, giving his entire attention to the improvement and cultivation of the farm. He was successful in these pursuits and his farm became one of the best handled in the entire section.

The marriage of Mr. Rekdahl was solemnized in Portland on August 23, 1881, Miss Martha Gunderson becoming his bride at that time. She is a native of Norway, as also are her parents, Goodwin and Johana Gunderson. Four children were born to this happy union, as follows: Adolph G., who died on November 8, 1901, aged nineteen years; Belva J.; May B.; Agnes M., who died on June 28, 1901. On November 11, 1886, death came into the household and took thence the father and husband, and his remains are buried in the Lutheran cemetery near the home place. The remains of his children have since then been interred beside the father. The death of Mr. Rekdahl was a severe blow, but the widow has nobly taken up the burdens of life and the added responsibilities and has demonstrated her ability to handle them in a commendable manner. She and her husband were members together of the Norwegian Lutheran church, and they always manifested a true devotion to their faith. The husband was here during all the Indian troubles, and was also one of the first to break sod in the virgin soil.

CASPER JOHNSON. This well known and representative agriculturist of the county of Latah is a man of fine capabilities, a citizen of patriotism, and withal a good neighbor, affable and genial, and industrious and sagacious in the prosecution of the enterprises that come to his hand. Mr. Johnson was born in Inherit, Norway, on October 31, 1840, being the son of Joe and Martha (Roli) Johnson, natives also of Norway, where they remained until the time of their death, the father passing away aged fifty-five and the mother living to be eighty-seven. Both are buried in Hanning cemetery. Our subject received a good education in the country schools and at the age of eighteen years started out for himself. 1866 marks the time of his advent into this country and settlement was made at St. Croix, Wisconsin, where for four years he labored faithfully in the saw mills of the country. Then he bought a farm and for six years he tilled this one hundred and twenty acres. Then he sold his property there and came to Latah county, Idaho, or the territory that is now embraced in this county. He selected a homestead three and one-half miles northeast from Genesee and settled down to make a home and a fine farm, which he has accomplished in a very commendable manner, having now well tilled fields, good comfortable buildings and a nice orchard and is reckoned with the leading men of the community. Mr. Johnson raises wheat principally and is very successful in its culture. In political matters, Mr. Johnson always evinces the interest of the intelligent citizen, has allied himself with the Republican party and is active in the promotion of all things that are for the welfare of the county and its inhabitants.

The marriage of Mr. Johnson and Miss Bertina, daughter of Tena and Engabore Raiten, natives of Norway, occurred in 1872. Mrs. Johnson's parents came to America in 1871 and located in St. Croix county, Wisconsin, where they now reside. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson there have been born the following children: Martin, living in Nez Perces county, Idaho; Otto, married to Manda Peterson, and living in Idaho county, Idaho; Charley, living with his father; Oscar, married to Ionia Alexander and living in Latah county. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are devout members of the Norwegian Lutheran church and are estimable people and stand high in the community.

MARTIN ANDERSON. One of the oldest pioneers of the section now embraced in Latah county is named at the head of this article and it is fitting that he should be granted representation in the volume that has to do with the county where he has labored so long and faithfully, being now one of the best known men of the county, and favored with an enviable standing wherever he is know, being a man of excellent ability and sound principles, while he has done much for the upbuilding and advancement of the country.

Mr. Anderson was born in Sweden, on June 13, 1846, being the son of John and Mary Anderson, natives also of the same country and farmers there, where they remained until the time of their demise. At the early age of fifteen years he started for himself in the activities and cares of life, going first to sea, where he continued for three or more years when in 1866 he landed at Boston, remaining a short time, when he embarked in the coast service on the Atlantic where six years were spent, half of which time was on a United States revenue cutter. In 1871, Mr. Anderson came west to Portland, spending one winter in Oregon, then migrated to Idaho, taking a preemption six miles north from where Moscow is now standing. One year later, he sold this property, and took a homestead where he now lives, nine miles northwest from Genesee. Here he has bestowed his labors in the art of agriculture and stock raising continuously since that time being crowned with abundant success. He has an estate of five hundred and twenty acres of land, well improved and adorned with comfortable and substantial buildings and completely stocked. Mr. Anderson also owns a good residence in the city of Moscow.

Mr. Anderson married Miss Eva C. Peterson, a native of Sweden, in Moscow, on December 13, 1878, and they have been blessed by the advent of seven children, Laura, Alfred, Hattie, Oscar, Mary, Clarence, and Printiss, all of whom have been well educated. Mrs. Anderson's parents, Eric and Christina Peterson, were natives of Sweden. Mr. Anderson and family are identified with the Methodist church, and are devoted supporters of their faith, while he is considered one of the leading men of the county, having manifested intrinsic moral worth, and a noble character in all his ways, and being really one of the prominent builders of this county, having labored long even before the county was organized.

By way of reminiscence it is interesting to note that Mr. Anderson built a fort on his farm during the Indian war of 1877 and remained there all the time. Many deserted their places and abandoned all their improvements.

GOSWIN SIEVERT. Like many of the most thrifty and substantial citizens of free America, the subject of this article was born in Germany, but transferred his residence to the new world and here he has wrought out a competence, becoming one of the prominent and prosperous citizens of Latah county, where he owns a half section of rich land three and one-half miles northwest from Genesee. The birth of our subject occurred on November 28, 1838, and his parents were Frank and Mary (Pieper) Sievert, natives also of Germany, where they tilled the soil until the time of their death. When a small boy, Goswin started to learn the cabinet maker's trade, and he became master of it in every department, manifesting excellent skill and industry. He wrought at this until 1873, when the time came for him to try his fortune in the new world, and hither he came, landing in Philadelphia, where he took up his trade for a short time, then he made his way to Chicago and there wrought for one and one-half years. Later he worked in Davenport, Iowa, at the same business for six months, then he came to Portland, Oregon, and there six months were spent with the tools of his craft. In the spring of 1876, he came to Idaho and after investigating the merits of the various parts, took a homestead and preemption where he now resides, and has been since that date. For over a quarter of a century he has wrought with display of the substantial qualities of industry, thrift, wisdom, and energy, of which he is happily possessed. He has made his estate one of the best improved in the county, and it annually returns abundant crops as a revenue. Mr. Sievert is one of the oldest settlers in the section now embraced in this county and he is deserving the title of real builder of the county and pioneer of its territory. He is a member of the German Lutheran church and a stanch supporter of the faith. In political matters, Mr. Sievert is active and takes the part of the intelligent citizen, always allying himself with the measures that are for advancement and the benefit of the people. He holds with the Republican party and while he labors for good men to hold office, he has constantly refused any preferment for himself.

Mr. Sievert has two sisters and one brother, all living in Germany. It is interesting to note that Mr. Sievert is a thorough military man and has had much experience in handling arms on the field of battle. He was in the Prussian army in 1864 against Denmark, in 1866 against Austria, and in 1870-1 against France, and in all this arduous and faithful service he escaped without being wounded.

NILS P. PERSEN. This capable and enterprising agriculturist is one of Latah county's leading citizens, having wrought within its precincts his present wealth and prominent position. His fine large farm of one-half section is located about four miles northeast from Genesee, and it is one of the best improved and kept farms in the entire county, being embellished with proper and comfortable buildings, and all conveniences that make a rural home both comfortable and valuable. Mr. Persen was born on June 24, 1855, being the son of Per and Karstna Persen, natives of Sweden, our subject also being born in Skone, that country. The parents remained in the native country until the time of their death, the father passing away at the age of ninety-two and the mother at the age of seventy-six, and both are buried at the Grefvie cemetery. Ten children were the offspring of this worthy couple. Our subject received his education at the common schools in Grefvie Skone, and at the age of nineteen severed the home ties and started in life for himself. He soon bade good-bye to home, loved ones, friends, and native land and embarked for America. He first went to California, thence to Nez Perces county, now Latah county, in 1879. He selected a good piece of land and used his timber culture right on it and the adjoining quarter he pre-empted and then went to work to make a home. The unbounded success that has crowned his efforts shows the exceeding skill, industry and sagacity that have been bestowed. Mr. Persen has a fine home and in addition to raising cereals, fruit and vegetables he also handles considerable stock, in which line he has made his usual success.

In 1885 Mr. Persen married Miss Johanna A., daughter of Andrew and Mary Ruberg. She was born in Sweden and came to this country when she was young, the marriage occurring in Latah county. The following children have been born to them: William C., Naeme L., Walter E., Esther M., Adolph N., Edla C., Clara J., Joseph E. Mr. Persen and his estimable wife are members of the Swedish Lutheran church and are devout followers of the faith. Mr. Persen is one of our contented citizens, being well satisfied that he is in one of the best of countries, and he determines to make this his home until the time of permanent departure. Mr. Persen recently purchased another fine farm, the same being on Burnt ridge, four miles southeast from Troy, and this place is to be the family home, and he is fitting it up in excellent shape.

LOUIS B. McCOWN, deceased. This faithful and capable gentleman was for a long time one of the leading citizens of his portion of Latah county, being an enterprising agriculturist and an upright and faithful member of society, and it is with pleasure that we accord to him this memorial. His birth occurred in Henry county, Missouri, on March 2, 1840, being the son of William and Jerusha (Kuntz) McCown. The father was a farmer and a native of Virginia. The mother died in Henry county, Missouri, in 1853. In 1859 the father died also. The other children of the family are: Clark, Lovel, Mary E., John, Adron and William. Lovel is in California. Our subject remained at home until the death of the father, and then went to St. Louis, living with his uncle Kuntz for two years, when he returned to the home place and farmed until 1861, in which year he joined the army, enlisting in the first six months' volunteers. He went to Manhattan, Kansas, and in 1863 and 1864 he handled a government wagon to Fort Laramie. After the close of the war he returned to the home place in Missouri and farmed until 1870, in the spring of which year he went to the Willamette valley, Oregon, purchased land and farmed for twelve years. Then he sold and removed to Wasco county, thence to Walla Walla and then came over into Latah county. The first settlement here was made at the Cove and one year or so later a move was made to Deep Creek, and in 1884 a residence was established on the present home place, a quarter section four miles northeast from Freese. He took it as a homestead and there devoted his labors until the day of his death. He was a capable man, a good neighbor, and beloved and esteemed by all. It was in 1897 that he was taken sick with neuralgia of the heart, and after four months of suffering he was called to lay down the burdens of life and enter the realities of another world. A wife and the following children were left to mourn his decease: John H., in Latah county; Dora E., married to Mr. Hopkins, and now deceased; James A., in Latah county; Albert E., at home; Holly O., at home; Frank L., at home; Louise F., deceased.

Mrs. McCown was born in Simpson county, Kentucky, on July 1, 1844, being the daughter of James and Mary (Hudson) Caldwell. The father was a farmer, born in Virginia in 1804, and the mother was born in North Carolina in 1803. The children of this worthy couple, in addition to Mrs. McCown, are: Henry, who served under General Price; Susan; Elizabeth; Nancy; Melvina; Lucinda; Mary; Sarah L.; Jesse; and William, who also served under General Price. Mrs. Violet J. McCown remained with her parents until the date of her marriage, which was October 3, 1867, the same occurring in Missouri. Since the death of her husband Mrs. McCown has taken up the burdens of life in a commendable manner, and still presides over the family home, while her three sons handle the estate.

JOHN REAM. On January 1, 1844, in Mifflin county, Pennsylvania, the career of the subject of this article was inaugurated. His immediate ancestors were Phillip and Christina (Schrull) Ream, born, respectively, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1813, and in Little York, Pennsylvania, in 1816. Our subject remained at home until 1861, and then responded to the call of patriotism, enlisting in Company B, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Infantry, and was at once sent to South Carolina. He participated in the battle of James Island and then was placed in the army of the Potomac, and there engaged in the battles of second Bull Run and Chantilla Court House. In this last engagement, as he was in the act of firing, he received a minie ball in his left eye. The missle ranged downward and lodged in the left tonsil. Three weeks later it was taken out. At this engagement he was taken prisoner, but was exchanged, and it was six months before he was able to be sent home from the hospital. After getting reasonably well he returned to the front and received his discharge. His brother, David R. Porter Ream, was poisoned by drinking water from a well which the rebels had poisoned. After his discharge our subject went to California and there, in Butte county, he mined and prospected, and also in Oregon, for some twenty years, then returned to Pennsylvania in 1884, and the following year he came west again, and settled on his present place, four miles east from Freese. He has one hundred and sixty acres of good land, and it is well improved. Mr. Ream remarks that he tried to raise hogs on grass and pine cones, but the scheme did not work. But today he is one of the prominent men of his section and has a good showing in the agricultural line. His brothers and sisters are named as follows: Anna M., widow of Milton Ray, of Newcastle, Pennsylvania; Sarah C., wife of James Elder, in Lawrence county, Pennsylvania; Christiana, deceased; Hanna, deceased; Jane, deceased; Melissa, in Lawrence county, Pennsylvania, wife of William Love; Phillip M., in California. The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Ream are Hamilton, deceased; William, deceased; Catherine, wife of John Bonner, and living in Ohio; Matthew, living in Pueblo, Colorado. To Mr. and Mrs. Ream one child has been born, Mary, now deceased. Mr. Ream owns two hundred and forty acres of fine land, has it improved in an excellent manner with buildings, orchards and all accessories that are necessary. He is prominent in politics, being allied with the Republican party, and is a member of the G. A. R., while he and his wife affiliate with the Methodist church. Among the fine homes of Latah county there is none that shows more taste and skill and thrift than the comfortable premises of the subject of this sketch.

LLOYD D. COPELAND. Among the noble band of men who left all and fought through blood and danger to save our union we should mention the subject of this sketch. From Minnesota, where he enlisted in 1862, in Company C, Sixth Minnesota Infantry, to the gulf of Mexico he fought and rendered excellent service. He assisted to thrash the bloody Sioux Indians, who were murdering settlers, the battles being Birch Cooley and Wood lake. After this he was taken to Helena, Arkansas, and there fought Price. Later he was at New Orleans, Mobile bay, Fort Blakeley, at which place there were thirteen holes put in his clothes by bullets, and then on until the close of the war. He was honorably discharged at the close at Montgomery, Alabama, three thousand five hundred miles from home. Returning home, he was so worn out by terrible hardships and exposure that he did not recruit for many months. At the present time he is receiving a stipend for injury to his eyesight. Mr. Copeland remained at home until he was thirty-five, purchasing land in the meantime. In February, 1882, Mr. Copeland married Miss Ida L., daughter of William and Elnor (Finch) Wickson, and to them were born William T., attending school; Royal, at home; Lula F., attending school at Moscow. Mrs. Copeland was born in Minnesota in 1859, and her father was a carpenter. Mr. Copeland remained in Minnesota until 1886, and then came to Medical Lake, Washington, for his wife's health, but after a few months there he died and he returned to Minnesota with his family. Two years later he came to Latah county, and in December, 1888, he took land, where he now lives, and has remained ever since. His farm is a quarter section and lies ten miles east from Palouse. The brothers and sisters of Mrs. Copeland are named as follows: John, a soldier in the Civil war; William, also a member of the Fourth Minnesota; Martin; Rose M., wife of Hawley White, who was a soldier; Emma, wife of George Scribner, an old soldier; Josephine, wife of Nual Woods, an old soldier; and one more sister, married to David Lowton. The other children in Mr. Copeland's father's family are: Parrion L., deceased; Loyal A., in Elk River, Minnesota; Elington G., in Brooklin Centre, Minnesota; Agernon T., in Latah county; Ortigal L., deceased. Mr. Copeland is a member of the Methodist church and of the G. A. R., and is a respected and capable citizen. Referring now to his early history we note that Mr. Copeland was born on December 10, 1843, in Cattaraugus county, New York, to Samuel T. and Lenora (Morton) Copeland. The father was a farmer, born in Utica, New York, in 1814, and was a member of the state militia. His mother was also a native of New York, being born near Lake Champlain, and her father, a carpenter and joiner, was Lyman Morton. The family came to Columbus, Columbia county, Wisconsin, in 1854, and two years later went to Anoka county, Minnesota, where they preempted a place and later removed to the town of Anoka, where our subject was educated and worked until the time of his enlistment.

ANDREW D. WILLIAMS. A potent factor in the development of the county of Latah, having brought two farms out of the wilds of nature and fitted them for productiveness, while he still manifests energy and skill in the agricultural art, the subject of this sketch is entitled to representation in this volume. He was born in an emigrant wagon on October 3, 1862, in Illinois, while his parents, Zebadee and Sarah M. (Warren) Williams, were en route to Missouri. The father was a native of Tennessee, born in 1819, and died in 1891, March 12. The mother was born in Virginia in 1840, and her father was Andrew W. Warren, a farmer. In 1862 the family came to Woodson county, Kansas, where they took land and farmed, our subject attending school. In 1877 the father came west with his family, landing in Dayton, Washington. They wintered there, and the sadness of standing by the grave of the mother and wife was theirs to endure that first year in the west. Eight children were left motherless. The father then came to Latah county and selected the place where our subject now lives, and there lived until the time of his death. Andrew D. went to work for himself at seventeen, and in 1884 he took a pre-emption, which he sold later; then in 1887 he took a homestead, which he sold in 1891, and in 1898 he removed to his present place, the old family homestead. He raises wheat now, but is fast turning toward the diversified plan, which is becoming more popular among the leading farmers.

The marriage of Mr. Williams and Miss Mabel, daughter of Frank W. Webster, a farmer of this county, was celebrated on January 31, 1886, and they have become the parents of the following children: Fred E., deceased; Iva V., at home; Roy D., at grandfather Webster's home; Bessie O., deceased; Frank N. and Leo C., at home. Mrs. Williams was born in Washington county, Oregon, on March 8, 1871. Her father is now interested in the mill business as well as farming, and was born in Pennsylvania in 1850, and his parents were Milo and Adaline Webster. Mr. Williams' brothers and sisters are named as follows: Harriett, deceased; William Z., at Waha, Idaho; Martha M., wife of James Silvey, of Palouse; Minerva E., wife of George Layton, of Palouse; George A., at Palouse; Reuben D., deceased; Atha T., wife of Charles Berry, of Melrose, Idaho.

GEORGE W. MICHAEL. From a family of stanch patriots comes the subject of this sketch and it is with pleasure that we are enabled to rank him among the prominent and influential men of Latah county where he has labored long and faithfully, ever manifesting those rare qualities of unswerving integrity and worth that commend him to the good will of all upright men. George W. was born in Wilson county, Kansas, on April 4, 1868, the son of William H. and Cordilla (Williams) Michael, born respectively in 1835 and in 1849, in Indiana. The father fought the battles of the Union for three years and six months, and his brother also did the same. The brothers, John and William, of the mother were also participants in retrieving our flag from insult and preserving the Union from dismemberment, while the latter one gave his life for the cause of his country. The father of our subject died in Kansas in 1873 and in 1877 the family, the mother having married A. A. Anderson, came across the plains to Latah county. Our subject remained at home attending school and assisting on the farm until he was eighteen years of age and then started for himself in the struggle of life. He worked for wages and in 1888 bought a farm, where he lived until 1894, when he sold out and removed to his present place, a farm that lies seven miles east from Palouse, and which he purchased in 1889. This farm consisted of one hundred and sixty acres. Mr. Michael sold it and bought back eighty acres which is the home place now.

On July 26, 1891, Mr. Michael married Miss Ollie B. Thomas, who died on March 7, 1895, leaving one child, Charles L., now living with his grandparents in the Grande Ronde valley, Oregon. On December 7, 1898, Mr. Michael married a second time, the lady being Jennie Ullery, and to this union there have been born two children, S. Angelo and Warren E. Mrs. Michael is the daughter of Samuel and Ellen (Poe) Ullery, natives respectively of Oregon and Kansas. The father was born in 1853 and farmed near Viola, Latah county, where he died June 2, 1902. Mrs. Michael has brothers and sisters as follows: Oliver, attending business college at Spokane; Clarence, Nora, deceased, and Floyd, at home. Mr. Michael was one of three children, the other two being Henry, deceased, and Etta, wife of J. L. Dickenson, of Melrose, Idaho.

Mrs. Michael is a native of Latah county, being born on October 10, 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Michael are members of the Methodist church and he is superintendent of the Sunday-School. Mr. Michael advocates the betterment of educational facilities and also the taxes sufficient to pay for them and he is an active and enterprising citizen. In addition to the farm home, Mr. Michael has a good residence property in Viola.

OLIVER S. PETERSON. The building of Latah county has required much diversified talent and energetic effort on the part of the hardy and faithful pioneers who came here when it was raw and wild wastes, and who have continued in constant and arduous labors since, with the happy result that this is now one of the leading counties of the state, and ranks well with sister political divisions in the west. Prominent among that band of intrepid builders, stands the well known and capable gentleman, whose name initiates this article.

Mr. Peterson is a native of the land whence came the discoverers of the new world and he is possessed of a goodly share of the daring and adventursome spirit that characterize this hardy race of people, coupled with which he had a fine fund of practical wisdom and keen foresight, which, dominated with excellent executive force, have made him a forceful and leading man in the county. He was born in Sweden, on August 13, 1845, being the son of Swan and Cecilia Peterson. He remained in his own country, gaining a good education, until he was twenty-three and then set out for America with the determination of making a place and name for himself in the wide domain of that land. He spent several years in Utah and then travelled up and down the Pacific coast at different occupations and finally in 1879, came to Moscow, locating at once, as he saw the possibilities of the country. He opened a butcher shop, it being the first in the new town, and to the careful and vigorous prosecution of this business, Mr. Peterson devoted his energies until 1890, when he sold out the entire business. It is needless to say he had success, for the stirring qualities, tireless energy and wisdom of our subject are bound to bring success, and that too, in no small measure. He had been busy in the prosecution of his business but he had also been carefully and wisely investing and now he is one of the wealthy and heavy property owners of the county. He has several business properties in Moscow, which are good dividend payers, and also much other property in different localities, while his residence in the southern part of the city of Moscow, is one of fine proportions and value and is one of the many elegant homes of the thrifty city, having spacious grounds, with choice orchard and tasty ornamental surroundings.

The marriage of Mr. Peterson and Miss Eugenia Montgomery was solemnized in Moscow, in November, 1880, and they have three children, Milliard, Oliver, and Mamie, all at home. We desire to mention also that Mr. Peterson owns heavily of dwelling property in Moscow. He is esteemed as one of the leading men of the county, and his wisdom, integrity, activity, enterprise and skillful management of business enterprises, amply justify the statement and it is with pleasure that we grant him space with the prominent pioneers of the county.

OLIVER W. KNOWLES. The prosperous and intelligent citizen, whose life's review it is our pleasant task to chronicle, is a native of Ohio, being born on August 17, 1866, the son of Markis E. and Ann (Hubble) Knowles. The father was a farmer, born in 1826, and served as a soldier in the Rebellion. The mother was born in 1836. Our subject remained at home until nineteen years of age, working on the farm and acquiring a good education, then started for himself. In 1877, before this, however, the family had removed to Wilson county, Kansas, and thence in March, 1888, our subject started westward with Latah county as the objective point. In due time the destination was reached and after a couple of years he took his present place as a homestead. It was timber land and Mr. Knowles has done much hard labor to fit it for crops. In addition he has gained an eighty of prairie land and raises oats and wheat principally.

On December 7, 1898, occurred the happy event of the marriage of Mr. Knowles and Miss Minnie, daughter of Joseph and Almeda (Williams) Merica, born respectively in Indiana in 1842, and in 1856 in the state of Missouri. Mrs. Knowles was born in Latah county, on May 7, 1882, in the present home neighborhood. Her brothers and sisters are named as follows: Edward, in Latah county; Essie and Millie, near Princeton. Mr. Knowles was one of a family of twelve children, the others being named thus: Lafayette, in Michigan; Dana; Mary, wife of John Smith and living in Chicago; Eva; John, near Moscow; Ira; Nettie; Nina; George; Frank and Maude at Bozeman, Montana. To Mr. and Mrs. Knowles one child has been born, Lucille. Mr. Knowles is a member of the Farmers Club and is an active member of the community in all that is for the general welfare.

JAMES D. BERRY. In Montgomery county, Illinois, on September 15, 1826, James D. Berry was born, his parents being natives of Kentucky. He was a soldier in the Rebellion and acquitted himself in a becoming manner. In due time this gentleman married Miss Elnor Granthum, who was born in Montgomery county, on September 17, 1828, and her father and mother were born in Pennsylvania, and one grandfather was a native of England and one grandmother a native of the Keystone state. To this marriage were born the subject of this sketch on June 20, 1856, in Albany, Gentry county, Missouri; William H., on the Nez Perces reservation; Mary J., wife of Oscar Craig and living in Bossburg, Washington; Jacob N., at Palouse; Thomas H., on Nez Perces reservation;

George R., a preacher in the Congregational church in Ohio and interested in Nome mines; Lowery L., on Nez Perces reservation. At the age of twelve, our subject began to work out and returned his wages to his parents. In the winter he attended school and he continued with his parents until of age and then went to farming and working at the carpenter trade, which occupied him for six years. Desiring to come west, he sold his property and migrated to Potter county, near Gettysburg, South Dakota. He took a farm and tilled it four years to a day, and being burned out completely with prairie fires, he sold what little he had left and journeyed from that land a sadder and poorer and wiser man. He made his way westward amid much misfortune and discouragement and in September, 1887, he landed in Latah county. Sickness had to be battled with and he knew what it was to labor against the tide. In 1891 Mr. Berry bought forty acres of land which he tilled until 1897, when he sold it and purchased his present place of eighty acres, seven miles east from Palouse. His farm is well improved and handled in a becoming manner.

Mr. Berry married Miss Cynthia E. White, in Gentry county, Missouri, in 1877, and to them were born three children, Arleany F., wife of Roscoe Green and living in Latah county; Cyrus C. and Nash N., both at Hatten, Washington. Mrs. Berry died in Dakota in 1883. The second marriage of Mr. Berry was celebrated in Dakota in 1887, Ida B. Wallace becoming his wife then and one child blessed the union, Anna E., at home. In Latah county, on September 24, 1889, Mr. Berry was called to mourn the death of this good woman. On June 7, 1891, Mr. Berry contracted a third marriage, Lauraney E. Williams, daughter of Manassa and Mary E. Camp, being the lady led to the sacred altar this time. Her father is a farmer in Latah county and was born in New Jersey, on July 16, 1816, while the mother was born on October 1, 1821, in Tennessee. Mrs. Berry was born near Hillsborough, Illinois, on August 22, 1848, and the children in the family are named as follows: Susana, John W., Thomas R., George W., Jacob R., James W., William A., Elva M., Edward R., Cilia N., Mary C., Monassa J. Mrs. Berry is a member of the Methodist church and Mr. Berry is a stanch worker in the cause of prohibition.

ELI M. JOHNSON. This intelligent, enterprising and industrious farmer and stock raiser has a fine body of land consisting of two hundred and fifteen acres five miles north from Genesee, where he is constantly demonstrating his ability as a producer of the fruits of the field in a paying manner and in handling stock, being also a man of integrity and uprightness. Eli M. was born in Blaking, Sweden, on February 24, 1851, being the son of Johns and Bangta (Ols) Johnson, natives of Sweden, where also they remained until the time of their death. From the common schools of his native country, he received his education and at the age of eighteen immigrated to America. He landed in Chicago, May, 1868, and soon engaged on the railroad and spent three years in that labor and in 1871 he came back to Chicago and took up carpentering, that being the year of the great fire, and one year later he installed himself as a retail liquor dealer, following that avocation for four years. Then he came west, landing in Port Townsend, Washington, where he engaged in a saw mill. Two years later, he started out to find a place for a home and Latah county was his final choice, where he located a quarter section under the homestead right, the same land being part of his estate at the present time. He has his land all under cultivation, house, barn, and all outbuildings necessary, good orchard, and a nice bunch of cattle, from which he sells about ten head every year. He produces about three thousand bushels of good grain each year, operates about eleven head of horses for the farm work and is withal a prosperous farmer, intelligent citizen, an upright man, and good neighbor.

In 1872 occurred the marriage of Mr. Johnson and Miss Maria Martins, daughter of Martin and Botella (Carlson) Swenson, natives of Sweden. They have one child, Berna S., now the wife of Dr. William Noblet, and they live in Honolulu, where they expect to make their permanent home. Mr. Jonnson is a member of the W. of W. and is active in the matters of progress and advancement of the interests of the community and county.

GUSTAV DANIELSON. Although the subject of this article has not been in the county of Latah as long as some, still he has made a commendable showing in his faithful labors and marked industry which have characterized him here, while in his personal qualities of worth and integrity, he is none the less prominent. Mr. Danielson was born in Stavanger, Norway, on June 24, 1862, being the son of Daniel Christensen and Elizabeth (Oleson) Danielson, and the other children of the family are Maline, in San Francisco; Minnie, in Iowa; Dorotha, at Emmerson, Nebraska; Ingeborg, in Omaha, Nebraska; Christian and Anna, deceased. The father was a blacksmith, born on February 21, 1836, while the mother was also a native of Norway, born August 20, 1837, and her father was a farmer, but she lived when young with her grandparents. Our subject received his education and remained at home until fourteen, at which time he began a seafaring life which continued without interruption until he was seventeen, when he visited his old home. Then came the time when he bade farewell to home, friends, and country for good, and went again to sailing the high seas. He visited various points in the world, among them the leading ports on the western continent, then came to Nebraska in 1882, remaining until 1886. Again the desire for the sea became too strong to subdue and he returned to his first love for three and one-half years, visiting this time the western ports, among which were Honolulu, San Francisco and others. He then returned to Madison county, Nebraska, and farmed for one year. Then he determined to try the west and accordingly came to Palouse and in 1892 he took up his present place, seven miles southeast from that city. On April 6, 1893, he settled there with his family and since that time has made it the family home. He has forty acres of fine land, well improved and provided with good buildings, and the annual income from the farm under his skillful management is a handsome dividend.

On February 15, 1890, Mr. Danielson married Miss Amela, daughter of Conrad and Gurine (Rasmusen) Aamensen, and they have been blessed by the advent of one child, Mary E., attending school. Mr. Aamensen was a blacksmith on Utsire island, Norway, being born there on February 15, 1842, and he married Miss Rasmusen, whose father was a pilot at the same island, and the wife of our subject was born on that island, on October 9, 1868, and came to America in May, 1889. The other children in her father's family were: Martha, living in Wardner, Idaho; Julia, in Wallace, Idaho; Karine and Regina, in Norway. Mr. and Mrs. Danielson are members of the Lutheran church, and he is active in politics and especially zealous for good schools, while he has so conducted himself that he enjoys the confidence and respect of his fellows.

ANGUS McKENZIE. This well known and enterprising citizen of our county has wrought for the advancement of Latah territory since before the organization of the county, and has the distinction of being one of the very first settlers here, having done much since that time to develop the country, and conducting himself with manifestation of sound principles and integrity and faithfulness. We have to cross the wide Atlantic to the stanch land of Scotia to find the birth place of our subject, Rosshire being the spot and the date being March, 1855. His parents were William and Isabella McKenzie, who brought their family to the land of the new world, and settled in Stark county, Illinois. There they labored until 1863, when they undertook the trying and dangerous trip across the plains, the father walking from Omaha to the Grande Ronde valley in Oregon, where they settled until 1871, when they came to this region and took the place where the son now lives, two miles south from Moscow. The father passed away in the 'eighties, being aged seventy-five, and the mother died in February, 1891, aged about eighty years. Our subject has constantly remained on the homestead, and has it developed into a fine estate now. In addition to the farming, Mr. McKenzie operates a first-class threshing outfit, having done business for several years in this line with excellent success and satisfaction to his patrons.

Mr. McKenzie is an elder of the Presbyterian church and is a worthy supporter of the faith and liberal donator to the church, while in private and public life he has demonstrated the virtues of that which he professes. Mr. McKenzie is one of the substantial citizens of the county, has done a large amount for its welfare, has demonstrated himself a capable and progressive business man, and has the confidence and esteem of all. He has never yet taken to himself a companion for the journey of life, preferring the celibatarian enjoyment to further responsibilities of the connubial relation.

JACOB H. MILLER. The enterprising gentleman, whose name is at the head of this article, is one who has promoted the growth and development of the country by his faithful and wise labors and is one of the substantial men of the community. Jacob H. was born in Henry county, Iowa, on March 25, 1849, being the son of Henry and Martha (Allen) Miller, natives respectively of Pennsylvania and Tennessee. While a child, his parents came to Monroe county, Iowa, and there he was educated in the common schools. When he had reached the age of eighteen years, he left the parental abode and launched forth on the sea of life for himself. He bought a farm of eighty acres and for five years he produced the fruits of the field there and then sold and turned his energies to railroad grading and for six years we find him contracting in this line. Afterward he turned his attention to farming again and thus was occupied until he came to Latah county. First, however, he came west to Pullman, Washington, in 1881, and then in 1890, he came to this county, settling where we find him at the present time, about seven miles north from Genesee. He handles about two hundred acres of land, has a number of horses and is one of the skillful agriculturists of the section. In political matters, Mr. Miller is allied with the Republican fold and is active in local affairs and is ever on the side of progress and advancement. He is a member of the K. of P. and in this capacity he is popular and well thought of and so conducts himself that he has the regards and esteem of all who know him.

ANDREW J. SMITH is one of the enterprising and well known agriculturists of Latah county, whose estate is situated one mile north from Freese post-office, and consists of one hundred and sixty acres of fertile land which is well improved and provided with modern and commodious buildings and all necessaries for a first-class farm. He was born in Rockingham county, Virginia, on January 10, 1851, his parents, John V. and Susanna (Thomas) Smith, being natives of the same county, and born on January 5, 1827 and February 9, 1829, respectively. The father was a cooper and a man of prominence in his county, being assessor for a number of terms. The mother was descended from German stock, her father, Peter Thomas, being a farmer. The family came to Iowa in 1855, settling in Dewitt, Clinton county, where the father took a soldier's right, and then went to farming. Our subject worked on a farm and attended school until he was twenty-two years of age, when he went to Monona county and took up farming for himself. Two years later he returned to the old home and then in 1875 came to Oregon, settling in Benton county. After one year of general work, he took charge of a farmers' warehouse, and at the end of 1878, came to Latah county just in time to assist in the construction of the fortifications and stand guard.

ANGUS McKENZIE.

The marriage of Mr. Smith and Miss Deborah C. Thomas was solemnized in 1879, at Walla Walla, Washington, and she died on June 3, 1888, leaving no children. Mr. Smith was married a second time, the lady becoming his bride on this occasion, being Callie E. Johnson, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Hubbard) Johnson, and the nuptials occurred on August 18, 1889. Mr. Johnson was a soldier in the Civil war and his health was broken through the arduousness of his service. He was also a native of Arkansas. Mrs. Smith was born in Greene county, Missouri, on June 14, 1870. Her brothers and sisters are, Albert, in Kansas, and Eva, wife of B. J. Jones, county assessor of Latah county. Mr. Smith's brothers and sisters are named as follows: Rebecca, deceased; Amanda B., Isaac, Katherine, Frank, William, John, Addison, Virginia, Cornelius, Daniel, Elizabeth. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith has been born one child, Ruby M., at home. In 1900 Mr. Smith was nominated for county commissioner but did not make a canvass. He and his wife are members of the Christian church, while in educational matters he is always zealous for good schools and strives for the same.

FRANK W. WEBSTER. This capable gentleman is one of the leading men of our county, being favored with an executive ability that has enabled him to manage the resources placed in his hands in such a masterful manner that he is blessed with abundant success at this time, having a farm of two hundred acres, eight miles northeast from Palouse, Washington, where the family home is now and which is one of the excellent estates of this section of the county. Mr. Webster is a native of Canton, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, being born on June 21, 1850, the son of Milo and Adeline (Bartlett), natives respectively of New York and Pennsylvania. In 1862 the parents removed to Nicollet county, Minnesota, taking up land and devoting themselves to farming. Our subject attended school and remained with his parents until he had attained the age of twenty, when he stepped out from under the parental roof and faced the battles of life for himself. It was in 1870 that he decided to go west and soon we see him in Portland, Oregon. One year was spent there in general labor and then he took up land for himself. Six years were spent in tilling this, then he sold out and migrated to Latah county, settling on a preemption in 1877, which was his home for eleven years. Selling this Mr. Webster embarked in the saw mill business. For twelve years he continued at the lumbering industry and then bought his present farm, described above, and turned his attention to farming. He still retains an interest in the mill, however.

The marriage of Mr. Webster and Miss Lizzie S., daughter of Samuel H. and Dersey (Bean) Foster, was solemnized on January 11, 1870, and one child has been born to them, Mabel, wife of Douglass Williams and living in Latah county. Mrs. Webster was born in Maine, the native state of her parents, in July, 1850. The other children of her father's family are named below, Homer, deceased, Lawrence, Martha, deceased, Benton, deceased, Ruth, Mason, Lendell, Effie. Mr. Webster has the following brothers and sisters, Delancey, Oscar, Ardell, deceased, Arvilla, Minnie, Jesse. Mr. Webster is active in the political realm and labors zealously for the promulgation of the principles which he believes for the betterment of all. In 1892 he was nominated by the Populists for auditor of the county and he made a fine race, being defeated by only a very small majority. In educational matters, Mr. Webster manifests a zealous interest and believes in good schools.

WILLIAM W. THARP. Seven miles east from Garfield, Washington, lives the subject of this article on a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres which he took from the raw sod by a government right and has developed as one of the excellent rural abodes of this portion of the country. William W. was born in Callaway county, Missouri, on April 13, 1829, being the son of Stephen H. and Maria (McClure) Tharp, natives respectively of Madison and Montgomery counties, Kentucky, and the father was born in 1807. At the age of fourteen years, our subject went to live with his grandfather McClure and three years later he was apprenticed to a blacksmith, completing the trade at the age of twenty. At that time he returned to his grandparents and soon took the gold fever and on April 24, with good mule outfits, he crossed the Missouri at Nebraska City and eighty days later, on July 14, he pitched his tent in Placer county, California, and immediately went to mining. He continued at that until 1852, and then went to the territory now embraced in Douglas county, Oregon, and there located a donation claim and set to work to make a home. Twelve years were spent in the labor of tilling the soil there and then he sold the property and moved to the Grande Ronde valley, Oregon, where he bought land and farmed for sixteen years. It was 1880 that he sold and made another move, this time coming to Latah county, then a portion of the Nez Perces county. Here he bought the right of another to the quarter where he now resides and there he went to work to make the third home he had established in the west. He has been successful in his labors and also has always labored for the upbuilding of the country and the advancement of its welfare.

On November 1, 1854, Mr. Tharp married Miss Lucy A. Miller, in Douglas county, Oregon. Mrs. Tharp is a native of Pennsylvania and was born in 1832. Mr. Tharp's brothers and sisters are named as follows: John W., Mary A., deceased, George W., living near Eldon, Iowa. Mr. Tharp has done his share in pioneer work, and is entitled to the enjoyment of the competence that his skill and labors have gathered. He remembers when Oregon and Washington were one division and he voted on the Oregon constitution. In political matters, he is active, being several times elected justice of the peace. He organized the first greenback club in the Grande Ronde valley, and was the first populist elected to office in Latah county. This year he has been notified by the chairman of the national committee of the "Middle-of-the-Roaders," Joe A. Parker, that he has been chosen committeeman on this important branch. In school matters, Mr. Tharp is also zealous and labors for the betterment of facilities and the cause in general.

WILLIAM R. BELVAIL is one of the substantial men of Latah county, being an agriculturist of good possessions, having one quarter section where he resides five miles east of Palouse and another not far distant. Mr. Belvail is a native of Jo Daviess county, Illinois, being born near Galena, on June 1, 1861, to Joseph and Sarah (Mader) Belvail. The father was a native of Canada and a stockman. In 1861, he went to Pike's Peak and was killed on the North Platte by Indians. The mother was born near Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, in 1836, whose father, Abram Mader, was a shoemaker and farmer. After the father's death, his widow married again, and our subject remained under the parental roof until sixteen years of age, when he went to work in the pineries above Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin. Four years were spent in the woods and then he operated a camp for himself and rafted in the spring and summer. In 1882 Mr. Belvail went to Minnesota and one year later he was visiting his native place. 1885 marks the date when he set out for Nebraska and settlement was made in Boone county, where he bought land and tilled it for seven years, then sold out and came west. He first bought land on Camas prairie, near Grangeville, Idaho, then sold it one season later, wintering in Pullman, Washington, whence he came to Latah county and purchased a farm. It was in 1897 that he purchased his present place, which he devotes to to the production of the cereals principally.

Mr. Belvail married Miss Florence, daughter of James and Bell Talbott. The father is a cabinet maker and farmer and was born in Pennsylvania in 1829, and the mother was born in Illinois in 1843. Mrs. Belvail had one brother and one sister, both deceased, namely: Raymond and Alma. Mr. Belvail's immediate relatives not already mentioned were two sisters, both deceased. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Belvail: Rosco A., Alma and Wallace L. Mr. Belvail affiliates with the A. O. U. W. and the Woodmen of the World, both at Palouse. He is also active in the realm of education, having been a member of the board for nine consecutive years, and ever laboring for the advancement of the cause and the betterment of facilities. In 1900 Mr. Belvail received, entirely unsolicited, the nomination for county assessor, but was defeated by only a small majority. He holds with the Democratic party and has always labored for the proper administration of affairs of government.

BENJAMIN F. CONE is one of the capable and prominent men of Latah county, having displayed those qualities that make the true man and the stanch and patriotic citizen. At present he is engaged in tilling the soil of his fine farm seven miles east from Palouse, handling it in the diversified manner and having it well improved with orchard and buildings, and so forth. Mr. Cone is a native of the occident, being born in Marion county, Oregon, on September 24, 1851, the son of Gustavus A. and Emma R. (Iler) Cone. The father was a stockman, farmer and general business man, born in Rush county, Indiana, on November 21, 1823, came to Oregon, landing there on November 6, 1847, was one of the forty-niners of California and on December 26, 1898, he died, being a man of means. The mother was a native of Ohio, born in 1834, to James and Marie Iler. Our subject remained with his parents until he was eighteen years of age, having attended school and worked on the farm with his father. In 1869 he went to clerking and was soon appointed postmaster of Butteville, which incumbency he retained until 1881, in the spring of which year he went to Portland and in November journeyed to Latah county, settling near Princeton. March 8, 1892, he was appointed to the office of district clerk, filling the unexpired term of W. B. Kyle, which was completed ten months later, and then was nominated on the Republican ticket and promptly elected to the same office. At the expiration he was again nominated by his party, but the combination of the Fusionists and Democrats defeated him with the balance of his ticket. Just before going to Moscow he had purchased his present place, and after his retirement from office he returned to it and here he has remained since that time, being numbered with the leading agriculturists of the county.

The marriage of Mr. Cone and Miss Nancy J., daughter of Alpheus and Zibah U. (Evans) Jones, was solemnized on February 22, 1875. Mrs. Cone was born in Franklin county, Iowa, in 1856, her father being a contractor and farmer, and her brothers and sisters are named as follows: Elbert W., living in Nez Perces county; Ernest A., also living there; Flora R., wife of Charles L. Williamson in Moscow; Cora N., living in Latah county. The children of our subject's parents besides himself are named also: Louise M., wife of John Murray, of Aurora, Oregon; Laura B., wife of J. W. Long, at Silverton, Oregon; Heman B., at Portland; Mary A., wife of A. L. Rice, of Silverton, Oregon; Gustavus A., living near Butteville, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Cone there have been born the following children: Ernest

E., in Latah county: Lewis C., at Princeton, Idaho; John M., at the same place; Herbert F., at home. Mr. Cone is a member of the Masonic lodge at Moscow and his wife adheres to the Christian church.

OLE OTNESS. Our commonwealth is debtor much to the strong arms and brave hearts of the true and devoted immigrants who hail from the land of Norway, whence comes the subject of this article. He has displayed in this land the same characteristics which make his people a thrifty and leading nation in their domestic and commercial relations. Mr. Otness was born in Walsofjord, in his native land, on February 18, 1860, being the son of Ole O. and Julia Otness, also natives of that country. The mother died in Norway, being interred in Walsofjord cemetery, but the father came to America and located in Genesee, where he was called to pass the river of death. Our subject was educated in the common schools of his native land, attending also the high schools, and at the age of twenty-two came to this country, locating first in Minnesota, where he gave his attention to farming for seven years, then returned to Norway and for five years was numbered with the tillers of the soil there. Also during that time he experienced a happy event of his life, his marriage with Miss Gertrude, daughter of Ole and Ellen (Walso) Olsen, the nuptials being celebrated in 1889. After his marriage Mr. Otness came to Latah county, purchased one hundred and twenty-two acres of land and commenced his career as a western farmer and stock raiser. While he has been successful in handling stock, still he has devoted most of his energies to the culture of the cereals and in this line he has been especially favored. He has a choicely selected orchard and his farm is in a high state of cultivation. Mr. Otness has good barns and outbuildings and is planning for the erection of a fine dwelling. We find in the subject of this sketch one of those substantial men who form the real bone and sinew of our commonwealth and it is his purpose to continue in the improvement of his fine farm and remain here the balance of his days. He is active in the realm of politics, being allied with the Republican party, and also he takes a commendable interest in the affairs of education.

To Mr. Otness and his worthy wife there have been born three children: Oscar R., going to school, Ellen G. and Olga. Mrs. Otness' parents were natives also of Norway and there they lived until the time of their death. Mr. and Mrs. Otness are devout members of the Norwegian Lutheran church, and he is a respected and leading man in his community.

JOHN J. HAFER. Among the representative agriculturalists of Latah county there should not be failure to mention the subject of this article, whose wisely bestowed labors have done much for the general welfare of the county, being a man of sound principles and uprightness. His farm lies six miles east from Palouse, and is well supplied with fine buildings and produces abundantly the diversified crops, while also Mr. Hafer raises cattle and hogs.

Regarding his personal history, we note that he was born in the vicinity of Cleveland, Ohio, on February 8, 1850, being the son of Andrew and Rosa (Wing) Hafer. The father was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1827, and after coming to this country he served in the Mexican war. The mother was also a native of the same place in Germany. Our subject remained with his parents until twenty years of age, they moving from Ohio to Michigan, thence to Iowa, and in 1870 the family, except our subject, went to Texas. In Iowa Mr. Hafer remained until 1873, then determined to come to the west and accordingly we soon see him in San Francisco, whence he came to The Dalles, thence on to this county. In 1876 he took up a pre-emption on the Palouse river, where he farmed until 1890. Then a move was made to another farm two miles east. In 1897 Mr. Hafer sold this property and bought a farm in the Potlatch, which, however, he sold in six months and returned to the vicinity of his first place and bought his present farm six miles east from Palouse. During the Indian outbreak of 1877-8 Mr. Hafer assisted to build the fortifications in Palouse and did his share of watching in the nights for the savages.

The marriage of Mr. Hafer and Effie (Lynd) Hamilton, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Tipton) Lynd, was solemnized on June 22, 1884, in Latah county. They have two children, Henry and Ethel, while by her former marriage Mrs. Hafer has two children, James and Robert Hamilton, on the St. Marys river. Mrs. Hafer has one brother, James Tipton, living near Grangeville, Idaho, and Mr. Hafer has the following brothers and sisters: George, Caroline, Rosa, Henry, all in Texas. Mr. Hafer always takes an active interest in the political matters of the county, and has served as justice of the peace and also he is zealous in the cause of education, being school director. He affiliates with the I. O. O. F. at Palouse and Mrs. Hafer is a member of the United Brethren church.

HENRY HANSON. To the labors of the stockmen and agriculturists of Latah county more credit is due for the development of the resources of the county than perhaps to any other class of men, and it is with pleasure that we accord to this member of that class a representation, being assured that he is one of the substantial and capable men of the country. Henry Hanson was born in Winnebago county, Wisconsin, on May 17, 1863, being the son of Knute and Betsey Hanson, natives of Norway, who came to America, settling in the county above named in 1862. The father promptly enlisted in the army, Thirteenth Wisconsin Regulars, to fight the battles of the Civil war, and, being taken prisoner, he languished in Andersonville until death relieved him of his terrible sufferings, thus giving his life for his foster land. The mother still lives in Winnebago county, being sixty-six years of age. Our subject received his education in the common schools, and being the only son of the family the support of the family devolved upon him, and in a manly manner he took up the burden and did it thoroughly, being twenty-five years of age when he started for himself. At that age he came west to Walla Walla, worked there for one year and then made his way to Genesee, where he worked out for two years. At that time occurred the happy event of the marriage of Mr. Hanson and Miss Bell, daughter of Eric and Olea Flamoe, natives of Norway, who immigrated to America and are now living in Genesee. Immediately subsequent to his marriage Mr. Hanson rented a farm for one year, then bought a farm and two years afterward sold it again, renting for the next two years. After this he spent one year in working for others and then purchased a farm for himself, where he lives, four miles north from Genesee, being included in the rural free delivery route, No. 1. Mr. Hanson has his farm well improved, it being in a high state of cultivation. He has good buildings, a fine orchard, and a nice band of cattle. In politics, our subject is always active and displays that patriotism and intelligence which are the part of every true citizen. He is allied with the Republicans. To Mr. and Mrs. Hanson there have been born the following children: Clara, Palma, Nora, Roy and Helma. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson are faithful members of the Norwegian Lutheran church and they are people who are deserving and enjoy in a good degree the confidence of their fellows, while they have always displayed industry, uprightness and integrity.

JOHN HJELM. This esteemed gentleman is one of the well-to-do and industrious farmers of Latah county, having a good farm of eighty acres four and one-half miles north from Genesee, where he has bestowed his labors in a commendable manner in raising the cereals, fine fruit, and handling all with skill and thrift. Our subject, as many of our most substantial citizens, was born in Norway, Throndhjim being the spot, and November 14, 1844, the date, while his parents were Iver N. and Gunelje Hjelm, natives of Norway also, who died there. John was educated in the schools of his native place, and remained with his parents until the age of twenty, then started in the battle of life for himself and took up farming until 1882, when he came to the United States and located in Nez Perces county, Idaho, purchasing a quarter section of land. This continued to be the family home until 1890, when he sold it and returned to Norway, where he remained for one and one-half years. At the end of that period he came to this country again, this time locating in Latah county, and purchasing his present farm. He has demonstrated himself to be a capable man, a good citizen, a genial and affable neighbor, and has manifested industry and good judgment in all his ways.

Mr. Hjelm married Miss Mary, daughter of Thorsten and Kanie Mitling, natives of Norway also. To this happy marriage there has been born the following offspring: Charles T., working in the mines at Burke, Idaho; Ida M., married to John Mortinson and living in Latah county. Mrs. Hjelm's parents came to America and remained for ten years, then returned to Norway, where they are living at the present time. Mr. and Mrs. Hjelm are members of the Norwegian Lutheran church and are exemplary people and highly esteemed.

JOHN P. FREEZE is one of the oldest pioneers now in Latah county, coming here long before Latah was thought of as a county and even before its county seat had an existence as a village, there being at that time one log cabin in which a few groceries were retailed where Moscow now stands. John P. was born in Salisbury, Rowan county, North Carolina, on February 10, 1833, being the son of George and Sophia (Bost) Freeze, natives of Rowan county, North Carolina. The father was a farmer and tanner and was born in 1801; the mother was born in 1803, and her father, John Bost, was a cabinet maker. Our subject remained with his parents until 1858, then started in life for himself. He had gained his education from the public schools and at the time of his start in life he migrated to Woodruff county, Arkansas, near Augusta, and there farmed and raised hogs. In 1870 he moved to Benton county, and in 1873, with a train of friends and relatives, started across the plains on April 5, reaching Walla Walla on August 4. They started with twelve outfits, but at Big Thompson creek, west of Denver, they joined David Notman's train and traveled together the remainder of the way. Mr. Notman came direct to his present home in this community and our subject went to Yakima river and mined, then on to Seattle, and later returned to Walla Walla and thence to what is now Latah county. He took a claim on Cedar creek and returned to Walla Walla to bring his stuff and a person had jumped it when he returned, so after due search he selected his present place in the vicinity of Freese postoffice. He has a quarter section of good land well improved and which produces abundance of timothy hay. In 1877 the Indians stole their horses but did no further depredations. He assisted to build the fort at Palouse at this time and the following year he assisted to build the one near his place.

When the Civil war broke out Mr. Freeze enlisted in Company G, Arkansas Infantry, but was discharged on account of sickness, but upon his recovery he enlisted again, this time in Company A, Arkansas Cavalry, and in this he served until the close of the war. In the battle of Big Creek, near Helena, Arkansas, he was wounded through the hips and for five months he languished in bed and for seven months after that he was bound to crutches. Mr. Freeze has brothers and sisters as follows: Elizabeth, wife of John Yost, in North Carolina; Anna, wife of Daniel Corral, in North Carolina; Caleb M., living on the home estate; Panelope P., wife of Cornelius Overcash, in Arkansas; Mary, deceased; Sarah, wife of William Goen, but now deceased; Margaret, wife of William Perkins, in Arkansas; Monroe, in Texas; Flora, deceased; Jacob, deceased. Mr. Freeze is a member of the Lutheran church and is well esteemed among his fellows.

MICHAEL C. FREEZE. The gentleman whose name appears at the head of this sketch needs no introduction to the dwellers in Latah county, since he was one of the first to settle here and has spent the intervening years in noble labor both to develop the resources of the county and to elevate all in moral and educational lines, having been the promoter of both schools and churches, and being a man of prominence and ability in the community.

Mr. Freeze was born in Rowan county, North Carolina, on February 19, 1859, the son of John and Betsey (Lipe) Freeze, both natives of North Carolina and born in 1829. The father was a farmer and Michael has always followed that basic industry. When a child he was brought by his parents to Woodruff county, Arkansas, where the father bought land and farmed for eleven years, our subject attending school. In 1870 a move was made to Benton county, and one year later they sold out and provided teams for the long overland journey to Washington. Dayton was the objective point, which was reached four months after starting, but in 1876 they decided to make another move and came to the territory now embraced in Latah county, it being then Nez Perces county. The father took the quarter where he now lives, just north of our subject's place, and he lives there still. Michael remained with his father until the time of his majority and then took the pre-emption where he now lives and bought another quarter section. During the Indian scare of 1878 a fort was built near the residence of Mr. Freeze and he assisted in the construction and the settlers were fortunate in getting through the trouble with no fatalities.

The marriage of Mr. Freeze and Miss Mattie, daughter of Benjamin F. and Ann (Powell) Peterson, was solemnized on August 7, 1881, and they have become the parents of the following named children: Estelle, John F., Daniel, deceased, Anna, all at home. Mrs. Freeze was was born on October 17, 1861, near Newport, New Jersey, and had one brother, Daniel J., deceased. Her father was born in New Jersey, on June 27, 1839, and farmed in that state. The mother was born in New Jersey, on August 29, 1841. Mr. Freeze has brothers and sisters as follows: Xalvin E., living near Freese; Mary, deceased; Daniel, deceased; Sarah, wife of Wilber Watkins, and living in Texas; Caleb, deceased. Mr. Freeze now has a farm of two hundred and twenty-seven acres, well improved with fine buildings, orchards, and so forth, and it produces abundantly of timothy and the cereals. He has always been active for the advancement of educational facilities, and was one who led in securing a subscription of fourteen hundred dollars which erected a union meeting place in the neighborhood, which is open to all denominations.

JOHN A. STARNER. The well known business man whose name is at the head of this article has been prominent in business in different localities of Latah county for a number of years, and now holds the important office of postmaster at Freese, at which place he gained the establishment of the office. He is also carrying on a general store and does a good business from the surrounding country.

John A. was born in Wayne county, Ohio, on May 9, 1837, being the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Byers) Starner. The father was a blacksmith and native of Pennsylvania, being born in 1806, and the mother was born in the vicinity of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania in 1817. Until fifteen years of age our subject was with his parents acquiring a good education, which he finished later, as will be noted. Leaving home, he went to work on a farm until 1856. Then two years were spent in attending school, after which he joined the ranks of the educators, and on January 15, 1860, he migrated to Salem, Illinois, and taught school. He went to Stephenson county after this and attended commercial college, and then went to teaching again. Next we see him in Dixon, and afterward in Central City, Colorado. Eight months were spent there in mining, and then a move was made to Virginia City, Montana, where he mined also. In 1865, at Blackfoot, Montana, he was crippled while operating in the placer mines, and the next place we find this traveller was in Umatilla county, Oregon, whence he went to Walla Walla, and then to Dayton, Washington. He taught school and engaged in business, and in 1878 he was selected probate judge of Columbia county, and so well did he discharge the duties of that office that he was promptly elected his own successor. He took government land five miles from Dayton, gaining the third patent issued for timber culture and the first in Walla Walla county. In April, 1886, he went to Endicott, Whitman county, and in 1888 he came to Latah county. He prospected for a time, and in 1890 went to the vicinity of Princeton and started a general merchandise establishment. He was enabled to gain a postoffice for that place and there he did business for nine years. It was 1899 when he came to his present place, opened a store, and on June 22, 1900, gained a postoffice, which he handles now.

On March 27, 1873, in Columbia county, Mr. Starner married Miss Bell, daughter of Hugh and Jane Glen. Mrs. Starner's father was a weaver and worked in the factories in New York and Illinois. She was born in Delhi, New York, on July 16, 1835. Mr. and Mrs. Starner have one foster son, Stanley (Matthews) Starner, a farmer in Latah county. Mr. Starner was a member of the Maccabees, and his wife is associated with the Congregational church. At present Mr. Starner is also justice of the peace. On May 19, 1902, Mrs. Starner was called from her home and family by the cold hand of death, and her remains lie buried in the Deep Creek Union church cemetery.

RICHARD F. RICHARDSON. This industrious and enterprising gentleman is one of our substantial citizens, having a fruit farm in Genesee, where he does also a garden business. His possessions are ten acres of this valuable land, and it is improved in good shape and handled in a creditable manner. Richard F. was born in Myricks, Massachusetts, on March 20, 1859, being the son of Steven and Orisa (Hammar) Richardson, natives, respectively, of Maine and New Hampshire. The father lived to the age of sixty-six and the mother died at a ripe age. Our subject was educated in the village schools and remained with his parents until he was twenty years of age, and then went to California, where he remained for one and one-half years. Following that period he went to Nez Perces county, Idaho, and there took a homestead near the city of Lewiston. 1879 was the date of this venture, and in 1882 he sold the property and bought a quarter section close to Genesee, which in turn was sold in 1895, and a trip was made to California. Six months later he returned to Genesee and bought the land where he lives at the present time, as described above. In politics Mr. Richardson is with the Republican fold, and he displays a commendable activity and zeal in the affairs of county and state.

The marriage of Mr. Richardson and Miss Lucy, daughter of Cyrus and Mary Southard, natives of Maine, was celebrated in 1886, and they have become the parents of eight children, as follows: Grace, Maurice S., deceased, Helen, Cornelia, Blanche, Lucy, Esther and Richard. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson are members of the Methodist church and are generous supporters of the faith and maintain a wise and unsullied life in their walk, both public and private.

JOHN A. ANDERSON. As this work purports to chronicle the lives of the leading citizens of Latah county, it is quite fitting that mention be made of the industrious and enterprising gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, since he is one of the worthy farmers and stockmen of the county, living about four miles northeast from Genesee, where he handles three hundred and twenty acres of land, raising principally the cereals. John A. was born in Sweden, northern part, being the son of Andrew and Ellen Anderson, and the date of his advent into this life was January 22, 1864. His parents were natives of the same country, and the father died there at the age of fifty-nine and the mother is still living at the age of seventy-two. When he had arrived at the age of twelve years our subject was sent out into the world to stem the tide of existence for himself. He worked in the woods and learned the art of the axe and saw, as well as developing a good physique. In 1883 he came to America, and the first location was in Minnesota, where he labored seven years on a farm. The date of his advent into Latah county was 1890, and here he worked on the railroad for a time and then labored for wages on a farm until 1898, when he rented a farm of one-quarter section, and three years were spent in the cultivation of that place, with successful results, when he added as much more land, all of which is in a good state of cultivation, and he is the recipient of abundant harvests for the skillful labor bestowed. Mr. Anderson uses eleven head of horses for the cultivation of his farms, having also cattle for domestic uses. He raises as high as four thousand bushels of wheat besides other cereals and fruits and vegetables.

The marriage of Mr. Anderson and Miss Carrie Wuensen, a native of Sweden, was celebrated in 1898, and to them have been born two children, Carl E. and Helma. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are worthy members of the Swedish Lutheran church, and they are good citizens and excellent people.

DAVID NOTMAN, JR. As one of the earliest settlers of the territory now embraced in Latah county, as a man who has always been foremost and active in the upbuilding of the country, as one who has always maintained an untarnished reputation, receiving the approval of his fellows, and as one of the substantial and capable men of the county of Latah at the present time, we are glad to accord to the subject of this article representation in this volume.

David Notman was born in Scotland, ten miles distant from Glasgow, on April 24, 1840, being the son of David and Christina (Kirkwood) Notman. The father worked at the trade of calico printing, but after coming to America worked in the lead mines and then farmed. The maternal grandfather of our subject was James Kirkwood. When the lad had reached the age of eight he accompanied his parents to this side of the Atlantic, and a settlement was made in Wisconsin. At first all hands earned money as wages and then purchased a farm, where they devoted their energies to tilling the soil. David was educated in the schools in Wisconsin and in Scotland. He remained at home until the war broke out and then enlisted in Company D, Thirty-eighth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and at once they were ordered to Virginia, arriving there in time to assist in finishing the battle of Cold Harbor. He was with the army of the Potomac and engaged in the siege of Petersburg, and served until the close of the war, being honorably discharged at Madison, Wisconsin, in August, 1865. The father had sold the Wisconsin property and migrated to Colorado, whence went the young soldier, joining his loved ones on Big Thompson creek, fifty miles north from Denver, where the home then was. He engaged with his father in stock raising until 1873, then sold out and came to the territory now embraced in Latah county. He was accompanied on this trip overland with teams by John, Peter and Michael Freeze, who remained at Walla Walla, but he came direct to his present place, at Freese, landing here in August of that year. He took a pre-emption and afterwards a homestead, and to the cultivation of this land he has devoted his energies since. He has it well tilled, a fine house and barn, and is a well-to-do and prosperous farmer. During the Nez Perces war he and a neighbor built a small log fort and remained on their farms while all the others went to the fortifications at Palouse. The Nez Perces Indians passed by with their families en route to the Coeur d'Alene reservation to leave the families, but no harm was done to our subject or his friend. He was the first settler on Deep creek and has done much to build up the country since that time. He is a member of the G. A. R., has served on the school board, and always conducted himself in a commendable manner.

Before Latah county was cut off Mr. Notman was elected county commissioner of Nez Perces county, and such was the satisfaction with his official acts that he was elected a second term. Mr. Notman is affiliated with the Methodist church and a faithful supporter of the faith.

AUGUST JOHNSON. One of the men who have wrought here for the development of the county is mentioned at the head of this article, and he is a citizen of capabilities and good standing, while he is also an enterprising farmer, owning eighty acres of good land six miles north from Genesee and renting one hundred and forty-five. Mr. Johnson was born in southeastern Sweden on February 28, 1859, being the son of Swan and Cecelia (Swanson) Johnson, also natives of Sweden, where the father still lives, the mother dying while our subject was young. August was educated in the common schools of his native place, and at the age of twenty-one he bade the land of home and friends farewell and came to the United States, locating first in Prospect Grove, New York, where he labored for four and one-half years, when a removal was made to Kansas, where he remained three years, at the expiration of which time he came direct to Latah county. Here he rented a farm until he was satisfied that this was a country to settle in and then he purchased his farm of eighty acres. Mr. Johnson produces about four thousand bushels of grain each year, besides having much fruit, some stock, and other general productions of the farm. Politically Mr. Johnson is allied with the Democrats, but at the time of the election of the late William McKinley he voted for that good man. Mr. Johnson always evinces a good interest in the politics of the land and is ever on the side of progress.

The marriage of Mr. Johnson and Ida M., daughter of John and Margret (Johnson) Johnson, was celebrated on February 4, 1885. Mrs. Johnson's parents were natives of Sweden, where also she was born, and they came to this country in 1877, locating in Brooklyn, New York, where she was educated. Our worthy subject and his estimable wife are the parents of the following children: Pearl E., Olof V. and Mary C., twins, Ethel E., Mabel L., Hattie H., George H. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are members of the Norwegian Lutheran church, and are generous supporters of this denomination as of the faith in general.

PETER CLYDE. This enterprising and progressive agriculturist is one of Latah county's established and capable citizens. His family home is on his estate of three hundred and twenty acres which lies eight miles east from Palouse. He has a valuable farm, in a high state of cultivation, and handled after the plan of the diversified farmer, and the buildings are excellent and commodious and altogether it is one of the attractive rural abodes of the county. Mr. Clyde was born in Ontario, Canada, on September 22, 1859, having six brothers and sisters as follows: Katherine, Joseph, Grace, deceased, Robert, Mary, and Wilfred T., the parents being Alexander and Anna B. (Graham) Clyde. The father was a native of Ireland and came to America at the age of twenty-one. The mother was born in Scotland and came to the new world when small. Her father was James Graham, a farmer and stonemason. At the age of fifteen years, our subject left the parental roof and sought a place in the world for himself. He first went to Michigan and worked for a time on a farm and then made his way to Truckee, California, in 1876, associating himself with a half-brother, Andrew Clyde, in the lumber business. In 1879 he left there and came to the Palouse country, working for a time on log contract. He filed a homestead right on a quarter section in 1883 and that, with as much more which he had purchased formerly, makes the home place.

On May 27, 1885, Mr. Clyde married Miss Mary L., daughter of Francis M. and Martha J. (Scallions) Adair, and they have the following named children, Ellen, Mary M., Addie B., and Joseph Elwyn. Mrs. Clyde's father was born in Alabama in 1831, and the mother in Arkansas in 1850. She was born in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, on June 26, 1869, and the other children are named below, Francis, Matilda L., Benjamin F., John S., Itha B., Clara A., Edgar M., Mattie, and Freddie, deceased. Mr. Clyde is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Palouse Lodge, No. 46. He is also one of a committee of five who have erected a church for union services in the neighborhood. He always takes an interest in church work, in the general welfare of all and manifests it by wise counsel and faithful labors. Mr. Clyde has been road overseer for two terms, and is zealous that the highways be in good condition, a very worthy labor. He is also director of the schools and evinces great interest in furthering the cause of education.

WASHINGTON WOLHETER is descended from a line of ancestors who have all been devoted Americans. His grandfather, George Wolheter, was born in Pennsylvania in 1790 and died in 1853. He married Barbara Cop, who was born in Ohio and outlived him some years. To this worthy couple were born seven children, the third of whom was George Wolheter, the father of our subject. George was born in Pennsylvania on October 22, 1814, and was a carpenter and cabinet maker. His brothers were all good business men. At the age of twenty-one he married a widow with three children and to this union three children were born. Upon the death of his first wife, George Wolheter married Mrs. Susanna (Myers) Falons, who had two children by a former marriage. To this last union, our subject was born in Hancock county, Ohio, on July 2, 1844. He has one brother, Israel E., in Latah county, and one sister, Mrs. Viletta Lamb, in Lowe, Idaho. The mother of our subject was one of a family of eight children, her father, Mikel Myers, being a patriot of the war of 1812. She was born in Marion county, Ohio, in 1812 and died in Circleville, Kansas, on January 2, 1876. When our subject was seven years of age his father went to California and searched for gold two years. In 1857 the family went to Jackson county, Kansas, where the father wrought at his trade. Washington was educated in the public schools of that frontier region and in 1862 enlisted in Company B, Eleventh Kansas Infantry and eighteen months later was transferred to the cavalry. He participated in the battles of Pea Ridge, Maysville, Prairie Grove, Cane Hill, Lexington, Westport, Big Blue, and many other battles and skirmishes. Mr. Wolheter was one of the boys who chased Quantrel out of the country. After that Mr. Wolheter went with his regiment to the west and fought Indians. These experiences were times of great suffering from cold, hunger and arduous marches. In one battle he was one of seventy-five soldiers who fought off the savages for three days and at the end of that time found forty of their number either dead or wounded. Following this service he was mustered out and in 1867 went to Nevada mining.

On September 14, 1871, in Circleville, Kansas, Mr. Wolheter married Sara (Elliott) Price. Mrs. Wolheter's paternal grandparents were Samuel and Margarette (Styles) Elliott, born in New York city on September 4, 1770, and in Paris France, on September 1, 1772, and died on September 24, 1860, and August 4, 1860, respectively. To this worthy couple thirteen children were born and to each the father, who was a patriot of the war of 1812, gave a quarter section of land. James, one of these fortunate children, was born in Shelby county, Ohio, on December 31, 1828, and chose to carve out his own fortune. He was the father of Mrs. Wolheter, and married Miss Anna Moore, in Jefferson county, Iowa, on July 8, 1849. The Moores were a prominent family and Dr. Black, one of the family, as well as others were noted men. Mrs. Wolheter was well educated in the various places where her father's family lived and in 1865 married Mr. J. W. Price. To that union one son, George, was born on August 9, 1867. He is now living near Nezperce. In 1870 Mrs. Price went to Circleville, Kansas, and there occurred her marriage with Mr. Wolheter. In 1874, after the great grasshopper raid, Mr. Wolheter came west and lumbered in Santa Cruz county, California, for three years, after which he came to the Palouse country. On July 9, 1877, he came to Latah county and took his present place five miles northeast from Palouse. He has nearly a section of fine land and the industry, skill and wise business methods of Mr. and Mrs. Wolheter have given them a goodly competence. They have one of the finest residences in the county and other buildings to match. Mrs. Wolheter is a member of the Christian church and he is affiliated with the G. A. R. To Mr. and Mrs. Wolheter have been born three children, Estella, born at Felton, California, on March 24, 1876, and now the wife of Dr. J. T. Moser, of Kendrick; Lulu, born on the farm on December 3, 1881, and now married to Dr. J. E. Prencel, of Dayton, Washington; Mildred, born on the farm on July 29, 1888.

ALFRED COLBURN is one of the earliest settlers of the section now embraced in Latah county and he has been one of the hard workers to make it one of the leading counties of the state as well as gain for himself the handsome holding that now belongs to him. His fine farm of two hundred and forty acres lies seven miles east from Palouse, is now the family home and is improved in a very tasty and wise manner. He has all kinds of stock, raises various crops, has excellent buildings and good orchards. Mr. Colburn was born on March 25, 1834, at Lyme, New Hampshire, being the son of Abel and Martha (Rice) Colburn. The father was born in 1792 and he and his wife travelled the pilgrim way together for sixty years, passing away at a good ripe age to the reward laid in store for them in another world. The mother was born at Brattleborough, Vermont, in 1794. Our subject was well educated in his youthful days and in 1852 was making ready to come west when his parents decided to come also and together they journeyed to Wisconsin, settling in Waupaca county, being the second family in the township of their home. Alfred secured a piece of land which he deeded to his parents and there they lived until death. He secured this land by working on the river to earn the purchase price. In 1858 he removed to Isanti county, Minnesota, and there was elected county surveyor. In 1861, November 4, Mr. Colburn enlisted in Company K, First Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and being wounded at the battle of Fair Oaks, he was discharged August 9, 1862, in New York harbor. But on August 28, 1864, he sought the ranks again, enlisting in the Second Battery of Light Artillery, where he served until the close of the war, being honorably discharged on August 16, 1865, having left a military record which deserves great credit. After the war, Mr. Colburn was elected by his fellows as county surveyor and for sixteen years he filled that important office. In 1875 he came west, settling at Stayton, Oregon, where he operated a saw mill and later built a flour mill at Oakland. In 1878, during the Indian outbreak in northern Oregon, our subject was on his way to Latah county with his family and a band of five hundred sheep. His travelling companions took refuge at The Dalles but Mr. Colburn pushed ahead regardless of the Indians and arrived at his destination in safety. He took as government land his present place already described, and here he has labored since. Before Latah county was set off from Nez Perces county, Mr. Colburn was elected county surveyor and with credit to himself he discharged the duties incumbent upon him in that capacity.

Residence of Washington Wolheter.

WASHINGTON WOLHETER.

MRS. WASHINGTON WOLHETER.

In May, 1866, Mr. Colburn married Miss Mary M. Henry, who died on February 8, 1871, leaving two children Ruth E., now dead, and Harriet M., a teacher living at home. On November 28, 1873, Mr. Colburn contracted another marriage, Mrs. Cassandra (Whitaker) Morton becoming his wife at that time. To this union were born Effie B. and Pearl V., deceased; Grace L., a graduate from the Pullman College, at Pullman, Washington, and now assistant principal of the Waitsburg high school. Mrs. Colburn had four children from her former husband, named as follows: Clara E., living in Spokane; Cora M., in Latah county; Ellen E., living in Pullman, Washington; Calvin H., also living in Pullman. In political matters, Mr. Colburn always takes the part of the intelligent citizen, and is ever found registered on the side of progress and good government. He and his wife are members of the Baptist church and he affiliates with the G. A. R. Mr. Colburn is now enjoying the golden years of a well spent life and is secure in the good will and admiration of his fellows, while his life is exemplary in all respects.

JAMES GRANT is one of Latah county's substantial and well respected agriculturists, being a man of great industry and thrift and bestowing his labors with wisdom and discretion. During the early days of this county he labored with great zeal, carrying at times flour fifteen miles on his back while he made shingles in the woods. This being but a sample of the arduous labor undergone by the pioneers, such as our worthy subject. The birth of Mr. Grant occurred in Inverness county, Scotland, on April 5, 1845, being the son of Donald Grant, a cabinet maker. James secured a good education from the common schools and in 1870 came to America, landing first at Toronto, Canada, whence one year later he came to the United States. He worked in the steel mills in Chicago for two years, then came to San Francisco in 1873. Three years were spent in various labors in the Golden State and then he made his way to Oregon in 1878. That was the year when also he came to the territory now embraced in Latah county. He filed a preemption and afterward a homestead on his present place, which is one quarter section of good land five miles east from Palouse. It is now the family home and there Mr. Grant has labored faithfully for the years succeeding his advent here. He has a good place, fine house, and commodious barn, well selected orchard, and raises timothy, the cereals, and also handles some stock.

On June 10, 1888, in Latah county, Mr. Grant married Miss Ella, daughter of Abijah and Rhoda Whittenback, natives respectively of Indiana and Pennsylvania, and whose children, in addition to Mrs. Grant, are named as follows: Emma, Alma, William and Mary. Mrs. Grant was born October 11, 1854. To Mr. and Mrs. Grant there have been born two children, Rhoda, at home, and Harry, deceased. Mr. Grant had one sister, Jane, wife of W. F. Johnson, editor of the Banffshire Advertiser, at Buckie, Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Grant are members of the Methodist church, at Palouse, and are substantial in the support of their faith in precept and example and contributions. They are highly respected and esteemed people and maintain an enviable standing among their fellows.

THEADORE RILEY. It was in the year 1886, that the subject of this sketch made his way into the territory of Latah county and after due search, found the spot where his home is at the present time, homesteading a quarter section to the cultivation and improvement of which he has devoted his time since. His farm is located seven miles northeast from Kendrick and produces diversified crops.

Reverting to the personal history of Mr. Riley, we note that he was born in Jackson county, Kansas, on August 9, 1860, being the son of Allan and Elizabeth (Kline) Riley. The father was a farmer in that state and the family remained there until 1875, when they made the journey to Washington, landing in Whitman county, where Pullman now stands. The father took land there and he has lived on it since that time, being one of the real builders and pioners of Whitman county. Our subject remained at home, being educated in the schools of Kansas and Washington until his majority, when he started for himself.

On December 30, 1882, Mr. Riley married Miss Eva, daughter of Jacob and Barbara Hull, the nuptials occurring in Moscow and the following named children have been the fruit of the union: Jesse, Frank, Mathews, Harry, John, Daisy, Alva T., Gilbert, and May. Mrs. Riley was born in Kansas and her parents were early settlers in Whitman county, Washington, where her father resides at the present time. Mr. Riley has labored here for many years and much credit is due him for the faithful manner in which he has performed the duties of the pioneer, and he is secure in the esteem and respect of his fellows.

OSCAR V. MOREY. Among the sturdy sons of toil, who have made Latah county to enjoy her present state of prosperity and enviable standing in the state, we are constrained to mention the gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph and who is one of the substantial agriculturists of the county, owning a quarter section of fertile land seven miles north from Kendrick, which is the family home at the present time.

Mr. Morey was born in Henry county, Illinois, near Rock Island, on August 7, 1859, being the son of Oscar and Anne (Wolsey) Morey. For ten years he remained in his native state and then the family removed to Bates county, Missouri, where they farmed until our subject was twenty-one years of age. Then he stepped forth from the parental roof to encounter the battles of life on his own resources. He first came to Idaho in the fall of 1880, locating at Bear Ridge, on a preemption one-half mile east from his present home and later a homestead a little farther east from that. He improved and tilled them until 1892, when he sold them both and purchased his present place. He has as fine improvements as are on the ridge and he is one of the thrifty and enterprising farmers, as his premises indicate, gaining good dividends of crops from his skillful management of the soil and being a man of unquestioned integrity and standing among his fellows. Mr. Morey has a good orchard of three acres but devotes his land mostly to the raising of wheat.

The marriage of Mr. Morey and Miss Emma, daughter of Adam and Augusta Alber, was solemnized on April 18, 1894, on Bear Ridge, and they have been blessed with the advent of four children: Clarence C., Rena, Ollie, and Clara. Mr. Morey is a man who takes the part of the intelligent citizen in the affairs of the county and in the betterment of educational facilities, and is a valuable member of society.

CHRISTIAN HANSON. It is with pleasure that we are enabled to grant to the estimable gentleman and industrious farmer and patriotic citizen of this county a representation in the volume which chronicles the events of Latah county, since he has wrought here with faithfulness and display of wisdom and thrift, having accumulated a goodly holding of property by his hard labor and careful management. Mr. Hanson was born in Lowland, Denmark, on October 13, 1851, being the son of Hans Jacobson and Enger Hanson, both natives of Denmark, where also they died. Our subject commenced to work out at the age of nine, having gained considerable schooling previous to that time. He would come home each night. But when he was thirteen years of age, he worked where he could only come home once each week. He continued this life of industry and hard labor until the time of his departure for this country, in 1892. He came direct to Latah county, where he worked out for two years and then bought eighty acres of land and in 1902 bought ninety-three acres more, his estate being six miles north from Genesee. Mr. Hanson has a good orchard on the place and a good residence and out buildings, as barns and so forth, which make his farm one of value and it is handled in a skillful manner and produces abundant crops.

The marriage of Mr. Hanson and Miss Johanna, daughter of Swen and Christen Johnson, was consummated in 1880. Mrs. Hanson's parents were natives of Sweden, where also they are buried. Mr. Hanson is a man of industry and good capabilities and also his wife is a true helpmeet, having wrought out much income for the home by her industry in the manufacture of butter and cheese and so forth. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson are not allied with any denomination, believing in the scriptures as the divine word and guided in all their ways by its precepts alone and their lives are as lights in the community, being faithful, kind and substantial.

ALBERT HOWELL. This intelligent agriculturist has added his faithful and wisely directed labor for the advancement of the interests of Latah county, while he has wrought out for himself in the business world a good success. Mr. Howell was born in Morgan county, Indiana, on August 22, 1860. His father, William D. Howell, married Miss Sarah J. Dilley, a native of Indiana, and to them were born: Dora A., deceased; Edwin, living in Latah county; Franklin, also living in Latah county; these in addition to our subject. Mr. Howell enlisted in the Union army and in 1866 was taken sick in the army and died. The mother married Mr. Rudd, and to them were born: Charlie, deceased; Lethia J., wife of Birt Crooks, in Latah county. Following this last marriage the family removed to Indianapolis and remained there two years and then a move was made to Tipton county, where eight years were spent, after which, in 1877, they all came to Kansas and settled in Wilson county. There they engaged in farming and remained for ten years. Our subject remained on the farm with his step-father. In 1888, they all sold out and came west, landing first in Colfax, Washington, whence they removed to Palouse. About that time, our subject took a preemption claim which has been his family home since. It lies four miles southeast from Palouse and is well improved and produces abundant crops under the wise husbandry of the owner. Mr. Howell raises cattle, horses, and hogs, practices diversified farming, raising alfalfa and brome grass, having also a good orchard. His place has comfortable buildings and is one of the fine farms of the section.

On January 1, 1882, at Coyville, Kansas, Mr.

Howell married Miss Mary L., daughter of Napoleon and Mary L. Sharrai. The father was a carpenter and Mrs. Howell was born in Topeka, Kansas, on May 22, 1866. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Howell are named as follows: Nettie M., Ada E., Dora A., deceased, Eva J., Bertha A., Mary, Etta O., Josie, Willis, deceased, Ralph, Alva, Hattie, Albert C. The children are at home and attending school. In the winters Mr. Howell moves to Palouse for school advantages. Mr. Howell is a member of the W. of W., Star Camp, No. 97, at Palouse, and his wife is a member of the Circle. Mr. Howell pays much attention to the advancement of the educational interests and has given faithful service on the school board. He is a man of careful and wise ways, possessed of vigor and enterprise and is one of the respected and substantial citizens of the county.

ISAAC W. LAZELLE. In numbering the leading farmers of Latah county, there must not be failure to mention the estimable gentleman whose name appears above, since he has labored here for many years and his wise efforts of industry have been fittingly crowned in abundant success in financial holdings, while he stands high among his fellows as a man of integrity and sound principles. Isaac W. was born in Cattaraugus county, New York, on May 15, 1858, being the son of Sumner C. and Malinda (Angle) Lazelle. The father was born in Vermont in 1819 and is now living in Latah county, in his eighty-fourth year. The mother was a native of New York and was born in 1825. The other children of this worthy couple are named as follows: Inez E., at home with her father in Latah county; Cynthia M., wife of Wm. Eddy, in Whitman county, Washington; Charles F., on the old home place; Oscar W., in Okanogan county, Washington. Isaac W. remained in New York with his parents until 1873, then the family came to Nevada county, California, where the father engaged in lumbering and our subject worked with him until 1877, at which time they bought teams and came overland to Latah county. The father took his present place as a homestead and in 1880 Isaac W. preempted his place. It lies three miles east from Palouse and consists of one quarter section. In 1882, he proved up on the place and since that time it has been his home.

On January 8, 1888, Mr. Lazelle married Miss Ruby, daughter of Walter and Caroline McLain, retired farmers living in Palouse. To this happy union there have been born the following children: Walter, Hazel, and Warren H., all at home and attending school. Mrs. Lazelle was born in Isabella county, Michigan, on September 12, 1862, and she has brothers and sisters as follows: Evaline, wife of A. Harvey, and living in Latah county; Frank C., living in Palouse; Ella, wife of A. W. Littke, living in Palouse. Mr. Lazelle is a member of the W. of W. In school matters he is much interested and has served on the board of directors for three terms. The farm of our subject is one of value and is handled in a capable and excellent manner, and produces abundant returns of the cereals and fruits. In 1884 Mr. Lazelle made a trip to Humbold county, California, and for nine months there he was attending to his interests in the lumber woods. He is a man of stanch worth of character and has always maintained an untarnished reputation and been faithful in laboring for the general welfare of the county.

GEORGE W. ANDERSON. Three and one-half miles southeast from Palouse is situated the fine farm of the subject of this article. It consists of one hundred and twelve acres of fertile lands which is productive of rich returns in crops, because of the skillful husbandry of the proprietor. The residence is an elegant structure of modern design and conveniences, while commodious barns, out buildings and so forth add beauty and value to the establishment. Mr. Anderson has fine orchards, practices diversified farming and is setting much of his ground to grasses.

George W. Anderson was born in New York, near Malone, on November 12, 1858, being the son of Rufus and Amelia (Freeze) Anderson. The father was a native of New York, born in 1827, gave his attention to farming and now lives in Palouse, Washington. The mother's parents are both dead and we are not favored with their names. To this worthy couple there have been born, in addition to the subject of this article, Amelia, wife of George Degowin; Rufus J., living at Weippe, Idaho; Enos, living at Malone, New York; Ruth, at Westville, New York; Edward, in Palouse. Our subject remained at home with his parents until 1872, then farmed for himself and in 1888 went to Michigan. In 1883, the parents came to the vicinity of Palouse and settled and in 1891, George W. came west and engaged in farming and in 1896 he selected his present place, three and one-half miles southeast from Palouse. Here he has bestowed his labors since that time, doing both general farming and fruit raising, handling also stock.

On December 10, 1882, Mr. Anderson married Miss Emma Degowin, in New York, and they have become the parents of one son, Russell E. Mrs. Anderson was born in Constable, New York, on April 28, 1855, being the daughter of William and Mary Degowin, farmers of New York state. Her brothers and sisters are named below. Harriett, living in Sheboygan, Michigan; George in Palouse; William A., in Constable, New York; Fred, in Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts; Carrie; Elmer; Isaac; John, in Constable, New York. Mr. Anderson is active in politics but does not desire public office, for being elected justice of the peace in 1901 he refused to qualify, but has served as road supervisor. He and his wife are members of the Methodist church in Palouse and are highly esteemed there as in all their associations. Mr. Anderson is greatly interested in school advantages and always advocates the highest tax for furthering them.

CHARLES CHANDLER is the senior member of the firm of Chandler & Davis, liverymen, of Kendrick, who do a thriving business and handle a full equipment of fine rigs and horses. They are especially zealous in the care of their business that their patrons should receive proper attention and are solicitous to this end by wise management and providing the best equipments and horses. The immediate subject of this sketch was born in Delaware county, Ohio, on September 19, 1871, being the son of Stephen H. and Josephine (Klapp) Chandler. The father was a farmer and remained in the native place until the death of his wife, which occurred when Charles was twelve years of age. Then the family removed to Howard, Elk county, Kansas, and four years later they went thence to Sedgwick county, in the same state, and there our subject remained, laboring at farming until he was twenty-one years old and then he came to Latah county. He engaged in farming here, renting land, until the fall of 1901, when in company with S. Davis, he purchased the livery barn above mentioned, from J. S. Crocker. They are doing a splendid business and are building up a large patronage.

In fraternal relations Mr. Chandler is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., Nezperce Lodge No. 37. As yet, Mr. Chandler is quietly pursuing the way of the celibatarian, having never launched on the sea of matrimony. He is one of the most substantial men of the town, and is highly esteemed by all, being possessed of fine ability, good executive force, and dominated by a keen sagacity and sound principles, while his geniality and affability have won for him many friends.

LIVEY J. CHANEY. Who have contributed more to the wealth of Latah county than the farmers and fruit growers? Of this worthy class the subject of this sketch is a representative, having a fine farm six miles southeast from Palouse, where he raises fruit from twenty-five acres and grain from the balance. His place is well improved and handled in a skillful manner. March 1, 1864, marks the date of the birth of Livey J. and his parents were Lewis S. and Martha (Sly) Chaney. The father was born in 1833, in Indiana and his father, Lewis Chaney, was a native of Maryland. The mother of our subject was born in Ohio, in 1838 and her father, George Sly, was a farmer of that state. In 1872 the family came to Kansas, and in Greenwood county they bought land and farmed until 1879, Livey J. attending schools meantime. Then the father sold the farm and spent one year in Colorado in hunting. 1880 was the year in which they came to Latah county, settling on their present farm, purchasing the right of a former resident. In 1886 our subject went to Shoshone county and preempted a quarter, which he afterwards sold. Aside from that venture he has nearly always made his home with his parents, and has given attention to farming and fruit raising.

In 1889 occurred the marriage of Mr. Chaney and Miss Minnie, daughter of Louis Reed, and one child, Jesse L., was born to this union. Jesse is now living with his grandparents in Oregon. Mr. Chaney contracted a second marriage, the lady becoming his bride being Perlina, daughter of Eli Burcham, a farmer, now deceased. The nuptials were solemnized on July 4, 1891, and they have become the parents of five children: Emery Q., Sarah E., Edith M., Dewey C., Silvey, all at home. The brothers of Mrs. Chaney are named below: Eli, Milton, John, and Thomas. Mr. Chaney's brothers and sisters are: George, living in Latah county; Sarah, wife of Abraham Dewese, living in Palouse; Douglas, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Chaney are members of the Methodist church. They are valuable members of society, have always labored for the upbuilding of the community and have the respect and confidence of all who know them.

HOMER A. THOMAS. To this veteran of many conflicts on life's battle field, and pioneer worker in Latah county and many other frontier places, we are constrained to grant a representation in this volume, since he is one of the men who have made good success in labor. He has always maintained an unsullied reputation and is one of the highly esteemed men of the community. Homer A. was born in Allegany county, New York, being the son of Edward and Polly (Bacon) Thomas, natives of Vermont. The date of our subject's birth was December 7, 1835. The parents removed to Richland county, Ohio, in 1845, and thence to Platteville, Wisconsin, in 1851. The father farmed there and was one of the leading men of the section. There the mother died in 1888 and in 1897, the father also died, aged ninety-two years, and they sleep in the Platteville cemetery. Homer A. was educated in the common schools in the various sections where he resided and at the age of twenty-four left the parental roof for the wide and unexplored west. A train of seventy-five wagons and one hundred and fifty persons was formed to go to the Salmon river mines, in Idaho. This was in 1862 and Mr. Thomas was one of the number. They became lost and hired a man for one hundred and fifty dollars to pilot them out of the wild territory to Deer Lodge, Montana. They finally arrived there and thence to Walla Walla, arriving in September, having crossed the Rockies three times on the trip. From Walla Walla Mr. Thomas went to San Francisco and worked for one year in a grist mill, then freighted for a year and rented a farm which proved unsuccessful. Then Mr. Thomas took up the operation of an eating house on the overland stage line, continuing in the same for two years. Then he ran the Wayside house at Soledad for six years, afterwards kept a boarding house in San Luis Obispo for a year and then we find him again in Walla Walla, where he worked for one year in a grist mill. Following this he spent one winter in Seattle and visited Goldendale, Washington, and there painted for two years. Thence he came again to Walla Walla and later took a homestead where he now resides, six miles northeast from Genesee. This settlement was made in 1882, and six years later he bought an additional eighty. He has a fine farm, well cultivated, embellished with excellent residence and all good substantial out buildings and barns that are needed, orchards and so forth. Mr. Thomas has fine cattle, horses, and hogs, having the Jersey breed of cattle, Norman horses, and Berkshire hogs. He is a leader in the realm of stock raising and farming and is one of the leading citizens of the county.

RESIDENCE OF HOMER A. THOMAS.

Mr. Thomas was married to Miss Sarah J. Dagget, daughter of Acel and Eliza (White) Dagget, natives of Vermont, whence they came to Illinois and thence to Wisconsin, where they died. Mr. Thomas is a member of the I. O. O. F., and for three terms was elected justice of the peace and then he was obliged to refuse a re-election, being determined to rest from the more active public duties. Mr. Thomas is a man who has labored very much for the welfare and progress of the county, has always been upright and faithful, and now as the golden years begin to run apace he is enjoying the fruits of his labors, the respect and admiration of the people and is to be commended on the wisely spent years of a useful career.

BENJAMIN F. ALDRICH. The venerable gentleman, of whom we now have the pleasure of writing, is one of Latah county's early settlers and has labored here continuously since, in the good work of development and upbuilding, being now one of the prosperous agriculturists and orchardists of his section. He was born in Springfield, Vermont, on March 13, 1822, the son of Benjamin and Hannah Aldrich. The father was a tiller of the soil and this son remained at home busied in the invigorating labors of the farm and in acquiring a good education until he was twenty years of age and then his adventurous spirit led him to go on a whaling voyage. After the thrilling and arduous experiences of that trip had whetted his appetite for further acquaintance with the sea, he went into the merchant service, where he completed a nine year ocean service. In 1852 he came to California and for four years he mined and prospected and then went back to Wisconsin and thence soon after to Minnesota, settling near Austin, Mower county, where he farmed for twenty-one years. At the expiration of that time he came west to The Dalles and one year later from there to Latah county. Two years after his first settlement here he came to his present place, the year being 1880, and homesteaded a quarter section. This land lies one mile west from Juliaetta and in the intervening years Mr. Aldrich has improved it in good shape, erecting buildings and cultivating it, while also he has planted a fine orchard of ten acres, which is an excellent dividend producer.

The marriage of Mr. Aldrich and Miss Almira, daughter of Jonas and Catherine Boyer, was solemnized in Milford, Wisconsin, on September 9, 1851, and they have become the parents of the following children: Francis L., Harvey C., Allan F., Edward, deceased, Willard N., Mary A., Nellie, Fred B., Anna L. and Rose B. Mrs. Aldrich is a native of New York state. This venerable and worthy couple have long trod the pilgrim way of life and are now enjoying the golden time of life amid the good things that their faithful labors have provided and also they rest secure in the esteem and good will of all who may be favored with their acquaintance, being good people, upright and kind.

HEZEKIAH M. SMITH. A resident of the thriving village of Juliaetta, and one of the men whose labors have made our county what she is today, the subject of this article is deserving of mention in any work that purports to give biographical review to the leading citizens of the county. Mr. Smith is a native of Pennsylvania, being born in Elk county, on May 12, 1847, the son of Benjamin and Eliza (Micks) Smith. The father was a farmer in that section and our subject received his education from the common schools of that place and remained on the home farm until he had reached the age of twenty-three. At that time of budding manhood, he made a journey to the west, finding no stopping place until he came to Columbia, Oregon. One year later he came thence to Idaho and in 1871 he came to Lewiston and for the next seven years he followed rafting and lumbering on the Clearwater. 1878 marks the date when he retired from that line of enterprise and went to work in a butcher shop in Lewiston. Four years was the time of his service there and in 1882 he came to Cedar creek, now in Latah county, and there acquired title to one-half section by preemption and homestead. Upon this piece of land he bestowed his labors for a score of years and then sold out his entire interests, including stock, of which he had raised much. In January, 1902, he came to Juliaetta and purchased his present home in the village. He has a fine residence and a small tract of land and he devotes his time to gardening, retiring from the more arduous duties of the stock ranch. He has a tract of land adjoining the town, which he intends to use for the garden purpose. His family came to Juliaetta in April, 1902.

Mr. Smith married Mrs. Mary Hilt, a native of Connecticut, in August, 1894, at Kendrick, Idaho, and they have one child, Lane. Mrs. Smith had three children by a former marriage.

AMON K. BIDDISON. This enterprising and well known gentleman is one of the leading vine dressers in this section, having a vineyard of two and one-half acres, besides considerable more that is being started. He dwells in the village of Juliaetta, owning a block upon which is a fine residence, also has another block that is not improved and twenty acres of fine vineyard land that adjoins the town. Mr. Biddison is a native of Ohio, being born near Wilmington, in Clinton county, on September 18, 1852, the son of John and Nancy (Martin) Biddison. His parents removed him to Iowa when he was two years old and settlement was made in Appanoose county, near Centerville, where he remained with them until his twentieth year. In 1874 he went to Kansas and settled in Coffey county, near Neosho Falls, and there he remained until 1882, when he sold his property interests there and came to Idaho. He located two miles north from where Troy now stands and in partnership with his brother purchased a sawmill that had just been built there. It was the second mill erected in that section. For four years we find him there in the manufacture of timber products and then he went to farming on Big Bear creek. He remained there until 1897, when he again sold out and went to Columbia county, Washington. He devoted his attention to raising stock there until very recently, when he sold his entire interests there and came to Juliaetta, where he purchased the property above mentioned. In addition to handling his vineyard, he devotes much time and attention to raising vegetables for the market and he is one of the prosperous men of this section. Mr. Biddison has always taken a lively interest in political matters, and while on Big Bear creek he served as deputy assessor for the years 1895-6-7. Fraternally he is affiliated with the A. F. & A. M., at Pomeroy, Washington.

Mr. Biddison married Miss Nevada, daughter of William and Nevada Fowler, at Centerville, Iowa, on December 24, 1882, and they have the following children: Crayton S., Elmer F., Noyes A. and Olive. Mr. Biddison is one of the men of vigor and thrift who have done much in the real building of our county and he is deserving of great credit for his wise and vigorous efforts in this line, while he has also exemplified in his life those rare virtues of worth and quality that characterize the real man of principle and the patriotic citizen.

AUGUST AND CHRISTIAN NELSON. These worthy and industrious men are brothers and are leading agriculturists of Latah county, where they have displayed in the past years commendable zeal, enterprise and wisdom in the prosecution of their business, in which their thrift and sagacity have brought them good success. They are located on a farm seven miles north from Genesee and have a fine lot of horses and sufficient stock for the use of the farm. They are the sons of Nels and Pemilla (Jenson) Nelson, natives of Sweden, where also they remained until the time of their death, being buried in the W. Kasup cemetery. Christian was born July 22, 1866, and August was born February 1, 1871, both being natives of W. Kasup, Sweden. At the age of sixteen Christian started for himself and in 1892 he bought his father's farm. At the age of sixteen, also, August started in life for himself and in 1891 he came to America. He soon discovered that this was the place for one to do well and accordingly wrote to his brother to come hither, which he did in 1893, after renting the old home place, which was his by purchase, as stated above. They both located in the vicinity of Genesee and for several years they worked for wages. In 1898 they rented two hundred and twenty-four acres of land, which they still occupy and farm. In 1901 they raised four thousand bushels of wheat in addition to what they had of other productions. In addition to these brothers there was one sister in the family, Hanna Liberg, married and living in the old home place in Sweden and she is the mother of five children, Nils Theadore, Martin W., John W., Anna L., Lars J. Christian still owns the farm in W. Kasup. These brothers are highly respected citizens and are among the leaders in the art of farming successfully, having demonstrated both their capabilities in this line as well as the stanch qualities of integrity and worth of which they are happily possessed.

NOYES B. HOLBROOK is one of the earliest pioneers to this section of the west, and since his advent here he has been a constant and prominent figure in the development of the various resources of the country and in the management of the political affairs, in which he has always evinced a great interest, and today he is one of the heaviest property owners of Latah county and a leader in its business world, although of late years he has retired more from the activities and cares of business, still at present he is in charge of the large flour mill at Juliaetta and also personally supervises his various estates and properties. Mr. Holbrook came from far away Connecticut, being born in Derby, New Haven county, on March 29, 1830, the son of Thomas C. and Maria B. (Benham) Holbrook. The father was a farmer and our subject remained with him, assisting on the farm and gaining a good education from the public schools until he had reached the age of seventeen and then he went to Bridgeport in the same state and there learned all the branches of the mason's trade. He followed this trade in various parts of the state until he was twenty-three and then came to California, via the isthmus. He mined, contracted and worked at his trade for eight years in Marysville, California, and then in 1862 came overland to this country, making his headquarters in Lewiston. He mined and prospected in Montana and Idaho until 1871, when he took up the livery business at Lewiston and for fourteen years he followed that. Then he retired to look after his property interests in various portions of the country. He had much live stock, two good farms, seven dwellings and much other property. In 1896 he came to Juliaetta and took charge of the grist mill there. He built the mill, it being the first building in the town, and sold it but it came back into his hands and he devotes himself to its management. It is a mill of full roller process equipment, of fifty barrels capacity per day and is run by water power .

As stated before, Mr. Holbrook has always manifested great interest in politics. He was mayor of Lewiston for a term, during the Nez Perces war in 1877; he has been deputy sheriff for two terms; sheriff one term: county commissioner two terms; and has always been elected on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Holbrook has been married twice, the first time being in 1880, at Lewiston, Miss Eliza Armstrong becoming his bride at that time, but she lived only two years. In 1896 he contracted a second marriage, the lady of his choice being Mrs. Eliza Colwell, and the wedding occurred in Vollmer. Mrs. Holbrook had three children by her former marriage, two married daughters, and one son, Fred C., at the present in the mill. Mr. Holbrook handles much wheat, buying and storing and shipping. He stands as one of the leading business men of Latah county today.

JOHN HALVERSON. Surely any compilation having the province of portraying the lives of the leading citizens of Latah county would be seriously at fault were there failure to incorporate within its pages an account of the leading and estimable gentleman whose name is at the head of this article and who has demonstrated in such a commendable manner his ability as a wise husbandman, upright man and patriotic citizen. Mr. Halverson was born in Sand, Norway, on August 3, 1851, being the son of Halverson and Engeborg (Johnson) Halverson, natives also of Norway, where the father died, being buried at the old home place. In 1890 the mother came to the United States. Our subject was educated in the common schools of his native town and at the age of fifteen went to sea, following this vigorous and hardy life of freedom for five years, when he came to America, landing on Chicago soil, whence he soon went to sailing on Lake Michigan, following it for three years. At the expiration of that time he came to Astoria, in Oregon, and the occupation of fishing engaged his energies for nine years. Then he came to Latah county and took a homestead five miles north from Genesee. He devoted himself to the cultivation and improvement of this farm in the years that followed and the excellent results that he has achieved speak loudly of his energy, wisdom and untiring care for business. In 1899 Mr. Halverson bought a quarter section across the road from his original farm and now he has a fine estate of three hundred and twenty acres, all paid for, improved in a becoming manner, and each farm having fine barns, houses, outbuildings and orchards. Mr. Halverson is the most successful farmer of his section, having as high a yield as seven and one-half thousand bushels for one year's harvest of wheat, besides other products of the farm. He has a goodly number of cattle, horses and hogs. Mr. Halverson's good management is manifest in the fact that he has accumulated such a fine holding without a dollar's incumbrance of any kind.

The marriage of Mr. Halverson and Miss Ienger, daughter of Jacob and Julia Johnson, natives of Norway, was celebrated in 1882, and to them were born six children, as follows: Henry I., Engle M., Jennie A., Antone O., Ida J. and Eddie C. In March, 1900, Mr. Halverson was called to mourn the death of his faithful wife. Our subject is one of the leaders of the section, a man of wisdom and is deserving of much credit for the skill and enterprise manifested in the conduct of his business, as well as for the energy manifested in the accomplishment of measures for the upbuilding and development of the county, and the natural result is, that he is highly esteemed by his fellows and is rightly looked up to by all.

GEORGE H. SAWYER. This thrifty and enterprising farmer and gentleman is a valuable citizen of Latah county, being both a man of fine capabilities and of good business talent, and also one of those who have labored well here for the advancement of the county's interests and the development of its resources. His father, Mark Sawyer, was born in South Carolina on September 28, 1813, and died in 1884. He was a county commissioner of Yam Hill county, Oregon, where he did good work for the advancement of the country. This gentleman married Miss Susana James, a native of Indiana, born October 22, 1821, and died in 1895. To this union were born our subject, on November 20, 1847, in Linn City, Oregon; Ellis, wife of M. B. Hendrick, and living in McMinnville, Oregon; Margaret, now deceased, being formerly wife of Daniel Osborne; Almira, widow of Truman Sherwood, and now living in Eugene, Oregon; Jordan, deceased; John R., in Portland; Andrew J., at Philomath, Oregon; Evangeline, wife of John Smith, in Yam Hill county, Oregon; Jane, wife of George Michael, in Yam Hill county; Franklin L., deceased; Arthur W., deceased; Damon; Mark E., deceased; Emmet, deceased. Our subject came with his parents to Yam Hill county, Oregon, in 1847, and the father took up donation land there in 1849. George H. remained in the Web-foot state until 1883 and then removed to Latah county, taking government land, to which he bought the right of another. He has resided on this land continuously since that time and has it well improved. He has added by purchase until he owns one half section. Wheat and oats form the staple crop and three orchards produce abundant fruit. While his barns, residence and all about the premises proclaim the proprietor a man of thrift and care and industry.

Mr. Sawyer married Miss Itha Gant, on October 30, 1870, in Yam Hill county, Oregon, and they have been blessed by the advent of the following children: Laura B., wife of Enoch S. Reeves, living in Peck, Idaho, and mother of the following children, Millie M., Pearl A., Rubena M., Enoch L., Elmer S., deceased, who had one child, Jessie E., having married Edith Miller; Charlie F., attending high school and university at Moscow. Mrs. Sawyer was born near Sheridan, Yam Hill county, October 14, 1853, and she has brothers and sisters named as follows: John W., in Yam Hill county; Martha A., wife of W. J. Sargeant, of Yam Hill county; Sarah J., wife of T. B. Mitchell, and living in Chehalis, Washington; Mary E., wife of John Hinkle, in Portland; Henry, living at Elk, Washington; Carmy and Albert, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer are members of the Christian church at Palouse, and are forward in supporting the faith. Mr. Sawyer takes an interest in school matters, always laboring for advancement in educational facilities, while in political matters and all that pertains to the welfare of the county, he is ever active and shows, both by thrifty example and wise counsel, the proper walk and wise methods, both of business enterprise and public concern.

JOHN H. HORTON. A man of a goodly property, possessed as well of ability and executive force which have made him a prominent citizen in the county, while his walk has manifested uprightness and sound principles and a worthy integrity, the subject of this sketch is eminently fitted for representation in this volume of Latah county's history. Mr. Horton is a native of Wayne county, Tennessee, being born on December 4, 1854, the son of George and Jane (Pigg) Horton. The father of John H. was a farmer born in Tennessee in 1820, and his father was a native of England. Mrs. Horton was born in Tennessee in 1822. The family came to Searcy county, Arkansas, in 1859, shortly after which event the father was called hence by death. The mother bravely held the little flock together, providing for them until they were able to meet the responsibilities of life for themselves. Our subject remained there, gaining an education and laboring with the others until 1870, when he started out across the plains with a train of twelve teams for the west. Part of the time they were alone, he and his brother-in-law, Neal Bohanan, but they had no trouble with the Indians although they met many of them. April 8 was the day they started and July 11, the day when they came to Latah county. John H. bought the improvements of a settler to the land which is now his family home and placing a homestead right on it he at once set about building a home and making a farm from the raw sod. His industrious labors have met with proper reward for he now owns a fine estate of four hundred and thirty acres of fertile land, well improved with orchards, buildings, and which produces abundant crops of the cereals.

On February 23, 1875, Mr. Horton married Miss Sarah, daughter of Lorenzo D. and Lucinda Jameson, natives respectively of Missouri and Arkansas. Mr. Jameson was a prominent man of his section, being sheriff of Searcy county for two terms. To this marriage there have been born nine children, Mattie, deceased, George E., Cordelia, deceased, Ralph, attending the university at Moscow with George; Jennie, Carrie, Lucy, Edna M., John, at home. Mr. Horton has brothers and sisters as follows: Nathaniel, Sarah, Mary, Ellen, Martha, all in Arkansas. Mr. Horton is an advocate of good schools and labors for that end, being also prominent in political matters. In 1898, he was nominated for county commissioner on the Republican ticket and was elected with a good majority; he was renominated after a faithful service of two years but on account of the fusion he was defeated, but by only thirteen votes. He is a member of the Farmer's Club, while he and his wife are also members of the United Brethren church. Mr. Horton does not believe in going in debt and does not practice it, consequently he is free from all worry and detriment from that quarter.

JASPER P. SHARP. This enterprising gentleman is one of the leading farmers of Latah county. His estate lies five miles east from Palouse and is one of productiveness and is handled in a becoming manner to a thrifty western farmer of energy and capabilities. Mr. Sharp has done his part in the development of the country since his advent here in 1887 and is one of the substantial citizens of the county. The ancestral history of our subject would be interesting, consequently we append a portion. In 1808 Andrew Sharp was born in New York state and he married Miss Hester O. Hubble, a native of Pennsylvania and whose father was a farmer. They removed to Wisconsin in 1850 and settled in what is now Green Lake county, taking a preemption. In the spring of 1859 they sold out and moved to Woodson county, Kansas, taking up land and giving attention to tilling the soil. On July 12, 1864, while the father was enroute to the Black Hills in a wagon train, he was massacred by the Indians. At this same time Fannie Kelly was taken prisoner by the savages and detained some time and after her release wrote an account of the thrilling adventures that befell her. Our subject was with his parents until their move to Kansas, gaining an education at the various public schools. He remained with the mother until he had reached twenty-one. He enlisted in what was known as the "Irregulars," troops responding to the call of Governor Lane, and to use Mr. Sharp's own words, "We stole horses from the Cherokees and Missourians and raised 'commotion' and then the company busted." He continued with the army until the close of the war, at which time he took up land on Elk river, Kansas, and went to farming.

On September 21, 1862, Mr. Sharp married Miss Emma, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Neely) Murden, and to them have been born the following children: Cyrus A., Alice, Charles, Minnie, all deceased; Nettie O., living at St. Marys; Myrtle, wife of A. D. Smith, in Latah county. Mrs. Sharp has the following brothers and sisters: Rowland, deceased; Nancy, living in Iowa; Elizabeth, deceased; Frances, living in Missouri; Aris, deceased; William, deceased; Scott, in Oklahoma. Mr. Sharp has the following brothers and sisters: Delila A. and Pernina, deceased; Burbridge D., an old soldier, now deceased; Agnes, deceased; Letta, living in Moscow, Idaho; Lemuel, Pearl and Jaymon, all deceased. In 1873 Mr. Sharp sold his place in Kansas and went to Coffey county in the same state. Buying land he tilled it until 1887, at which time he came to Latah county. Here he bought his present place, five miles east from Palouse, where he is doing commendable work in the agricultural art. Mr. Sharp was born in Knox county, Ohio, on March 21, 1842. He had been an Odd Fellow for years, believes in good schools and holds with the Socialists. His wife is a member of the Methodist church and they are both highly esteemed people.

JOHN H. HORTON.

FRANKLIN M. BERRY. A good citizen, a capable man and an enterprising farmer and stockman, the subject of this article is worthy of representation in this volume and we accord space to him with pleasure. Mr. Berry is one of a family of ten children, the date of his birth being April 24, 1841, and the others named as follows: Amanda E., married to Bert Craig, but now dead; Matilda, wife of Benjamin Skallions, and living on Deep creek; Thomas, died in 1870; Anna E., wife of James Carr, and then of Colonel James Shadrick, of Arkansas; Ira J., in Arkansas; Felix, in Arkansas; Minerva J., married to Green Brummett, who was killed in the war, and his wife is now also dead; Reddick H., died during the war; Rachel, wife of Joseph Favors, of Arkansas. Our subject's parents, Andrew and Minerva W. Berry, were natives of Virginia, the father a farmer and the mother being born in 1811, and her mother's name was Rachel Wiley. In 1851 our subject removed with his mother to Arkansas, settling twenty miles south from Pine Bluff, in Bradley county. That continued to be the family home until 1874, when our subject came to the west, locating first in Yam Hill county, Oregon, where he was a tiller of the soil. The mother joined him in 1875. In 1879 he sold out his property in Oregon and came to Latah county, taking his present place as a homestead. His farm is located four miles east from Palouse and is well improved, having excellent buildings, good orchard and produces abundant crops.

On March 6, 1864, in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, Mr. Berry married Miss Missouri A., daughter of James Willson, a farmer and carpenter and a native of Henderson county, Kentucky. The other children of Mr. Willson's family were Samuel and John, both died in the war: Emma, wife of Fred Powell, a merchant in Henderson county, Kentucky; Nancy, wife of Mr. D. W. Chance, now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Berry have been born the following children: James, living on Bear creek in Latah county and the father of four children; William H., living near Moscow and the father of four children; Charles, living on Bear creek; Frank I., living near Garfield, Washington; Emma, wife of J. Campbell, and living in Latah county; Minnie, wife of G. Campbell, and living in Latah county; Moses, at home. Mr. Berry is a member of the Masons and of the A. O. U. W. He takes an active interest in politics, being allied with the Democratic party. In educational matters he is always laboring for the best and votes for tax sufficient to make good schools. For nine consecutive years he was a member of the school board. He and his wife are members of the Methodist church and are faithful supporters of the faith, being well esteemed and respected by all.

PORTER D. SARDAM. The representative stockman and farmer whose name initiates this sketch is one of the enterprising men of Latah county, owning a half section of good land five miles east from Palouse, where he does a general farming business, handling also considerable stock. He believes in diversified farming and produces everything on the farm that is of profit in this section. His estate is well improved and kept and he is a man of uprightness and good ability. In 1816 William H. Sardam was born in Litchfield county, Connecticut, and he married Miss Delia Sardam, daughter of Solomon Sardam, also a native of Connecticut. Miss Delia was born in Litchfield county in 1818. To this union were born our subject, on January 18, 1853, and also three others, who are dead, named as follows: Martin, Philander and Darius. Porter D. was born on the same farm where his father was born. Our subject was educated in the common schools and at the age of sixteen went to rustling for himself, his parents both dying at that time. He worked on the neighboring farms until he was twenty-one, and then started for Nebraska, settling there in 1874, in Madison county. For eight years he tilled the soil, and then sold out and came to Palouse, via San Francisco and Portland. One year after landing in Palouse we find Mr. Sardam in Spokane, and six years were spent there by him in the lumber business, after which he came to Latah county and selected his present place. He bought a quarter section at first, and later has added as much more. 1887 was the year when he first moved onto this farm, and he has lived continuously ever since, gaining a good success in his endeavors all the time.

On November 26, 1881, in Spokane, Washington, occurred the marriage of Mr. Sardam and Miss Kate A., daughter of John and Alice Conner. Her father was a merchant and farmer and a native of Ireland, where also he married, his wife also being a native of the Emerald Isle. To them were born Ellen, deceased; Julia, living with Mrs. Sardam; Mary, living in San Francisco; Martin, deceased; William, in the Hoodoo mines; Margaret, deceased; and Mrs. Sardam, who was born in 1854 at Dobbs Ferry, on the Hudson. To Mr. and Mrs. Sardam have been born two children, —Gertrude M. and Walter R., both dead. Mr. Sardam has been justice of the peace for ten years, and he has always been active in the political matters of the county, while in educational affairs he is a warm advocate of the high tax for long and good schools. In religious persuasion he is identified, as also his wife, with the Catholic church, and they attend in Palouse. Mr. and Mrs. Sardam raised four children who were her sister's, Mrs. C. W. Kimball, and they are named as follows: Alice M., now Mrs. T. F. Russell, of North Dakota; Charles J., John C. and Gertrude K., all at home.

PETER PAULS. The land of the hardy Norseman has furnished the United States not only the true discoverer of the western continent but many of our best citizens, among whom must be mentioned the estimable gentleman whose biography it is now our pleasant privilege to transcribe. Mr. Pauls is one of the substantial farmers of Latah county, as well as being one of the oldest pioneers, and at the present time he is living on the original homestead that he took before Latah county had a separate existence, the same having been increased to the generous dimensions of three hundred and sixty acres of fertile soil. The family home is on this estate, which is located three miles northeast from Genesee. Mr. Pauls has a fine farm in every respect, good land, well cultivated, properly laid out, good buildings, plenty of stock, such as horses and cattle, having especially fine horses and thirty-five head of meat cattle, while everything about his abode marks the thrift and wisdom and industry that have been manifested by him in the years wherein he has labored not only for the accomplishment of the good purpose of making a fine home, in which efforts he has been eminently successful, but also for the amelioration of the condition of his fellows, the building up of the country, and the advancement of the interests of the county.

Reverting more particularly to the personal history of our subject, we note that he was born on August 7, 1848, to Nels and Truen (Nelson) Pauls, natives of Sweden, where also Peter was born. In their country the parents spent their lives, and they now sleep in the Vestre Kaups cemetery, there. At the age of fifteen Peter started a sea faring life, and soon he had experienced all the dangers, hardships and freedom of a position before the mast. On one trip he landed in San Francisco, and after a stay there he came to the Columbia river, and thence in 1877 to the territory now embraced in Latah county. He took a homestead, as mentioned above, and then, fourteen years later, bought one hundred and sixty-six acres more of land adjoining, and this he has made into one of the finest estates in the county.

In 1886 Mr. Pauls married Miss Emely, daughter of Ole P. and Johanna Nelson, natives of Sweden, and eight children have been born to them, as follows: Arthur L., attending the normal school in Lewiston; Jarl T., Bror A., Edward F., Halmer A., Clarence R., Emel V. and Oscar F.

BIRT CROOKS. This enterprising and capable agriculturist is one of the substantial men of his community and a faithful laborer for the advancement of the interests of Latah county, where he has put forth good efforts for a number of years. His farm of three hundred and twenty acres is situated about six miles east from Palouse, and is well improved and one of the good places of the vicinity. He is putting out a good orchard, raises abundance of the cereals and is one of the thrifty and capable men of our county. In addition to his farm he handles land a mile east from Palouse.

Mr. Crooks was born in Cattaraugus county, New York, on August 23, 1865, being the son of Albert and Miranda (Spalding) Crooks. The father was born in January, 1841, and did valiant service in the Civil war. The mother was a native of Cattaraugus county, being born in 1845, and her father was one of the thrifty farmers of that section. Birt was educated in the public schools and at the age of sixteen years started for himself, going to Pennsylvania, where he labored in the mills for three years. Returning to New York, he remained until 1889, working in the mills, and then came west, landing first at Palouse. He worked on the adjacent farms for two years, then took the position of sawyer in the mills, and in 1891 secured a homestead and pre-emption on Bear creek. He bached there for two years and worked his place, and then, on December 24, 1893, he took as wife Miss Lithia J. Rudd, the wedding occurring at Princeton. Mrs. Crooks' father, Bryant Rudd, is a farmer living at the Cove, Latah county, and by his first wife, Sarah J., there were born to him two children,—Mrs. Crooks, and Charlie, deceased. Mrs. Crooks has the following half-brothers: Albert Howell, Ed. Howell, Frank Howell, James, Tamsy and Alexander Rudd. Mrs. Crooks was born in Tipton county, Indiana, on December 20, 1876. Mr. Crooks' brothers and sisters are named as follows: Ella; Cora, deceased; Riley, in Idaho; Minnie; Lee, deceased; Lynn, Geniae, Lyman, Lydia, all in New York who have not otherwise been located. To Mr. and Mrs. Crooks have been born two children,—Orville and Floyd. Mr. Crooks is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Palouse Lodge, No. 47. In addition to his general farming as mentioned he also handles a threshing machine in the fall of the year, and is a skillful hand in this line.

JOHN H. HARRELD. About four miles east from Palouse we come to the home of John H. Harreld, which is one of the finest in every particular that is to be found in the county of Latah. The farm is especially valuable on account of a meadow that is subirrigated and produces abundant crops of fine timothy, and also on account of the fertile fields and extra good buildings that adorn and make the place valuable. The residence is one of elegance, being a structure of modern architectural design of nine rooms and finished in the most desirable manner, while the entire premises manifest the thrift, good judgment and enterprise of the worthy owner.

Mr. Harreld is the son of Cyrus H. and Rebecca (Dunn) Harreld, and was born in Marion, Grant county, Indiana, on July 31, 1861. His father was born in Pennsylvania in 1839 and in 1863 enlisted in the Union army, and died in a hospital in North Carolina in 1864. Our subject's mother was born near Marion, Indiana, in 1841, and died in 1876. Her father, John Dunn, was a native of Massachusetts, and during the famine in Indiana he freely gave corn both to whites and Indians. John H. was educated in the public schools and staid with his mother until her death, and then went to live with an uncle, who removed to Kansas in 1879, taking this nephew with him. When our subject had arrived at the age of majority he went to Puget Sound and there purchased land, which he farmed until 1892, when he sold out and went on a tour, landing in Latah county, and bought his present farm. As stated above, it is subirrigated from the Palouse river and is a very valuable piece of land. Success has crowned the efforts of Mr. Harreld on account of his thrift and industry, and he is blessed with a good competence, being one of the most substantial men of the community.

On September 10, 1889, at Puget Sound, Mr. Harreld married Miss Alice, daughter of David and Frances Fulk, and to them have been born three children,—Burr, Howard and Lawrence, all at home. Mrs. Harreld was born near Fort Wayne, Indiana, on May 21, 1873, the other children of her father's family being: Della, Minnie, Ad, George, Pearl, Nettie and Puget. Mr. Harreld had one sister, Della, wife of Thaddeus Shaw, living near Marion, Indiana. Mr. Harreld is a member of the W. of W. and of the Fraternal Union of America, while he and his wife are members of the Christian church at Palouse. Mr. Harreld takes an active part in church work and has served as member of the church board, where he does efficient work, being also a liberal supporter of his faith.

A. HENRY ROBERTS. A capable and upright man, skilled in various callings in the industrial and commercial world, in which he has had abundant success, and possessed of those qualities of worth that make the leading man, the subject of this sketch is justly entitled to representation in this volume, and we accord him such at this time. A. Henry Roberts was born in Bloomington, Macon county, Missouri, on March 4, 1850, being the son of Charles and Eliza (Hull) Roberts. The father was a farmer and died when our subject was three years of age. Then in company with his mother and brothers he was taken to Shelby county, Iowa, where the family resided for ten years, when another move was made, this time to Washington county, Kansas, where they remained for three years, and then the mother died, in 1867. After that sad occurrence he went to Iowa, whence a couple of years later he went to Dallas, Texas, and from 1871 to 1873 he was engaged on the Texas Pacific railroad there. After that service he returned to Iowa once more, farmed a couple of years there and in 1875 came west to Portland. Two years were spent there in a shingle mill; then in company with his brother, John, he bought a steamboat, the Rescue, and one year they operated it between Portland and Lewis river, then they sold out and for a time thereafter he was acting in the capacity of purser on the Gazelle, another boat that ran from Portland. He also farmed for one year at about this time, and then he brought into requisition his knowledge as a carpenter and went to contracting and until 1888 he was steadily engaged at that in Portland. In the year last mentioned he came to Latah county, purchased forty acres where he now lives, four miles west from Kendrick, and has devoted his time and energies to fruit raising since that time. He has added forty acres more to the land and he has a fine orchard of twenty acres, and his farm is well improved.

In fraternal relations Mr. Roberts is affiliated with the W. of W., at Juliaetta, Lodge No. 203. He and his wife are also members of the United Brethren church on American ridge.

Mr. Roberts was first married in 1880, August 22, Miss Samantha, daughter of Price and Martha Fuller, becoming his wife then, the nuptials occurring in Portland, and to them were born two children,—Odessia and Ralph, both at home. In 1889 Mr. Roberts was called to mourn the death of his wife. On April 16, 1891, occurred the marriage of Mr. Roberts and Miss Melinda, daughter of Charles and Christina Hickenbottom, and they have become the parents of four children,—John, Ada, Daisy and Vinnie. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts were married in Glenco, Oregon. They are highly respected people and stand well in the community, being enterprising and wise.

PAUL SCHARBACH. The brawny Teutons built from the wilderness of central Europe one of the grandest empires now upon the face of the earth, and many of the sons of this strong land have found their way to the various sections of the United States, and among the descendants of this number is to be numbered the worthy subject of this article, who is today one of the stanch citizens of Latah county, being a capable man, ever displaying integrity, industry and real worth of character. Paul was born in Milwaukee county, Wisconsin, on January 25, 1863, his parents, Joe and Appelona Scharbach, natives of Germany, having come thither in an early day and then later transferred their residence to Oregon, where also they were called to pass the river of death. Our subject came to the Web-foot state, having first received an education from the country schools of his native county, landing in Marion county in 1884, having also been working out on a farm in Wisconsin since his fifteenth year, thus being rugged and replete with valuable experience in how to manage a farm. He worked in Oregon, purchased a farm, tilled the same, until 1887, then sold and went to one of the prairies of the western part of the state, and then used his right to take a homestead, which he improved, and where he resided, raising stock and devoting himself to general farming, until 1898. This last date marks the time of his advent into Latah county, where he first rented a farm of one hundred and sixty acres. Some years later he rented two hundred and forty acres, where he lives at this time, six miles north of Genesee. He raises abundant crops on this farm, has a good holding of stock, is well-to-do in the line of all necessary equipment for the farm and is one of the progressive men of the county.

In 1887 Mr. Scharbach married Miss Anna M., daughter of William and Henriette (Mellmann) Baumgartner, and a native of Germany, as also her parents were. The latter came to Minnesota and in 1885 came to Latah county, where they live at this time. To our subject and his estimable wife there have been born the following chidren: Hubert P. N., Henriette T., Alfred W., Dora E., Matthew I. and Caroline F. Mr. and Mrs. Scharbach are devout members of the Roman Catholic church and are substantial members of society, being esteemed by all who may have the pleasure of their acquaintance.

WILLIAM BARTROFF. The sturdy and independent nature that led our subject to break the restraints of the contracted conditions of the native land has made his life one of success and enterprising labor in this country, where he has prospered on account of his wisdom and industry and skill, being also a man of sound principles, and dominated with a sagacity that is becoming, and possessed of a keen discrimination. William was born in Bavaria, Germany, on April 8, 1842, being the son of John A. and Dora Bartroff, natives also of that land. At the early age of fourteen years he came from the old country to New York, where he learned the carpenter trade, at which he worked until the time of the Civil war, when he promptly manifested the devotion he possessed for his foster land by enlisting in Company E, Forty-fifth New York Volunteer Infantry. He was at Baltimore when the mob occurred in 1861, and was at the second battle of Bull Run, and also fought at the great struggle at Gettysburg. Then he was transferred to the western army and went to Atlanta with Sherman, and after that returned to Nashville, being in Tennessee until the end of the war. After an honorable discharge he returned to New York, and in that city labored at his trade until 1891. That was the year in which he came to the west, locating in Latah county. He purchased forty acres where he now lives, three and one-half miles west from Kendrick, and here he has devoted his energies mainly to raising fruit. He has fifteen acres entirely given to fruit trees, and his annual return from this orchard is good. He has good buildings and his place is a model of thrift and industry.

Mr. Bartroff married Miss Emma, daughter of Adolph and Terisa (Barner) Luger, in New York, on May 10, 1870, and they have been blessed by the advent of five children,—John W., a miner at Republic; Clara, Lizzie, Mamie and Sophia; also Katie, who died at the age of fifteen. Mr. Bartroff made a military record that is a source of pride to him and his family, rising from private to corporal, and later he was sergeant in the Forty-fifth regiment.

ROBERT S. WHETSTINE. In a work of the defined province of the history of Latah county there should be accorded consideration to the gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, and it is with pleasure that we are enabled to grant this epitome of his career. Robert S. was born in Washington county, Iowa, on February 16, 1858, being the son of John and Mary J. (Norman) Whetstine. The father was a farmer and dwells at the old home place. Our subject received a good education in the district schools and remained with his father in the farm work until eighteen years had elapsed, and then he started in life for himself. He first came to Oregon, where he remained for four years, visiting different portions of the state, then in 1880 he came to the region now embraced in Latah county. He settled north from Troy and engaged in saw milling for six years, and most of the early houses built here were from the output of this mill. In 1888 he sold out his plant and bought the farm where he now resides, three miles northwest from Kendrick, where he owns one hundred and twenty acres. He does a general farming business and raises considerable fruit, having six acres devoted to orchards.

The marriage of Mr. Whetstine and Miss Jennie, daughter of George and Mary J. (Mooney) Price, was solemnized on December 20, 1887, at Moscow. Mr. and Mrs. Whetstine are upright and capable people, well liked in the community and are leaders in substantial qualities and virtues, while they are ever on the side of progression in the affairs of the county and those things which will benefit the people.

BARNEY BROEMMLING. This capable and enterprising gentleman whose works in this county have demonstrated him to be one of the substantial and wise citizens and leading agriculturists, is eminently deserving a representation in this volume, and it is with pleasure that we accord such to him. Mr. Broemmling was born in Albany, New York, whither his parents came from Germany, their native country. The date of this birth was July 8, 1853, and the parents, Rodger and Katherine (Bruntz) Broemmling, soon removed from Albany to Kenosha, Wisconsin, where the father bought and sold wood and ties for five years, when they removed to Winneshiek county, Iowa. Thirty-one years were spent there in farming and raising stock, when another move was made, to Latah county, and here the father died in 1896, seven years after coming hither. His remains are interred in the Catholic cemetery in Genesee. The mother is still living in Genesee, with a daughter. 1853 was the date when the parents came to America, and 1889 the time of the removal to Latah county. Our subject was educated in the village schools in Winneshiek county, Iowa, and there remained working with his father until he had attained the age of twenty-seven, when he determined to try the west, and accordingly went to California in 1882. He was busied with various avocations for a time, and then came north to Whitman county, Washington, taking a homestead and timber culture claims, which he soon sold, as the drouth was too severe to permit of raising crops. He came thence to Latah county, rented land for a time, then bought eighty acres, after he was satisfied that the country was good. For four years he farmed this tract and then sold it to his brother and bought an adjoining quarter section, where he still lives, six miles northwest from Genesee. He has a good farm, well tilled and finely improved. Mr. Broemmling has demonstrated that he is a capable farmer, and he enjoys annually bounteous crops. His brothers and sisters are named as follows: Herman, married and living in Genesee; John, married and living in Genesee; Gerhard, married and living adjoining the farm of our subject; Katie, married to John Johann and living in Genesee; Johanna, married to Pete Johnson, who is now deceased. Mr. Broemmling's brother, Gerhard, came west with his parents in 1889, bought the quarter section where he now lives, and where he has since operated a first class farm. He was married in 1894 to Mary Brachtendorf, a native of Germany, and four children have been born to them: Rodger, going to school; Lizzie, Regeana and Peter. As is our subject, so this brother and his family are strict adherents of the faith and belong to the Roman Catholic church. Our subject and this brother are closely allied in their work and dealings and have wrought thus together for many years, and they are both capable and upright men and valuable additions to the society and citizenship of Latah county.

FRANK MAY. This gentleman has been a great traveller, and consequently his career is filled with many incidents of interest and covers a wide range of information, of which he has taken great advantage. Mr. May is a man of great capabilities, and has manifested in a becoming manner his ability to gain the wealth of this world. He came to this section of the country, took a pre-emption, and with his own hands improved it. He now is the proprietor of eight hundred acres of fine soil, which he lays under tribute to produce handsome dividends annually. Mr. May was born in Port Washington, Wisconsin, on November 17, 1850, being the son of Peter and Mary (Mass) May. The father was a farmer and our subject remained with him until the age of sixteen, having acquired meanwhile a good education from the district schools, and then he started out for himself. He first went to Waubeek, Wisconsin, and there learned the trade of the shoemaker, in which he became very proficient. With this as his capital he began a tour of travels and investigation and before 1871 he had explored twenty-nine different states and territories. At the date mentioned above he found himself in Albany, Oregon, and there he remained for eight years, or until 1878, when he again made a move, this time to the fertile region now embraced in Latah county. He came to the spot where his home now stands, and pre-empted the place, and as stated above, the pre-emption has increased to the princely domain of over eight hundred acres of land. This is five miles northwest from Kendrick. Fifteen acres are devoted to fruits of various kinds, and the balance of the land is given to the production of grains.

Mr. May married Miss Elvira, daughter of Mark H. and Martha N. (Geer) Hobart, on August 20, 1882, in White Pine gulch, and they have become the parents of three children, Archie A., Warren H. and Dora G., all at home. Mrs. May is a native of Illinois, and her father was one of the early settlers of this county. To Mr. May there is much credit due for the faithful labors and wise counsels that have emanated from him for the last quarter of a century in his endeavors to assist in the upbuilding of this section of the country, and he has been eminently successful in all this as in the business enterprises that have been the work of his hands.

FRANK CAMPBELL. The subject of this article is one of the leading men of the county, a large real estate holder, a capable and enterprising business man and highly esteemed and popular throughout the entire county, having held the office of sheriff for two years subsequent to 1894, being elected on the Populist ticket. In this position he gave efficient and satisfactory service to all. Mr. Campbell has a farm of four hundred acres three miles east from Palouse, and has it well improved with good buildings, and as fast as possible he is turning the entire estate into the production of general crops, rather than farming to wheat alone. For a number of years Mr. Campbell has been a member of the school board, and he always votes the highest tax for the assistance of the cause of education.

The birth of Mr. Campbell occurred on May 3, 1842, in Sangamon county, Illinois, being the son of Robert and Mary (Hill) Campbell. The father was a blacksmith and farmer, born in South Carolina on January 1, 1800, while the mother was a native of North Carolina, born in Cabarrus county. He remained with his parents until 1866, and then went to Wilson county, Kansas, and the following year his parents came there also. He took one claim and gave it to his brother and then secured a farm which he tilled until 1889, when he sold out, chartered a car and brought his goods to the west. He landed at Pullman, then went to Palouse, renting a farm for one year, and then in the fall bought his present place, and has lived here ever since.

The marriage of Mr. Campbell and Miss Kate, daughter of Richard Bradley, a farmer of Kansas, was solemnized on October 27, 1869, and in 1876 Mrs. Campbell was called to pass away, leaving the following children: George, married to Minnie Berry and living in Latah county; Mary, deceased. On March 12, 1878, Mr. Campbell contracted a second marriage, the lady being Miss Millie, daughter of James C. Hall, a merchant at Springfield, Illinois, and to them there has been born one son, Walter, working on the farm. Mr. Campbell has the following brothers and sisters: Samuel, deceased; Wiley, at Pullman; Nancy J., married to W. Williamson, and living in Kansas; Green L., deceased; James H., lives in Kansas; John H. and Robert C., twins, both of whom are dead. Mrs. Campbell's brothers and sisters are named thus: Henry, John, James, Walter, Albert, Charles B., Cora, Clark, Mary and Lizzie. Mrs. Campbell was born in Sangamon county, Illinois, on May 26, 1844. At the time of the Civil war Mr. Campbell enlisted in Company A, Tenth Illinois Cavalry, on August 16, 1862. He did some hard fighting, was at the siege of Vicksburg, went on the Louisiana raids, was on the Little Rock campaign, and in June, 1865, he was mustered out at New Orleans, having the satisfaction that he had faithfully served his country, made a fine record and had assisted to stem the tide of treason. Mr. Campbell is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Palouse Lodge, No. 47, where he is as popular as in his standing throughout the county.

LEWIS SISK is one of the earliest pioneers of Latah county, coming here in 1877, and locating, on July 25 of that year, a pre-emption, and later he added another quarter section by the homestead right, where he now lives, and the home place is one-half section of very valuable land, well improved with good residence, barns and out buildings and orchards, and all accessories that make a rural abode a place of comfort and valuable dividend producer. In addition to this half section Mr. Sisk has enough valuable land to make eight hundred acres, which he oversees and handles himself. He is one of the heaviest land owners of the entire country, and his wisdom and careful management make him a man to whom his neighbors look for advice and in whom they confide.

Alexander Sisk, a farmer and stockman, born near Newport, Tennessee, in 1828, married Miss Mary Netherton, born at the same place in 1833, whose father, James Netherton, was a Tennesseean, and occupied in stock raising and farming. To them was born our subject on October 14, 1853, also near Newport, Tennessee, and James P., married and living in Latah county; Joan, deceased; Lafayette, deceased; Andrew, living at Newport, Tennessee, on the old homestead; Cordelia, deceased. Our subject remained at home until 1875, attending school, then went to southern Oregon, and engaged in farming near Oakland, and from that place he came to Latah county as stated. When he came here one could ride many miles without seeing even a log cabin, and now the portion of Latah county where he lives is equal to the best.

On June 4, 1884, Mr. Sisk married Miss Cora M., daughter of Calvin and Cassandria (Whitaker) Morton, distant relatives of Levi P. Morton. Mrs. Sisk is a native of Wisconsin, born June, 1864, and the other children in the family are: Clara, wife of William McCune, living in Spokane; Ellen, wife of A. White, and living in Pullman; Calvin, living in Pullman. To Mr. and Mrs. Sisk there have been born the following children: Della I., deceased; Nellie M., deceased; Allen, deceased; Stella, at home; Lewis, deceased; Alexander, at home. Mr. Sisk is a member of the Masons, Palouse Lodge, No. 46. In political matters he has been active, and in old Nez Perces county he was deputy sheriff for six years. He is at present a member of the school board and takes great interest in the advancement of the cause of education, while in every respect he is an exemplary citizen.

AUGUST BECKMAN. This gentleman is one of Latah county's well known and capable men, having demonstrated here as well as elsewhere his ability to cope successfully with the forces of the world and bring success as the reward of his faithful and wisely bestowed labors, while also he has been a potent factor in the upbuilding of the county. Mr. Beckman is a native of Ontario, Canada, where he was born, October 22, 1852, being the son of John and Wilhelmina (Gergus) Beckman, natives of Germany, and coming to this country in 1848 and 1849, respectively. Our subject received a good education from the excellent schools of Ontario, and in 1871 was permitted by a wise father to try for himself in the affairs of life. He worked in the lumber woods for a time, about seven years, and then had accumulated sufficient to purchase a farm, which he did, got married, and settled down to build a good home. This he accomplished, and in 1881 his residence and all he had were consumed in a conflagration. Such a catastrophe would have overwhelmed a more irresolute spirit, but our subject was not to be daunted thus, and so he soon sold his farm and came to Dakota, and for seven years he farmed there, then rented his farm and came to Oregon, settling in the Willamette valley, and went thence one year later to eastern Oregon, where he remained for two years, and then in 1893 he came to Latah county. He rented a half section for about four years, and then bought a quarter, where he now lives, five miles east from Genesee. He has a good farm, a nice orchard, comfortable improvements, and is displaying excellent ability in handling the same. Mr. Beckman has forty head of neat cattle, fifty hogs, and horses sufficient to handle the entire estate.

In 1878 occurred the marriage of Mr. Beckman and Miss Emma, daughter of John and Dorothy (Stetck) Dibbem, natives of Germany, but immigrants to Ontario, where the father died in 1882, and the mother was called hence in 1888. Our subject and his wife have seven children: Albert F., William H., Emma O., Clarence O., Emil A., Ruben D. and Clara M.

In the political world Mr. Beckman has always been active and displayed the intelligence that becomes the patriotic citizen. He was appointed assessor in 1884 in North Dakota, serving two years, and in 1886 he was elected county commissioner on the independent ticket, then later was appointed justice of the peace, was a member of the school board, and also in this county he has filled that office for three years. He is a member of the W. of W., while he and his family are members of the German Lutheran church. Mr. Beckman is a capable and wide awake business man, a good citizen, and always displays integrity and force of character.

LEWIS MICHELSON is one of the younger men of Latah county, which class have infused new life and energy into the channels of development and progress throughout the entire county and have nobly done the part of the work that has fallen to them from the older and earlier pioneers of this favored section. He is one of the substantial farmers of the county, living at the present time on a ranch six miles north from Genesee, where he manifests that commendable zeal and vigor and wisdom that have stamped him as one of the leading tillers of the soil in the section. He produces as high as seven thousand bushels of wheat in one year, has plenty of horses and cattle to stock the farm, and is prosperous and well liked in his community.

The birth of our subject occurred in Kallunbarg, Denmark, on July 14, 1872, being the son of Christian and Sophy (Anderson) Michelson. The father was an educator in his native land, and there they reside at the present time. Our subject was well educated in the village schools, and at the age of nineteen bade farewell to parents, associates and native land and embarked for the land of the setting sun. He had an uncle in Latah county and he naturally came thither. For the first few years he worked for the farmers and then bought a team and for three years was diligent in freighting and then he rented the farm where he is now living, as mentioned above. The ranch contains two hundred and forty acres, and is handled in a commendable manner, which accounts for the abundant returns in crops.

In 1895 Mr. Michelson married Miss Mary, daughter of Peter and Marie (Johanson) Gerther, natives of Denmark, where the mother died in 1899, but the father is still living. To our subject and his esteemed wife there have been born three children, Roy, Marie L., and Sophie. Mr. Michelson is a member of the M. W. A., while he and his wife affiliate with the Lutheran church. Among the younger men of Latah county there are none that surpass our subject in thrift, wise management and careful industry, and the results are apparent in the goodly holding that he has accumulated as a direct result of this enterprise, and he is justly numbered with the leading men of his section.

JOHN I. ANDERSON. About six and one-half miles east from Palouse we find the fine farm of the subject of this sketch. The estate consists of two hundred and forty acres of valuable land, which he settled upon in 1878, it then being raw timber and prairie land, and by the industrious labors and careful management of Mr. Anderson this has been transformed to a beautiful farm, well improved and productive. Mr. Anderson believes that wheat is the staple of this section, still he rotates his crops and raises stock, and has a fine orchard.

Mr. Anderson's father was James L., a farmer in Cumberland county, Kentucky, and born in 1828, being the son of James C., a Virginian, and he married Miss Martha Ross, who was born in Kentucky in 1829. Miss Ross's parents were Martin and Betsey (Winfrey) Ross, and the father was a farmer To this marriage were born A. A. Anderson; Martin, deceased; James, deceased; Fannie, wife of L. C. Roberts, in Pierce City, Idaho; and our subject, who was born in Cumberland county, Kentucky, on November 4, 1857. He came with his parents to Kansas in 1868, returning again to Kentucky, and in 1869 migrating again to Kansas, settling at Abilene, Dickinson county. The father took up farming there and died in 1873. Our subject received his education there and also spent considerable time in hunting buffalo, securing many. In 1877 he started across the plains, the journey beginning in the early part of May and continuing for five months. He was in company with his brother A. A., and the first winter was spent in Walla Walla, and the following spring he took the land above described. His faithful labors here and his steady endeavors for the upbuilding of the county's interests have justly entitled him to the place of one of the real builders of this county.

On October 20, 1886, in Latah county, the marriage of Mr. Anderson and Miss Bell, daughter of Enoch and Matilda (Gordy) Reeves, was solemnized and they have become the parents of the following children: Eva, Fay and Flossie, twins, all at home attending school. Mrs. Anderson's parents were farmers, her mother being a native of Ohio, and their children are named below, Mrs. Anderson, born near Toronto, Kansas, in 1867; Enoch, married and living at Peck, Idaho; Anna, deceased; Ora, at home with her parents, who live in Latah county. Mr. Anderson is always actively interested in politics, being allied with the socialistc teachings, and in the matter of educational progress he shows zeal and great interest. He is one of the capable and faithful citizens of our county and is justly deserving of the esteem and confidence of the people, which he generously receives.

MARTIN V. THOMAS. There is real and proper admiration for the man who can take hold with his hands and by genuine wisdom and industry work out a fortune for himself from the raw resources of nature, as has done the subject of this sketch, who is one of Latah's heaviest property owners, having over eight hundred acres of fertile farm land in the vicinity of American ridge, about four miles west from the town of Kendrick. It is interesting to note the personal history of such a man, and we turn to that chapter in his career. He was born in Yancey county, North Carolina, on January 12, 1854, being the son of Nathan and Obedience (Forbes) Thomas. The father was a farmer there and in 1865 he came with his family to Kentucky, settling near Barboursville, in Knox county. Four years later the family removed to Howell county, Missouri, settling near West Plains. There our subject remained until 1877, when he came to Idaho and pre-empted a piece of government land five miles west from Genesee, also taking a timber culture claim. In 1888 he sold that land and bought a half section on American ridge, to which he has added until he has a mammoth estate, as mentioned above. He gave his personal attention to the improvement and cultivation of this fine body of land until the fall of 1900, when he removed to Kendrick with his family in order to school his children. Since that time he has leased the land and oversees the property. He has thirty acres of orchard and his farms are well improved. Mr. Thomas has a fine residence in Kendrick and there the family abide at the present time.

The marriage of Mr. Thomas and Miss Lucy E., daughter of John and Sarah (Zumwalt) Lemons, was solemnized at Moscow on February 14, 1888, and they have become the parents of three children, as follows: Walker, Elsie, and the baby not yet named.

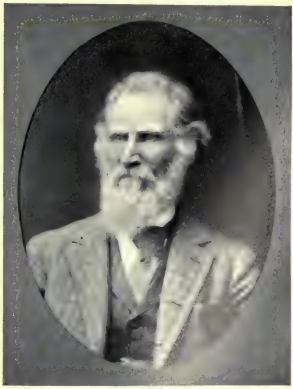
In earlier days Mr. Thomas gave much attention to buying and selling cattle, and has dealt much in all kinds of stock, but at the present time he does not devote so much time to this industry. He is one of the wise, enterprising and substantial men of the county, and is secure in the esteem and confidence of all.

CHARLEY J. SCHARNHORST. Without peradventure there are within the borders of Latah county some of the finest farmers that can be found anywhere, which demonstrates both the excellency of the country and the ability of these indivduals, and among this worthy class must be mentioned prominently the subject of this article. Although a young man, still there is no doubt in the mind of any one who will look over his fine estate that Mr. Scharnhorst is one of the most thrifty, careful, judicious and enterprising agriculturists and stockmen that are to be found.

Charley J. was born in Keokuk county, Iowa, on October 13, 1871, being the son of Christian and Frederica (Neighbour) Scharnhorst, natives of Germany, who came to this country in 1862, locating in Iowa, whence ten years later they went to Kansas, where one year was spent, and then another move was made to Oregon, and settlement made in Eugene, whence they came to Latah county, where they reside on a fine farm now. Our subject received his schooling from the districts of Latah county and the wise training of a sagacious father in the art of agriculture and thrift. He remained with his father for twenty-three years, and then was presented by the generous parent with a fine large farm, which he added to until it is of the broad proportions of four hundred and ten acres, and lies five and one-half miles west from Genesee. The estate is provided with an elegant residence, commodious barns and all needed out buildings, and is most carefully attended and skillfully handled. A fine orchard also beautifies the premises and provides fruit for use. Plenty of stock for use are at hand, the fields all fenced and cross-fenced, and all presents one beautiful picture of prosperity and thrift and happiness.

In 1895 occurred the marriage of Mr. Scharnhorst and Miss Mary G., daughter of John and Margaret (Brandt) Bottjer, and a native of Germany. The parents of Mrs. Scharnhorst were also natives of Germany, and the father was a sailor. Eight children were born to them: Mary C., Louise, William J., Henry G., Johanna J., Margaret C., Henriette A., and Johan H. Mr. Scharnhorst is an active participant in the realm of politics and there as everywhere he is characterized by display of the same sagacity, keenness of perception, wealth of resource, and thoroughness in execution that have brought him his unbounded success. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran church, and they are generous supporters of the faith and lead an exemplary life in all their walk, being highly esteemed and respected.

HORACE E. GILBERT. We are pleased to grant to Mr. Gilbert a representation in the history of Latah county since he is one of the real builders of the county; being a man whose life here has always been spent in laboring for the advancement of the county's interest, and having displayed great sagacity and enterprise in these labors, much credit is due him for the benefit that has accrued from his efforts, and while this is true it is no less true that he is possessed of the happy qualities of worth, affability, uprightness, and integrity that find pleasant exemplification in his daily walk. He was born in Bremer county, Iowa, on January 25, 1858, being the son of John S. and Maria S. Gilbert, farmers. He remained at home until twenty and then set out to seek his fortune in the west. He came via the Union Pacific to San Francisco and thence by ocean steamer to Portland and soon he was in Junction City in the Willamette valley, where a few months were spent, when he came to Moscow. He soon selected a homestead near where he now lives and set to work to improve it in good shape. In 1891 he traded that place and $1800 for the farm where he now lives, three miles northeast from Moscow. His present farm is one of the finest kept estates in the county of Latah, an air of thrift and business enterprise being patent everywhere. He has a nine-room residence of modern architectural design and tastily kept, is building a large barn, has some fine herds, and everything that would make a rural home profitable and comfortable. Mr. Gilbert has one hundred and two acres set to timothy and intends to put the balance of the home quarter to clover. He takes great interest in the production of grasses, and also has a



HORACE E. GILBERT.

HON. CHARLES J. MUNSON.

WILLIAM M. FRAZIER.

JOHN FREEZE.

fine large orchard. In addition to this farm Mr. Gilbert possesses as much more land about one and one-half miles north from the home place.

October 12, 1886, was the date of the happy occasion when Mr. Gilbert took to himself Miss Florence, daughter of Lewis and Sarah Miller, as wife, and to this union have been born Jessie, deceased, and Eva, five years of age. Mrs. Gilbert's father was a prominent citizen in his home county in Illinois, being justice of the peace and county commissioner for years. His great work in life was along the lines of church work, being allied with the Baptist denomination. He was a real philanthropist and spent much time and money in assisting the poor. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert are members of the Baptist church, affiliating with the Moscow congregation, and they are faithful in the support of the gospel. In the person of Mrs. Gilbert we have a lady of true devotion and dominated by a gracious spirit, being given to hospitality and manifesting a refined dignity in presiding over her household. Mr. Gilbert is one of the up-to-date men of the county, active and prudent in business, far sighted in matters of importance and withal thrifty and careful in all his enterprises.

HON. CHARLES J. MUNSON. Like so many of the successful business men of Latah county, the subject of this sketch was born on a farm, reared amid its healthful exercises, gaining his education from the public schools. When man's estate arrived he was well fortified in bodily vigor and mental training to take up for himself the duties of life. His parents were Peter and Mary Munson, natives of Sweden, and he was born in Attica, Fountain county, Indiana, on August 14, 1861. When nineteen years of age he struck out into the western world, landing first at the Rockies in Colorado, where he mined for two years, then prospected in Utah and later in Butte, Montana, whence, in 1883, he came to the Coeur d'Alene country. The year following found him in Latah county and in 1890 he purchased the farm where he now resides, four miles east from Moscow. The estate is well kept, consists of one hundred and sixty acres, and is the home place of the family. In 1898 Mr. Munson was nominated on the Republican ticket for representative to the state legislature and promptly elected, and in that body he acted on the ways and means committee, and also on the committee on roads, bridges, and ferries. So faithful and efficient was the labor performed, that at the expiration of this term, he was elected by an appreciative constituency to serve another term, and this time he acted on the committee on public bridges and had to do with the special road tax on real estate. Mr. Munson made a commendable record in the fifth and sixth legislatures of the state.

On December 28, 1890, Mr. Munson married Miss Clemma E. Roadruck, and they have become the parents of four children: Oscar C., Vivien O., Goldie E. and Burton L. Mr. Munson is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 31, of Moscow, and is popular among his associates as well as throughout the county, having in his long residence here manifested stanch qualities of worth and uprightness, and showed excellent wisdom in the affairs of life and commendable skill in the management of business.

Mr. Munson has always been a warm friend of the cause of education and he has labored faithfully for its advancement. The State University has been the recipient of much favor from him and through his efforts the appropriation has been more than trebled.

WILLIAM M. FRAZIER is one of the oldest pioneers of Latah county, an esteemed citizen, a prominent and capable man, and one of the substantial and well to do farmers and stockmen of this section and is eminently fitted for representation in the history of his county.

Entering at once into the details of his life's career, we note that he was born in Jackson, Cape Girardeau county, Missouri, on June 27, 1844, being the son of Peter and Lucinda (Providence) Frazier, now of Sacramento, California. While an infant he was taken by his parents to Grundy county, Missouri, where he went to school in the winter and toiled on the farm in the summers. At the age of nineteen he was ready to start for himself and for three years he worked on adjacent farms and then joined his fortune with an ox train and began the weary journey toward the Pacific coast. He brought mule teams with him and settled in eastern Oregon, taking a claim. For five years he worked there, then spent one year in California and then came to Moscow, arriving here on May 5, 1871, taking the place where he resides today, about three miles northeast from Moscow. He devoted himself to farming and raising stock and success attended his efforts from the start. He purchased a half section in 1885, and sold a quarter in 1901, still having a half section, well improved and producing abundant crops.

In 1864 Mr. Frazier married Miss Lucinda, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Collins) Warmoth, and two children were born to them: John S., married and living near Moscow; Annie, wife of Homer E. Burr, and living four miles northeast from Moscow. In 1869 Mrs. Frazier was called away by death.

In 1876 Mr. Frazier contracted a second marriage, the lady then becoming his wife being Mrs. Elizabeth P. Dilman, widow of William Dilman, and she had one child, Sarah, by her first husband. To our subject and this wife there have been born eleven children, nine of whom are living, as follows: Ada M., wife of Amos R. Greer, living near Moscow; William F., married and living near Moscow; Daisy M., wife of George Collins, living near Moscow; Effie, with parents; Marion M.; Edna; Charles L.; Harry; Olive. The last five named are attending school. At the time of the division of Latah county from Nez Perces, Mr. Frazier was appointed one of the commissioners to effect this. He has for years been a member of the

A. O. U. W. and in religious persuasion, he is affiliated with the Adventist church. Mr. Frazier is richly deserving of great credit for the commendable and sagacious manner in which he has walked in the years of his labors here and he receives the confidence and esteem of all.

JOHN FREEZE. To the labors of such worthy pioneers as the subject of this article, Latah county ows her present prosperity and prominent position among her sister counties of the state and it is with pleasure that we embody a brief resume of his life in the volume of his county's history. Mr. Freeze was born in Rowan county, North Carolina, on May 4, 1828, being the son of Caleb and Polly (Willhelm) Freeze. The father was a tanner and farmer and a native of the home county. The mother was the daughter of Louis Willhelm, a cooper and farmer. Our subject remained with his parents until he was thirty years of age and then started for himself. He was educated in the subscription schools, the public schools not being introduced until he was a man, and then he assisted to lay out the districts of his county. He moved to Arkansas soon after 1858, living in both the southern and northern portion of the state. In 1873 he sold his interests there and came overland with a train of twelve outfits of friends and relatives to Walla Walla, falling in by the way with the train of David Notman, a near neighbor now. On August 3, 1873, they camped at Walla Walla and Mr. Freeze went to vacant land near Waitsburg, Washington, and farmed for three years, when he sold out and went to Deep creek, then Nez Perces county, having explored the country the year previous. In April, of the Centennial year, he took his present place in the vicinity of Freeze postoffice. He has a farm of one hundred and sixty acres well improved. When he settled, Walla Walla was the trading post and one week was consumed to travel the one hundred and ten miles and return. He assisted to erect the forts in 1877 and 1878 and when they were done, the Indians retired and the people went to their homes.

In 1849, while in North Carolina, Mr. Freeze married Miss Elizabeth Lipe, and six children were born to them, three of whom are living and named as follows: Sarah, Calvin, Michael. Mr. Freeze was married a second time, Miss Polly Lipe becoming his wife on that occasion, and she died in Arkansas in 1891, having left no children. On September 7, 1892, Mr. Freeze went to the sacred altar for the third time, this time leading Mrs. Addie (Woodard) Bates, widow of John Bates. This lady had two children by her former husband; they are Willard, who died in Ohio, in 1895, and Estella, wife of A. M. Grinnell, now living at Washington, Michigan. Mr. Willard Woodard, father of Mrs. Freeze, was born near Montreal and her mother, Mona Woodard, was born in New York, while her birthplace was Romeo, Michigan, and the date 1841, and 1884 was the time when she came to this state. Mr. Freeze is a member of the Lutheran church, while his wife affiliates with the Methodist. He is a member of the Farmers Club and also of the school board, having served in this latter capacity for a number of years. He was on the first school board of his district.

SAMUEL P. CALLISON. This well known gentleman and enterprising agriculturist of Latah county is one of the men whose skill and industry have given to him a goodly competence, so that he is justified in retiring from the more active parts of business and giving himself to the oversight of his property. He has a comfortable home in Kendrick, a farm of two hundred and forty acres on American ridge, four miles west from Kendrick, besides other property. Mr. Callison was born in Adair county, Missouri, on January 11, 1850, being the son of John and Mary (Page) Callison, and one of eighteen children, nine of whom are living. The father was one the earliest settlers in Adair county and built the first frame house in Kirksville, the county seat of Adair county. He was the proprietor of a fine, large farm, and he and three of his sons fought in the Civil war. The first seventeen years of our subject were spent at the home place in the acquisition of a good education and in learning the art of agriculture, then he journeyed to Hancock county, where he lived with an uncle for six years. Then he went to Elk county, Kansas, took a pre-emption and tilled it for six years; after that time he removed to Linn county, the same state, and spent eight years in ranching there. 1888 is the date when he came to Idaho and he at once purchased a ranch of one-quarter section, where his farm is now, and settled there until 1900, when he removed to Kendrick, where he resides at the present time. His farm is one of the well tilled estates of the section, is a fertile piece of land and is well improved, having about twelve acres of orchard.

Mr. Callison is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 37, at Kendrick, also of the encampment at the same place, and of the Rebekahs. The marriage of Mr. Callison and Miss Louisa, daughter of James J. and Margaret Rush, was celebrated in 1850, August 6, near Racine, Linn county, Kansas. Mrs. Callison was born in Kentucky, and her parents removed to Kansas, where she was married. Two children have been born to our worthy subject and his wife, Olive, wife of Frank W. Roberts, living on one of her father's farms; Benjamin, married to Minnie Thomas, living on his father's farm.

ALMARINE A. ANDERSON. This leading and enterprising farmer is one of the heavy property owners of Latah county, owning at the present a fine estate of five hundred and twenty acres, having also sold a quarter section recently. His estate lies eight miles east from Palouse, and is partly rented and all well improved. He is about to erect a commodious barn, and his enterprise and industry with wise management have gained him the reward that becomes thrift and has placed his name among the prominent men of the county. Entering more especially into ancestral details we note that our subject's paternal grandfather, James C. Anderson, was a Virginian, and his son, James S., the father of our subject, was born in 1828, was lieutenant in the army, and married Miss Martha A. Ross, the daughter of Martin Ross, a farmer and stockman in Kentucky, whose wife was Miss Betsey Winfreg. Their daughter, Martha A., was born in Kentucky in 1829. To the marriage of James S. Anderson and Martha A. Ross were born the following children: Almarine A. Anderson, the subject of this sketch, born December 28, 1849, in Cumberland county, Kentucky; Martin P.; James S.; John I.; Fannie B. Our subject's parents removed from Kentucky to Kansas in 1868, returned to the Blue Grass State and settled on Green river in a short time, only to go back to Kansas in 1869, this time settling in Abilene, Dickinson county. There they farmed, and there the father died in 1873. Almarine A. worked for himself until 1877 and then started for the great northwest on May 3, and landed in Latah county on October 8, making the trip with teams. He took a homestead which forms a part of his present estate and continuously he has resided here since.

The marriage of Mr. Anderson and Mrs. Cordelia (Williams) Michaels, daughter of Edward and Jane (Craig) Williams, was solemnized on March 7, 1874, at Fredonia, Kansas. Mr. Williams was a native of Tennessee, born in 1815, and was a carpenter. Mrs. Williams was also a native of Tennessee, being born in 1817. Mrs. Anderson was born in Illinois, near Hillsborough, and her brothers and sisters are named as follows: Thomas, Alfred, William, Robert X., Nelson, John M., Nancy J., James F., Edward P., Allen N., and Almeda. To our worthy subject and his estimable wife there have been born the following issue: Ona, wife of Charles E. Ferry, and living on the Nez Perces reservation; John F., at home; Fannie J., deceased; Martin A. Mr. Anderson is a member of the school board and has been for a number of years and his policy is always to vote the highest tax for the advancement of educational interests. In the general welfare of the country he always manifests commendable zeal and is foremost in advancement and good government.

STEPHEN A. BOWERS. This well known and representative agriculturist and patriotic citizen is one of the early settlers of the territory now embraced in Latah county, and his labors here for the general progress and development have been faithful and deserving of much credit. Stephen A. was born near Watseka, Illinois, on December 21, 1858, being the son of John and Phebe Bowers. The father was a native of Maryland, born in 1808, and a farmer and stockman of Illinois. The mother died when our subject was one month old, and the other members of the family are as follows: Caroline, wife of Martin Foster, of Latah county; Sylvester, government agent among the Indians, and also a soldier against the savages, and now drawing a stipend from the government for his faithful and valuable services. Our subject remained in Illinois until twenty-one years had elapsed since his birth, having also taken care of himself from the age of sixteen years, his father dying at that time. By a former marriage of his father our subject had the following half-brothers: Jacob, John, William, Charles, all soldiers in the Civil war. In 1879 Mr. Bowers came west and took a pre-emption in Latah county, and in 1881 he went to the Snake river country and took a homestead, but one year later he sold it and returned to the farm in this county. He remained on this until 1896, when he sold it and bought his present farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which lies six miles east from Palouse. Mr. Bowers pays much attention to raising hogs and general farming and gains abundant success in these lines.

In August, 1877, Mr. Bowers married Miss Julia Davis, daughter of Henry and Mary Davis, farmers of Illinois. The wedding occurred in Illinois. In the same state also Mrs. Bowers was born on April 25, 1859, and there she gained a good education. The other children in her father's family were Mary, wife of Henry Hickman, and living in the Snake river country; George, married to Sarah Hickman, daughter of Richard Hickman, and living on the Snake river; Carrie, deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Bowers there have been born the following children: George, married to Lizzie Craig, and living at Myers Falls; Walter, Jesse, Claude, Cora, and Nellie, at home. Mr. Bowers is a member of the W. of W., at Palouse. He takes a great interest in educational matters, having served on the school board for many years. Mrs. Bowers is now a member of the board. She is also a member of the Christian church. They are both upright and highly esteemed people, and much credit is due their enterprising labors for the welfare of the community and county in general.

LILES A. HOPKINS is one of the sturdy pioneers who have made Latah county prosperous and wealthy. He came here in an early day when settlers were few and the wilds of nature were unbroken. 1876 was the year when his conveyances brought his family from Kansas to where Pullman, Washington, now stands, and the following spring he hunted out a homestead and settled upon it, having been living on the same place ever since, it being four and one-half miles east from Palouse. He has given his attention to both stock raising and farming. He has a fine bunch of stock at the present time, but had the great misfortune to lose forty-five brood mares in Montana last year. His farm is half in timothy and the remainder raises oats and wheat.

Reverting more to the personal history of Mr. Hopkins, we notice that he is a native of Missouri, being born in Phelps county, on May 8, 1843, to Eli and Susan M. (Dodd) Hopkins, the father a native of North Carolina, and having two sisters and three brothers, Andrew, Liles and Sandy. The mother of our subject was born in Tennessee, near Knoxville, whose brothers and sisters are named as follows: Robert Monroe, Caroline, Mary, and Louise, and whose mother was born in Wales. Our subject was taken by his parents to Lafayette county when six years of age and remained there for five years, then removed to Shawnee county, five miles east from Topeka, Kansas, and here he attended school at Tecumseh. He remained with his parents until he was of age, and then bought a farm for himself, which he sold in 1867 and removed to Chautauqua, where he bought land and settled down to raising stock, but on account of losing valuable Shorthorns by the Texas fever, he sold this property also and started across the plains as mentioned above.

The marriage of Mr. Hopkins and Miss Olive J., daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Jones) Smith, natives of Tennessee, was solemnized on September 8, 1864. The father was an Indian trader, and his children, the brothers and sisters of Mrs. Hopkins, are named as follows: Clarinda, wife of Wm. Barlow, and living in Joplin, Missouri; Elizabeth, wife of M. Tunnel, deceased; George, deceased; John B., whose address they have lost; Samuel, married and living in Joplin, Missouri. The brothers and sisters of our subject are also named as follows: Josiah T., at Rossville, Kansas; Elisha, deceased; George, deceased; Sarah E., wife of W. M. Ingham, of Hutchinson, Kansas; Polly L., wife of George Allen, in Cuba; Susan M., wife of Nesbith Elmore, in Kansas; Anna, wife of Mr. Mix, living near Tecumseh, Kansas. To Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins have been born the following children: Charles M., in Spokane; Thomas, in Spokane; William, deceased; Eli, married to Etta Billows, in Latah county; Liles, living in Latah county; Arthur, at home; Marion, at home; Cheyenne W., wife of Calvin Gallop, in Palouse; Bessie, wife of Roy Wallace, in Latah county. Mr. Hopkins is one of the leaders in the stock business and is one of the substantial men of the county, having conducted his business in a commendable manner with the crown of success deservedly his at this time.

GEORGE H. BRILLHART. On American ridge, three miles from Kendrick, is the farm and home of the subject of this article. Mr. Brillhart has been one of the faithful laborers of this part of Latah county, not only devoting his attention to general farming, but also has built most of the farm houses in this section of the county. The birth of George H. was on November 27, 1844, in Coshocton county, Ohio, being the son of John and Jane (Hall) Brillhart, natives of Pennsylvania. The father was a farmer and our subject was drilled in the agricultural art and in the schools of his section until 1863, when the call of patriotism led him to enlist in Company I, Fifty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was under Sherman until they came to Atlanta. He was wounded in the battle of Resaca but was soon at the front again and after the fall of Atlanta he was under Thomas and participated in the battles of Franklin and Nashville. In 1865, when the strife had ceased, he was honorably mustered out and went to his home place and took up the work of the carpenter. He worked at the trade in Spring Mountain until 1872, then went to Hopkins, Missouri, and for five years wrought there at the same occupation. In 1880 he came to Walla Walla and worked on a ranch for one year and then came to Latah county, taking the homestead where he now dwells. He has improved his ranch and added to it until he now owns the generous estate of two hundred and sixty-seven acres. He does a general farming business, raises some fruit, and works at the carpenter trade considerably in the neighborhood.

The marriage of Mr. Brillhart and Miss Sarah A., daughter of Nelson and Sarah (Ayres) Bartelett, natives of Ohio, where her parents are farmers, was solemnized on May 1, 1870, and two children have been born to them, one of whom is living, Alberta B., attending school at Kendrick. Mr. and Mrs. Brillhart are members of the Methodist church and are exemplary members of society.

DAVID J. WILLCOX. The subject of this sketch manifests in a practical manner the success that can be attained by one of genius and enterprise, who will take hold with his hands to manipulate the resources of this country, since he is blessed with bright success and has made it all by his industry and wise management since first coming to Latah county.

David J. was born in Larignal, Ottawa, Canada, on January 1, 1850, being the son of Edwin and Cynthia (Cass) Willcox. The father was a carpenter of Irish extraction, and his grandfather was a physician. Mrs. Willcox was born January 31, 1828, in Ottawa and died July 8, 1895, being one of a family of five boys and ten girls. Her father, Joseph Pomeroy Cass, was born in 1764, and was an English soldier under George Third in the Revolutionary war. He received for his services a grant of land in Canada and our subject now possesses his discharge papers. Our immediate subject had but one brother, Henry W., now living in British Columbia. David J. was taken by his parents to Winnebago county, Wisconsin, when he was but one year of age, and they took up land and remained there twenty-three years farming. He attended public school and worked on the farm until sixteen years of age and then learned the tinner's trade. Later he went to Minnesota and travelled until 1875 for a wholesale house, at which time he migrated to California and thence to Coos county, Oregon, and engaged with a saw mill company for three years. During that time, in 1877, he came to Latah county and selected his present place, four miles east from Palouse. He returned to Oregon and the following year brought his family to the farm. He has made of the raw piece of land, where he landed without a dollar, a fine farm of two hundred and forty acres, which produces abundant crops of the cereals and is improved in every way possible to make it a valuable rural estate. He has a fine house and doubtless the finest barn in the county of Latah. It cost about three thousand dollars, and has all the conveniences known to modern architecture in barns, with a capacity for stabling thirty-six cows, some horses, seventy-five tons of hay, wagon and carriage rooms, and so forth.

Mr. Willcox and Miss Ollie Ross Johnson, adopted daughter of John L. and Viletta Johnson, were married on August 4, 1877, at Marshfield, Oregon. Mrs. Willcox has the following brothers and sisters: Joseph Ross, married and living at Markham, Oregon; Mary, wife of James Markham, at Markham, Oregon; Robert Ross, married and farming near Dayton, Washington; George Ross, married and living in Palouse; Clara, wife of George Foster, and living in Portland. To our subject and his wife there have been born the following children: Edna V., now wife of Fred R. Vowell, she formerly taught school in Latah county, her home now being Easton, Oregon, Alex postoffice; Edwin R., living at home and attending school in winter. Mr. Willcox is affiliated with the A. O. U. W. and is one of the leading and substantial men of the county.

FRED SCHARNHORST. The subject of this article is practically a product of Latah county, having spent the major portion of his life here and he is today one of the substantial and progressive men of this section, having a fine holding of one half section of fertile land, and being one of the men who make the real strength of the community, while he has displayed both wisdom and integrity in all his ways, thus demonstrating him a leader and one to be represented in the volume that has to do with his county's history. Our subject was born in Keokuk county, Iowa, on March 15, 1869, being the son of Christian and Frederica (Neighbour) Scharnhorst, natives of Germany, but immigrants to America while young. They located in Iowa and thence they went to Kansas and in 1872 came to Oregon and two years later to the territory now embraced in Latah county. Our subject received a good common school education in the county and remained with his father until twenty-two years had rolled by. At that time the father generously gave him a half section of fine land six miles west from Genesee, where the family home is at present. Our subject manifested his proper appreciation of this handsome legacy by handling it in a first class manner, producing as high as ten thousand bushels of wheat in one year. He has fine buildings, a good orchard, and plenty of stock to handle the farm, and everything about the premises manifests that scrutinizing care, thrift, industry and wisdom that characterize Mr. Scharnhorst in all of his ways. In politics he is with the class of citizens who are always laboring for real progress and advancement. The school interests have profited by his wisdom for a number of years, he being director.

In 1891 occurred the marriage of Mr. Scharnhorst and Miss Rosa, daughter of Mike and Barbara (Schlee) Hoyer, natives of Wurtemberg, Germany, where the father died in August, 1889, and the mother came later to America and is now living in Uniontown, Washington. To this union there have been born six children: Louisa F., Barbara F., Garry C., Christ F., George F., Fredrick. Mr. Scharnhorst and his family are allied with the Lutheran church, and he is one of the substantial and prominent men of the country, being accorded this position because of his worth and his capabilites that have wrought so well in our midst.

JAMES M. KINCAID. Among the enterprising farmers of Latah county who have made it a wealthy and leading political division of the state of Idaho, we are constrained to mention the subject of this article, who is the owner of a fine farm five miles east from Palouse, where he produces excellent crops of the cereals, fruits and vegetables, raising also some stock and having his estate well improved. James M. was born in Cumberland county, Kentucky, on February 17, 1861, being the son of James M. and Oliva (Moss) Kincaid. The father was a native of Tennessee, and was a farmer and county commissioner in Whitman county, Washington. The other children of this couple are: Wm. M., living in Idaho county; Alvis A., in Grangeville; John C., living in Pomeroy, Washington; Garrett D., at Palouse; Benjamin F., deceased; Joseph E., in Lewiston; Lawrence K., Palouse: Sarah E., at home, Palouse. The parents journeyed to St. Joseph, Missouri, in 1864, thence to Iowa, and one year later crossed the plains with ox teams to Utah, where they settled in Proro City and followed freighting for three years. Thence they went to Suisun City, California, and farmed, and then removed to Shasta, same state, and devoted themselves to raising stock. Later, we find them in the vicinity of Roseburg, Oregon, farming, whence they went to the Willamette valley and one year later, 1877, came to the Palouse country, the father taking up what is now the old homestead of the family.

Reverting more particularly to the personal history of the subject of this article, we note that he attended school until he was thirteen and then assisted his father in the various employments at hand, remaining with the parents until he was twenty-four years of age. On February 7, 1886, he married Miss Anna, daughter of William L. and Rebecca (Davis) Powers, Mr. Powers being a saw mill man and Mr. Davis a farmer in the vicinity of Colfax, Washington. Mrs. Kincaid was born near Eugene, Oregon, on May 3, 1868, and has the following brothers: Benjamin W., John F., Clifford and Willis. To our subject and his wife there have been born the following children: George R., James V., deceased; Herbert A., Virgil C., Frederick M., Ethel, Allen, deceased; Clarence, Florence, deceased; Grace, deceased; Floyd T. Mr. Kincaid's farm consists of one hundred and sixty acres and produces diversified crops. He is much interested in good schools, and for six years he has been on the school board. Mrs. Kincaid is a member of the Christian church and they are both highly esteemed people. *

SUMNER C. LAZELLE. The venerable gentleman, capable and enterprising, whose name is at the head of this article, is one of the early pioneers of Latah county and is one of its prominent citizens at the present time. He was born in Windham county, near Dover, in Vermont, on March 6, 1819, being the son of Isaac and Lucy Lazelle, natives, respectively, of Menden and Pelham, Massachusetts, the father being of English descent and born in 1787. Our subject was reared in his native place and well educated in the public schools and the academy. He remained at home until 1840 and cast his first vote for William Henry Harrison for president of the United States. He also voted for Fremont and has always been allied with the Republican party. In 1840 he went to Weston, New York, and there taught school, being also county superintendent of instruction in Cold Springs, New York. He taught and gave some attention to farming in the state of New York until 1873, being one of the successful educators of the state and time. In 1873 he came to Nevada, California, there taking up the lumbering business until 1877, at which time he came to the territory now embraced in Latah county, and after thorough search selected his present homestead and settled down to its improvement and to the substantial progress of the country. In both lines he has succeeded admirably, having a fine farm and being one of the respected men of the community. Mr. Lazelle had the following brothers and sisters, but they are now all dead: Houghton, Isaac W., Harriette, Abigail and Melintha.

On May 15, 1846, occurred the marriage of Mr. Lazelle and Miss Melinda, daughter of John N. Angle, a captain in the army and a farmer in Randolph, New York, where the wedding occurred. To this happy union there have been born the following issue: Inez E., widow, living with her father; Cynthia M., wife of W. K. Eddy, near Palouse; Irene E., deceased; Isaac W., farmer near Palouse; Charles F., married, but now a widower; Oscar W., married and living in Okanogan county, Washington. Mrs. Lazelle's brothers and sisters are named as follows: Nicholas and a half-brother Oscar died in the army; Elonor, wife of Rufus Spalding; Almira, wife of A. T. Covert, but now deceased; Eliza, wife of E. Brace, living in Coldsprings, New York; Lucindia, deceased; Phoebe, deceased; Adella, wife of Mr. John Huff, and living in Flourfield, St. Joe county, Michigan. Mr. Lazelle is one of the pioneers of this section, the country being all government land when he came. He has now an estate of one hundred and sixty acres, well improved and cultivated after the diversified plan, and with good buildings.

BRYANT M. RUDD. About five miles east from Palouse lies the farm of the subject of this sketch. It is one-quarter section, well improved, having elegant new house, good outbuildings and barn, with large orchard. Mr. Rudd practices diversified farming and from the time that he settled here, 1877, until the present, he has been one of the leading men of this section, one of the prosperous farmers and one of the substantial and patriotic citizens, having continued on his place, which he secured by the right of homestead. Bryant M. was born in Hendricks county, Indiana, twenty-five miles west from Indianapolis, on December 27, 1837, being the son of Ausbun and Elizabeth (Tisher) Rudd, natives of North Carolina. The father's father was a Spaniard and a farmer, while the mother's father was also a farmer. The brothers and sisters of Bryant M. are as folows: Sarah, Colvin, Daniel, James, Nellie, John, Louise J., Hutson, Mellissa, John and Mary A. Our subject left home at the age of sixteen and labored in various occupations until he had reached the age of twenty-three, attending also the public schools at times. At the age of twenty-three he bought a farm at Martinsville, Morgan county, Indiana, and went to tilling the soil for himself. On July 7, 1860, he married Miss Sarah, daughter of Louis Meridith, and seventeen years later he was called upon to mourn the death of his wife. Mr. Rudd removed from Indiana to Wilson county, Kansas, and there bought a farm and gave his attention to raising cattle, horses and hogs until 1877, when he sold his property also and came to Latah county, as mentioned above.

On March 5, 1879, in Morgan county, Indiana, Mr. Rudd contracted a second marriage, Mrs. Sarah (Dilley) Howell becoming his wife then. She is the daughter of Arthur M. and Elizabeth E. (McInturf) Dilley, natives, respectively, of Ohio and Tennessee. The father was active in the realm of politics, labored at the carpenter's trade, was a member of the Methodist church and a leading citizen of his community. To this marriage there have been born the following named children: Charlie, died on November 5, 1879; Letha J., wife of Birt Crooks, living one and one-half miles east from Palouse, and the mother of two boys, Orville and Floyd. By her former marriage Mrs. Rudd had the following named children: Albert, Edwin and Franklin. Mr. Rudd's children by his first wife are named as follows: Tyrannas, deceased; James H., married and living near Fredonia, Kansas; Tamsy, also married and living in the same place; Alexander S., married and living at Portland, Oregon. In the time of the civil strife Mr. Rudd enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Indiana Infantry, and did faithful service until the time of his honorable discharge. Mr. Rudd is a member of the G. A. R. and in political matters he is always active, being allied with the Republican party. He and his wife are devout members of the Methodist church in Palouse and he is one of the highly respected men of his community.

JOSEPH DAVIDSON. Since the days of 1879 Mr. Davidson has labored and toiled in this section of the country, having done commendable service as a citizen and tiller of the soil. His estate of one-quarter section lies three miles west from Kendrick. He homesteaded the land in 1879 and it has been the family home since that year. Mr. Davidson was born in Colechester county, Nova Scotia, on June 20, 1848, being the son of Thomas and Sarah (Fulton) Davidson. His mother died when he was ten years of age. Three years subsequent to that sad event the father removed with his family to Marin county, California, settling near Petaluma. Our subject was educated in his native place and in California he assisted his father in the business of dairying, which the elder Davidson had taken up, remaining with him until he had reached his twenty-second year, when he started in business for himself, taking up the dairying business on an adjoining ranch and following it for eight years. During this time he took a trip to Nova Scotia and in 1879 he came to Latah county territory and took as a homestead the land where he dwells today. This lies three miles west from Kendrick and is well improved, having comfortable buildings and an orchard of twelve acres which is devoted mostly to prunes.

The marriage of Mr. Davidson and Miss Margaret E., daughter of George and Margaret (Howard) Rutherford, was solemnized on June 6, 1879, in Colechester county, Nova Scotia, she being a native of that county and where her parents are farmers. To Mr. and Mrs. Davidson there have been born the following children, George T., Rilla M., Fred F., Bertha M., Byard and Clifford. Mr. Davidson and his wife are members of the Methodist church on American ridge and they are good citizens and have the confidence and regards of all who know them, being affable and genial neighbors, upright in their walk and capable and enterprising in all their business relations.

JAMES M. EMERSON, deceased. The good men who assisted to build Latah county are passing away and notable among that number is the subject of this memoir. He was a noble and good man, always allied on the side of progression and right, and being one of the brave defenders of the flag at a time when treason would have sullied its fair folds. James M. Emerson was born in Coshocton county, Ohio, on May 2, 1839, a son of Brown and Lucinda Emerson. He was educated there and part of his time was spent in clerking in a grocery store and part on the farm with his father. When the civil strife lowered, and the call came for men, brave and true, to stand for the honor of the country and the defense of our homes, young Emerson was quick to respond and enlisted in Company I, Fifty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry and for three years he served faithfully, being in Sherman's army. He was captured in the battle of Stone River, but was soon exchanged and continued in the service until 1864. Then he returned to Keene, Ohio, and there entered the mercantile business which occupied his attention until 1870, the date when he migrated to Elk county, Kansas. In that state he farmed until 1882 and then sold his possessions and came hence to Latah county. He homesteaded the land where the old home place is and there bestowed his labors and skill until the time when the summons came for him to pass within the veil that divides this world from that which is to come. He died as he had lived, a Christian and devout man. He was a faithful member of the Methodist church and his life was an example to all. The sad day of his departure was March 11, 1890.

Mr. Emerson left a wife and four children to mourn his demise. His marriage was celebrated on September 5, 1865, Miss Martha Brilhart becoming his wife at that time. Her parents, John and Jane (Hall) Brilhart came to Coshocton county, Ohio, from Pennsylvania, her native state, when she was a baby. The children mentioned are Eugene, born June 22, 1866, at Spring Mountain, Ohio, married Miss India Bogue, a native of Canada, and he makes his home with his mother still; Arsella, Carrie and Edgar. They are all at home and the aggregate real estate holdings of the family amounts to ten hundred and forty acres of fine land.

JOHN SULLIVAN. To this enterprising and capable gentleman whose name heads this article we are pleased to grant a representation in this volume of Latah county's history since he is one of the prominent citizens of today and has labored in the years past with assiduity and sagacity both for the prosecution of his business enterprises and the upbuilding of the county, being also a man of integrity and worth and one of the heavy property owners of the county.

Mr. Sullivan was born in county Cork, Ireland, in December, 1875, being the son of John and Mary Sullivan, also natives of the same country, whence they came to America, settling first in Michigan, then migrating to California and in 1884 coming to Latah county. Here they bought a man's right on a timber culture and filed a pre-emption, later taking a timber culture where they still live. Our subject came to America with his mother, his father having come some six years previous, and he remained with his parents until 1892, then entered partnership with his father until 1900, at which time he bought two hundred and forty acres of land, six miles west from Genesee, where he lives at the present time. His farm is well improved with buildings and so forth and is one of the finest pieces of agricultural land in the entire county, producing as high as ten thousand bushels of grain in one year. Mr. Sullivan raises considerable stock, as cattle, hogs and horses. He is also interested much in the local and state politics, always manifesting the concern that becomes the intelligent and progressive citizen. Mr. Sullivan has one sister, Mary Jacobs, living with him, and two brothers, Tim Sullivan, married to Loudena Reilly and living in Nez Perces county, and Dan Sullivan, living with his father. Our subject is affiliated with the Roman Catholic church and is a faithful adherent of the faith and supporter of the same.

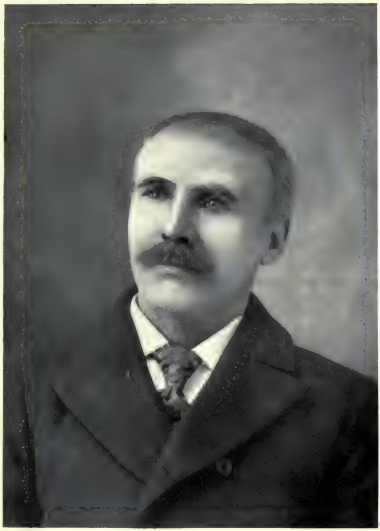
DAVID R. DAVIS. The subject of this article, as will be seen by the outline of his life, is a man of great enterprise and energy, being dominated by a high order of wisdom and possessed of excellent practical judgment in all the business affairs that have been prosecuted by him in his eventful career, and he is now one of the leading agriculturists, stockmen, and fruit producers of Latah county, in many particulars taking the lead of all others. David R. was born in Denbigh, North Wales, on March 28, 1845, being the son of John and Elizabeth (Roberts) Davis. The parents were natives of Wales, and the mother died there at the age of thirty-six and the father passed away in Corwin, Wales, being aged seventy. Our subject received a good education in the practical lines and at the age of twenty-one started on a career for himself, emigrating first to America, where he followed mining for many years in various places and under various conditions. He mined coal in Virginia first, then two years was spent in the same work in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, three years were spent in Akron, Ohio, and one year in the coal mines at Murphysboro, Illinois. Then he turned to the west and mined for precious metals in Central City, Colorado, one year, then a year and one-half were put in at Rock Springs, Wyoming, mining coal, then we find him in Eureka, Nevada, digging silver two years, then to Butte county, California, mining for gold one year, and finally, in 1878, he came to Genesee, Idaho. He took a homestead six miles east from Genesee, and split rails to fence it with. He broke twenty acres the first year, and added some each year until the farm was well under cultivation. It has a hog tight fence all around it, and is cross fenced in the same way. He sells annually about forty hogs, having the finest breeds; markets three thousand bushels of grain each year, and a car load of dried prunes besides much other produce and fruit. The farm is laid out with excellent wisdom, planned and improved with a skill and taste that manifests rare ability. A fine residence is first to mention, then we find commodious barns and out buildings and everything that is useful and that adds comfort and attractiveness to a rural estate. Mr. Davis has a fruit dryer thirty-six by fifty-six with twenty foot posts, which handles a car load of dried fruit in less than a month. He has eight hundred and fifty Italian prunes, five hundred assorted peaches, cherries, pears, apples and al kinds of fruits indigineous to this latitude.



Mr. Davis is a power in politics and gives strong adherence to the tenets of the Republican party, having done good work in its ranks. He has acted different times as road supervisor and has done a giant's portion to assist in the development of the county. Socially Mr. Davis is affiliated with the I. O. O. F. and is highly esteemed by all.

CHRISTIAN SCHARNHORST. This worthy and venerable pioneer and substantial citizen of Latah county is eminently fitted, both because of his real worth as a man and because of the excellent work that he has done here for the development and upbuilding of the county, to be prominently represented in the volume that has to do with its history and we accord him space for the events of an interesting and well spent career, assured that no more worthy citizen can be portrayed in this work since his labors speak out his worth. Christian was born in Germany on September 26, 1834, being the son of Christian and Dorothy (Krager) Scharnhorst. They came to this country in 1844 and settled in Keokuk county, Iowa, where they tilled the soil until the time of their death, both being buried in the Methodist cemetery in Harper, Iowa. Our subject was educated in the schools of Germany and in Iowa, and remained with his father until he had attained his twenty-third year, then rented a farm there until 1872, when he went across the plains with mule teams to Oregon, intending, however, to go to California, but being turned toward the Willamette valley by favorable reports on the road. The train of sixteen wagons was five months on the road, and then he rented a farm for two years in Oregon, after which he came to Latah county and homesteaded and pre-empted a half section, broke it all up and then took eighty acres as a timber culture claim. He added an adjoining half section to his fine body of land by purchase then and later enough more to make seven hundred and eighty acres in all. When his boys came of age he gave them one-half section each, as stated elsewhere in this work, retaining only eighty acres for himself, which the boys farm.

In 1856 Mr. Scharnhorst married Miss Frederika, daughter of Carl and Charlotta (Krouse) Neubauer, natives of Germany, but migrating to America in 1856 and locating in Iowa where they rest at the present time in the Lutheran cemetery near Sigourney. To our worthy subject and his estimable wife there have been born the following children,—Dora F., married to Herman Nablsick and living in Genesee; Louise, married to Mathias Carbuhn, living close to Uniontown, Washington; Dedrick J., married to Minnie Oldah and living in Genesee; Tenie F., married to Frank Sclator and living in Spokane county, Washington; Caroline L., married to Jake Scley, living close to Uniontown, Washington; Mary D., married to Henry Herman, residing in Latah county; Frederick, married to Rosa Haire, living in Latah county; Charles J., married to Mary Burchett, living in Latah county. Mr. Scharnhorst is a member of the Lutheran church as is his wife also. His brother is soon coming from Germany and they are representatives of a good family that has manifested great zeal and energy in labors for the good of their fellows and in building up and progress. Mr. Scharnhorst is one of the substantial men of Latah county and he is justly deserving of the honor that is due the true pioneer, the capable citizen, and the good man, and it is with pleasure that we have been enabled to give this epitome of a useful and interesting life.

FARM OF DAVID R. DAVIS.

DAVID R. DAVIS.

VIRGIL RANDALL. It is exceedingly pleasant to be able to chronicle the points of the interesting career of the estimable and enterprising gentleman, whose name appears above, having come of a noted family and having fully sustained the reputation of his ancestors for skill and talent, both by his capable efforts in his labors and in working out the bright success that is now crowning his pathway.

Mr. Randall is one of the large farmers of Latah county, owns five hundred and forty acres five miles southeast from Palouse, upon which stands the first frame and painted building in northern Idaho. He has at present a new and commodious structure as the family home. His farm is well tilled, produces abundance of the grasses and cereals while also he raises considerable stock. The original quarter section of the farm was taken as a homestead by Mrs. Randall, who rode through a hostile Indian country forty miles on horseback to Lewiston to make the filing. The marriage of this worthy couple occurred on the farm adjoining the homestead, which also they now own, the date of the happy event being April 14, 1878, and to bless the union there have been born to them the following children, Dora and Cora, twins, Cora being a graduate of the Moscow high school and now attending the normal at Lewiston; Fannie, teaching; Grover, at home. Turning more particularly to the early personal history of Mr. Randall, we note that he was one of a family of eight children, his brothers and sisters being, Michael A., Elizabeth, Euler, Raphael, Euclid, Mary, and Emily. Our subject was born on July 13, 1843, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, near Harrisburg, at Anchor Tavern, a noted tavern of that country and run by his father. His parents were Reuben W. and Katherine Randall. The father was a man of great erudition, but possessed of becoming modesty that always precluded ostentatious effort for personal preferment in public, although he was offered the chair of mathematics in a number of institutions of higher learning. Such men as McCreary, Belknap, Story and others of Grant's cabinet were warm personal friends of Mr. Randall. Commodore Foote, a noted mathematician, frequently wrote to Mr. Randall for assistance in various problems, and the subject of this article has at the present time these letters which came to his father. Our subject came from a family of poets. His father published mathematical works and his grandfather was the author of several books of poems. Our subject came with his parents to St. Louis when three years of age and in 1847 the family went to Keokuk, Iowa. Twenty years they lived there, the father being engaged in mercantile pursuits. Virgil was educated in the common schools and in 1864 made a trip to Virginia City, Montana. He drove four yokes of oxen and from the train one or two men were killed by the Indians. Later he returned to Iowa and ran on a steamer from Keokuk to St. Louis and in 1867 went to New York and took steamer via Panama to California. From San Francisco, he went to San Joaquin and six years later went to Butte county, being engaged in farming in both places. After that he came to the territory now embraced in Latah county, stopping first with a brother whose farm adjoins that of our subject, then later taking the farm as above mentioned.

Mrs. Randall was formerly Miss Dora F. Walker, being the daughter of Harvey S. and Lavisa (Morse) Walker, the mother being a distant relative of the great electrician Morse. The father and mother were natives of New York, and came from their farm in that state to California in an early day. Mrs. Randall was born in Dodge county, Wisconsin, and went with her parents to California. She has one sister, Susan, who is now deceased. Mr. Randall is a member of the A. O. U. W., joining in 1892. His wife is a member of the Christian church. He ran for the office of county commissioner and by only seventeen votes did his opponent win the day. His farm is one of the best and finest in the county, has fine buildings, twenty acres of orchard, forty of meadow, and produces abundant returns.

CHARLES H. ODERLIN. In every particular the fine premises of Mr. Oderlin manifest the proprietor of the estate a man of thrift, enterprise, and industry, while his capabilities and uprightness are no less manifest among his fellows, being a man of untarnished reputation and one of the substantial and leading citizens of the entire county. Charles H. was born in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, on August 28, 1849, being the son of Nicholas and Katherine Oderlin. The father was a stone mason and a native of the old country and the mother also was born in Switzerland. At the age of five years, Charles was brought by his parents to Plainfield, Illinois, where the mother died in 1857. The father worked there at his trade until 1865, the son meanwhile attending school, and then a move was made to Woodson county, Kansas. The father bought a quarter section and went to farming. Our subject remained there until 1869, then farmed for himself until 1872, in which year occurred the happy event of his life, namely his marriage with Miss Malissa Dee, daughter of Jeremiah and Louise Dee, natives respectively of Ohio and Scott county, Illinois. Mrs. Oderlin was born in Hancock county, Illinois. Subsequent to his marriage, Mr. Oderlin rented his father's place and farmed it for two years, then raised stock and farmed until 1877, in which year he sold out and started on July 6, for Idaho, arriving here four months later. After due exploration and investigation, he selected his present place, five miles east from Palouse. He pre-empted and then homesteaded and for twenty-five years he has been laboring for the improvement of his estate, for the advancement of the county, and the upbuilding of all its interests. He owns two hundred and forty acres of land, has an elegant residence, fine barns and the entire estate is tasty, attractive and valuable.

The following children have been born to our worthy subject and his estimable wife, Bert C., educated in the public schools and the university at Moscow; Katie, died in 1878; Iva, died in 1882; Ethel C., who will graduate from the university at Moscow in 1903. Mr. Oderlin always takes a great interest in politics, having been central committeeman for five years, and always laboring for good men in office, but ever refusing the offers for political preferment for himself. He has been urged to run for county commissioner but steadily refuses. In educational matters, Mr. Oderlin has always been zealous and active, believing in good schools and willing to pay the taxes to secure them. He is highly esteemed by all and a worthy citizen.

JOSEPH L. McCLELLAN. This capable and enterprising farmer, whose life has been filled with worthy labors for the upbuilding and advancement of the sections where his lot has been cast, was one, too, who quickly responded to the call of patriotism and gave his services faithfully for the defense of the country, in a time when fratricidal strife was rending the fair republic in twain.

Joseph L. was born in Noble county, Ohio, near Sharon, on December 3, 1847, being the son of John and Sarah E. (Smost) McClellan. The father was a locomotive engineer and was killed on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in 1855. Then our subject went to live with his grandmother Smost in Lawrence, Kansas, where he attended the public school until he was fifteen years of age, at which time he enlisted in Company A, Ninth Kansas. He participated in the battle of Fayetteville, Arkansas, and his company was the first that went into Van Buren, Arkansas. He served over three years and was mustered out at Duval's bluff, Arkansas, in June, 1865. He returned to Lawrence and purchased a farm four miles from the city and devoted his energies to tilling the soil there for one year and then sold and went to Clinton, working in a flouring mill for two years. In 1868, he went to Quincy, Missouri, and two years later he returned to Clinton and worked in a mill, then went to Chautauqua county, Kansas, and took up a preemption and for eight years he raised stock and worked in the mill, and handled the land. 1878 was the date he started for Idaho with mule teams, being one hundred and six days on the road. On August 6, he landed in Pullman, Washington, and after due exploration he took his present place four and one-half miles southeast from Palouse, where he has lived ever since, being one of the leading farmers and respected citizens.

On January 11, 1866, Mr. McClellan married Miss Sarah E. Bell, daughter of Alexander and Bashabee (Pell), the father being a farmer and sheriff of his county, and both being natives of Virginia. To this union there have been born two children, Kate A. and Evart A. In the fall of 1894, Mr. McClellan contracted a second marriage, the lady being Amanda Brown, daughter of Zena and Mary Edwards, natives of Union county, Tennessee. Her father was a wagon maker and her grandfather was also a Tennesseean and a blacksmith. Mrs. McClellan had four sisters and three brothers and by her former marriage she has the following children, Minnie, married and living in Palouse; Thomas belongs to the regular army in Missoula, Montana; Joseph, Frank, Effie and Roy at home. Mr. McClellan has two brothers, William J. and Finley W. Mr. McClellan is a Republican and active in politics and in his business enterprises he has shown marked enterprise and sagacity, having now a good estate well stocked and excellently handled.

ELMER P. PALMER. This real pioneer and builder of the county is eminently fitted for representation in any work that has to do with the leading citizens of this section, being a man of fine capabilities and having maintained an unsullied reputation through out his interesting career. Mr. Palmer is a native of Indiana, being born in St. Joseph county, on March 17, 1854, the son of Asher H. and Nancy Palmer. The father was born in Fredonia, New York, in 1801, and was an active pioneer, as was his father before him. The mother was a native of Erie county, Pennsylvania, born in 1818 of Dutch lineage, and her father was merchant from New Amsterdam. The parents removed from Indiana, the birth place of our subject, to Minnesota when he was an infant. Settlement was made in this last state in Fillmore county, where a homestead was taken and there they farmed for about eighteen years. Then the father sold out and went to Nebraska, remaining two years, and in 1873 our subject came to Portland. One year later he came to the section where he now lives, it then being Nez Perces county. He settled on his present place and his brother, C. W., also came here at the same time. The first winter was very severe, and the game was slaughtered mercilessly by the settlers. At that time Walla Walla was the principal trading post of any importance and no settlers were between the high hills south of where Viola now stands and the Palouse river with the exception of three. Mr. Palmer and his brother still live on their original farms and they have been prospered. Our subject ships fruit and has for ten years and now has a large young orchard of about forty acres. He is at present milking fifteen cows and ships cream to the Hazelwood company at Spokane. Mr. Palmer has a fine farm adjoining Viola, an elegant residence, and is one of the most prosperous men of the section. He does not raise much wheat, but is sowing much clover for the use of his cows.

The marriage of Mr. Palmer and Miss Rosa L., daughter of James and Lucy Maxwell, was solemnized near Whelan, Whitman county, Washington, and they have become the parents of the following children, Harry M., F. Glen, and Claude E., all at home. Mrs. Palmer's father is a farmer near Whelan and served in the Civil war under Sherman for three years, being now the recipient of a pension for the valiant and hard service which he did, which broke down his health. Mr. Palmer is a firm believer in good schools and is an advocate of having them well supported by taxation. He and his wife are members of the Adventist church. They are leading people of the community and are well liked by al.

GEORGE H. DOUGHARTY. The thrifty and enterprising farmers and fruit raisers of Latah county have made her what she is today, one of the leading counties of the state; and among this number who have thus worthily wrought, we are glad to mention the name of the gentleman of whom we now now have the privilege of writing. He has been here since the early days, being a pioneer when the stretches of wildwoods and prairies were to be seen on every hand, and he has steadily labored here since and justly deserves the place among the real builders of the county where he stands.

Mr. Dougharty was born in Amador county, California, on December 24, 1855, being the son of William and Elizabeth (Brown) Dougharty. The parents came to California from Illinois in 1850, and when George H. was four years of age, they removed from Amador county to Contra Costa county, sixteen miles from Oakland, and there they remained until our subject was twenty-three years of age. He was educated there and assisted his father in the work on the farm. In 1878 he came to the territory now embraced in Latah county, and at the spot where we find the family home at the present day, he took a homestead and his skill and industry and thrift have been displayed here ever since with the result that he has one of the well paying and highly cultivated estates of the county. It is located three miles west of Kendrick and in the finest fruit belt in the west. He has twenty-five acres devoted to apples and some few trees of other fruits and his orchard is a handsome dividend payer.

Fraternally Mr. Dougharty is affiliated with the W. of W., Lodge No. 204, at Kendrick. His marriage with Miss Dora, daughter of Tilman and Angeline (Turner) Jennings, was celebrated at Moscow, on October 31, 1884, and they have three children, Arie, Clarence and Lawrence. Mrs. Dougharty's father was one of the pioneers of this section and still lives in the vicinity of Genesee.

SAMUEL T. SILVEY is one of the enterprisnig men of the vicinity of Viola, Idaho, and a leading stockman, agriculturist and orchardist. He was born on October 4, 1861, in Marion county, Indiana. His parents were Presley A. and Diana (White) Silvey. The father was a blacksmith at the home place, and was born in 1831, forty-five miles south from Indianapolis. He was drafted but never sent to the front in the Civil war. The mother was born in Ohio, in 1837, and came with her parents in early Indian times to Indiana. Her brothers were all soldiers in the Civil war and one perished there. Our subject remained in Indiana for eleven years and then came with the family to Lafayette county, Missouri, where the father followed his trade and Samuel T. learned carpentering. Fourteen years later the parents returned to Indiana, and this son came west to Hutchinson, Kansas, working one year there at his trade and then in 1887, he journeyed to Idaho, settling at Viola. Saw milling engaged him for two years and then he turned again to his trade, working also one year on the Nez Perces reservation, erecting houses for the Indians. About 1898 he settled on his present farm, one mile south from Viola and has given his attention to farming. Mr. Silvey practices the diversified plan, but derives his greatest revenue from stock and intends to soon raise much of the finer breeds. He also gives attention to the production of fine grasses, experimenting much with various kinds. Mr. Silvey has also a fine ten-acre orchard from which he derives a good revenue.

On July 23, 1898, at Moscow, occurred the marriage of Mr. Silvey and Hattie A. (Harrison) Holbrook, the daughter of E. B. and Jane (Sherer) Harrison, who lives one mile east from Viola. To this union there has been born one child, Earl. By her first husband, Mrs. Silvey has three children, as follows: Silas H., Roy H. and May A. Mrs. Silvey has been a teacher for a number of years and taught one of the first schools at Viola. Fraternally Mr. Silvey is a member of the Maccabees, Viola Lodge, No. 14. He was elected justice of the peace of his precinct, but not desiring public honors, refused to qualify. Mr. Silvey has always been active in the matter of educational affairs and strives for the betterment of the schools. Politically he is identified with the Democratic party. He is a progressive, enterprising and energetic man and good citizen and does much intelligent labor in his experiments for the betterment of the condition of all. He receives the esteem and confidence of all of his fellows.

RUFUS M. BOWLES. No citizen is better known and more highly appreciated and esteemed by the public in general about Viola than the gentleman, of worth and honor, whose name heads this article, being a general merchant at that place and postmaster. Mr. Bowles was born in Frederick county, Maryland, on November 4, 1855, being the son of Captain Samuel and Mahala (Gaver) Bowles. The father was a prominent man of that section, being representative from his county to the state legislature and captain of the home guards during the Civil war. Our subject remained there until he was nineteen years of age, receiving a good education in the public schools and the academy, and a business training. 1874 was the date when he left the native place and went to Springfield, Ohio, acting as salesman in a store there for one year, then continuing his westward journey to Sioux City, Iowa, where he worked for two years and then went to Portland, Oregon, in 1877. He remained there until 1884. He taught school in The Dalles and went thence to Puget Sound, taking a timber claim in Lewis county and in 1889 he sold it and came to Spokane, Washington, arriving there two days after the fire. One year was spent there running a restaurant, then he sold out and came to Viola, opening up a general store here, succeeding Mr. J. H. Gilbert, whose store had been destroyed by fire. Mr. Bowles also was appointed postmaster as successor of Mr. Gilbert, and since that time he has steadily served in that important office, always laboring to conserve the interests of the people and for good service. Mr. Bowles does a thriving trade and is highly esteemed by his patrons for his uprightness and integrity.

The marriage of Mr. Bowles and Miss Melinda, daughter of James and Melinda Hurst, was celebrated near The Dalles on November 15, 1880. Mrs. Bowles' father was one of the earliest settlers in that section, coming there in 1859 and settling on Ten Mile creek, where he is one of the leading stockmen of the country. To our worthy subject and his estimable wife, there have been born the following children: Samuel C., atending Moscow high school and assisting his father in the store during vacations; Archie E., also attending the high school at Moscow; Alvin H. and Edward, at Puget Sound at present; Floyd A., at home. Mr. Bowles is a charter member of the Knights of Maccabees, being record keeper in Viola Tent, No. 14. He is greatly interested in political matters, being frequently delegate to the county conventions, while in school matters he is enthusiastic in the endeavors for betterment of the schools, improvements on all lines of education, and is forceful in assisting these good causes. He has served six years as school clerk and devotes much talent and energy to this cause.

MICHAEL EVITS. This well known and representative agriculturist and stockman is one of the leaders in the county of Latah in his line of business, being also one of the early pioneers and a real builder of the county, having labored faithfully here long before there was a Latah county organization, and being now one of the heaviest property holders of the entire section, having about eight hundred acres of fine land, six hundred of which is under cultivation, and producing many bushels of grain each year.

Mr. Evits was born in Austria on September 15, 1837, being the son of Martin and Mary (Scholer) Evits, who were also natives of Austria, being buried in the old church yard there now. Our subject received a good common school education and at the age of eight went to herding sheep and cattle in the summers and continued this enterprise until he was fifteen, when he learned the carpenter trade, laboring at the same until he was a score of years old. He was then put to serve his term in the Austrian army and nine years were spent in this occupation, four of which were as corporal. He was a participant in the French and German war of 1866. After leaving the army he came to America and located in St. Louis, where he was busied in driving an ice wagon for two years. Then he came to Latah county, by way of Panama, arriving here in 1870. He labored for wages for two years, then took up a pre-emption of one quarter section, and in 1873 took a timber culture of eighty acres. In 1885 he bought three hundred and twenty acres, in 1892 bought another quarter, and in 1896 bought an eighty. With one continuous round of success, Mr. Evits has gone steadily forward, his prosperity being the legitimate result of his boundless energy, wise management and keen foresight, backed by a fine executive force, all of which are happily resident in his make up.

He has raised much stock, but now handles the land largely to grain. He has an elegant residence, costing over five thousand dollars, a barn, sixty by eighty, a granery that will hold seven thousand bushels of grain, and all other improvements in proportion, making his estate one of the most valuable, beautiful and homelike in the entire country. Mr. Evits is justly reckoned as one of the leaders among men in both his business ability and in his exemplary walk as an upright man and patriotic citizen.

Mr. Evits married Miss Katherine, daughter of Mat and Maggie (Everts) Kambridge, also natives of Austria, where they sleep in the home church yard. Four children have been born to our worthy subject and his faithful and estimable wife, namely: Katie, married to Joseph Springer, living in Latah county; Louisa, married to William Teamer, living in Latah county; Mary, married to Pete Jacobs, and living in Whitman county, Washington; Annie, single and living with her parents. Mr. Evits has served two years as road supervisor in an acceptable manner to all. He and his wife are members of the Roman Catholic church and manifest a deep interest in the support of the faith. It is a matter of great credit to Mr. Evits to note that when he came to this county he labored two years for wages but is now one of the leading property owners and farmers of the whole country, having gained it all by wise investment of the hard earned money which his industry brought him and at the same time maintaining not only a reputation that is unsullied but also a standing for wisdom and enterprise that have always caused him to be consulted by his fellows and gives an enviable prestige in the community.

JOHN BOTTJER. Among the representative property owners and leading agriculturists of Latah county there should not be failure to mention the subject of this sketch, since he has faithfully done the work of the pioneer here, manifesting zeal, ability and wisdom in the course of his pilgrimage, and withal has shown his financial ability in the fine accumulation of property with which he is blessed now, and which is handled in a becoming manner with wisdom.

The birth of Mr. Bottjer occurred on September 29, 1839, being the son of Henry and Louis (Luckan) Bottjer, natives of Germany, and being now buried in the Bloomingtauh cemetery, that town being the native place of our subject. John was favored with a good education in the common schools and at the age of fourteen years started to learn the trade of ship carpenter. For thirteen years we find him apt and successful in this craft and then he came to America, locating in New York, where he labored for seven years. Then followed a journey by Panama to California where he resided for four years and whence he came to the place where he now lives, the country then being in Nez Perces county. Two years were spent at the carpenter trade and then he homesteaded his present place, later taking a pre-emption of eighty acres. He has added by purchase since that time until he has four hundred and twenty-five acres of fine soil, which is embellished with a fine residence, a good barn and plenty of outbuildings, a choice orchard, the place being one of the elegant and home-like estates of the county, every portion of it bearing the marks of a wise owner and thrifty husbandry, which have brought the reward of honest labor, which is a goodly competence of worldly property.

In 1870 Mr. Bottjer married Miss Margaretha, daughter of John H. and Margaret Brandt, and eight children have been born to them, namely: Mary, married to Charley Scharnhorst and living in Latah county; Louise, married and living at home; William, at home; Henry G., Johanna J., Margaretha C., Henretha A., Johan H. Mr. Bottjer is a member of the I. O. O. F. He and his wife are members of the German Lutheran church. Mr. Bottjer is one of the prominent men of the community, has done much in the years that are past for the progress and upbuilding of the county, and is a genial, affable and well liked neighbor and gentleman.

JOSEPH SPRENGER. While the subject of this sketch has not been in Latah county so long as some, still his handiwork is manifest in a commendable degree, since he has always labored for the advancement of the interests of the county as well as laying and executing commendable plans for his own prosperity. Mr. Sprenger was born in Germany, Madfelt, the date of this event being February 1, 1865, and his parents being Frank and Josephine (Sebers) Sprenger, also natives of the fatherland, where they reside at this time. In his native village Joseph received a good education and learned thoroughly the carpenter trade before he was twenty-one years of age. At that important age his budding spirit looked for larger fields and more excellent opportunities and consequently he came to America, locating in Iowa, where he labored in the car shops for two years, utilizing his fine trade, in which he was especially skilled. Following that period he came west to Spokane, Washington, the year being 1889, and two years were spent in that city at the trade and then in 1891 he came to Uniontown, Washington, and two years there he wrought at the same trade. Then for three years he toiled on the farm of Mr. M. Evits, after which he purchased one hundred acres of land for himself, where he now lives, five miles west from Genesee. He erected with his own hands a fine residence, barns and out buildings, so that his place is finely improved and is a scene of thrift and bears the marks of wise planning and faithful industry. He has the farm all under cultivation, handles a small bunch of stock and is in all respects a well to do farmer, and among the leaders in skill and execution of good methods.

In 1893 occurred the marriage of Mr. Sprenger and Miss Katie M. Evits, whose parents, M. and Katherine (Kimbetch) Evits, are residents of this county and are specifically mentioned in another portion of this work. To our subject and his estimable wife have been born the following children: Katie M., Mary J., Theresa A. and Gertrude L. Mr. Sprenger and his wife are adherents of the Roman Catholic church.

DANIEL HUNT lives five and one-half miles northeast from Moscow on a generous farm of two hundred and forty acres, which his skill and industry have wrested from the wilds of nature and have transformed into a fertile and abundant producer of the cereals, fruits and stock. He is one of the leaders in this realm of development, and has wrought out his present goodly competence from the resources placed in his hands in this country. Mr. Hunt was born in Chautauqua county, New York, on November 2, 1845, being the son of Seneca and Julia Hunt, farmers of that state. At the age of seven he was brought west by his parents who settled in Cresco, Howard county, Iowa, where he received a fine education and then devoted himself for ten years to teaching school, holding a first class certificate. 1880 marks the year in which a move was made to Council Bluffs, in the same state, and there he gave his attention to farming for two years and then turned toward the west to gain both health and wealth, having lost them both in an uncertain struggle in Iowa in the endeavor to raise wheat profitably. When he landed in Latah county he at once sought out the homestead where he now lives and settled down. Raw land, a frontier country, poor health, depleted finances and many other depressing circumstances thronged him, but despite it all his courage was as bright as ever and he started in to settle the question of existence. He began with the arduous labor of cutting and hauling wood, gained strength and later went to laying brick and plastering, which he had learned younger; he also logged for the mill companies and mined some and kept steadily improving his farm. The result was that he began to prosper at once, gained slowly, improved his farm until he has now a model place and an abundant producer, well improved and handled in a commendable manner, while he enjoys a fine residence, commodious barn and all the accessories that make rural life profitable and comfortable. In 1873 he took a journey through Washington and taught school where Slaughter now stands.

On October 26, 1876, at Arcadia, Wisconsin, Mr. Hunt married Miss Pruda M., daughter of Alva and Pruda Yarrington. The father was sheriff of Hancock county, Iowa, was active in politics and an early settler there. To Mr. and Mrs. Hunt there have been born the following children: Bertha E., wife of Luther Lowry, of this county; Meritt T., a school teacher; Almon D.; Katie E., deceased; Amabel M., Harvey E., and Bessie E., the last one being an adopted child. Mr. and Mrs. Hunt are members of the Methodist church and are liberal supporters of that institution. Politically Mr. Hunt has been active, being a candidate for assessor in Iowa, and making a good race on the Republican ticket. He takes a great interest in educational matters and politics as becomes every loyal citizen.

WILLIAM S. MAGUIRE. Latah county is well supplied with stanch and enterprising agriculturists and one among this worthy number it is now our pleasant privilege to give consideration in this volume of the county history. Mr. Maguire is a wise and skillful farmer and also handles some stock and does mining. He was born in the city of New York to James and Catherine Maguire, on December 12, 1843. The father was a manufacturer of edged tools and removed his family to Cleveland, Ohio, while our subject was still a small boy, and there the latter received some schooling and the father followed his trade. In 1851 the father removed to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and there prosecuted his trade for seventeen years. William S. completed his education in that city and also learned the sheet iron trade. It was in 1868 that he began to look toward the west and soon he was on his way to Iowa where he farmed in Harrison and Cass counties for several years. Thence he went to Portland, Oregon, arriving at the time the captured Snake Indians were hung for massacring the whites. He was soon in Walla Walla, Washington, and a little later he took up his present farm which is four and one-half miles northeast from Moscow, and the date when he settled was 1874. He was one of the oldest settlers in this section and he has the distinction of being one of the real builders of this county, having always wrought with energy and wisdom. Mr. Maguire pays attention to raising the king of cereals, wheat, almost entirely, also handling cows and horses.

It was in April, 1888, that Mr. Maguire and Miss Aphelia, daughter of Elijah and Anna C. Wilson, farmers near Beatrice, Nebraska, were married and they have become the parents of two children, Edwin and Bertha M., both at home. The wedding of our subject and his wife took place at Beatrice, Nebraska. Mr. Maguire is a member of the K. of P. He and his family are not members of any denomination, preferring the real scriptural ground of simple belief in the Saviour of men and a close walk with Him rather than in human organization. Mr. Maguire is a man of good ability and sound principles and he has the esteem and confidence of his fellows.

CURRENCY A. GUMMERE. A stanch veteran of the Civil war, where he shouldered the musket of freedom and did the service of a patriot, shedding blood for the cause, and later assisting in various places to develop and build up the country that he had helped to save, and now one of the substantial and leading agriculturists of this county, we are pleased to grant to this gentleman a representation in his county's history, where he is eminently entitled to consideration.

Mr. Gummere was born in Clarke county, Ohio, on March 22, 1842, being the son of Harlan and Mary A. Gummere. The father was a carpenter and in politics an active Republican. The family removed to Indiana soon after the birth of Currency and there he received his first schooling, whence later they removed to Jefferson county, Iowa, and two years later to Oskaloosa, farming in both places. In 1859 they returned to Illinois. In 1861, at the age of nineteen, our subject enlisted in an Iowa regiment, having been twice rejected previous to that in Illinois on account of his size, or rather lack of size. His was the Sixth Iowa Infantry and he was soon plunged in the famous battle of Shiloh, where a musket ball pierced his lung and he was placed in the hospital for recovery but soon he was out and with the boys again handling the weapons of warfare as skillfully as before. At Kenesaw Mountain he stopped another Rebel bullet, this time in his left shoulder, and again he was sent for healing in the weary war hospital. He seemed to devote his energies to healing for soon he was out and this time just soon enough to join his command in the famous march to the sea. He staid in the conflict until the conflict was no more and then received an honorable discharge at Louisville, Kentucky. And for this loyal service he is now drawing a pension of seventeen dollars per month, which is dearly bought money. He left the ranks for the prairies of Illinois and two years later, at Champaign, in that state, he married Miss Elizabeth Huston, the date of that happy event being March 14, 1867. Six years later they removed to Aurora, Nebraska, and farmed a homestead for ten years, after which they went to Valley and did well in the stock business and farming for six years and then sold out and went to Sheridan county, and pre-empted a quarter and thence in 1893, they came overland to Latah county. He has a good farm six miles northeast from Moscow, and raises oats, hogs and horses and is prosperous and well to do.

The subject of this sketch and his estimable wife have become the parents of eighteen children, twelve of whom are living, as follows: William H. married and in Oklahoma; Sheridan A., in Nebraska; Lottie, wife of Harry Hodden, in Colorado; Orison O., in Alaska; Anna M., wife of A. J. Draper, of Moscow; Daisy, wife of Oscar DePartee, in Moscow; Nellie, wife of Frank Frazier in Latah county; Currency I. in Whitman county, Washington; Ida, wife of Gene DePartee; Frank R., in Montana; Mabel H. and Leonard R., at home.

THOMAS TIERNEY. Few men have passed a more eventful and varied career than the subject of this sketch, a son of the Emerald Isle, and possessing all the fire, energy, skill, sagacity and brightness characteristic of his race, which has been manifested in various channels of his stirring walk through some of the most exciting regions of the world, the western part of the United States in the last fifty years. Our subject came to light of day on May 1, 1836, in county Galway, Ireland, being the son of Martin and Mary (Fahy) Tierney. He was educated until eleven years in his native land and then came with an uncle to America where he attended school for some years more and at the age of eighteen started for himself. He commenced operation by working in a brickyard, then worked on the Erie canal during the time of the last enlargement of that waterway. Two years at that and then we find him in Iowa, later in St. Louis, then in Mexico, laboring at various occupations, then in the time of the gold stampede to Pikes Peak he was with the first. After the excitement he went to Salt Lake, driving cattle, thence to Kansas, where he farmed a time and then he hired out to ride the famous Pony Express, riding from Marysville, Kansas, to Big Sandy, No. 3. Six months sufficed him in this dangerous and stirring occupation, then for one year he was at the no less hazardous work of herding horses in that country. Next we find young Tierney freighting from Kansas City to Colorado, and his energy was manifest in that he gained twenty-five thousand dollars in this business, which after the war, however, depreciated nearly fifty per cent. At this time he went into partnership and lost the major portion of his hard earned money. It was a great lesson and he collected his remnants together and came west to Nevada, thence to California, on to Oregon, and finally landed in Lewiston in 1870. After spending seven thousand more in these trips he went prospecting, then bought a team and hauled wood, and finally came to the place where he now lives and squatted on a quarter section of land, which he homesteaded, then continued to reside there and improve the same from that time until the present, purchasing additional pieces of adjoining land until he has four hundred and eighty-seven acres of fine, fertile land, which is mostly rented, Mr. Tierney retiring more from the ardous labors of the farm. It is of note that Mr. Tierney was one of the builders of the first telegraph line to Ft. Scott.

In 1866 Mr. Tierney married Miss Maria Beck in Kansas and four children were born to them, Thomas M., married and living in Ohio; Gerome, married to Nora Butler and living in Latah county; Anna M., wife of Dan Haley, and living in Genesee; William, married to Louise Evits and living in Latah county; Mrs. Tierney died in 1873. Mr. Tierney married again in 1896 and in the same year he was called upon to mourn the death of his second wife. In 1898, in Howard county, Iowa, for the third time Mr. Tierney approached the sacred altar, this time leading Anna Drew, and to them have been born one child, Michael J. In early times Mr. Tierney was active and for a season served as postmaster, continuing in that capacity about four years. He affiliates with the Catholic church, and is one of the leading men of his section, being possessed of those happy qualities of genialty and real worth.

JOSEPH C. DePARTEE. This enterprising farmer and miner of Latah county is located six and one-half miles northeast from Moscow where he has a fine farm and manifests diligence and vigor in the care of his property, being a man whose life has been crowded with adventure, since he has wrought much in the mines of the different frontiers. Joseph C. was born in Pottawattamie county, Iowa, near Council Bluffs, being the son of James and Mary Ann (Schley) DePartee. The date of this event was October 8, 1844. The father was a farmer and went to California in 1850, also served in the Civil war and while in Arizona was killed by the Mexican bushwhackers. Our subject was taken at the age of two to Rockport, Missouri, remaining there until 1862, when he came across the plains with his uncle, Daniel Fuller, his mother, and brother James, and sisters Angeline and Elizabeth. They travelled with the ox team of the day and stopped at Salt Lake, where the family remained for fourteen years. Our subject farmed there for one year and then went to the mines in Montana, near old Virginia City and Bannock, returning to Utah and recrossing the plains as wagon guard in 1866. He came back and again went to mining but later assisted to take a band of cattle to Nevada for one, Mr. Hughes. In Utah Mr. DePartee saw the finishing of the first great transcontinental line of railway. In 1873-4 he mined at Picohe, Nevada, then returned to Utah and mined at Nebo and finally in 1876 came to Colfax, going to Dayton to winter and the following year came to the Latah country. He settled about one mile from his present place at the mouth of Gnat creek. He remained four years and then was tempted to the mines in the southern part of the state and also made a trip to Utah, whence he returned again to this section, taking his present place, six and one-half miles northeast from Moscow, as a homestead. In 1895 he made a trip to California which consumed one year. Upon his return to this country he followed mining principally, although he has a first-class farm and has developed it in good shape.

Mr. DePartee married Miss Jane, daughter of William R. and Jane (Gustin) Holden, farmers, on November 5, 1866, the nuptials occurring in Utah. The following children have been born to them: Joseph N., married to Dollie Roland and living in the Nez Perces reservation; Oscar F., maried to Daisy Bartill and living in Moscow; Charles E., married to Ida Gummery and living on the home place. This one was a soldier in the Philippine war; Tillie, married Al Draper and living at Orofino. Mr. DePartee is a Democrat of the old Jeffersonian type and is active in the realm of politics. He practices diversified farming, having also a fine orchard. While in Utah Mr. DePartee assisted to put down the Ute Indian uprising which was known as the Black Hawk war. This occurred in 1864-5. He was not allied with the Mormons in their religious belief in Utah and hence he preferred to leave their section.

N. M. HAWLEY. The gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, is one of the sturdy pioneers who opened this section to settlement, and he has labored continuously here since that date, building up and developing his properties, and augmenting the wealth of the county, being now one of the prosperous and progressive agriculturists, who form the substantial citizenship which has made the county what it is today.

Mr. Hawley was born in Knox county, Illinois, on January 9, 1843, being the son of Ira and Elvira (Riley) Hawley, the father a native of New York and the mother of Indiana. The latter's parents came to Illinois shortly after the Black Hawk Indian war. The father came to Illinois in 1835 and engaged in farming until 1850, when he was lured to the Golden state by the gold excitement, but returned home the next year. Then he sold out, and the next year crossed the plains with his family to Lane county, Oregon, taking there a donation claim of one half section, and purchasing from the government land until his home place was of the generous acreage of eleven hundred, and another place contained seven hundred acres. He was a prominent man in that section, and there in August, 1901, he passed to the other world, and the mother followed in December of the same year, and both are buried on the old homestead. Our subject remained with his father until he was twenty years of age and then went to farming on two hundred acres that the father had given him. Eight years he farmed there in Linn county, and then after the loss of his first wife, he went to railroading on the construction. Later he put his farm into the hands of his two oldest sons and went to Lake county, Oregon, and for five years raised stock. Then he returned on a visit to his sons, settled matters up regarding the estate, after which he came to Idaho in 1877, settling on a homestead adjoining his present place and until 1893 he engaged in farming there. He then bought one hundred acres just north of Moscow, where he lived until 1901. In that year he returned to his old home place, where he is living at the present time. He has sold the property near town and has purchased a half section adjoining his present home place.

On September 17, 1863, in Lane county, Oregon, Mr. Hawley married Miss Arzella, daughter of John and Martha Willis, natives of Tennessee, who came to Oregon in 1855. This lady was a native of Missouri, and she bore three children: Lawrence, William H., and Walter R.

Mr. Hawley contracted a second marriage on January 13, 1884, in Moscow, and the lady then becoming his wife was M. Fanny, daughter of Archie B. and Sarah Estes, whose sketch is in another portion of this work. To this happy union there have been born three children: Ella, Eugene and Archie. Mr. and Mrs. Hawley are members of the Baptist church and are exemplary persons in every respect, being highly esteemed and having maintained an untarnished reputation. Mr. Hawley is one of the leading citizens of the county, has always labored for its advancement, is an enterprising and capable man, and has demonstrated his ability in the business world to be of a high order.

EDWARD P. ATCHISON. This well known and representative business man is proprietor of the Kendrick warehouse system which has its headquarters in Kendrick. He is a business man of keen descrimination, and careful yet vigorous methods, and has achieved a success that is quite satisfactory and gratifying. Mr. Atchison was born in Jerseyville, Jersey county, Illinois, on January 15, 1866, being the son of Edward and Elvira (Blay) Atchison. He was reared on a farm until his parents died, which was while he was very young. From that time onward, he made his way in the world alone, working at what he could find to do and attending school in the winters while he worked for his board. At the age of sixteen, he quit school and went to Parsons, Kansas, where he railroaded for about eleven years, much of the time being section foreman in Burton, Kansas, and also yard foreman there, on the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad. He came west in 1892, landing in Kendrick, where he worked in the Farmers' warehouse one season and then went into business for himself, which he prosecuted for two years. Then he bought the Garfield storage and elevator plant at Garfield, Washington, and for four years he was operating that establishment. In 1899, Mr. Atchison came again to Kendrick and purchased an interest in the plant of the Kendrick warehouse with M. C. McGrew, and one year later bought the latter's interest, becoming sole owner of the system, which embraces a warehouse 54 by 140 in Kendrick, connected by a wire rope tramway of two thousand and eight hundred feet to a warehouse of 36 by 100 feet on the hill above Kendrick, one warehouse at Clyde spur 32 by 80 feet, and a hay warehouse 36 by 100 near the large warehouse in Kendrick. This system, Mr. Atchison manages, having a force of seven men and handling about one hundred and fifty thousand sacks of wheat each year in addition to hay and other grains. His business is increasing and he contemplates erecting other houses. His contrivance for handling the grain down the hill saves the farmers much heavy hauling. In addition to this business, Mr. Atchison manages a farm of two hundred and thirty acres of wheat land adjacent to Kendrick. He owns a fine residence in the eastern part of the city, also a residence and store building in Garfield.

N. M. HAWLEY.

Mr. Atchison was married in Burton, Kansas, in 1888, to Vesta Howerton, a native of Wisconsin, who is deceased, leaving two children, Edward and Vesta, at home. In 1896 Mr. Atchison again approached the sacred altar, this time leading as his bride, Miss Anna, daughter of Angus and Anna McCleod, the nuptials occurring in Kendrick. Mrs. Atchison's parents live on a farm in the vicinity of Kendrick. Fraternally, Mr. Atchison is a member of the I. O. O. F., Nez Perces Lodge, No. 37, and also of the encampment; and of the K. of P., Lodge No 31, of Garfield, Washington; and also of the W. of W., White Pine Camp No. 204; and of the Rebekahs in Kendrick.

NELSON HART. In at least two distinct lines of industry has Mr. Hart succeeded in this county and at the present time he owns a fine farm six miles northeast from Moscow, where he not only raises the fruit of the soil, handles stock, maintains a fine orchard, but also is operating a good placer mine, having taken from the ground three thousand dollars already and he has just begun the operation of mining. He is to be congratulaated on his good fortune in having these properties thus combined and he is a wise manager of his interests.

The birth of Mr. Hart occurred in Windsor, Nova Scotia, on July 19, 1840, being the son of William and Elizabeth Hart. The father was an old soldier in the British armies. At the age of fourteen he removed to Caribou, Maine, and there attended school, remaining there for twelve years. He enlisted in the Second United States Sharpshooters, afterwards being transferred to the Seventeenth, where he did valiant service in the Civil war, participating in all the battles of the Wilderness, and at the present time he is drawing a monthly pension of sixteen dollars for his labor and suffering in that awful struggle. In 1866 he went to Wisconsin, taking up lumbering and farming, and in 1876 came west, landing first in Tacoma. From that point he went to Walla Walla, Washington, and lumbered in the adjacent forests for two years and then came to Colfax, taking a homestead of one hundred and twenty acres, which he sold two years later and moved to Latah county, settling at Viola, in 1882. Thence he came to his present location in 1888, homesteaded twenty acres and bought eighty more and devoted himself to the improvement of his ranch.

In 1868 Mr. Hart married Miss Rosina Duel and to them were born Rosetta, Mary E., John N. and Cora E., all of whom are deceased. On January 1, 1877, death also claimed Mrs. Hart and the sorrowing husband laid to rest his noble and loving wife. On October 14, 1877, Mr. Hart contracted a second marriage, Jemima Meredith then becoming his bride. Her parents were James and Ann Meredith. To this second marriage there have been born, Kate E., James W. and Everard W. The first two are dead and the latter one is attending business college at Moscow, having been well educated in the public schools also. Mr. Hart believes in and practices the diversified plan of farming, handling also stock and hogs. He is very successful in all these lines of industry and manifests commendable wisdom in the manipulation of his business ventures. Mrs. Hart is a member of the Advent church.

Mr. Hart is now erecting a beautiful home which when completed will be both commodious and comfortable as well as of excellent architectural design.

GEORGE E. YOUNG. This well known business man whose activities have placed him in a leading position in the business world of Latah county, is a man of excellent ability and in his chosen line of lumber merchant and general transfer business in Kendrick, he has made a good success. George E. was born in Washington county, Iowa, on February 21, 1863, being the son of James N. and Martha J. (Cones) Young. The father was a leading man in his home place, being a representative to the state legislature from his county. He owned a large tract of land, but later sold it and went to Howard county, Kansas, where also he was called upon to represent his county in the state legislature, being elected on the Republican ticket. He was also county superintendent of schools for his county for a series of years, having then removed to Elk county. In Elk county he finally resided and there in 1897 he was summoned to the world beyond, the wife following in about one week. Our subject received his education in Elk county and remained with his father until he had attained his eighteenth year. His first venture was in farming and that he followed until he came to Latah county, the date of his migration being 1893. He also was numbered with the agriculturists here for a time, then devoted a year to carrying mail from Southwick to Kendrick, then prospected, labored in a warehouse, and then clerked in a store until he determined to start a business for himself, this being in 1896. He opened a dray and transfer business in a small way, soon increased, added the sale of lumber and building material, lime and coal, and now he handles the representative business in his line in the town, buying for this year's trade already nearly half a million feet of lumber. Mr. Young has a fine residence, which he erected, also a good farm of one-half section of land, part in Latah county and part in Nez Perces county. Fraternally, Mr. Young is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., Nez Perces Lodge, No. 37, at Kendrick. He was married in Elk county, Kansas, on February 28, 1889, Miss Annetta VanBuskirk becoming his bride at that time. The father of Mrs. Young is a carpenter and her mother is a native of Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Young has an adopted child, Grace Gaynell Young. Mr. Young has won for himself a success here that demonstrates his ability and keen discrimination and good practical judgment, and he stands in favor with all who know him.

JOHN ROBERTS. This capable and thrifty agriculturist and fruit raiser of Latah county lives about four miles west from Kendrick where he owns a fine estate of three hundred and sixty acres of fertile soil, which is farmed in a most excellent manner, and returns handsome dividends to its prosperous owner. Mr. Roberts was born in Macon county, Missouri, on November 15, 1848, being the son of Charles and Eliza A. Roberts. The father was a farmer and died when this son was eight years old. The mother then removed with her family to Shelby county, Iowa, settling near Harlan, and there our subject received his educational training, also studying some in Washington county, Kansas, whither he went with the family in his fifteenth year. In Kansas he worked at farming for three years then returned to Missouri for one year, after which time we find him again in Kansas, where three years more were spent. Then he took a trip to his old home in Iowa and worked there for two years. 1875 marks the year in which he came to the coast and he was engaged in the shingle trade for one year at Portland, then he purchased a steamboat and for one year he was occupied in steamboating on the Columbia. In 1878 he came to the territory now occupied by Latah county and settled on the place where the family home is today, which land he preempted, and since has added two hundred acres by purchase. He has the farm in a high state of cultivation and in addition to general farming he produces abundance of fine fruit. Twenty acres are devoted to the production of the leading fruits and his success in this line marks him as one of the leading fruit raisers of the county. In early days Mr. Roberts raised and handled many cattle and horses.

Mr. Roberts was married where Kendrick now stands, September 30, 1880, Miss Louisa, daughter of Benton and Hulda (Sweener) Hill, early settlers of this section, becoming his wife at that time. Five children have been born to this happy household, as follows: Henry, Elva, Harvy, Cora and Gertie, all at home and attending school.

JOHN S. CROCKER. No one about the town of Kendrick is better known than the subject of this sketch, he being a representative business man, having now retired from the more active business and handling his various properties in a capable manner, having gained a goodly competence from his keen discrimination and energy in his business course. Mr. Crocker was born in Butler county, near Butler, Pennsylvania, on March 26, 1848, being the son of William and Alice (Sprott) Crocker. The father was a farmer and passed away there but the mother is still living in the native place. There our subject received his education from the district schools and labored with his father until he had reached the age of majority when he went into the labors of life on his own account, farming there until 1878, when he sold out and went to Cass county, Missouri, purchasing a farm where he remained for sixteen years, in the vicinity of Harrisonville. It was in 1893 that he came to Latah county, and in Kendrick he soon purchased the two livery barns and operated them very successfully until recently, the fall of 1901, when he sold the stock and rented the buildings, retiring from the more active parts of business. Mr. Crocker handled many horses during the time he was in business, buying and selling numbers of them and also now he is dealing some in horses. He owns a blacksmith shop and considerable residence property in the town of Kendrick, all of which is rented and he is one of the prosperous and well to do men of the town.

In Centerville, Pennsylvania, he was married to Mariah L., daughter of Milton and Virginia (Seth) Cook, in 1869. Mrs. Crocker was a native of Pennsylvania and her father was a tailor in the town where she was married. To Mr. and Mrs. Crocker there have been born the following named children, Frank D., married to Jessie Lockins and a carriage maker; Fred D. living at Everett, Washington; Iva, in Spokane, Washington; George married to Trina Cragger and living in Everett, Washington; Lauren L., married to Jessie Steele, and living in Everett, Washington; Winona, at home: Earl, attending the Northwestern Business College in Spokane, Washington. Mr. Crocker is a man with much energy and possessed of fine executive ability, which is dominated with keen sagacity and has led the way in his successful business ventures and given him his goodly competence.

CHARLES E. RAY. The genial and hospitable gentleman whose name appears above is one of Latah county's prosperous and progressive farmers and stock raisers, having wrought here for many years and now owning one quarter section six and one-half miles northeast from Moscow, where he puts forth commendable effort in the production of the fruits of the soil and has the place well improved and one of the finest orchards in the county, which consists of ten acres set to the choicest varieties of all kinds of fruits that are indigenous to this section. Charles E. was born in Iowa, near Oskaloosa, on January 1, 1866, being the son of John M. and Jane M., farmers of that region, and both now living with this son. When Charles was an infant, the family removed to Belleville, Kansas, where they took up farming and stock raising. During their stay there occurred the great Indian raid of that country wherein much suffering was endured. In 1876 they crossed the plains to Portland. Four years were spent in that section and then another move was made to Walla Walla, Washington, whence after one year's farming there, they came to the Palouse country. The father sought out a place of government land and settled on the farm now owned by our subject. He filed a pre-emption and later relinquished it in favor of his son. This has been the family home since that time. In addition to handling the farm, Mr. Ray has paid considerable attention to mining in different localities of the state. He has operated around Florence, was in the Buffalo Hump excitement, and has done considerable work in the Moscow mountains, where he is busied at the present time. He has worked at the White Cross mine in this last vicinity, which is a promising property. Thus far in life Mr. Ray has decided to enjoy the pleasures of the celibatarian rather than gather the responsibilities of domesticity around him. He is a man of sound principles, dominated by wisdom and integrity and enjoys the esteem of all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

JACOB KAMBITCH. It now becomes our pleasant privilege to chronicle the career of the estimable and doughty pioneer named at the head of this article, and we feel assured that to no more worthy builder of Latah county and substantial citizen of the same at this time could there be given due recognition of merit and labors since it has been the lot of our subject to have always been faithful in labor, upright in walk of life, and patriotic and brave in the defense of his chosen country in time of danger, and he is now worthy of the place of prominence that he is accorded among his fellows and in the recognition of a grateful people.

Our subject was born in Hungary, Austria, on July 20, 1831, being the son of Mat and Mary Kambitch, who were natives of that country and lie buried there now. He was educated in his native place and at the age of twenty years entered the army, serving five years, then returned to his father's farm where he remained one year and then came to America, in 1857, settling in St. Louis where he drove team for four years. Then came the trying time of the Civil war and young Kambitch manifested the metal of which he was made by offering his services for the maintenance of the Union, by shedding blood if need be, being a volunteer in the Second Light Artillery under Captain Stanga, and three years and three months he served in the cause of freedom and good government to put down forever the menace of treason. Following this time, he was promoted to the rank of corporal and served until the close of 1864, when he was honorably discharged. He was in the battle of Pea Ridge, Little Rock, Blue Field, Greenville, besides several others. He was a gunner and received a slight wound in the hand. After the war he teamed until 1867, then went on a steamboat to Fort Benton and there operated as a freighter from that place to Helena, handling seven yoke of oxen and two wagons. On account of the hostilities of the Indians, he resigned this position and went prospecting. Later he started to Bitter Root valley and thence to Walla Walla and lost his way and finally brought up at Lewiston, having been three days without food. He received food from the hotel in that town and went to work threshing, having nine days of this labor, it being the entire season at that time. He worked at various occupations until he had secured a stake of two hundred dollars and then he sent for his family and took a claim and farmed for one and one-half years, selling the land at that time for seven hundred dollars.

In 1872 he took a homestead where he now lives, four miles northeast from Genesee, and built a house and settled down, and here he has been ever since that time engaged in tilling the soil, becoming one of the prominent men of the county. He has an estate of four hundred and eighty acres all tilled and well improved. He sells annually over ten thousand bushels of grain. For fifteen years, until the railroad came, he hauled all his grain to the river for shipment.

In 1865 Mr Kambitch was married to Miss Therisa, daughter of Simon Geiger, a native of Baden, Germany. The parents died in their native place and the daughter came to St. Louis in 1859, where also the wedding mentioned occurred. Eight children have been born to this worthy couple, six of whom, as follows, are living: Emma F., married to John Jacksha and living in this county; Anna, married to Frank Bruegemann, living in this county; Mary T., married to Joseph Shober and living in Cottonwood, Idaho; Joseph S., single and with his father; Louise M., single and with her parents; Clara C., married to John Hardeman and living in Latah county. Mr. Kambitch is a member of the G. A. R. of Genesee. He is a devout member of the Roman Catholic church as also are the members of his family. It is of note that in 1875 Mr. Kambitch lost twenty-eight head of cattle by freezing to death, the snow that year being five feet deep on the level.

MICHAEL C. NORMOYLE. One of the heaviest property holders and ablest business men of Latah county is named at the head of this article, and he is eminently deserving of mention in the volume that purports to chronicle the history of his county, both because of the excellent success that he has achieved and because of the intrinsic worth of his personality. Michael C. was born on September 8, 1853, in Troy, New York, being the son of John and Bessie (Clancy) Normoyle, natives of Ireland. They came to the United States in 1834, and the father worked at his trade of stone cutting in Troy, until he was aged forty-three, when he was called away by death. The mother died in October, 1899, being nearly four score years of age, and a devout member of the Catholic church. Six children were the offspring of this worthy couple and three are living.

Returning more particularly to the subject of this article, we find him at the early age of ten years operating as a bell boy in a leading hotel in Washington, D. C. He was educated in Denver, Colorado, working by day and studying in the night schools. This was continued until he was eighteen years old, when he went to Fairplay, Colorado, remaining until 1876.

Then he went to the Black Hills and returned in 1880, to take charge of the Lindell hotel in Denver, where he labored for five years, and was also proprietor of all the eating houses on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, five years being his allotted time in this capacity. Later he was in Palouse, Washington, and operated the St. Elmo hotel there. 1890 was the date of Mr. Normoyle's arrival in Kendrick. He erected the first hotel in the place, and for two years did a thriving business, and then the structure, being frame, burned to the ground, entailing a loss of fourteen thousand dollars. His enterprise was not to be thwarted and tor a time succeeding this catastrophe, Mr. Normoyle cared for his guests in tents. Men of means had confidence in our subject and advanced him money to erect the present St. Elmo hotel and St. Elmo block, the former being a fine two-story brick with excellent parlors, office, cuisine, and twenty-four sleeping apartments, while the latter is a two-story brick structure used as a double store below and as an opera house above. Mr. Normoyle is an experienced host and handles his business in a most commendable manner, having friends in all the traveling public as well as all who know him. He is also president of the Kendrick water works, the supply coming from springs on his farm, a one-hundred-and-forty-eight-acre tract adjoining town. He is also president of the Coeur d'Alene Inn Company, operating the Coeur d'Alene Inn at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

In 1872, at Denver, Colorado, Mr. Normoyle married Miss Mary Azra. One son came to gladden the happy union, and he is a member of the Montana legislature. Mr. Normoyle was called upon to mourn the death of his wife in 1885. In 1891 he married a second time, the lady of his choice being Arra Nichols and they have become the parents of two sons, George W. and Edwin M., and a daughter, Ruth. Fraternally Mr. Normoyle is affiliated with the Masons, Kendrick Lodge, No. 26, being past master and now secretary; also with the Eastern Star and the I. O. O. F. Politically he is one of the stanch old Jeffersonian Democrats. It is gratifying to have in our midst a business man of such capacity, vigor and sagacity and Kendrick is to be congratulated in that Mr. Normoyle is domiciled within her borders.

ARTHUR A. DOBSON has the reputation of being one of the mast progressive farmers and stockmen in the county of Latah, and sure it is that he has a fine body of land and does commendable work in these lines, while also it is interesting to note that he has led a life filled with adventure and energetic activity in various parts of the world, being what is termed by the English, a colonial, since he was born in Hobart, Tasmania island. His parents were Edwin and Caroline Dobson, the father being a magistrate in the native land. After seven years in attendance upon a private boarding school young Dobson at the age of thirteen scented adventure ahead and ran away from home and went to sea. He went to London, England, thence to New Zealand, north island, then returned to London. Soon out on another trip which took him to Port Chalmers, New Zealand, south island, he then returned to England and afterwards to Hong Kong, China, and again to England and out to Calcutta, thence to Wellington, north New Zealand, and thence finally to Portland, Oregon., Then he left the sea and went to work on a farm. Later he went to San Francisco, then returned to Oregon with a pack train, and had a pow wow with the Modocs whom he charged with stealing an animal, which they found for him later. And two weeks after this exciting time that fierce tribe were pouncing upon the defenseless natives in bloody war. From the Willamette valley he came to Grant county and took up stock raising, later he went to Couer d'Alene with a band of horses and afterward to Colfax and in August. 1881, he came to Latah county and at once devoted his energies to logging for Northrup & Moore. In 1891 he took a homestead six miles northeast from Moscow and on December 12, 1899, he purchased his present place four miles northeast from Moscow and there he has been living since that time. Mr. Dobson owns three hundred and sixty acres of desirable land and practices diversified farming but is gradually placing his land all to the different grasses and handling stock.

The marriage of Mr. Dobson and Miss Callie M., daughter of Sherman and Caroline Finch, of St. Paul, Minnesota, was solemnized on March 23, 1889. Mr. Finch was sheriff of Blue Earth county, Minnesota, and chief of police in Mankato, that county. Mrs. Dobson attended school at Carlton College, Northfield, Minnesota, having as classmate Miss May Haywood, the daughter of Mr. Haywood, the cashier of the bank, shot by the famous Younger brothers. Mr. Dobson is a member of the Elks, Moscow Lodge, No. 249, also of the W. of W. He and wife are members of the Episcopalian church. In political matters Mr. Dobson is active and always allied with the Republicans.

JOSEPH C. JOHNSTON. In the course of the development of Latah county, how much faithful labor has been performed by the agriculturists and stockmen, and the present commercial importance of this county in the state is largely due to these same wisely bestowed labors. Among those who have done this commendable work is to be mentioned J. C. Johnston, whose life's career it is now our pleasant task to outline in brief review. Joseph C. was born in Iowa, on May 27, 1849, being the son of Bryan and Delilah (Phillipps) Johnston. When he was four years of age, the family removed to St. Clair county, Missouri, later to Warren county, in the same state, and then about 1868, they removed back to Vernon county. Another migration was made, this time to Woodson county, Kansas, where our subject remained until 1882, engaged in the basic art of tilling the soil. At the date last mentioned, Mr. Johnston determined to try the west and accordingly came to Latah county and took as homestead his present fine farm of one hundred and twenty acres, which is three miles west from Troy. He has transformed the wildness of the face of the land into well tilled fields, has comfortable improvements, a good orchard and is one of the substantial and prosperous men of the community.

Mr. Johnston married Miss Martha A. Rodgers in Woodson county, Kansas, and they have become the parents of three children, William F., Charles F. and Estella M.

GEORGE W. P. HILL. Among the younger men who are making Latah county what she is today, a leader in the state, is the gentleman mentioned above. He is one of the band of enterprising agriturists who labor for the welfare of the county, the promotion of good schools and government, and the enhancing of his financial standing in a commendable manner and with wisdom and vigor. George W. was born in Nevada City, California, on May 8, 1867, being the son of H. D. and Martha (Price) Hill. The father was a carpenter and our subject was about the country considerably with him until the date when he migrated to this county, 1885. He was with his mother, who took a pre-emption for two years and then farmed around Juliaetta for four years, after which he was similarly engaged in Whitman county for one season, and then he made settlement where we find him at the present time, one mile south from Cornwall. He has there a good farm of one hundred and sixty acres improved in a good manner, and a fine orchard of three hundred and sixty choice varieties of fruit. In addition to general farming, Mr. Hill raises stock and he is one of the prosperous men of the community. Fraternally, Mr. Hill is a member of the M. W. A., Cornwall Lodge, No. 9645. In this capacity Mr. Hill is a popular associate, and he is an affable and genial gentleman and a skillful husbandman.

The marriage of Mr. Hill and Miss Martha, daughter of J. R. and Adella Dunham, was celebrated near Cornwall, on April 8, 1894, and to them have been born the following children: Walter, Blanche and Glen.

HENRY FLOMER. As many of the substantial and leading citizens of the United States, the subject of this sketch came hither from Germany, being born in Driftsethe, Hanover province, on December 22, 1867, the son of John F. and Meta (Spering) Flomer. The father is still living in the native country, but the mother died there. Our subject was educated in his native village and at the age of eleven began to work out for the farmers of his vicinity and this continued until he was sixteen, at which time he bade farewell to the fatherland, to home and relatives and embarked for New York. Landing there in good time, he engaged in a grocery store, where he clerked for four and one-half years. At the expiration of that interval he bought an interest in the store with his brother and for one year operated the establishment, then sold out and came hence to Latah county, landing here in 1889. He immediately engaged in labor for the farmers, continuing it for three years, then bought his present place, two miles west from Genesee. He bought one hundred and twenty at first and later added forty more, giving him a full quarter at the present time. Mr. Flomer has manifested great industry, skill and wisdom in the management of his estate, having it well tilled and improved with excellent buildings, as residence, barns and outbuildings, having also a good orchard and a general air of thrift pervades the entire premises, manifesting the untiring care and enterprise of the proprietor. Mr. Flomer has a number of head of stock and is one of the most prosperous farmers in his vicinity.

In 1895 occurred the marriage of Mr. Flomer and Miss Eliza T., daughter of Louis and Sophie (Bortels) Oldag, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1869, locating in Chicago and later coming to Latah county, where they reside at the present time. To our subject and his estimable wife there have been born three children, Clarence L., Carl H. and William D. Mr. and Mrs. Flomer are members of the Lutheran church and Mr. Flomer also affiliates with the M. W. A. He is a man of enterprise, fine capabilities, and is highly esteemed in all his relations among his fellow men.

JOHN D. JOHNSTON. Two miles west from the thriving town of Vollmer we find the home and fine farm of Mr. J. D. Johnston, one of the leading men of the community. His farm is of the generous proportion of two hundred and forty acres, one hundred and sixty acres of which he took from the raw sod as a homestead, and added eighty more by purchase. He has transformed it to its present high state of cultivation by his industry and skill, building one of the fine homes of the county. John D. was born in St. Clair county, Missouri, on October 27, 1861, being the son of Bryan and Delilah (Philipps) Johnston. The father was a farmer, and when this son was nine years of age the family removed to Woodson county, Kansas, where the succeeding nine years were spent. Another move was made at this time, the objective point being the vicinity of Central City, Colorado, where the time was largely spent in mining for three years. He then returned to Kansas, and then made the trip in 1883 to Idaho, locating his present farm. He at once set himself to make a fine home, which he has accomplished in a becoming manner, and in addition to handling the work of this fine estate Mr. Johnston has also done much carpenter work in different portions of the county, having learned the trade in younger years. He erected with his own hands his residence, and much is in evidence of his handiwork in the craft on the farm. Mr. Johnston has always manifested a lively interest in the affairs of the county and especially in educational work, which has profited much by his service as trustee of his district for many years.

One of the happy and important events of Mr. Johnston's life occurred on April 7, 1889, when he led to the altar Miss Volumnia, daughter of Thomas and Leannah (Julian) Woody. Three children have made their advent to the happy household, namely: Clarence E., Ethel E. and Leannah M. Mrs. Johnston is a native of Iowa, and Mr. Johnston has the distiction of being related to Daniel Boone, the famous Kentucky frontiersman.

EZRA L. COLE is one of the prominent men of Latah county, especially active in the industrial world. He is a manufacturer of lumber and timber products, having at this time a saw mill located five miles northeast from Moscow, where he has a good plant and three fourths of a section of timber land and some farm property.

The birth of Ezra L. was on June 17, 1860, in New York, near Rome, his parents being Gideon and Ann Cole, the father being occupied in saw mill work. The family removed from Rome to Nebraska in 1871, settling twenty-five miles south from Yankton, near the town of Hartington, Nebraska, and there the father took a homestead and remained for twenty years. Then a trip was made to the west, our subject landing in Spokane, after which he went to Loon Lake and spent one year. Then came his advent to Moscow where he worked for some years and then bought his present place, it being one quarter, to which he added a half section since. Mr. Cole has an excellent run of business and has a fine plant, supplying the country adjacent with manufactured timber products.

The marriage of Mr. Cole and Miss Anna R., daughter of William D. and Ellen Burch, was solemnized in St. Helena, Nebraska, in February, 1883. To this happy union there have been born the following children: Claude B., Grace E., Violet M., the second one attending school in Moscow. Mr. Cole is a member of the W. of W. and he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Cole is not desirous of personal preferment in the political world and while he takes the interest that every intelligent citizen should, still he does not count himself a leader in this realm. He has a fine home, it being a residence of nine rooms and excellently appointed.

GEORGE SIEVERS. Although not one of the pioneer settlers of Latah county, still the subject is a pioneer in the realm of progress, being one of the intelligent and enterprising agriculturists and stockmen of the county, and displaying the skill and sound judgment, of which he is so happily possessed, in the affairs of his business. He was born in Wisconsin, on November 20, 1870, being the son of Clauss and Margaretha Sievers. The father was an old soldier of the Civil war and a participant in the battle of Chattanooga, and also marched to the sea, being in all the campaigns from Louisville, Kentucky, to Goldsboro, North Carolina. Our subject remained at the place of his nativity for eighteen years attending school, both the public and also at the Oshkosh normal, then a season at the Valparaiso Normal in Indiana, then spent two years teaching at Cedarsburg and four at Meggers. He also took up law at that place, but on account of his health breaking down he was obliged to forego the pleasure of further pursuit of his chosen studies. In the summer of 1895 he traveled through the north central states, visiting Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and South Dakota. In 1897 he determined to try the west and accordingly came to Moscow. He soon went to Kendrick and taught school for a term and then bought in the spring of 1898, his present place, three miles east from Moscow, where he devotes himself to the art of agriculture, being much benefited in health by the bracing atmosphere and salubrious and mild climate of this region. Mr. Sievers pracitces the diversified plan of farming and has had abundant success and now contemplates putting out a large orchard. He owns a quarter section and has it finely improved.

In the beginning of 1898 Mr. Sievers returned to Wisconsin to claim the bride that was awaiting his coming out of the west, and on February 22, 1898, he was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Miss Agnes Luedke, at Kiel, Wisconsin. Mrs. Sievers' parents are Henry and Gustine Luedke, the father being a carpenter and farmer. To our subject and his estimable wife there has been born one child, Edna, three years of age. Mr. Sievers is a member of the school board and has served as justice of the peace. He is actively interested in educational matters and also in the improvement and progress of the county and does a goodly share towards this praiseworthy end.

HERMAN W. MALLERY. The subject of this article is one of Latah county's stalwart and enterprising farmers, being a man of energy and ability, and having a fine home farm place four miles east from Moscow, where he does commendable work in the line of general agriculture and raising stock. Herman W. was born in Monterey, Allegan county, Michigan, on August 13, 1859, and his parents were Andrew J. and Amanda Mallery. The father was a blacksmith and an active participant in political affairs. He died when our subject was seventeen years of age. Herman then remained at home until his twenty-fifth year came, learning and working at the blacksmith trade and supporting the family. He wrought still three years after that time at the trade and then turned his eyes to the west and came hither over the Northern Pacific, landing in Spokane on March 4, 1887, and from there came to Moscow. He looked over the country and finally located on his present place, four miles east from Moscow, taking it as a pre-emption. He has devoted himself to the culture of the farm and development of the same, having it now well improved and a fine home place.

The marriage of Mr. Mallery and Miss Clara E. Casson was solemnized on November 27, 1885, at Wayland, Michigan. Her father, Edward Casson, was a plasterer and brick mason in the home state. The mother was Mrs. Amelia Casson. There have been born to our subject and his wife the following children: William A., Zelma, and Perry E., all at home.

Mr. Mallery is a member of the A. O. U. W. and takes an active part in the political affairs of the county and state and manifests an intelligent interest in the welfare of his country. In many minor offices he has done excellent service, using the same care and concern in the discharge of these duties as those of his own business. In school matters Mr. Mallery has evinced a great interest and the district has profited much by his labors on the board for twelve years and more. He is highly esteemed by all and enjoys the confidence of his fellows.

CHRIST BURGER. The gentleman whose name heads this sketch stands as one of the pioneers of Latah county, and as one of the leading farmers of today, having labored faithfully here in the cause of advancement and progression and development wherein he has had remarkable success owing to his industry and sagacity, being also a man dominated by true wisdom and sound principles of integrity and uprightness. He was born in Germany, Thierstein, on March 9, 1836, being the son of Lawrence and Anna (Bergmann) Burger, also natives of Germany, and who now sleep in the old home cemetery, the father dying in 1860 and the mother in 1858. Our subject was educated in the village schools, including a course in the high school, until he was fourteen and then he learned the butcher trade, taking two years and one-half in steady work at it. He then, as was the custom with the German youth, took a trip abroad, making his way for a time in the world apart from home influences, and then returning home, the father relieved him from going into the army, and he labored for him and the surrounding farmers until he was thirty years of age. At that time he embarked for America, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, being the objective point. He went into the butcher business with his brothers and there operated for two years, then sold out and travelled from place to place, and finally in 1877, came to California and there earned at his trade about seven hundred dollars. Then he went to Portland, where he fell in with a man wishing to start the butcher business, and went into partnership with him. Our subject had not learned the English language at that time and his partner took advantage of him and gained the entire capital, and Mr. Burger was forced out with nothing. He then came to Waitsburg, Washington, and there worked at the butcher business for one year and in 1879, came thence to Latah county, locating a preemption of one quarter section, then a homestead of fifty acres. This he has transformed into a fine farm and a good family home, the estate being situated seven miles west from Genesee. He has good land, well improved and it produces fine crops.

The marriage of Mr. Burger and Miss Bertha, daughter of Henry and Amelia (Nosa) Burgwitz, natives of Germany, was celebrated in 1877 and they have become the parents of the following children: Emma M., married to L. F. Boyer and living in California; Ottelea L., married to Eugene Boyer and living in California; Henry, William G., Ludvig J., Clara G., and Malinda E. Mr. and Mrs. Burger are members of the Lutheran church and are highly respected citizens of the county, being capable and substantial.

HOMER E. BURR. Our subject lives four and one-half miles northeast from Moscow on a fine farm, which he took from the wilds of nature by the homestead right and has made into one of the most fertile and productive farms of the section, having it well improved and an exceptionally fine orchard on it, selling from the same last year five tons of bartlet pears. It is evident that Mr. Burr is one of the leading agriculturists and orchardists of the county and is also one of its most substantial men, skillful, sagacious and dominated by sound principles and an unswerving integrity. He was born in Clarke county, Iowa, on October 14, 1857, being the son of Alvin and Nancy Burr. The father was a saw mill man and stock raiser and died when Homer E. was seven years old. From that time until he was twenty, our subject remained with his mother and assisted in the support of the family. While he was an infant, the family had removed to Knox county, Missouri, whence in 1872, they went to Chautauqua county, Kansas, taking government land. In 1877 young Burr determined to seek his fortune and accordingly allied himself with a neighbor and drove a team overland to this country, getting here at the time of the Nez Perces Indian war, but being unmolested enroute. Two years were spent in a sawmill and then Mr. Burr took up his present home as a homestead. He built a log cabin thereon and enjoyed the life of a bachelor during the time he was endeavoring to improve the place. He saw the advisability of having a competent helpmate in his life of toil and so sought the hand of Miss Ann, daughter of William and Lucinda (Warmoth) Frazier in marriage and on November 20 the happy ceremony was solemnized, and since that time they have wrought together with great joy and success in the lines of their labors. Mr. Burr has bought and sold many pieces of land in the time he has lived here but still owns the old homestead.

This estimable couple have become the parents of the following children: Ella, wife of Sherman Towne of this county; Alvin, Audrey, Edwin A., Carl V., Amos B. and Leland C. In church and political relations, Mr. Burr is not particularly allied, being a man of independent thought and searching out for himself the various problems of existence. He is a disciple of diversified farming and shows forth great skill in producing practical proofs of this line, as well as in the orchardist's line, having made some commendable showings in that realm. Mr. Burr is a member of the W. W.

JAMES A. WOLFENBERGER. The capable and enterprising agriculturist whose name is at the head of this article is one of Latah county's substantial citizens, and a man of integrity and uprightness, which qualities have characterized him in all his ways. James is a native of Tennessee, benig born in Granger county, on January 26, 1840, and the son of Peter and Lucinda, the latter having died in 1861. The father was also a native of the same state and remained there until 1882, when he came to this county, homesteading the place where he and his son now live, two miles east from Troy. He first preempted the land and later used the homestead right. He is now ninety years of age, having been favored with a long life and much blessing. Our subject remained at home with his parents until the time of the Civil war, when he enlisted in the Second Tennessee Cavalry, the year being 1862. He participated in many skirmishes, but in no heavy battle except Chickamauga, yet he was in constant military duty until 1865, when he was discharged and returned to his home. He remained with his father on the farm until 1882, the date of the immigration to these sections. He took a quarter section adjoining his father's and then sold it in 1890. The home farm is well improved, has a fine orchard and is productive of abundant crops. They also own another quarter two miles south from the home place.

In 1883, at Cornwall, occurred the happy event of the marriage of Mr. James A. Wolfenberger and Miss Sarah E., daughter of John and Rebecca Branson, and the union has been blessed by the advent of two children, Hattie R. and Peter L. Mrs. Wolfenberger's father is dead but the mother is still living. Mr. Wolfenberger is a man of industry, and patient endeavor, which have given him a goodly portion of the property of the world, while he has always manifested those qualities of uprightness and sound principles that have given him the meed of the confidence of his fellows.

MOSES VANDEVANTER. The subject of this article is at the present time one of the business men of Cornwall, where he operates a general merchandise store, being a substantial and highly respected citizen of that town and a capable business man. Moses was born on May 28, 1801, in Guthrie county, Iowa, being the son of Israel and Rachel (Moore) Vandevanter. He remained with his father until twenty-two years had passed, gaining a good education at the country schools and sound principles of business operation from a wise father. At twenty-two years of age, Mr. Vandevanter came west and selected Union county, Oregon, as the place for his operations, engaging there in the vicinity of the town of Union in the manufacture of lumber with his brother, where he continued until 1890, when he came to this county and took up farming. Later he left that occupation and opened a general merchandise store in Cornwall and in that place he has done business since. He carries a good stock of well selected merchandise, and his kind and courteous treatment of his patrons has increased his trade to goodly proportions and he is building up a fine business.

Fraternally, Mr. Vandevanter is associated with the M. W. A., Camp No. 9645 at Cornwall; also with the Mox Mox Tribe of Redmen in Moscow; with the Mystic Workers of the World, Lodge No. 281 of Cornwall, and in all of these relations Mr. Vandevanter is highly esteemed and well liked. He has never ventured onto the sea of matrimony, being in the quiet enjoyment of the celibatarian's life.

GEORGE W. WALKER. Among the very leaders in enterprising and progressive labors in the county, having done especially good work in the line of horticulture and in the instructor's chair, the subject of this brief article is eminently fitted to be accorded consideration in the history of his county, and it is with pleasure that we grant him such. George W. was born in Dearborn county, Indiana, on September 23, 1855, being the son of Alexander and Elizabeth Walker. He was well educated in the public schools then attended Moore's Hill College for one year, then at the age of twenty went to Butler county, Kansas, near Eldorado and commenced his career as school teacher. Three years and one-half were spent thus and also in attending school at Eldorado, Augusta, Douglas, and Winfield schools, after which he returned to his native place, teaching there one year. Then he went to Grinnell, Iowa, and there attended Newton school in 1880, also teaching some. He was at Grinnell during the memorable time when the cyclone tore things to pieces. In 1883 Mr. Walker went to Kansas, purchased a quarter section near Kingman, taught one term there and then returned to his native place to take to himself the wife of his choice, the lady being Miss Estelle, daughter of a prominent Baptist minister there, and a school mate of our subject, her parents being Allen A. and Sarah Anthony. Together they returned to the Kansas home and there wrought with faithfulness until an attack of asthma, in 1888, permanently threatened the health of Mrs. Walker and they sold out and came to Latah county, where happily occurred the entire recovery from this painful malady. They landed in Moscow on October 18, 1888, and soon bought a quarter section on Big Bear ridge and homesteaded another, the same being thirty miles east from Moscow. He remained on the farm eleven years engaged in horticulture, apple raising, and general farming, besides teaching school. His place is improved in splendid shape and is one of the most productive in the country. In June, 1899, they sold some of their property there and came to their present place, two and one-half miles northeast from Moscow which he bought and where he has made a home since. Mr. Walker has made a special study of fruit raising and he intends to put out twenty-four acres of apples in the spring, using Gano and Roman Beauty varieties, believing these the best for this section.

Three children have been born to this worthy couple, as follows: Ray A., educated at the state university, is now the possessor of a county certificate good for three years, and is teaching school; Edna S., attending school at Moscow; Glen S., going to school. Mr. Walker came to his present place to educate his children. He and his wife are members of the Methodist church and are active workers in this realm, he having been converted at the age of twenty. He is a stanch supporter of this faith. Mr. Walker was a settler on Big Bear ridge before Kendrick was started and had to come all the way to Moscow to do trading.

WILLIAM A. BUCHANAN. This gentleman is one of the well known and representative business men of Latah county and at the present time has the mammoth warehouse at Joel where he does a good business storing wheat for the farmers of the vicinity, while also he has a comfortable residence there. William A. Buchanan was born in Lee county, Iowa, on August 5, 1863, being the son of William H. and Phoebe (Short) Buchanan. His people removed to Newton county, Missouri, when our subject was a small boy, remaining there until he had reached the age of eight. At that time they removed to Oregon, settling east of Portland, where the family remained nine years. The father followed farming and after the residence at Portland, as mentioned above, he removed with the family to the Potlatch country and took a homestead, remaining there until the time of his death in 1886. Our subject operated the place at home for a number of years and then took a homestead in the same vicinity in 1889, remaining there for four years, and then he was appointed postmaster at Cornwall which he held for two years. Subsequent to that time he went to Moscow where he staid until the spring of 1898, being occupied in the grain warehouses. In 1898 he came to Joel and built the warehouse mentioned above. It is two hundred and seventy-six feet long and forty feet wide and is patronized in a generous measure. Mr. Buchanan is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 9645, at Cornwall. Socially he is highly esteemed and is an affable and amiable gentleman of worth and culture.

The marriage of Mr. Buchanan and Miss Lettie Alderman was solemnized on July 4, 1887, at Moscow, and they have become the parents of one child, Otis. Mrs. Buchanan's parents are E. W. and Joanna (Ellis) Alderman and her father has been a farmer for years in Idaho and at the present time is living on the reservation in Nez Perces county. Mr. Buchanan has displayed in the time of his residence in this county an ability and energy and uprightness that commend him to the confidence, good will and respect of all.

GEORGE W. HADLEY. Among the farmers of Latah county, there should not be failure to menton the capable gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, and who, although having been within the precincts of Latah county but a short time, still has so identified himself with the interests of it that he is one of its substantial and enterprising citizens. George W. was born in Michigan, on March 8, 1848, being the son of Joseph and Julia (William) Hadley, natives respectively of England and Wales, who came to America in 1848, locating first in New York as farmers. They came west to Colorado in 1862, and thence in 1866, across the plains to Walla Walla, where the father identified himself with the agricultural population until the time of his death, which occurred in 1899. The mother died in 1879, and they both are buried in the Protestant cemetery in Walla Walla. Our subject received his first schooling in Denver, Colorado, being eighteen years of age when he started, and then in Walla Walla he also attended school some. He worked on the farms in the west until 1883, having come overland with his parents, then he bought a farm near Walla Walla for himself, raising wheat there until 1896, when he sold and came to Whitman county and from there to Latah county in 1901. Here he rented six hundred acres, seven miles west from Genesee and the first season he raised eight thousand bushels of wheat from two hundred acres of land. Mr. Hadley has twenty-seven head of horses and thirty-four cows and is well provided with all accoutrements to carry on the large estate that he handles.

In 1883 occurred the marriage of Mr. Hadley and Miss Anna, daughter of Robert and Jane (Scobil) Mathews; the mother died in 1873, but the father still lives in Lake county, California. Seven children have been the fruit of this happy union, as follows: Margaret J., married to J. P. Tady, living in Whitman county, Washington; Frederick W., married to Annie Klein, living near Uniontown, Washington; Emma, wife of D. C. Trimmer, living near Uniontown; Dora, Fay, George W., and Arthur. Mr. Hadley is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 90, in Uniontown, and Mrs. Hadley affiliates with the Rebekahs, Lodge No. 100, in Uniontown. They are both members also of the Methodist church and are good citizens, faithful and dominated by sound principles and sagacity and integrity.

HON. DANIEL W. DRISKEL. This well known and representative stockman and agriculturist is one of the substantial men of Latah county and has wrought here with manifestation of ability and enterprise. His farm is located three miles northeast from Moscow and is handled in a commendable manner. He was born in Porter township, Cass county, Michigan, to Dennis and Mary Driskel, early settlers of the state. He remained on the farm with his parents until he was of age, attending the public schools, completing his education in the Constantine high school. At the age of twenty-four, in 1874, he bought a farm in the home neighborhood, tilling the soil there until 1883. Then he went to Monmouth, Oregon, purchased a farm and tilled the same and raised stock. He was overtaken with much misfortune here and the sad event of the death of his wife also occurred while he was there. In the fall of 1888, he sold the farm and came to Latah county, purchasing the farm where he now lives, three miles northeast from Moscow.

The marriage of Mr. Driskel and Miss Nellie, daughter of Zachariah and Lucretia Denio, was solemnized on April 8, 1875, and two children were born to them; Fannie, wife of T. J. Taylor of Salmon, Idaho; Zach D., graduate of the high school and now assisting his father on the farm. On October 18, 1887, Mr. Driskel contracted a second marriage, the lady of his choice on this occasion being Emma N. Nelms, and the nuptials occurred at Farmington, Washington. Mrs. Driskel's parents are, Henry P., a minister of the Methodist church and a farmer, and Sarah A. Mr. Driskel is a Republican and an enthusiastic worker in the realm. In 1900 he was nominated for the state legislature and was elected by a handsome majority. But on account of his party being in the minority in the house, he was unable to do much legislation, although he was instrumental in assisting to gain an appropriation for the state university which enabled them to erect a girl's dormitory and the hall of science. Also, Mr. Driskel assisted to gain the passage of the bill providing for the property road tax which has been very beneficial to the country. Mr. and Mrs. Driskel are members of the Christian church and he holds the position of elder in the Moscow congregation. He has also been clerk of the school board for a number of years. Mr. Driskel is a firm believer in the diversified plan of farming and proves its value in practical work. He has improved his farm in a fine manner, has a commodious barn, good out buildings, and a fine residence. In the fall of 1901, he went to Michigan, called thither by the death of his father. He settled the estate and brought his aged mother home with him, where she lives at the present time. Mr. Driskel is one of the capable and progressive business men and has the esteem of all.

CHARLES HOBART. This gentleman is justly entitled to consideration in the history of Latah county since he assisted to open this country for settlement, has labored faithfully for its progress since that date, and has been a prominent citizen of the county, being a man of capabilities and integrity. Mr. Hobart was born in Licking county, Ohio, on November 17, 1845, being the son of Jonathan and Charlotte Hobart, who brought their young children to Iowa when he was ten years of age, settling in Fayette county. In that section our subject remained, acquiring an education, also gaining good exercise on the farm, until 1861, when he enlisted in Company C, Ninth Iowa Infantry and at once took part in the Civil war. He was with Curtis in the Arkansas campaign and participated in the battle of Pea Ridge, where he was wounded. He was at the siege of Vicksburg, also at Jackson, then in the battle of Chattanooga. When his time was completed he returned to Iowa and at once reenlisted in the same company and regiment and went to the sea with Sherman and remained with him until the close of the entire conflict. Returning to Iowa he farmed in Fayette county for about ten years, then went to Adair county, near Creston and farmed and raised stock for four years. Then he removed to northwestern Kansas and remained there until 1882, when the journey was made to Idaho. Arriving here, he selected a farm four miles east from Moscow and there settled to work, producing the fruits of the field and raising stock. Eighteen years were spent in this work, and then Mr. Hobart removed to his present place, seven miles east from Moscow. This farm has two hundred acres and is well improved. In addition to this labor, he has operated a threshing outfit for nineteen years, having had success in this line as in his other labors.

On January 27, 1868, in Macomb, Illinois, Mr. Hobart married Miss Lavina, daughter of James and Elizabeth Lenington, and the following children have been born to them; James L., married to Elizabeth Decker in Nezperce; Edwin, married to Adella Denny also in Nezperce; Jacob I., married to Elvira Dollarhide and living in this county; Leona, wife of Francis Hill, in Nezperce; Clifton, at home; Nellie, wife of John K. Bruce. Mr. Hobart is one of the esteemed citizens of the county, has an enviable standing and receives the confidence of all.

THOMAS A. SMITH. One of Latah county's prosperous and enterprising farmers is mentioned above and it is with pleasure that we are enabled to grant him a representation in the county history since he has wrought with the true spirit of progress and energy that have made these vast regions the abode of civilization. He was born in the grand old country of England, in Leicester county, on March 8, 1836, being the son of Thomas and Ann Smith, the father being a farmer, baker and brewer. Thomas A. was an inmate of the parental household until the time of his majority came and then he started for himself, coming direct to the new world. He accompanied a neighbor and family, and it was their lot to land the day the famous battle of Bull Run was fought. From New York, he went to Illinois, and engaged in farming, but soon removed to Oceana county, Michigan, and farmed there for seventeen years. In that time he cleared one hundred acres of land from heavy timber and set it to orchard and produced the fruits of the soil. He then sold this property and came to Chicago and started a meat market. During the years in which he operated that, the great Chicago fire occurred, but he did not suffer from that conflagration. Soon after this event, in fact his ceritficate of marriage was the second recorded after the fire, Mr. Smith married Ann, daughter of William and Mary Johnstone, on October 12, 1871. Soon after this important event, they decided to come west and so took passage over the Union Pacific railroad to Washington, coming via Sacramento. Twenty-one days later, they landed in Lamota, and came thence direct to Whitman county. Mr. Smith bought a farm near the Idaho line in the year 1887, and in 1890 he added another quarter section just across the line into Idaho, where he removed, renting the former land. Since that time, Mr. Smith has made Latah county his home and expresses a desire to pass the remainder of his days within its precincts. Mr. Smith has a very productive farm and in addition to the abundant crops of wheat, oats, and barley, he markets a great deal of fruit and vegetables. Mr. Smith is never forward in the political arena, being disposed to quietly pass his time in the prosecution of his private industries. He and his estimable wife are members of the Church of England and regular attendants in Moscow.

SAMUEL H. TRITT. The subject of this article was born in Newville, Pennsylvania, on February 14, 1852, to Samuel and Julia A. Tritt. He received his education in the native place and was reared on the old homestead, where the father died when this son had reached the age of majority. This sad event transferred the responsibility of the control of home affairs upon Samuel for two years, when death claimed the mother also. The farm was then disposed of and the orphaned children were scattered. In the spring of 1876, Samuel H. came to Michigan and worked for his brother-in-law in a flour mill for two years, then went to Kansas, bought a quarter section near Russell, farmed it for two years, then sold out and went to Manhattan, Kansas, taking up the stock business. In 1883 he went to Ellis county, took government land and farmed for seven years, proving up on his land in the meantime. Selling out, he returned to Manhattan and two years later was determined to see the west and accordingly chartered a car, filled it with household goods, several head of extra fine Jersey cows, a team, and some farm implements and came direct to Latah county. He settled on eighty acres on American ridge, but sold it in one year later and took charge of the poor farm for three and one-half years. After that period he bought the farm where he lives now, four miles northwest from Moscow, it being a wild piece of land at that time. He has manifested great industry, wise management, and skill in the care of this land and has transformed it into one of the best farms in the county. He has fine buildings, as residence, out buildings, barns and so forth, while he has abundant returns from the crops each year. His herds are made up of excellent Jerseys and he does some skillful work in handling the different grasses as brome-grass, timothy, red clover, and so forth. He sold the seed of one and one-half acres of the first crop of brome-grass for thirty dollars, reserving the hay for himself.

Mr. Tritt has a very able assistant and sympathetic associate in his progressive farm work, in his wife, Catherine C. (Juvenal) Tritt, to whom he was united in marriage on June 3, 1880, at Russell, Kansas. The fruit of this marriage is Grace P., married to Lewis Kitley and residing in Moscow; Ladessa E., Erma H., and George G. Fay P., the fourth child, died in May, 1901. Mrs. Tritt is the daughter of J. C. and Martha Juvenal, of Russell, Kansas. The father was a successful stockman, handling immense herds of cattle from Texas to the interior states, which was a very profitable business. He was also a large owner of Kansas realty. Mr. and Mrs. Tritt are valuable additions to the residents of Latah county, and have done excellent work in the development of the resources of the county and in augmenting its wealth.

CANUD MADISON. It is pleasant to have the opportunity to speak, though necessarily in brief, of the career of the esteemed gentleman and loyal citizen, whose name initiates this paragraph, since he has been faithful in labor, wise in business, kind and considerate as father and husband, and loyal and patriotic in the defense of his chosen county. From no spot on the earth come more loyal souls than from the far-away land of Norway, in Bergen district of which country our subject was born on April 28, 1833, being the son of Mathias and Susan Madison. For seventeen years, the youth remained under the parental roof, and then bade good bye to home, relatives and native land, and embarked for America. He settled in Leland county, Illinois, and straightway learned the carpenter trade and began the good labor of upbuilding. He continued at that for a number of years where he lived and then offered his services in Company D, Fifty-third Illinois Infantry in 1861. He was in the western army and did much hard fighting. He was in the battle of Shiloh, at Tallahassee, participated in the siege of Vicksburg, then on to Atlanta. Being taken a prisoner, he was thrown into the horrors of Andersonville, and for six months languished in that vilest of modern dens of suffering. Then being paroled, he again joined his command, was wounded at the battle of Jackson, being shot through the thigh, was sent to Illinois on a furlough in 1864, then went to St. Louis where he was discharged. Such in brief is the praisworthy military record of this patriotic veteran and all honor be given to those who bore the flag, undimmed in its pristine glory, through those long years of internecine strife. Immediately following his discharge, young Madison returned to Leland, Illinois, and in 1868 came to Vermillion, Dakota, and there took a preemption and homestead and gave his attention to farming for eight years. Then came the long removal to Portland, Oregon, where one year was spent at the carpenter trade, then we find our subject making his way into the regions of Latah county. He took up a timber claim seven miles southeast from where Moscow is now and bought another quarter and settled down to farming and he has steadily pursued this faithfully until of recent years he has retired from the activities of the field to enjoy the hard earned competence with which he is blessed.

Mr. Madison married Miss Ellen Iverson, in 1866, at Leland, Illinois, and they have become the parents of the following children: Benjamin O., at home; Ulyses W., at home; Franklin F., married to Adelia Palmer; Sarah, wife of A. Bow; Stella, wife of C.

Symonson; Etta, wife of M. Madison; Clara, wife of E. Anderson; Frances, wife of J. Geer; Ellen, Ollie, and Eleda, the last three at home. Mr. Madison is a member of the Major Anderson Post, No. 5, of the G. A. R. at Moscow. He is a man who has the confidence of his fellows and is looked up to and greatly respected in the community.

CHARLEY EBEL. Five miles northwest from Genesee, we find the well kept farm of Mr. Ebel. It consists of two hundred broad and fertile acres, and is adorned and embellished with a good residence, barn, outbuildings and other improvements of a permanent and valuable character, and produces annually a handsome return to the careful husbandry of the proprietor, who is a man of ability, energy and enterprise, being well known and highly esteemed for his substantial qualities. Mr. Ebel was born in Germany, April 19, 1839, being the son of Christopher and Sophia (Quetso) Ebel, natives also of the Fatherland. The father was born there in 1797, and died in 1874, the mother dying when she was young, and both are buried in Mackelbesh. Charley was educated in the village schools of his native place and at the age of fourteen years left the school house to participate in the labors of his father's farm, continuing thus until he had reached his majority. Then he repaired to Berlin, Germany, and learned the brewer's trade, laboring for twelve years steadily at it, when he started a retail liquor store which he operated for four years. 1876 marks the time of his advent to America. He landed in New York and soon hired on board of ship to go to Savanah, Georgia, where he was occupied in fishing for two years. After this period, he came to the territory now embraced in Latah county, and he preempted a quarter section where he now lives and soon added forty more by the timber culture right. He settled down to improve his land in a becoming manner, building good house, barns and other necessary improvements and since that time until the present he has steadily pursued his way and has prospered in his labors.

In 1871 occurred the marriage of Mr. Ebel and Miss Francisco, daughter of Gearhard and Adelheid (Kreabich) Wilhelm, natives of Potsdam, Germany, where the father lies buried now, the mother being interred in Belgium. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ebel, namely: Charles F., married to Freda Mathonse, living in Latah county; George, living with parents; Max, married to May More, living in Ritzville, Washington. Mrs. Ebel is a member of the Catholic church.

NIELS MADSEN. This intelligent and capable agriculturist is one of Latah county's progressive citizens who has done a goodly portion toward the development of the county, having a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres, seven and one-half miles southeast from Moscow, and also another quarter of good farm land near by. Mr. Madsen was born in Denmark, on July 22, 1852, being the son of Mads and Johana Madsen, where he lived until 1871, at which time he bade homeland and all its associations farewell and turned his way to the land of America. He had been reared on a farm and naturally he went to work on a farm in this country, spending one year in Wisconsin, then removing to Clay county, South Dakota. In 1877 he migrated from that place to Oregon and lived in that state one year and in 1878 we find him in the territory that is now embraced in Latah county. He immediately took land where he now lives, and he has carved out of the wild land a fine farm. He has good improvements and everything about his premises bears the air of thrift and industry. Mr. Madsen has been chosen road supervisor for a number of terms in his district and he has displayed the same tireless care for the welfare of all in his hands in that position as for his private enterprises.

On November 17, 1880, Mr. Madsen married Miss Harriett, daughter of Ira and Sarah Lyon. The wedding occurred in the neighborhood where they now live. Mr. Madsen is a man entitled to the esteem and and respect of his fellows and he enjoys it in a generous measure and he is counted one of the prominent citizens of his community.

FRANK RAYBURN. The subject of this review has been intimately connected with the business world in Latah county for sometime, being allied with the mercantile branch in various capacities in Moscow, and having manifested both good ability and faithfulness that have given him a prestige among his fellows that is pleasant and a proper recognition of worth and integrity. Frank Rayburn was born in Keokuk, Iowa, on October 1, 1847, being the son of Stephenson and Rebecca J. Rayburn. The father was born in Frankfort, Kentucky, in 1819, moved to Illinois, thence to Iowa, and then to Salem, Oregon, across the plains with ox teams in 1852, that being the year of the cholera plague. He settled with his family at Maryville, now Corvallis, then the capital of Oregon. He wrought at the carpenter trade there until 1899, then came to Latah county, where he died in 1900. The mother had died in 1875. The immediate subject of this sketch came across the plains with his father, remaining with him in Oregon until 1878, when he set out on a traveling expedition that led him over the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Montana, but finally, in 1882, he came to Moscow, being in the employ of McConnell & Company, dry goods merchants. Four years he was engaged with them, then two years with Durnham & Koffman and one year with James Shields, all in the mercantile business.

The marriage of Mr. Rayburn and Miss Lillian O., daughter of Charles V. and Lydia Vanderwalker, living near Moscow, was celebrated on September 25, 1887, and to them has been born one son, Charles Franklin, attending school. Mr. Rayburn was chief of police in Corvallis for two years and deputy sheriff of Benton county for eight years. He is a member of the K. of P. at Pendleton, Damon No. 4; of the United Artisans, Columbia 104; also of the Royal Arcanum. Mr. Rayburn has seen considerable Indian fighting, also much of their depredations. He was scout in the Modoc Indian war in California in 1872. All the families in the neighborhood where our subject's father lived were massacred, with the exception of Mr. Rayburn's family.

JOHN J. OWEN is of English and Welsh ancestry and was born in Birmingham, England, January 30, 1843, a son of John and Matilda (Jordan) Owen. In 1849, when he was six years of age, the family came to America. It consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Owen, John J. and two sisters. Charles, an older son, had been lost at sea. W. H., the youngest of the family, was born after the others came to this country. He is now living in Minnesota. The family settled at Jacksonville, Illinois, where the father found work as a tinner, a trade which he had followed in England. Later the family lived in Mason county, and then in Iroquois county, Illinois. In the latter place John Owen died at the age of seventy-seven, having survived his wife several years. They had been reared in the Baptist faith, but later in life allied themselves with the Seventh-day Adventists. The two daughters married well.

John J. Owen was educated at the Grand Prairie Seminary in Illinois, and at Milton Academy, Milton, Wisconsin. He was in school when the war began, and threw down his books to respond to President Lincoln's first call for troops. He enlisted in Company C, Fifty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, while yet a boy in his 'teens, served with his regiment until the term of his enlistment had expired, and was the only member of it who made himself a veteran by re-enlistment. As a member of Company I of the same regiment he served until the close of the war. His regiment was attached to command of General John A. Logan, who was in charge of the Western Department and young Owen fought at Fort Donelson, Altoona Pass, Goldsboro, Shiloh, Corinth, Buzzard's Roost creek, Bee creek and Resaca. After that the regiment was transferred to the command of General W. T. Sherman and followed him on his famous march from Atlanta to the sea. When the war was at an end he participaetd in the grand review of the victorious army at Washington. He received an honorable discharge from the service and was mustered out at Louisville, Kentucky, and returned to his home, a victor and a veteran, and at once settled down to the peaceful vocation of a tinner and a hardware dealer.

From 1868 to 1876 he farmed in Nebraska, then after a two years' residence in Sacramento, California, he went to Astoria, Oregon. The steamer Republic, on which he had taken passage with his wife and two daughters, was wrecked. The disaster occurred unexectedly at four o'clock in the morning, when all the passengers were asleep in their staterooms. They were kept one day on the wreck before being rescued by life boats. He lost his entire possessions that were aboard, but escaped with life and family. He went to Knappa, Oregon, and thence in 1885 to Moscow, Idaho. Two years later he went to Genesee, then a town of one shanty, and he purchased a lot and erected the first building that had a shingle roof in the town, and there he kept hotel for four years, being then appointed instructor in the Indian Industrial School, which was discontinued two years later, when Mr. Owen returned to his hotel and operated it until he sold the property. In 1897 he was appointed postmaster in Genesee and since that time he has faithfully fulfilled the duties of that office, giving the best service of mails the town has ever secured.

In 1867 occurred the marriage of Mr. Owen and Miss Thalia L. Krunn, a native of Ohio, and they have become the parents of three daughters,—Mattie, wife of A. W. Conway; Nettie, wife of Captain A. McKenna, of the United States signal service in the Philippines; Carrie Matilda, at home. Mr. Owen affiliated with the I. O. O. F., the G. A. R. and the K. of P. Mrs. Owen is a member of the Relief Corps and of the Rathbone Sisters. Mr. Owen has always been allied with the Republican party and has served as city marshal of Genesee and was a member of the first city council. Mr. and Mrs. Owen are among the leading people of the city and are esteemed by a large circle of friends and respected by all.

ELIAS TUCKEY. Among the leading agriculturists of Latah county may be mentioned the subject of this sketch. He has labored long in this section and may really be classed as one of the builders of the county, having wrought faithfully for advancement and progress, displaying meanwhile enterprise and commendable zeal and wisdom. On May 3, 1847, Elias Tuckey was born in Bangor, Wales, to John and Sarah Tuckey. The father was a stone cutter, and a native of Wiltshire, England, being born in 1804, and dying in Montana in 1884. The mother was born in Somersetshire, England, in 1800. The father came to New York, thence to Wisconsin, and on to Iowa, in 1865, to California in 1874, and in 1876 to Idaho, this county, then Nez Perces. He worked on the first Potania bridge, across the arm of the sea in Wales, it being the first suspension structure in the world. He took government land near Lenville, Latah county, assisted to erect the first saw mill in the section, and also had many fights with the hostile Indians.

The immediate subject of this sketch came to this county in 1878, assisted his father in the improvement of the latter's farm, then returned to Iowa, and two years later came again to this section. He now owns a farm three and one-half miles northeast from Lenville, in Latah county, and is numbered with the prosperous men of the section.

On March 14, 1877, Mr. Tuckey married Miss

Carrie, daughter of Daniel and Carrie Stout, farmers of Iowa, the wedding occurring in Waterloo, Iowa, and three children have been born to the happy union,—Frank J., Sarah M. and Alice J. Mrs. Tuckey's parents died aged eighty-seven and eighty-eight. In political matters Mr. Tuckey is affiliated with the Republican party, and takes the interest incumbent on every good citizen in the affairs of the county. He has had many trying times in the business and industrial world, but it may be said that he has manifested commendable wisdom and enterprise in the management of his business affairs and his life displays the stanch worth of character and uprightness that are pleasing and praiseworthy.

HON. DANIEL GAMBLE. Although the subject of this sketch is at the present time one of the successful and prosperous agriculturists of Latah county, yet he has served in various other capacities, as in the professional field and also as representative of his county in the state legislature, while he has ever manifested those qualities of worth and stability which have characterized his walk both in public service and private enterprise.

Daniel Gamble was born on October 24, 1857, in Milford, county Donegal, Ireland, being the son of Daniel and Hester Gamble. At the early age of fifteen he came to America, and for two years was employed in the chemical works in the city of Philadelphia. Thence he went to San Francisco in 1874, where for three and a half years he pursued classical and scientific studies under the immediate direction of Professor John Gamble, B. A., Ph. D., Queen's University of Ireland, and Professor John Murphy, M. A., of Trinity College, Dublin. In January, 1878, he entered the San Francisco Theological Seminary, and graduated from that institution at the head of his class, on April 29, 1880. On the same day he was licensed by the Presbytery of San Francisco to preach the gospel, and on the recommendation of the faculty of the theological seminary was at once commissioned by the Presbyterian board as their missionary to the new regions of the northwest. In January, 1881, in connection with Rev. T. M. Boyd, he organized the First Presbyterian church of Moscow, and in the following spring obtained as a gift from Mr. John Russell the site on which the church now stands. A year later he was called to the First Presbyterian church of Victoria, B. C., where his labors were so successful that during his pastorate it was found necessary to enlarge the house of worship to twice the original size. While in Victoria he acted as chaplain of the Royal Hospital and also of the House of Parliament of British Columbia.

In 1884 Mr. Gamble returned to the United States in response to a call from the Presbyterian church of Goldendale, Washington. There he labored for five years, during which time he enlarged the house of worship to twice its original size, and also organized the Presbyterian church of Centerville. In connection with his regular work as a pastor Mr. Gamble labored extensively as an evangelist throughout Oregon, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia, until his incessant labors finally broke down his health, forcing him to retire from the work of the ministry to the quiet of his home at Moscow.

In 1894 Mr. Gamble was nominated by the Republican convention for state representative from Latah county, and was the only nominee of the convention who was elected. As a legislator he left an indelible impression on the statute books of Idaho. He introduced and succeeded in having passed a bill making a farm laborer's lien a preferred claim, and what is known as the Gamble exemption bill, granting to the citizens of Idaho such liberal exemptions as few other states can boast. He also led the fight against what is known as the validation bill, which was finally defeated, after a prolonged and bitter struggle.

On July 14, 1884, Mr. Gamble was married to Miss Isabella, daughter of James and Margaret Smith, of Victoria, B. C., and they have become the parents of four sons,—Daniel R., James R., Gustavus A. and William J., and two daughters,—Margaret Hester and Lola.

Mr. Gamble is one of the influential men of the county and has always been an active laborer for its advancement. He is highly esteemed by all who know him and, surrounded by his growing family and hosts of friends, he has just cause for abundant happiness and contentment with his earthly lot.

DAVID CHAPMAN. The venerable gentleman whose name appears at the head of this article is one of the esteemed and substantial citizens of Latah county, having labored here for the general welfare and advancement of the interests of the county, and he is now one of the heavy property owners, and is highly respected by all, since he has displayed commendable enterprise and stanch integrity and sound principles in the affairs of public life and private business.

Mr. Chapman was born in Yorkshire, England, on December 14, 1829, being the son of William and Rachel Chapman. He spent the years of his minority in his native place, then in company with two brothers, at the age of nineteen, came to Ogle county, Illinois, settling in 1850, and engaging in farming. He was occupied there until 1860, then removed to Monona county, Iowa, taking a homestead of eighty acres where his home was until 1882, when he again removed, this time to Woodbury county, taking up carpentering, and in 1884 he came to Idaho, purchasing a farm of one hundred and sixty acres four miles north from Moscow. He also owns a quarter section in the Big Bend country, Washington, and a fine residence in the northwest part of the city, which is the family home. Mr. Chapman recently sold a Latah county farm.

Mr. Chapman was married in January, 1854, in Ogle county, Illinois; the lady then becoming his wife was Miss Lydia A., daughter of John and Theresa Herrington, and a native of Pennsylvana, and they have become the parents of three children, living.—Melvin L., Miles W. and Theresa A.; and four who died in infancy.

In 1882, in Woodbury county, Iowa, Mr. Chapman married a second time, Mary Ann Thomas becoming his wife at that time.

In 1861 Mr. Chapman enlisted in Company H, Forty-sixth Illinois Infantry, under Captain John Steven, in the Army of Tennessee. He fought at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Pittsburg Landing, siege of Corinth, Vicksburg, Atlanta and many other battles and skirmishes, until 1864, and was then honorably discharged, having made a military record of which his family and he may well be proud. And it is to such devoted, brave and intrepid men that we owe the preservation of the Union in those dark days of internal strife. Mr. Chapman is a man of excellent business ability, stanch character, untarnished reputation, and is a devoted supporter of the faith, being a devout member of the Baptist church. Now, in the golden time of his career, he is retired from the activities of business life, superintends the estates from his Moscow residence and quietly enjoys the fruits of his industry and thrift, being secure in the good will, esteem and confidence of his fellows.

JOSEPH RIELLY. In the grand old city of Dublin was born the subject of this sketch, and amid the beauties of the Emerald Isle were passed the days of his childhood, 1832 being the year of the inception of his career on this earth, and his parents were James and Mary Rielly, the father a printer, and passing from earth's cares in 1862, the mother also dying in her native land. At the budding age of twenty Joseph came to the new world, settling in Providence, Rhode Island, where he wrought at the machinist's trade for two years, after which, in 1856, he came to San Francisco, via the Isthmus, going thence to the mines in Plumas county, where he delved one and one-half years in the search for gold. He returned to Rhode Island then, and in 1859 was found again in California, whence he came to Boise, mining there for a time, also several years were spent in Montana in the same work. In 1879 he came to his present place, one and one-half miles north from Moscow, where he homesteaded a quarter section, and now owns a fine farm of two hundred and eighty acres. Mr. Rielly gives his attention to farming, raising stock, raising fruit and mining, being a man of energy and fine capabilities.

In 1854 Mr. Rielly married Miss Lucy Lyons in Fall River, Massachusetts, and one child graced the happy union. In infancy the child was taken by death, and Mrs. Rielly, also, was snatched from her home by the monster, leaving her husband to mourn her sad demise. Mr. Rielly has stood against the storms of a buffeting world for three score and ten years, manifesting those stanch qualities of worth and integrity that only the brave and typical man can produce, and now, as the golden years of a very active and adventurous career are drawing on apace, he maintains the same dauntless spirit and faithfulness toward his fellows, and is justly entitled to the enjoyment of the fruits of his worthy and ardous toils, while he is esteemed and highly respected by all. Mr. Rielly has never displayed any desire for personal preferment in the lines of politics, nor has he allied himself with any of the religious denominations of the day. It is of note that he trod the ground where Moscow now stands in 1866, when there was not a house between Lewiston and Spokane river, and from Spokane ferry to Bitter Root valley no civilized abode was found. Thus did the pioneer enter these solitudes of nature's wilds, and by faithful toil and daring intrepidity face the dangers and endure the toil to pave the way for the settlers of later date. Much honor and credit are due such as our subject for these trying and praiseworthy labors, and it is with pleasure that we are enabled to incorporate this review in the abiding history of Latah county.

GEORGE W. TUCKER. The subject of this sketch is one of the enterprising and progressive citizens of Latah county, being a leader in the praiseworthy labor of introducing fine stock into the county, having today one of the finest Percheron horses in the northwest. Mr. Tucker is also a farmer, and handles to advantage his fertile farm three and one-half miles southeast from Moscow. His birth took place in Winchester, Scott county, Illinois, on December 27, 1832, his parents being Thomas and Esther Tucker. In 1849, in company with his father, he made the trip across the plains to California with ox teams, and for two years they were busied in the search for gold. In 1851 they returned to the home place, via water. Soon, however, we find young Tucker again on the plains, this time headed for Salem, Oregon, where he arrived in due time. He soon was enlisted in Company A, First Battalion, Regiment of Oregon Mounted Volunteers, commanded by Colonel Rob Williams, and he received his honorable discharge on February 6, 1856, having made a commendable record fighting the Indians in the Rogue river war. He participated in the hotly contested struggle at Hungry Hill, and also in several skirmishes. In 1855 he located in Lane county and there engaged in farming until 1878, when a move was made to Washington, whence in 1886 he migrated to Idaho, settling three and one-half miles southeast from Moscow, where he resides at the present time, owning here one hundred and twenty acres of fine soil, which is well improved and carefully tilled. Mr. Tucker takes a great interest in blooded horses, and had some fine specimens, among which is Poitiou, Jr., an excellent graded Percheron, being the finest in the county. On his farm Mr. Tucker has three acres of choice varieties of fruits.

Mr. Tucker was married to Miss Sarah H., daughter of Hiram Lemon, in 1858, and they became the parents of seven children,—Ella, Mary H., Alice T.,

Lily M., T. F., H. Elmer and George. On June 12, 1888, Mr. Tucker contracted a second marriage, the lady of his choice on this occasion being Mrs. Rebecca Wood, and the nuptials occurred in Ritzville, Adams county, Washington. Fraternally Mr. Tucker is affiliated with the A. F. & A. M., Paradise Lodge, No. 17. He is among the substantial and enterprising men of the county, well known and universally liked, while his demeanor is such that he has won as friends all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

THOMAS CROWLEY, deceased, was one of the earliest pioneers of this section, settling here long before Latah county had a separate existence, and laboring faithfully during the days of his sojourn for the upbuilding of the country and for general progress, always manifesting himself as a good, loyal citizen, and man of uprightness and integrity, while his industry and enterprise were patent to all, and it is with pleasure that we accord to his memory this review.

The birth of Mr. Crowley occurred in the Emerald Isle, in 1825, and while still a small boy he came to America, and for a good many years he traveled in various parts of the country, visiting about every state in the Union. Finally he came to this country and settled on government land three miles southeast from where Moscow now stands. He bent his energies to opening up a farm and improving the same, and his success is well manifested, for at the time of his death he left a fine estate of four hundred and eighty acres. He settled here first in 1872, and death called him away in 1889. Five sons are living on the place, the oldest, Frank Crowley, being born on January 27, 1876, and he now has charge of the farm, which is operated by him and his brothers, who are William, James, Joseph and John. The father was a successful raiser of stock, and the sons run a threshing outfit, Frank having managed one for the last five years. The estate is still undivided, and the sons are handling it together. The widow was married a second time, and is now living in Seattle. Mr. Crowley was a man of excellent qualities, and he wrought with a display of skill and good judgment, while his energy and capabilities in handling business affairs was manifest to all. He was well known and universally beloved and the day of his death was a time of sincere and wide spread mourning.

C. V. VANDEWALKER. Among the thrifty orchardists of Latah county must be mentioned the enterprising and well known gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, and who has spent a number of years in laboring for the development and advancement of the county, while his personal walk has been commendatory and fraught with expression of uprightness and faithfulness.

Our subject was born in Belvedere, Boone county, Illinois, being the son of Tuttle and Finetta Vandewalker. When this son was twelve years of age the parents removed to Cumberland county, Illinois, and there he labored with his father on the farm until he had reached the time of his majority, when he removed to Pope county, Minnesota, taking up the occupation of the agriculturist for fourteen years in that state. In 1877 a move was made by wagon, in four months, to Dayton, Washington, and freighting was his labor until 1880, when he returned to Minnesota, by wagon, whence three years later he came to Spokane, Washington, and in 1884 made his way to Moscow. Different labors were engaged in for a decade, and then Mr. Vandewalker purchased his ten-acre orchard situated two miles southeast from Moscow. He has a fine orchard and comfortable buildings, and he annually markets a nice quantity of fruit.

The marriage of Mr. Vandewalker and Miss Ellen, daughter of Amos G. and Margaret F. Lacey, was solemnized in Cumberland county, Illinois, in 1865, and the children born are as follows: L. Olive, Carrie B., Franklin P., Margaret F., C. Henry and Amos G. Mr. Vandewalker is one of the substantial, faithful and public minded citizens of our county, and he is well liked and esteemed by all.

GEORGE M. BOOTH, D. D., is the pastor of the M. E. church at Moscow, Idaho, and is a man of sterling qualities of worth and integrity, having labored in the vineyard for many years, preparing himself when still a youth for this responsible and praiseworthy calling, and it may be said that now, as the zenith of life's walk is drawing nigh, that he is a man who has achieved success in the real meaning of the word, and a retrospective investigation but presages a line of accomplishment with riper years and more mature talent from rich experiences and constant mental activity that will be a fitting crowning to a useful and highly commendable life.

George M. Booth was born in Des Moines, Iowa, on January 2, 1852, being the son of Robert and Mary Booth, both still living at Grants Pass, Oregon. The father was a Methodist preacher for fifty years, doing noble and faithful service in the ripening fields where his labor was bestowed. The father was a native of England and came to this country in 1830. The mother was a native of Indiana. Our subject was educated at the Wilbur Academy, at Wilbur, Douglas county, Oregon, attending college also for three years at Ashland, in the same state. 1873 was the year in which he retired from the collegiate course, and in 1882 he began his life's work by preaching the gospel, the inception labors being at Waldron, Oregon, where three years were spent. Two years were consumed in proclaiming the message at Columbus, Washington, and then he stepped aside for a time from the direct preaching of the gospel to accept the presiding eldership of the Columbia district, wherein he was retained for nine consecutive years, closing his services in that line in 1896, and then removing to Moscow, where he has been since as pastor of the church of his denomination.

The marriage of Mr. Booth and Miss Clara E. Staats was celebrated on January 3, 1878, and they have become the parents of the following children: Daisy, in the university; Winifred, teaching at Kendrick; Augusta, Wilford and Warren, the last three attending school also. Mrs. Booth was educated in the Willamette University, Oregon. Her father, Hon. Stephen Staats, came to Oregon in 1847, and was twice state senator from Polk county, in that state, also represented the county several times in the lower house, serving later as county judge. Mr. Booth has had the title of Doctor of Divinity conferred upon him, through meritorious labors and manifestation of excellent ability, and he has displayed commendable zeal and energy in the cause, being a man of fine address and talent and taking a firm hold on the hearts of his people, with whom, as with all, he is very popular. Mr. Booth has been twice elected to represent his conference at the general conference, and by the latter body he was chosen a member of the Book Committee, where fourteen constituted the body of the committee.

HON. JOHN S. RANDOLPH. The subject of this article is well known throughout the entire county of Latah, being one of the most influential men and prominent citizens of the county, while in his business enterprise of farming and fruit raising he has won commendable success, being personally a man of attractive and upright characteristics, having maintained an unsullied reputation and has done much for the advancement of the county's interests.

John S. was born in Bloomington, McLean county, Illinois, on June 15, 1832, being the son of Gardner and Betsey Randolph. The father was a farmer in that vicinity and the son remained with him until the age of twenty-nine had been reached, when he started for himself in the battle of life. He had been fortified by a good education in the district school, which was finished by a course in the Wesleyan University at Bloomington. In 1861 he removed to Riley county, Kansas, where he was numbered with the prosperous agriculturists until 1875. Then a move was made to California, and after two years of farming there he went thence to Oregon and farmed for a time, and in 1880 he came to Latah county. He purchased a farm twenty-five miles north from Moscow, and to the cultivation and improvement of this he devoted his attention, except during the time from 1894 to 1898, in which years he was representing his county in the state legislature, being called, as was the noted Roman of old, from the plow to the halls of legislation. And it is to be said to the credit of the subject of this sketch that, as the Roman did, so did he, standing there, as in all his life, for the principles of right and progress and upbuilding of the country. Also in Kansas he had been probate judge. After this extended service in the legislature Mr. Randolph purchased his present place of forty acres, two miles southeast from Moscow, where he resides, having an ideal home. Politically he is identified with the Populists, and in fraternal affiliations he has been with the I. O. O. F. In religious persuasion Mr. Randolph is a member of the Methodist church, South.

The marriage of Mr. Randolph and Miss Mary Ann, daughter of William and Mary Tate, farmers of Nebraska, was celebrated in Perin, Nebraska, in 1861, and they have become the parents of the following children: Joshua A., Belle, Lily, Edith, Ora, Britton W. and Anna.

Mr. Randolph was in the legislature during the most terrible panic that has swept the western country. He introduced a bill to lower the freight and passenger rates in the state, as well as introducing many others for the amelioration of the condition of the people. Mr. Randolph has the distinction of having been a member of the convention in Kansas which formed the La Compton constitution.

RAY WOODWORTH is one of the thrifty and enterprising agriculturists of Latah county, having a valuable piece of land one-half mile east from Moscow, where his commodious and elegant residence forms the family home, whence also he directs the improvements and culture of his land. Mr. Woodworth was born in Williams county, Ohio, on December 19, 1836, being the son of Josiah and Mariah Woodworth. There he was educated in the public schools, and from the age of seventeen to twenty-three he was engaged in the manufacture of potash. Following this period he migrated to Pikes Peak, the Mecca of that time, crossing the plains in 1859 with ox teams. From that date until 1863 he was taken up with mining and freighting, then he went to Virginia City, Montana, and engaged in stock raising. He also built a flour mill nine miles from where Bozeman is now situated, which he sold later, and then went to Wyoming, with a large herd of cattle, selling them at camp Brown. 1878 marks the date of his advent into this section, his first settlement being at Genesee, then, afterward, he operated a general merchandise establishment at Uniontown, Washington, following which he went to farming on a large scale on the Snake river, where also he built a flouring mill worth twenty thousand dollars, which was destroyed by fire. Then he came to Moscow, the year being 1897, and purchased the farm where he now resides, and since then he has given his attention to general farming and fruit raising.

The first marriage of Mr. Woodworth occurred in Bryan, Ohio, on February 27, 1867, the lady then becoming his wife being Miss Martha Snyder, daughter of Samuel Snyder. Two children were born to them, —Jay, who was county auditor here for four years and is now deputy auditor at Wallace, this state; and Grace, teaching school in Spokane.

On February 14, 1881, Mr. Woodworth contracted a second marriage, the lady of his choice on this occasion being Arphema Starr, and the nuptials being celebrated at Bryan, Ohio. Two children have been the fruit of this union,—Maud, teaching school; and Roy, attending school in Moscow. Mr. Woodworth is a member of the A. F. & A. M., Lodge No. 5. He is a man who has the confidence of his fellows, has made a good record in the years of his active life, has gained success and has conducted his business enterprises with commendable wisdom, while his personal walk has been such as to manifest the public spirit and integrity that are happy characteristics of his personality.

EDWARD L. BURKE. It is a pleasure to have the privilege to incorporate in the history of Latah county the life's record of the gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, since he is one of the noble men who fought for the flag in the days of rebellion's woe, and since he has shown himself a worthy citizen of a grand nation that he assisted to establish secure for years to come.

Edward L. was born on June 30, 1848, in Adams county, Illinois, near the town of Quincy, being the son of Hiram and Rebecca Burke. His father was a farmer and he remained at home on the farm and in the pursuit of knowledge until February, 1865, when he enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Forty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Welsh, and served until after the close of hostilities, in 1865. He did duty in Tennessee, but was not in any heavy battle. Subsequent to the close of the war he returned to Quincy and there engaged in farming until 1879, at which time he migrated to Walla Walla, and thence a short time afterward to Lewiston, Idaho. In the vicinity of that city he was engaged in farming and stock raising for fifteen years, then removed to Moscow in 1896. In this city he selected a residence in the western part, purchased it, together with ten acres of orchard and five of garden, and here he resides at the present time. He devotes himself to market gardening and the duties of the orchardist, having excellent success.

The marriage of Mr. Burke and Miss Laura B., daughter of Benjamin T. Nelson, a farmer near Quincy, was celebrated on December 5, 1867. The following children have been born to this happy union: Cora E., wife of David Stevens, living in Lewiston; Lawrence, at home; John T., civil engineer; Daisy, wife of Joseph Knudson, agent of the Hazelwood dairy in Portland; Edward A.; Ralph E. Mr. Burke is a member of the G. A. R., Major Anderson Post, No. 5. He is a man of commendable energy and wisdom, having conducted himself in a loyal and patriotic manner, and demonstrated the ability with which he is happily possessed in good endeavors in the business world.

WILLIAM C. LAUDER. The representative and well known citizen whose name is at the head of this article is one of Moscow's leading builders and stone contractors, being a man of great experience and skill in this line of business, while personally he is marked by a public spirit and a progressiveness that have done much for the upbuilding of Latah county.

The birth of William C. Lauder occurred in Hornellsville, Steuben county, New York, on November 11, 1855, he being the son of William and Mary Lauder. The father was a lumberman and farmer. When the son had arrived at the age of fourteen he went with his father to Readsville, North Carolina, and there assisted the latter in the culture and manufacture of tobacco, remaining engrossed in that industry until 1881. Then he came west and went to work for the O. R. & N. Company as superintendent on the grade, remaining in that capacity until 1883. Two years later he superintended the putting in of the entire road from Old Mission to Wardner, Idaho, the same being the first railroad in that section and made for the Coeur d'Alene Railway & Navigation Company. From this he retired to Colfax, Washington, and engaged in stone contracting and the manufacture of brick until 1892, which is the date of his advent to Moscow. He does a general contracting and building business, and is also street commissioner of Moscow. While in North Carolina Mr. Lauder served in the United States revenue force. He is affiliated with the A. O. U. W., Moscow Lodge, No. 13, also with the Mox Mox Tribe, No. 7, of Redmen.

The marriage of Mr. Lauder and Miss Emma Briggs, a native of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, was solemnized on December 25, 1876, and they have one child, Margaret, now attending the University of Idaho. Mrs. Lauder's parents, Abner and Ann Briggs, were farmers of her native county. Mr. Lauder is an enterprising and industrious man, with excellent executive force and marked by his keen foresight and good judgment, while his business success stamps him a wise and capable man, and he is entitled to and freely receives the respect and confidence of his fellows.

BAYARD T. BYRNS. Any compilation purporting to give the history of Latah county and mention of its leading citizens would be open to serious criticism were there failure to incorporate within its pages a summary of the career of the representative business man and capable citizen whose name appears above, and who has done much for the advancement of the interests of the county, both in financial matters as well as in introducing excellent breeds of stock and many kinds of tame grasses for pasturage and meadows, and it is without hesitation that we proclaim that to Mr. Byrns very much credit is due for his untiring and wise efforts in these lines mentioned.

Bayard T. was born in Allegany county, New York, on June 9, 1854, being the son of Dr. W. and Priscilla Byrns. While he was still an infant the family removed to Bronson, Branch county, Michigan, where he resided until he was twenty-six years of age, receiving his elemental education in the common schools and then attending the Freewill Baptist College at Hillsdale, and spending some time in the Baptist college at Kalamazoo. At the age of seventeen Mr. Byrns had the distinction of operating a seven-hundred-acre farm, doing the same with credit to himself. At the age of twenty-six he went to Oswego, Kansas, purchasing a large tract of land and devoting himself to raising and shipping cattle. He was soon engaged in the loaning business, in company with the Neosha Vallay Investment Company, in Chetopa, and later was in the employ of the Winton & Diming Loaning Company, which afterward reorganized into the Diming Investment Company, at Oswego, Kansas. In 1889 he came to Walla Walla, Washington, for this ompany, placing farm mortgage loans. In 1891 the office was removed to Colfax, and in 1897 he left the company and engaged in the same line for himself, locating in Moscow. At the present time he owns about two thousand acres of good land in Latah, Whitman and Spokane counties. In addition he has a farm of two hundred and fifty acres one and one-half miles south from Moscow, known as the Meadowbrook stock farm, where he pays especial attention to handling thoroughbred Shorthorn cattle, and breeding the same, also handling Berkshire and Poland-China hogs. He has about two hundred fine cattle, twenty-five head registered, and he constantly keeps excellent animals for sale. Mr. Byrns pays much attention to the culture and introduction of grasses adapted to the climate, and great good has resulted from his efforts in both of these lines. In addition to all this enterprising agricultural and stock raising labor, Mr. Byrns finds time to conduct a loaning business under the firm name of Bayard T. Byrns & Company, the offices being located in Moscow, and he does an extensive business, being one of the leading financiers of the county and in fact of the entire state. Mr. Byrns is a progressive and public minded citizen and has manifested marked energy and intelligence in prosecuting successfully the various enterprises which have come to his hand, and he has always maintained a leading position in these lines, accomplishing much for the advancement of the interests of the county and of his fellows. In political matters he is a Republican, and in 1899 he was the popular choice of the people for mayor of the city of Moscow, no one taking the field against him.

In Chautauqua county, New York, at Stockton, on Ocober 10, 1895, Mr. Byrns married Miss Harriet, daughter of Mortimer and Genevra Ely, and a native of New York, and two children have been born to them,—Margaret and Marion.

O. BEARDSLEY. This gentleman is one of the heavy land owners of Latah county and has been an influential citizen in the advancement of the county's interests, while his own business enterprises have been conducted with admirable sagacity and practical judgment with the certain result of a good success in financial affairs. Mr. Beardsley was born in Genesee county, New York, being the son of A. W. and Mary Beardsley, and the date of his birth was January 15, 1826. While a small child his parents removed to Crystal Lake, Illinois, where his childhood days were passed and he acquired the education that fortified him for the battles of life. In 1848 he settled on a farm in McHenry county, Illinois, in the vicinity of Crystal Lake, the town where his father did business as a general merchant, and to the occupation of general farming and stock raising he devoted his entire energies with the brilliant success that was to be gained from the fertile soil of Illinois prairie. The labor continued steadily until 1882, when Mr. Beardsley determined to view the west for himself, and accordingly he sold his property and came to the vicinity of Moscow, and he purchased a farm. One year was spent in the labor of farming and then he rented this property and removed to town to live, building a fine, commodious residence, which is occupied as the family home at the present time. Mr. Beardsley showed his keen foresight, and confidence in the future of Latah county by purchasing different farms in the county, until now he owns one section of rich soil, which is rented. During the interim from 1888 to 1896 he was engaged in buying wheat, but of late years he has retired from the activities of this business and superintends his farms and gives his days to the enjoyment of the competence that his wisdom, thrift and enterprise have accumulated.

The marriage of Mr. Beardsley and Miss Lucinda, daughter of William and Julia Jackman, was celebrated in McHenry county, Illinois, on March 16, 1848, and three children have been born to them,—Ella G., deceased, having been the wife of H. L. Coats, who came to this county with Mr. Beardsley; Flora, wife of Albert Dygert; O. W., married to Miss Phoebe Estes. Mrs. Beardsley's parents were natives of New York. Mr. Beardsley has been a member of the city council in Moscow for six years, previous to 1901, and in all his public service, as in his private walk, he has been characterized by uprightness, integrity and enterprise, while he has displayed praiseworthy ability and has been dominated by sound principles; and now, as the golden years of a well spent life begin to dawn, he is secure in the esteem and confidence of his fellows and may be cheered by the memory of well spent days of labor and faithfulness.

LOUIS P. SCHUH. In the industrial and business world of Latah county the gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph exerts a potent influence, being well known and capable, and a master in the art of building, while also he does a general contracting business and moves buildings.

Louis P. Schuh was born in Knox county, near Galesburg, Illinois, on January 25, 1849, being the son of Eberhart and Eveline Schuh. When a child of four years he was brought across the plains in an ox train by his parents, who settled near Vancouver, Washington. He passed his childhood days there, on a large farm, acquiring a good education, and also learning the trade of the carpenter and builder. 1871 marks the date when he removed to Oregon, locating at Pilot Rock, in Umatilla county, and there he wrought at his trade and also engaged in stock raising, until 1881. At that date he removed to Moscow, Idaho, locating permanently there. He erected a fine residence in the eastern part of the city and this elegant dwelling continues to be the family home. Mr. Schuh has been active in carpenter work and general contracting and house moving, displaying a master ability in it all and carefully conserving the interests of his patrons, until he now enjoys the confidence and esteem of the entire community and is a leader in his line of business.

The marriage of Mr. Schuh occurred in Pilot Rock, Oregon, in 1874, Miss Martha J., daughter of William and Martha Looney, becoming his wife at that time. The fruits of this union is as follows: Charles E., Ira D., Elsie, Orlin M., Elda E., Louis P. and three infants who died. Mrs. Schuh's parents were stock raisers in Umatilla county. Mr. Schuh is a member of the Methodist church and has been for twenty years. He is a man of broad public spirit, ever in the lead for progress, and enterprising in the development of the interests of the county, while his personal walk has been such that he enjoys an unsullied reputation and the good will and admiration of all.

During the Indian scare of 1878 Mrs. Schuh went to Walla Walla, and in that war Mr. Schuh served under General Howard. He participated in the fight at Birch creek, but General Howard's command was one day too late to take part in the Cold Springs fight.

CHARLES B. HOLT. Mention should be made of this active and well known business man among the representative men of Latah county, being now actively engaged in the butchering business on one of the principal streets of Moscow, where he does a fine business in partnership with his sons-in-law.

Charles B. Holt was born in Wilton, New Hampshire, on February 28, 1830, his parents being Nathaniel and Sarah Holt, both dying before he was eight years of age. Following this sad event he went to live with his uncle, who operated a butcher shop in Chelmford, Massachusetts. There he learned the trade of the butcher and followed it there and in Brighton and in Boston, remaining with one employer for five years. It was in 1866 that he came west, stopping first in Springfield, Ohio, whence one year later he migrated to Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, where he remained engaged at his trade until 1877. This year marks the date of his crossing the plains, and for one year he was occupied with ranching in Wyoming; then he pressed forward to Washington, taking government land in Whitman county, about ten miles west from Moscow, which he owns at the present time. He gave attention to raising grain and stock, also operated a butcher wagon in the adjoining country, selling meat, which continued until 1884, when he removed to Moscow and opened a butcher shop. He has taken into the business Mr. George Cushing and Mr. Chris Hagen, his sons-in-law, and together they operate a fine market, doing a general market business and enjoying a good trade. Mr. Holt still owns and superintends his farm. He is a member of the Pinery Lodge, Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, also of the Star of Rebekah, Lodge No. 15, of Moscow.

Mr. Holt married Jennie Pike, a native of Massachusetts, in 1865, the nuptials occurring in Manchester, New Hampshire, and to them have been born one daughter,—Hattie, wife of Chris Hagen. Phenia, wife of George Cushing, is a step-daughter. Mr. Holt is one of the substantial and prominent men of the city and county and has wrought here with energy and faithfulness and is justly entitled to the confidence of the people, which he enjoys in a generous measure, and he can truly be called one of the builders of the county, for he has done much for the general advancement and improvement.

CHARLES W. PALMER. As an orchardist, a stockman and as an agriculturist the subject of this article has won distinction in Latah county, and is today numbered among the leading men of the county, having manifested during all the long years in which he has labored here a high order of ability and an unswerving integrity and uprightness that have given him an enviable prestige among the citizens.

Mr. Palmer was born in South Bend, Indiana, on May 19, 1838, being the son of Asher and Nancy Palmer. His early life was spent on the farm and in the district schools he received his education. At the age of sixteen he accompanied his parents to Fillmore county, Minnesota, and in that section he engaged in farming until 1871, then removed to Nebraska, where the ensuing two years were spent, and in 1873 he made his way to the west, settling eight miles north from Moscow, taking government land, where he now owns a fine farm of five hundred and fifty acres. Upon this farm Mr. Palmer has the largest orchard of Latah county, it covering fifty acres. He has manifested commendable skill in handling this large enterprise, and deserves great credit for the benefit it has brought to his county. In addition to this he has done a general farming business, and has also paid attention to raising horses, for the last twenty years, having in 1898 three thousand head, but now he has sold until he owns four hundred. Mr. Palmer is living in Moscow, and from that point he superintends his estate and enterprises.

The marriage of Mr. Palmer and Miss Eliza J. Martin was solemnized in Fillmore, Fillmore county, Minnesota, in 1859, and three children were born to them,—Charles, Alice and Minnie, all living in Wsahington. In 1898 Mr. Palmer contracted a second marriage: the lady of his choice at this time was Mrs. Lotta Phillipps, of Moscow. Mr. Palmer is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 31, Star of Rebekah, No. 15, and with the G. A. R., Major Anderson Post, No. 5. He is highly esteemed by all and holds a prominent place in the business realm of the county, and by real merit and faithfulness he has merited this position, and holds the same in a becoming manner, while he enjoys the confidence of all.

Mr. Palmer was in the First Minnesota Cavalry for fourteen months, and then in the engineer corps for two years. He assisted to repel the Sioux Indians, under General Sibley, and in all this service he was the faithful soldier and the true man.

GEORGE W. WOLFE. One of the highly esteemed and influential citizens of Latah county, and a prosperous tiller of the soil whose life has been marked with manifestation both of energy and capability is named at the head of this article, and it is with pleasure that we accord to him a representation in the history of his county.

George W. Wolfe was born March 11, 1853, in Peoria county, near Galesburg, Illinois, being the son of John and Nancy Wolfe. When he was an infant of two years his father was taken away by death, and when he was seven years of age his mother took him, with the balance of the family, to Kansas, settling in Brown county, where he spent the time until he was twenty-two years of age, having acquired an education from the public schools and giving his time to farming in addition. In 1875 he fitted conveyances and crossed the plains with the old "prairie schooners," spending the first winter in Walla Walla. Following this he located in Whitman county and devoted his attention to farming for twelve years, meeting with good success. He still owns this estate, comprising six hundred and eighty acres. It was in 1888 that he came to Moscow, and here he has since lived, superintending his farms from this point.

The marriage of Mr. Wolfe and Miss Amanda, daughter of Calvin and Nancy Brown, pioneer farmers of Whitman county, was celebrated on January 6, 1878, and they have become the parents of three children,—Guy W., Bertha and Mable. Fraternally Mr. Wolfe is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 31, being at the present time one of the grand officers of the state of Idaho; he is also a member of the W. of W., Lodge No. 228, holding the office of council commander of that order. Mr. Wolfe was one of the very few men who remained at home on the farm during the raid of the Indians at Camas prairie, the bulk of the settlers being huddled into the fortifications at Moscow and other points. He escaped unharmed and quietly attended to the interests of the farm until the trouble had ceased. He is a man of excellent capabilities, and has managed his business affairs with such discretion and industry that he is the possessor of a handsome competence and is one of the potent factors of the county.

DONALD McKENZIE. Among the business men of Moscow there should not be failure to mention the gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph, and who has wrought in Latah county since its organization and even before, manifesting an energy and industry with excellent capabilities that have commended him to all, while he has carried on his business of farming and later of draying in a manner that betokens good management and sagacity, which have given to him the rewards attendant upon faithful and well directed labor.

We have to revert to Stark county, Illinois, to find the birthplace of our subject; the date of his advent into life there was July 10, 1859, he being the son of William and Elizabeth McKenzie. They crossed the dreary plains in 1863, using ox teams for conveyance and settling first in the Grande Ronde valley, where they engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1871, when another removal was made, to the territory now embraced in Latah county. They took government land two miles south from Moscow and there gave attention to farming and raising stock, being attended with good success. In 1885 the father was called away by death, and then the mother lived with her son until 1901, when she, too, received the summons to depart this life. Our subject was educated in the common schools in the various places where he lived, and also gave attention to assisting on the farm until he arrived at manhood's estate, then took up the occupation for himself. He remained on the farm during the summer months and then repaired to Moscow in the winter, where he did draying. During the years of 1894-95 he was night marshal of the city, and in 1898 he sold his interests on the farm to his brother and removed permanently to the town of Moscow. He took up draying and transportation and does a good business, being favored with the patronage of many. He has fine equipment for his business and handles it with becoming energy and wisdom.

On February 14, 1881, the marriage of Mr. McKenzie and Miss Mary L., daughter of Samuel J. and Mary L. Langdon, whose life's history is given in another portion of this volume, was celebrated, and they became the parents of three children,—Daisy, Hollis and Alta May. Mr. McKenzie is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and he is highly esteemed in this relation, as in all the walks of life, being a man of integrity and real worth, which have won the confidence of all.

DAVID URQUHART. This capable and leading business man of Moscow has been actively engaged in the pursuit of business in various channels here for a number of years and is now the owner and manager of the Moscow brick yards, where he manufactures an excellent quality of brick and is doing a good business, besides which he owns much other property, which he manages in addition to this enterprise. Mr. Urquhart is one of the men of ability and energy who are blessed with a talent of practical execution that enables one to be successful in various lines, which has been exemplified in his life, for he has handled in a commendable manner various undertakings, while now he takes rank with the progressive and active business men of the county.

In Wilkinsburgh, Pennsylvania, on May 12, 1847, David was born to David and Sarah Urquhart, whence, while an infant, he was removed by his parents to La Porte county, Indiana, near the town of La Porte. There he obtained his education in the district schools and assisted his father in the work of the farm, until he was fourteen, when the family made another move, to Champaign county, Illinois, and there our subject enlisted in Company B, Second Illinois Artillery, in 1864. But it was his lot to be confined in the hospital during the year and a half of his service, and he never participated in the stirring scenes of the battlefield. After the close of the war he went to Joplin, Jasper county, Missouri, and there devoted himself to lead mining and freighting for five years, after which period he removed to Elgin, Kansas, in 1870, where he received the appointment of deputy United States marshal from General William Britton and continued in this office for four years. At the same time he was first lieutenant in the state militia. 1880 marks the date when he came to Moscow, and for twelve years subsequent thereto he dwelt on his farm three miles southwest from the town, paying attention to the production of the fruits of the field. He still owns this farm, which consists of two hundred and forty acres, and is rented. In 1891 he removed to Moscow and opened a real estate office, where we found him for three years. Also, in 1893, he opened a hardware store, conducting it for one year. Then it was that he perceived an opening in the manufacturing line in the city and accordingly opened the brick yard where he is operating today with excellent success. Mr. Urquhart is a thorough master of his business, and has a fine patronage that is fully merited by his excellent work and careful dealing. He is the possessor of an elegant residence in the city and is one of the leading men of the county.

The marriage of Mr. Urquhart and Miss Nancy, daughter of Joseph and Marie Edmundson, was celebrated in Winfield, Kansas, in October, 1874, and they have become the parents of the following children: Minneola, Lillian and Earl. Mr. Urquhart is a member of the Foresters of America, Moscow Lodge, No. 10, also of the Major Anderson Post of the G. A. R.

GOTTFRIED WEBER. The enterprising and industrious gentleman whose name introduces this paragraph is one of Moscow's well known and capable business men, and is conducting a harness shop and saddlery on one of the principal streets of the city, where he enjoys the extended patronage that his skill and affability deserve. We are led across the wide Atlantic to find the native place of Mr. Weber, it being in Baden, Germany. His birth occurred on May 4, 1858, and his father was Ignaius Weber, and his mother died before he can remember. At the early age of thirteen the lad left the fatherland and the parental roof and, in company with a cousin, Frank Weber, of Walla Walla, came to try his fortune in the new world. The details of the first few years of his stay here are not chronicled, but in 1871 he went with his cousin, mentioned before, from New York to San Francisco, traveling by the Southern Pacific. Then they came up the coast to Portland, thence to Walla Walla, where he remained until 1873, then returned to Portland, and in that city he learned his trade, being especially skillful and apt in all of its branches. He came to Moscow in the spring of 1879, and immediately built the building where he is now located and opened a harness shop and saddlery. Success attended him and honest treatment and skillful work drew many of the inhabitants to his shop, and in 1892 he was proprietor of a shop that handled ten journeymen, and all was prosperous. Then came the financial crash that crippled every business man and farmer in the entire country, and for a time our subject quit the harness business and embarked in selling implements until 1896, then returned to his old business in the original stand, and at once the trade again came his way with generosity of numbers that soon made the business one of good proportions and worthy of the skill and ability of the owner. He has labored steadily on in this line since. He is numbered with the leading citizens of the county and has served as alderman from the First ward for the last three terms, manifesting in this public capacity the same energy and care for the affairs of the city that characterize him in his private enterprises. Fraternally Mr. Weber is united with the A. O. U. W., No. 13, also is a member of the Elks, No. 249. In religious persuasion he is identified with the Roman Catholic church and is a stanch supporter of his faith.

The marriage of Mr. Weber and Miss Kate N., daughter of John and Emmaline Price, early pioneers to Nevada, but now residing in Moscow, was celebrated at Lewiston, Idaho, on March 1, 1885, and they have become the parents of two children,—John and Emmaline,—both attending school.

CHARLES MOORE, deceased. The distinguished gentleman whose name is mentioned above was one of the well known and capable men of Latah county, being perhaps, more than any other one man, influential in gaining for his county a separate organization, and manifesting during a long life of usefulness and faithful labor those qualities of uprightness, integrity and ability which ever characterized him in all his relations, and it is with pleasure that we are enabled to grant to his memory this humble review of a worthy life, knowing while we recount his deeds that we are treading familiar ground to every citizen of the county, for he was well known and beloved by all.

Charles Moore was born in Ohio on October 1, 1841, being the son of Amos and Mary Moore, who removed with their family to Point Bluff, Wisconsin, and there the young man met and later married Miss Julia A., daughter of John and Margaret Kneen. She was born in New York, but had been taken by her parents to Kilbourn City, Wisconsin, where they became leading citizens. This happy marriage occurred on October 13, 1864, and the following spring the young couple made the tiresome and dangerous journey across the plains with mule teams, landing in Walla Walla in the fall, where they both engaged in teaching in the public schools, remaining in this excellent work until 1869, Mr. Moore being in 1870 appointed postmaster of Walla Walla under U. S. Grant, which position he held for four years to the satisfaction of all. During this time he purchased the old Whitman mission farm and superintended it, selling the same in 1878, when he removed to Almota, where he was the agent of the Oregon Steamship Navigation Company, being also engaged in the implement business. It was in 1880 that he settled in Moscow, and with his brother, Miles C. Moore, of Walla Walla, erected a grist mill, the first one in the city. To the operation of that, together with attending to his farms, he gave his attention until the close of his life. In 1888 he was very instrumental in organizing the present Latah county, the territory being previous to that time a portion of Nez Perces county. In the prosecution of this work he made a trip to Washington, D. C., and the labors and care, together with his business responsibilities, were too heavy for his strength, and he sickened and was called from the duties of this world to participate in the realities of that to come. He was universally beloved, and his demise was a time of sincere mourning throughout the entire county, and also in all places where he was known, for he was a good man, capable and upright. At one time Mr. Moore was a member of the A. F. & A. M., in Walla Walla, but after coming to Moscow he had dropped the active affiliation with this order. The immediate relatives left to mourn his departure were his loving wife and four children, —Harry K., an attorney at Moscow; Flora P., instructress in the University of Idaho; Fred, a mining engineer in Wallace, Idaho; Edna L., attending the University of Idaho.

JOHN L. NAYLOR. A representative and well known business man of Moscow, where he conducts a real estate and insurance office, soliciting for some of the leading underwriting companies, the subject of this article is eminently fitted for representation in any volume that has to do with the annals of this section of the country.

Mr. Naylor is a native of Washington county, Pennsylvania, and the date of his birth is April 5, 1851, being the son of Aquilla and Sarah J. Naylor, who were numbered among the agricultural population of that section. He accompanied his parents to Sedalia, Pettis county, Missouri, in 1866, and there completed his common school education, later taking a course in the Central Commercial College, at Boonville, Missouri. Subsequent to this fortification for the battle of his life he turned his attention to the art of mining and wrought in the lead mines for a number of years. In 1874-75 he was foreman in the Lamine lead mines in Cooper county, Missouri. In the Centennial year he made the journey to the coast, stopping the first winter in southern Oregon and then migrating to Nez Perces county, Idaho, locating three miles north from Moscow, where he secured a fine farm. To the cultivation and improvement of this property he gave his industrious effort and attention until 1892, when he removed to the city of Moscow and opened an office as mentioned above, and since that time he has done a prosperous business in these lines in addition to superintending his farms. He was chosen by the people as county commissioner of Nez Perces county on the Republican ticket in 1886, and when the county of Latah was organized, in 1888, he was chosen to a similar office in the new organization, filling both offices with efficiency and faithfulness. In 1892 Mr. Naylor was chosen for the office of sheriff of Latah county, and in this, as in other public service, he showed both ability and integrity in the discharge of the duties incumbent upon him. Fraternally Mr. Naylor is associated with the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 31, with the Crescent Encampment, No. 12, Canton of Idaho, No. 1; Star of Rebekahs, No. 15; with the A. O. U. W., No. 13; all of Moscow.

The marriage of Mr. Naylor and Miss Rebecca E., daughter of David and Diana Allen, who were among the earliest pioneers of the state, was solemnized in Moscow on August 7, 1881, and they have become the parents of four children,—Ruth, Roy, Ralph and Neppa. Mr. Naylor has conducted himself in the affairs of life, both public duties and private enterprise, with manifestation of vigor, enterprise, ability and integrity, and he has justly earned the competence that is his to enjoy, as also the confidence and esteem of the people which is generously bestowed.

HON. SAMUEL J. LANGDON is one of the highly esteemed pioneer farmers of Latah county, and is a native of Ohio, having been born at Granville, Licking county, on May 4, 1829, and being of Scotch-Irish lineage. His ancestors were early settlers of Connecticut and participated in the Revolutionary war and the events of colonial days. One of the Langdons served as commander of Ticonderoga at one time. Jesse Langdon, the grandfather of our subject, was reared in Connecticut and there married Miss Jewett, with whom he later removed to Berkshire county, Massachusetts, following there the art of agriculture. They were members of the Congregational church and lived to a good, ripe age. Their children were Hiram, Anson, Richardson, James J., Albert, Betsey and Eunice H. James J., the father of our subject, was born on the old homestead in 1795 and when a young man removed to Licking county, Ohio, where he was married to Miss Mary White, a daughter of Captain Samuel White, a prominent citizen of the same county, having won his title by commanding a company of state militia. The maternal great grandfather of our subject was Thomas Philipps, a native of Wales, who crossed to Philadelphia, his son, John H. Philipps, being a member of Anthony Wayne's staff during the Indian wars. He removed to Licking county, Ohio, when the war was over, and there became prominent. Samuel White married Martha Philipps, daughter of Thomas Philipps, and in 1810 went to Granville, Ohio. Their daughter, Mary, became the wife of James J. Langdon, and the mother of the subject of this sketch. James J. Langdon worked at coopering after his marriage until 1840, then removed with his family to southeastern Missouri. Five years later he returned to Newark, Ohio, whence he went to McLean county, Illinois, where he died in his sixty-fifth year. The wife survived him ten years, and died in her seventieth year. Their children were Martha, Mary, Samuel J., our subject, Albert E., Elizabeth D. and Ellen E. Mary, Martha and Elizabeth have passed away. Albert E. is a resident of Illinois, and Ellen, now Mrs. Calkins, and a widow, is residing with her brother, the subject of this sketch.

S. J. Langdon was educated in Newark, Ohio, and began life as a farmer, and on July 26, 1853, married Miss Martha Virginia, a daughter of Isaac Wilson, a pioneer of Ohio. In August, 1862, Mr. Langdon enlisted in Company G, Ninety-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving in Missouri, Arkansas, Vicksburg, and in the Gulf department. Nine battles and sieges, besides many skirmishes, were participated in by him, among which are Prairie Grove, Arkansas, Vicksburg, Mississippi, Fort Morgan, Alabama, and Spanish Fort, also in Alabama. He was never wounded and he faithfully fought until the close of the war, then retired with a most creditable military record, having been promoted to corporal during the the first six months of service and later attaining the rank of sergeant. Returning to his home in Illinois, he farmed until 1866, then removed to Crawford county, Kansas, whence in 1874 he crossed the plains to Latah county, using a team of horses and a team of cows. His wife and one daughter had died in Kansas in 1872. He had left his children in Kansas when he started west and intended to go to New Mexico, but abandoned that project on acount of hostile Indians, and settled in Grass valley, Utah, for a year and a half, then was joined by his children and came on to this country, spending one winter in Walla Walla, and in 1877 coming to Latah county. He took a quarter section of government land and embarked in lumbering with partners, manufacturing most of the lumber that was used in Moscow in early days. He served as deputy assessor, later as assessor, filled the office of deputy sheriff for two terms and that of sheriff for one term and was a member of the territorial legislature in 1880, having also served in that capacity four terms in Kansas. He gave his original farm to his daughter, and now owns three hundred and twenty acres on the Little Potlatch. He has recently removed to the city of Moscow, and from there he superintends the estate, which is a bountiful producer of the cereals and fruits. He has manifested capabilities in the management of his business affairs, and he is now spending the golden years of his life in the enjoyment of a handsome competence and the esteem and confidence of all. Mr. Langdon was one of the organizers of the Republican party and held with it until Grant's second administration and then joined the ranks of Democracy, remaining there until Cleveland's second term; then he went with the Populists, but of late years he has been independent, voting according to the question and the man. Fraternally he is identified with the Order of Pyramids, the Knights of Pythias and the Grand Army of the Republic, having served on the staff of two of the national commanders of the last named order. Mr. Langdon is a loyal citizen, a genial and aftable neighbor, and a true and substantial man.

GEORGE W. PIERCE. One of the earliest pioneers of Idaho, and a man who has been acquainted with the frontier all of his life, having ever displayed courage and those telling qualities of worth which have enabled him to carve out a successful career in the west, the esteemed pioneer and gentleman whose name is at the head of this article is deserving of especial mention in the volume of his county's history, which we are pleased to accord to him.

Mr. Pierce was born in Oxford county, Maine, on March 20, 1834, and there grew to manhood and was educated. In 1853 he came, via Panama, to San Francisco, and mined in Tuolumne county, where he was successful. Later he perceived the need of further educational training, and so spent some time at the Bryant & Stratton College in San Francisco. Then he went to Virginia City, Nevada, and bought stock in the Crown Point mines, which he sold later for fourteen thousand dollars. In 1870 he could have sold the same amount for five hundred thousand dollars. Next we see him in South America, prospecting in the Andes for two years. From that place he came to Idaho, and was one of a group of men who discovered the Oro Fino mines. He was the man from whom the well known point of Pierce City was named. It is supposed to be the oldest town in Idaho, and Mr. Pierce well deserves the credit and approbation given to the sturdy pioneer. He has done a lion's share in the praiseworthy work of developing this county and this state.

At the present time Mr. Pierce is located in the Hoodoo district, where he has some very fine properties. He has constantly followed mining, more or less, since his first trip to California, and he is acquainted with it in all of its phases, and is a practical man in these lines. Mr. Pierce has raised two adopted daughters. The youngest is married and living in Greenfield, Massachusetts. The eldest died in her fifteenth year. He owns a farm of one-half section in the valley in addition to his mines and other property. Wherever he is known Mr. Pierce is highly respected and enjoys a very enviable prestige.

PART V.

HISTORY OF KOOTENAI COUNTY

CHAPTER I.

EARLY EVENTS.

Conversing recently with a prominent citizen of Kootenai county, one thoroughly familiar with its past, the writer asked him this question: "If you were writing the history of Kootenai county, to what events would you give prominence?" The answer was: "Thus far, no events worthy of special mention, aside from the construction of the railroads, have transpired in Kootenai county. Its history, as one of the best counties of the state, is just beginning." In attempting to write a comprehensive and correct past record of a county whose history is just beginning, many obstacles have been encountered. Information concerning the earlier periods of exploration, road building and Indian mission work, when no man or woman now a resident of the county had ever crossed its boundaries, was readily obtained from the writings of the missionaries, the road builders and the explorers. Later history has not been so easily obtained. There are a number of reasons for this, some of them excusable and others inexcusable. At the time of the organization of the county there were barely voters enough to secure county organization under the state law. From this handfull of men great difficulty was had in securing men enough to fill the various county offices. As there was little or no promise of remuneration for services rendered, there were no special inducements for capable men to devote their time to the management of county affairs. The few settlers who were in the county were not politicians; the field was not ripe for the office seeker; the wonderful timber resources of the country and the supposed existence of precious minerals had led a few venturesome settlers to invade the wilderness in search of homes and with the hope of acquiring wealth. These men could only hold office at a sacrifice. Under such circumstances it is not surprising that early official records were poorly kept at the time, and allowed to disappear when their immediate purpose had been served. We have not had the advantage of official records, covering the earlier life of the county. Usually the historian gains much valuable and accurate information from the files of pioneer newspapers. In Kootenai the early newspapers quit publication before the county was ten years old, the plants were moved to other parts of the country, and the files disappeared. There is not, at present, a newspaper file in the county that was published prior to the year 1890. For the record of the events of the first decade in the official life of the county we have had to depend largely upon the memory of individuals, many of whom are now residents of other counties and other states who are consequently not especially interested in the history of Kootenai. From some of the pioneer residents who still make it their home, we gained much valuable knowledge of early events. To these men we are under special obligations and in the preface of this work have made mention of their kindly assistance.

Kootenai county has no old settlers' organization and hence there has been no united effort to preserve the records historical and reminiscent of the pioneer days. No provision has been made thus far for keeping an account of the annual output from the various industries of the county. In the industrial reports gotten out yearly by the state, no definite information is tabulated concerning Kootenai county, and no county official seems to have been charged with the gathering of data of this character. Hence, from no source could we obtain full and accurate information along these lines.

However, after many weeks of persistent effort, in spite of innumerable obstacles, and indifference on the part of a few who were in position to render valuable aid along special lines we have secured the necessary information that enables us to narrate in full the events associated with the exploration, settlement and development of the county.

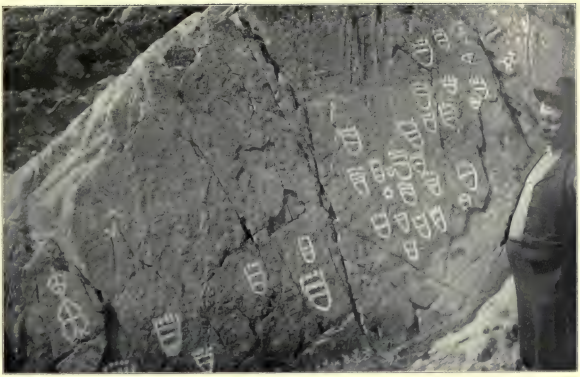
In another chapter will be found, in detail, the history of railroad schemes and railroad building in Northern Idaho, of the annexation question, and other general matter, effecting the whole territory covered by this work. In this chapter such matters will be but briefly mentioned excepting as they have directly affected conditions of Kootenai county. We will review, first, the period of early exploration and in direct connection have something to say of the aboriginal tribes of this section. We will relate the story of the Jesuit Missionaries and their work among the Indians, and tell of the first permanent settlements made in the county by home seekers. Second, we will write in detail the history of the county from the date of its organization to the present time.

It is purely a matter of speculation as to the time when white men first explored the territory now composing the political division of Idaho known as Kootenai county. Actual records of the presence of white men on the shores of Couer d'Alene and Pend Oreille lakes extend as far back as 1842. But those who came in that year found the agents of the Hudson's Bay Company located at various points along the lakes and rivers, and rude cabins of hunters and trappers were scattered about in remote mountain regions. There are no available prints telling when this section was first occupied by the Hudson's Bay Company. This is not of course a matter of vital importance as the civilization of today is but remotely the result of the visits of the fur trader. The first invasions were no doubt from the north up the Kootenai river. It is known that fur traders were in eastern Washington in 1811 and that the Hudson's Bay Company occupied the lake region of southern British Columbia still earlier in the nineteenth century, and it would have been very natural for the trapper to make excursions up the Kootenai river in the pursuit of game. In a two-days' journey he would have passed the forty-ninth parallel of latitude and made his camps in what is now Kootenai county territory.



Across-the-continent expeditions prior to the year 1853, entered the present state of Idaho through, or south of, what is known as the Lolo pass. Their course was down the Snake and Columbia rivers to the coast, and the extreme northern portion of Idaho was not visited. Inland excursions made from the Pacific coast prior to and after this date, did not extend as far east as the present Idaho boundaries. Lewis and Clarke did not explore any portion of the Idaho teritory north of the forty-seventh parallel of latitude.

Before beginning the history of settlement and development by white men, it is appropriate that we make some mention of the aboriginal tribes that were the first possessors of the land. There are evidences seeming to establish the fact of the existence here of a prehistoric race, although nothing has been discovered that sheds any light upon its character or customs. On the rocky shores of Lake Pend Oreille, near what is known as Steamboat Landing, at the head of the lake, are some rude carvings which were discovered a few years ago by John B. Leiberg, of the United States Geological Survey. They have apparently been made to represent the feet and claws or toes of animals and the forms of birds and beasts. There are also figures bearing no resemblance to existing forms of animal life. The present generation of Indians has no knowledge of the meaning or authorship of these figures and their ancestors have handed down no legends concerning the workmen who wrought so indelibly in the everlasting rocks. The carvings appear on the face of granite formations so hard that no metal instrument of modern manufacture could possibly reproduce them on the same surface. Similar evidences of the existence of an ancient race are found elsewhere but there is not space in such a work as this for exhaustive descriptions. There is opportunity here for research and speculation by the student of the future, and it will doubtless be improved.

As quite a numerous remnant of the Indian tribes that occupied this region in the beginning of the nineteenth century, still lives within the boundaries of Kootenai county, it is proper that they should have a place in its history. The Kootenais inhabited the most northern portion of the county and roamed over the greater part of British Columbia. Writers on the genealogy of the north-west Indians class the Kootenais with the Shushwap nation, a general term applied to all tribes inhabiting the region of the upper Columbia river and its northern tributaries. The primitive Kootenais are said to have possessed many notable traits of character and there are yet those living at Bonner's Ferry who had many personal dealings with the good old Chief Abraham who was ever the steadfast friend of the whites and who is held in most respectful remembrance for his personal traits, his intelligence and honesty and for his great influence for good over the members of the tribe. Compared with many other tribes of the northwest, the Kootenais have fewer repugnant characteristics. They are brave and of commanding stature. They are neat and cleanly to a certain degree and on occasion are sociable and gay, although not lacking in the traditional cold reserve of the red men. They were once a powerful tribe and were the allies of the Flatheads in many wars against their common enemy, the Blackfeet. The Kootenais are the most northern tribe accustomed to horses. These animals are supposed to have been originally obtained from the Shoshones. The latter were old-time allies of the Comanches, to whom horses were traded by the Spaniards in the Sixteenth century.

The Pend Oreilles and Couer d'Alenes belong to the Salish family of Indians. This family also belonged to the Columbia group, but dwelt south of the Shushwaps, along the Columbia river and its tributaries between the forty-seventh and forty-ninth parallels of latitude and between the Cascade and the Bitter Root mountains.

The term Pend Oreille, meaning ear-pendant, is said by some to have been applied to the lake of that name because of its resemblance in shape to the human Hieroglyphics on the Shores of Lake Pend Oreille. Scientists have not yet deciphered their meaning.

East View of Clearwater Battle Ground, where Thirteen United States Soldiers and Twenty three Indians were Killed on July 11, 1877.

ear. By others the term is said to have been applied to the Indian tribe because of the custom of wearing shell rings in the ears. The Pend Oreille Indians dwelt about the lake and for seventy-five miles on either side along the Clarks' Fork and Pend Oreille rivers. But little has been written concerning the characteristics of these Indians. They are not classed by early historians with the more powerful and warlike tribes and scarcely anything has been told of a creditable nature, of their personal traits or of their achievements in tribal contests. In physical qualities they are said to have been inferior to their neighbors and by the early missionaries they are represented as being untidy even for savages. One writer tells us that when provisions and other necessaries were scarce, or when driven to severe straits by their enemies, it was their custom to bury the very young and very old alive because they were unable to take care of themselves. By the same writer it is said that the young Pend Oreille, on reaching his majority, was sent to the top of a high mountain, where he was compelled to remain until he had dreamed of some animal or bird, which was through life to be his medicine. A claw, a tooth, or a feather of the animal, or bird, was ever afterwards worn as a charm. Although their women were treated more kindly than those of the other tribes, the standard of the wife's qualifications was her ability to work.

Some of the Kootenai Indians, and a few of the Pend Oreilles make their homes in the northern part of Kootenai county, living by farming, stock-raising, fishing and hunting; but the majority of the remnants of these tribes have been removed to the Flathead Agency in Montana.

The Coeur d'Alenes, although closely allied to the Pend Oreilles and belonging to the same general family, are mentally, morally, and physically their superiors. This is the only tribe whose primitive hunting grounds embraced what is now a portion of Kootenai county, that has a history really worth recording, and as that history bears directly upon the settlement and development of the county, and as the tribe itself has progressed from a condition of savagery to one of civilization and peace, we will enter more minutely into the record of its past than we have into that of the other tribes.

According to the missionaries now in charge of the DeSmet mission, the term Coeur d'Alene was first applied to these Indians by Canadian Frenchmen in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company. While belonging to the Salish family of Indians, their correct tribal name is Schizuumsh, which means, in the Indian tongue, "an awl's heart." This word by some historians been misspelled "Skizoomish." The Kalispel Indians call the Coeur d'Alenes "Schizui" and the Yakima Indians call them "Skizimug." These words have no special meaning, but are simply to point a distinction between this and other tribes. Our authority for these tribal appellations is Father Joseph M. Caruana, who has dwelt among these Indians and studied their language and customs for more than forty years.

There are several translations or explanations of the name Coeur d'Alene. One of the early missionary writers has this to say of the meaning of the term: "Coeur d'Alene is nothing but a nick-name. The first immigrants to this region were French Canadians belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company. From them it emanated. The literal meaning of the term is 'the heart of the owl,' and it was first given to a chief who was known through life by that name."

A Catholic historian of the present day in reviewing the history of this tribe in the columns of the Catholic Sentinel refers to them as "the savages whose excessive cruelty won for them the title indicative of their character, that of Coeur d'Alenes, Hearts of Awls."

Another writer gives "stout hearted" as a liberal translation of the term, claiming the Indians were so called because of their powers of endurance and their fearless natures.

A writer in the "Boise Statesman" in 1890 says: "The Coeur d'Alenes were not 'awl hearted,' nor Indians with pointed hearts, as some have translated the term. The Canadian trappers and hunters found a tribe of Indians inhabiting the country bordering on the beautiful sheet of water since known as 'Coeur d'Alene' lake. These Indians were strong of limb and fleet of foot—tireless runners up hill and down hill and the first white visitor gave them the name of Coeur A'haleine, meaning strong breathed or long winded—literally 'hearts of breath.' From this the word has been reduced to Alene, which, taken alone, means 'Awl'."

Following the Hudson's Bay Company's agents, came the Jesuit missionaries to the Indians. It is the office of the historian to make faithful record not alone of events which ultimately result in the settlement and development of a new country, but of all events which materially affect conditions in the new country. While the Jesuits did not bring capital, construct railroads, build cities, and put up mills in Kootenai county, their work, in another direction, was of very great importance. The changes in primitive conditions, in the attitude of the red men toward the "paleface" intruder, brought about by these faithful missionaries, were marvelous in character and far reaching in results. It is impossible to estimate the weight of their influence in subduing savage hatred and thus paving the way for the civilization that came at a later day. Theirs was not the work of a day, a year, or even of a decade. Prior to the year 1880, Kootenai county was practically an unexplored wilderness. There was not at this time a single house within its boundaries. Forty years before this, Father DeSmet began work among the Indians on the shores of Lake Coeur d'Alene and along the Coeur d'Alene river. While the work of the Jesuits has not been directly associated with the commercial and political evolution of the county, their most effective labors have been with the Indian tribes within its boundaries, and form an important chapter in its chronological history. We deem it advisable therefore, as theirs was the first civilizing influence to invade the wilderness, to give a detailed account of the work.

The first missionary work of the Catholic church in Kootenai county was by the famous Indian missionary, Father DeSmet, who, whilst on his way from St. Mary's Mission, Montana, to Vancouver, in the Spring of 1842, met the Coeur d'Alene Indians at their largest camp, called Nehim Kilgos, which was located just at the head of the Spokane river, near the present site of Fort Sherman. Here was erected a log chapel, the first mission house built in the wilderness. It was only intended as a temporary building, to serve until a more central location could be selected. He found the Indians wild and savage, warlike and treacherous, addicted to all the immoralities and brutalities, superstitions and idolatries, characteristic of the "bad" Indian. Their hatred of the white man was so inappeasable that the Hudson Bay Company did not dare to establish a trading post among them. Their prowess in fighting their aboriginal enemies is evident from the fact that they were never conquered by the red man or subjugated by the white man. The subjugation, however, came not by force of arms but by the influence of the Church. These Indians had heard of the arrival of the "Black Robes" among the Flatheads; and wishing to be equally privileged they asked the Father to remain with them, to teach them all about "Our Maker," as they called God in their language. Not being able to comply with their request for a longer time than three days, he improved the opportunity by teaching the principal prayers and dogmas of the Church in a manner of his own conception that was very ingenious. With the aid of an interpreter he translated into the Indian language spoken by the Coeur d'Alenes the sign of the Cross, the Our Father and Hail Mary, the Apostles' Creed, the Ten Commandments, the Acts of Faith, Hope, Charity, and Contrition. The translation being completed, he made all the younger members of the tribe stand in a circle around him, demanding that they should always take the same places when meeting for prayer and instruction; then he entrusted to the memory of each but one sentence of the prayers, so that the knowledge he desired to impart would be divided among them all. Frequent repetition by each in turn of what he had memorized secured to all in a few days the knowledge of the prayers in their entirety. In fact, on his return trip the zealous missionary had the pleasure of ascertaining that a large portion of the members of the tribe knew the prayers by heart.

Father DeSmet and his followers found some difficulty in teaching the Ten Commandments to many of the red men, owing to an indisposition on the part of the Indians to apply themselves studiously to the work of memorizing. The Indians were all addicted to smoking. The priests made an effort to break them of the habit; but finding it almost impossible to do so and being somewhat discouraged at the progress made in learning the commandments, they allowed each Indian to smoke a pipe when he had memorized a commandment. This had the desired effect and progress became more satisfactory. Because of the inducements held out by the priests, the commandments were called by the Indians, "The ten pipes."

In the fall of the year 1844 Father Nicholas Point and Bro. Charles Huet left the Flathead Mission in Montana under the escort of the deputation of Coeur d'Alenes who had gone there for the purpose of bringing the promised "Black Robes" to their territory. Father Point and Brother Huet selected for their first establishment a site at the mouth of the St. Joe river and placed it under the patronage of St. Joseph. St. Joe river owes its name to that first Catholic mission. Two log buildings for mission purposes were erected at this point. Two years later the venerable Father Joset, whose missionary labors covered more than half a century joined himself to the mission. About this time, the fall of 1844, Father DeSmet converted and baptised a number of Kootenai Indians and in the spring of 1845 about a dozen of the Nez Perces tribe, mostly chiefs, begged to be instructed in the Catholic faith. As the Nez Perces language differed from that of the Coeur d'Alenes, which the fathers had already succeeded in learning, they had to have recourse to a Coeur d'Alene Indian, who himself spoke the Nez Perces but indifferently, to act as interpreter. With his aid and that of signs they succeeded in converting a few of the Indians who had come to the Mission.

The same year, 1846, the mission on the banks of the St. Joe river was abandoned because the site, although an ideal one in the fall, was every year flooded by the spring freshets and consequently rendered unsuitable for the agricultural pursuits upon which the Fathers depended so much to civilize their Indian neophytes. Father DeSmet started out into the wilderness accompanied by some Indians, to find a new and more suitable location for the Mission. This was found on the opposite side of the Coeur d'Alene river from what is now known as Cataldo. Grounds for the mission buildings were selected on a hill between the river and the forest, on either side of which was an extensive prairie. At this point the river widens into a beautiful bay, making of the location an ideal one for the purpose intended. It was there that in 1853 was begun by Fathers Gazzoli and Ravalli, who had assumed charge of the mission two years previously, the building of the first Catholic church erected in Idaho. That structure still stands, a silent witness to the zeal and energy of the Jesuit Fathers, about sixteen miles from the Coeur d'Alene lake, where the steamboats make their upper landing. There are many stirring events in the history of the "Old Mission" building which make it especially cherished in the minds of all early settlers in the northwest. Beneath its moss covered roof have rested Generals Sherman, Sheridan, Isaac Stevens and others prominent in the civil and military history of this section. Father Ravalli drew the plans for the imposing structure which the Indians under his direction and that of Brother Magri executed. Brother Magri was a skilled carpenter and engineer who also built a dwelling house for the Fathers, a horse-power grist mill, a bakery and other necessary small buildings, besides a large storage barn and stable. The buildings, with the exception of the church and a small dwelling were destroyed by fire in March, 1867. They were afterwards rebuilt. The magnitude of the task undertaken by the Fathers and the untutored savages may partly be realized when one reflects that they had at their disposal none of the tools and conveniences for building which are considered indispensable in civilized communities. They manufactured trucks, harnessed themselves to them, and brought down the timber, rocks, etc., to the spot selected. They had no nails, so they turned out wooden substitutes which to this day hold the different parts of the building together. The red men of the forest received no pay and asked none; but worked solely for the honor and glory of God. Not to be allowed to work on the building was considered severe punishment, which was sometimes inflicted for disobedience to orders to the great humiliation of the culprit.

That the Jesuits did not always have smooth sailing with their Indian converts is evidenced by the war made upon the government troops in 1858, in which the Coeur d'Alenes, in spite of the efforts made by Father Josset to dissuade them, took an active part. In consequence of this rebellion the Fathers resolved to abandon the Mission; but General Clarke, commander of the Department of the Columbia, and Colonel Wright, who had led the expedition against the Coeur d'Alenes and other tribes, and had defeated them, urged the missionaries to stay at their posts, saying: "These Coeur d'Alene Indians will yet become good." Their present condition fully verifies that prophecy.

Because of the decision of the Department of the Interior which left the mission outside of the Indian reservation and because, as the Indians became civilized, there was need of more arable land than could be found in the region of the old mission, the fathers removed in 1880 to the spot now known as DeSmet. DeSmet Mission is situated in the midst of a rich agricultural district about ten miles from Tekoa, Washington. Anyone desirous of convincing himself of the success of the Jesuits in civilizing and christianizing the Coeur d'Alenes has but to pay a visit to that mission and to the reservation of which it is the center. The neat farm houses, the well-tilled fields, and the general appearance of prosperity visible everywhere, show that the savages, whose excessive cruelty distinguished them among the neighboring tribes, are now peaceable and thrifty farmers, a credit to their teachers and pastors.

DeSmet is located near Hangman's Creek, on the slope of a range of hills probably four or five miles from the southern boundary line of Kootenai county. The location is a beautiful one and is peculiarly adapted to the needs of the mission. Since its establishment in 1880 many changes and improvements have been made. There is now located here the St. Mary's convent, a school for girls. The educational work among the Indian girls is under the direction of Sister Jane de Chantal, who is Mother Superior of the convent. She has an efficient corps of assistants all belonging to the order of the Sisters of Providence. There are at present about sixty pupils attending the convent. The convent building is a modern structure with all needed conveniences.

There is also a school for Indian boys under charge of Father Caruana, assisted by Father Schuler. Here many of the youths of the tribe are educated, not a few of them going from this institution to the larger Indian schools in the east. A good two-story building has been erected for school purposes. Besides these two school buildings, there is an attractive church building 100 by 70 feet, whose foundations were laid in 1881, and a large house occupied by Father Caruana and Schuler and fitted for the accommodation of visiting priests and missionaries. There are also other structures for use in school and church work. In addition to the money expended on church and convent buildings, twenty thousand dollars have been spent in the other necessary structures. All buildings have been erected by the church, without any assistance from the government. All government aid for the maintenance of the school ceased in 1900. A short distance from the mission buildings the Indians have built a village, the counterpart of which probably does not appear any where else in the country. The buildings range from the merest shack or shed, costing a few dollars, to modern two-story frame structures, costing several thousand dollars. There has apparently been some effort to plat the village with streets, but they have succeeded in forming only narrow alleys where there is scarcely room for teams to pass. The houses are crowded together, the shack beside the more pretentious dwelling, and face in all directions without regard to the so-called street. There are, perhaps, one hundred and fifty of these dwellings in the collection. There are no fences, or walks, or trees, and the greater portion of the time there are no dwellers within the habitations. Many of the Indians live from twenty-five to seventy-five miles from the mission. During church festival and fasting periods the farm houses are deserted and there is a concerted movement toward the village. Every year these people assemble to make novenas for Christmas, Easter, Corpus Christi, and the Feast of the Sacred Heart. During these novenas they move their families to their mission homes. From hill and valley wagons containing the whole household, not excluding the dogs, may be seen slowly trundling to the mission. Buggies and other modern conveyances are also to be seen; the more stalwart and daring of both sexes, however, come on horseback. The horses are unharnessed, hobbled and turned out to graze. Smoke begins curling out of the cottage chimneys. The silent village suddenly teems with life. For a season the time is occupied in attending religious exercises and in the interim, engaging in all sorts of out door sports and pastimes. The great majority of the Coeur d'Alenes are members of the Catholic church and are devout and diligent observers of all its ceremonies. As an illustration of their strict observance of these forms and of their faithfulness in living the doctrines of the church, an incident or two may be related.

As has been stated, when the village is occupied during seasons of special religion observances, a portion of the time is spent in social enjoyments and in games. Base ball is a favorite game with the Indian youths. One afternoon in the summer of 1902 when the tribe was gathered at the village, a sight that could hardly find its counterpart anywhere occurred in the midst of an evening baseball game. The batter knocked a "high fly," and nimble and emulous hands were endeavoring to catch it, when suddenly the Angelus bell tolled. The ball was abandoned to follow the way of its momentum, and players and spectators, with uncovered heads and on their knees, devoutly recited the Angelic Salutation. Some United States Treaty commissioners, who met the Indians in solemn council, were surprised to have their deliberations unexpectedly interrupted by all the Indians, who, without a preconcerted sign, fell on their knees, made the Sign of the Cross, and spent some time in prayer. Again it was the Angelus bell.

Their high sense of the purest morality is evidenced by an illustration as brave as it is instructive. One of the half-breeds (there are only about half a dozen or so on the reservation) deserted his wife, secured a divorce and married another woman. The Indians protested to the agent that they would not, could not, tolerate this on their reservation. The agent contended that the couple were legally divorced and could not be molested. The reply was: "A—— has forsaken his wife and taken up with another woman; our children know and see A——'s real wife constantly; they see him living with the other woman; we know nothing about the white man's divorce, but we do know that our children see this scandalous example, and the criminals must leave the reservation." And they did leave. Sixty years ago these Coeur d'Alenes were confirmed polygamists.

Since the death of Father Joset, who was for so many years connected both with the old mission and the DeSmet mission, Father Joseph M. Caruana has been in full charge of the work. Father Caruana has been here and at the old mission continuously since 1880. This, however, is his third period of service among the Coeur d'Alenes. He came to the old mission first in 1862, and has spent in all, over forty years as an Indian Missionary. The Indians hold him in great reverence, and his influence over them is wonderful. He has taught them honesty and justice, and they believe him implicitly. Thieving is unknown on the reservation. If anything of value has been lost and is found by an Indian, the finder takes the article to Father Caruana and in course of time it is returned to the rightful owner, as nearly all members of the tribe pay regular visits to the priest. If an article of lesser value be found, such as a halter, a pipe, a pouch of tobacco, a spur, a piece of machinery, it is carried to the gate leading to Father Caruana's house, and hung or placed on the fence, or post, where the loser eventually finds it.

According to Sub-Indian Agent Charles O. Worley, there are now on the reservation seven hundred and seventeen Indians. This number includes a few Spokane Indians. The present chief is Pierre Wildshoe, written by the priests "Weilsholegu," and the subchief is Peter Moctilwa. There is an Indian police force of ten members, but it is very seldom that their services are required. About the only offense there is to deal with is that of drunkenness. On rare occasions an Indian secures liquor at Tekoa or Harrison, and when such a thing occurs the offender is given a quick trial and commensurate punishment. All the reservation Indians are well-to-do, and many of them are wealthy. Wealth, however, has no influence before an Indian tribunal. In October, 1902, one of the poorer Indians accompanied by a wealthy friend who had a bank account of several thousand dollars, went to Harrison, secured liquor and became intoxicated. They were arrested at Harrison, confined in the city jail over night and fined for disorderly conduct. After their return to the reservation Chief Wildshoe heard of their escapade, sent his police after them, gave them a trial, and sentenced them to several weeks in the Indian jail at the mission, and there they stayed, under guard, the poor and the rich together, until the expiration of the sentence. Cash fines for such offenses are not imposed and bail is never accepted.

Criminals or "bad Indians" are almost unknown among the Coeur d'Alenes. They have been a very few exceptions. For an outrage committed near De Smet, Basille Adrain was sent to the penitentiary, where he died after seven months' confinement. Paul Harry was another "bad Indian" who made a criminal record. In the summer of 1887 he murdered a half-breed Indian woman, named Mrs. Peavy, and her child, near Farmington, Washington, on the reservation. He was arrested and placed in charge of a squaw who permitted him to escape. After hiding in the mountains for several months he returned to the reservation, was re-arrested and jailed at Rathdrum. After several months' confinement, with the assistance of a white man who was sharing his imprisonment, he broke jail and went back to his former haunts, sending word to Sheriff William Martin that he had desperate Indian friends with him, and that if he (Martin) came after him he would meet a warm reception. Sheriff Martin went to the reservation, re-arrested him, single handed and alone, and returned him to the jail. The Indian was afterwards admitted to bail in the sum of $100, and, for some unexplained cause, was never prosecuted for the murder. A few years after the commission of this crime, however, he was convicted of horse stealing and died after a few months' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Wildshoe succeeded Chief Andrew Saltice, who died April 20, 1902. The older chiefs of the tribe in the time of Fathers DeSmet and Joset were Chiefs Basha and Vincent. These chiefs were leaders in many of the tribal wars in early days and in the wars against United States troops in the 'fifties.

The Coeur d'Alene Indians' reservation originally extended as far north as the Spokane river, spread east into Shoshone county, and included the region of the Coeur d'Alene mines, and west into Washington, including territory in the region now occupied by Spokane, Rockford, Tekoa, Farmington and Palouse. The government seems never to have made any special acknowledgement of the rights of the Indians to this territory, although there was a tacit acknowledgement when Governor Stevens was sent in 1870 and 1871 to treat with the Spokane Indians and endeavor to induce them to move into the Coeur d'Alene reservation. This was repeated in 1887 when the government appointed John V. Wright, Jarred W. Daniels and Henry W. Andrews, a commission to purchase from the Coeur d'Alenes all of this Washington territory. A treaty was made, which was not ratified until 1891, by which the lands were ceded for a consideration of $150,000. In 1889 another commission, composed of Benjamin Simpson, John H. Shoup and Napoleon B. Humphrey, was sent to treat with the Indians. In September, 1889, a treaty was signed, ceding to the government the northern and eastern portions of their reservation. This included on the west of Lake Coeur d'Alene all lands south of Spokane river to a line about eight miles south of the north line of township forty-eight. It also included the region of the Coeur d'Alene mines on the east. The consideration was $500,000, and the treaty was ratified by Congress February 18, 1891. By the terms of this treaty the government agreed that none of the remaining lands of the reservation should ever be sold, opened to white settlement or otherwise disposed of without the consent of the Indians residing thereon. The reservation is now wholly within Kootenai county, and the north boundary on the east side of Lake Coeur d'Alene is a short distance below the north line of township forty-seven. This line leaves the lake less than a mile south of the town of Harrison. At the time of this sale to the government each Indian received as his share of the purchase money $1,033. Among the Indians, as among the whites, there are wise men and there are foolish men. Many of the Indians invested their money in loans, in stock and in comfortable dwellings. A great deal of it was invested in wire for fencing. As there has been no allotment of lands to the members of this tribe, and as there is a great surplus of land, each Indian may fence as much as he chooses. In one instance at the time of this sale, an Indian, named Daniel Quenemosa, expended the entire thousand dollars in barbed wire and fenced in several thousand acres, the greater portion of which he has no use for whatever. It is said that another member of the tribe had visited Spokane a number of times and had witnessed funeral processions headed by plumed hearses with glass sides. His ambition was to own such a vehicle for a family carryall. When he received his money he went to Spokane, paid $900 for a hearse, to which he hitched his team of cayuses, and into which he loaded his family, consisting of a wife and several children, and mounting the seat, drove proudly through the streets and on to his reservation home.

The Coeur d'Alenes have abandoned all distinctive features of Indian tribal life, such as the blanket, tepee, dances, unshorn hair, etc. Indian costumes have long since been laid aside and the dress of civilization adopted. In general appearances aside from the rugged Indian faces they can hardly be distinguished from their "pale-face" brethren. In the descriptive chapter of Kootenai county will be found information concerning the farming industry as followed by the Indians and the results that have been obtained.

The government looks after the tribe through General Indian Agent Albert M. Anderson. Sub-Indian Agent Charles O. Worley has been stationed on the reservation since 1896. He first came here as engineer at the government flour and saw mills north of DeSmet. Next to the "black gowns" Mr. Worley is held in highest esteem by the Indians. He is consulted in matters of business and in all other affairs his authority is universally respected.

There are no authentic accounts of the presence of white men in extreme northern Idaho during the forties excepting the fur traders and missionaries. In April, 1853, Isaac I. Stevens, who had just been appointed governor of the territory of Washington, started west from St. Paul to explore a route from the sources of the Mississippi river to Puget Sound. In Gov. Stevens's report of this journey, we find descriptions of the Spokane river, Coeur d'Alene river and lake, St. Joe river, Clark's Fork of the Columbia, and Pend Oreille lake. This is evidence that he had his company spent some time in the central portion of the Kootenai county of today. The Stevens expedition was in pursuance of the act of congress in the same year appropriating $150,000 for the exploration of a northern route across the continent. From the fact that Mr. Stevens was one of the incorporators of the Northern Pacific railroad in Washington territory in 1857, we assume that his descriptions of the country had much to do with the selection of a route for that road nearly a quarter of a century later, and that consequently his visit and explorations had a very direct bearing and influence upon the settlement and development of the country.

On August 11, 1856, a law was passed by Congress authorizing the appointment of a commission to unite with a similar commission to be appointed by Great Britain for the purpose of carrying into effect the first article of the treaty of June 15, 1846, that was to determine and mark the boundary line between the United States and the British possessions westward from the summit of the Rocky Mountains. In February, 1857, Hon. Archibald Campbell was appointed commissioner for the United States, and Lieutenant John G. Parks, U. S. A., was appointed chief astronomer and surveyor. Three commissioners were appointed by Great Britain. Captains Prevost and Richards, of the Royal Navy, were first and second commissioners, respectively, their duties being limited to the determination of the water boundary referred to as "the Channel which separates the Continent from Vancouver's Island." In the summer of 1858, Col. J. S. Hawkins, Royal Engineers, appointed by the British Government commissioner, to determine the boundary line along the forty-ninth parallel, arrived in the United States prepared for field operations. At a meeting of the joint commission the following agreement relating to the plan of work was entered into: After discussing plans for determining and marking the line as far eastward as the Cascade mountains, it was concluded to be inexpedient at that time, in consequence of the great expense, consumption of time, and the impracticable nature of the country, to mark the whole boundary by cutting a track through the dense forest. It was therefore agreed to approach the forty-ninth parallel in accessible regions, and from fixed points, cut a track through the forest, not less than twenty feet in width on each side for the distance of half a mile or more, according to circumstances. Further, that the boundary be similarly marked where it crosses streams of any size, permanent trails, or any striking natural feature of the country. In the vicinity of settlements it was deemed advisable to cut the track for a greater distance and to mark the boundary with stone monuments. The work was prosecuted through the summers of 1858, 1859 and 1860, but owing to the breaking out of the Civil war, all operations were suspended, and have never been renewed. The work of running and marking the boundary was carried on through a country previously almost unknown. The forty-ninth parallel extends for the greater part of the distance over rugged and precipitous mountains that attain a great elevation and it was found impossible to follow it continuously. In some instances trails were opened from the south to the boundary, through regions of comparatively low elevations, involving great labor in cutting, grading and bridging to make the route practicable for packmule transportation. Water courses were numerous and rapid, rendering fords frequent and dangerous, and a slight rise of many of the streams would have made them impassable but for the timely precaution of building bridges at small streams and ferryboats at the river crossings. Many of the trails opened are now traveled routes to the mines then and since discovered. In this way the boundary was marked from the Sound east about 400 miles, or to a point in Montana east of the valley of the Kootenai river. During the summers of 1858 and 1859 one of these trails was made through Kootenai county. Its course was from the old Plante ferry on the Spokane river, via the present locations of Rathdrum and Seneaquoteen to a joint on the Pend Oreille river twelve miles below the Campfield ferry; thence in a northeasterly direction to the present site of Bonner's Ferry; thence down the Kootenai valley to the vicinity of what is now Porthill. This route afterward became known as the Wild Horse trail. Two hundred yards from the K. V. railroad depot at Porthill may be seen one of the International Boundary stones. The exact line is marked by a post which is beneath the earth's surface, and over this is heaped a mound of rough stone. There are two of these monuments on the Kootenai county line, the one described at Porthill and a similar one where the Mooyie creek trail crosses the International Boundary, thirty-two miles from Bonner's Ferry. When we consider the great dangers that were faced and the almost insurmountable difficulties that were encountered by the members of the commission in a wild and unexplored wilderness, some idea may be had of the herculean task performed by these fearless agents of the government. The mounds and the cleared spaces constitute a magnificent testimonial to the men who accomplished the work after "fifty-four, forty, or fight" had resulted in the Ashburton treaty and something less than fifty-four forty without a fight.

One of the most important undertakings, and one whose history is closely interwoven with that of all the northwest, was the construction, during the years 1859 and 1861, inclusive, of the famous Mullan road. This highway extended from old Fort Walla Walla, now Wallula, Washington, to the head of navigation on the Missouri river at Fort Benton, Montana. While sections of the road lay across stretches of rolling prairies where extensive construction work was not necessary, the greater part of the distance traversed was one of the most broken and mountainous regions of the country; a region which the railroads afterwards found the most difficult to cross of any between the Mississippi river and the coast. Over this road passed thousands of emigrants in the sixties and seventies, and from 1860 to 1881 it was practically the only highway of travel between Montana, Northern Idaho, Washington and Oregon. A book, now out of print, written by Captain John Mullan, the builder of this road, and entitled "The Construction of a Military Road," gives a detailed account of the expedition and of the great work that was performed. We have had access to a copy of this old volume which we found in the public library at Portland. The road was built directly across Kootenai and Shoshone counties, Idaho, entering the state at a point on the Spokane river a few miles southwest of the present site of Hauser, known at various periods in the past as Antoine Plante's Ferry, Cowley's Ferry and Spokane Bridge, passing the present location of the town of Coeur d'Alene, leaving Kootenai and entering Shoshone county at "Old Mission," near the present site of the town of Cataldo, on the Coeur d'Alene river, and leaving Shoshone county and the state over what was known as Sohon's Pass through the Bitter Root mountains, near the present town of Mullan. As the history of both counties is included in this volume, we will incorporate the story of the Mullan road in this chapter. We will allow Captain Mullan to tell the story in his own words. The following paragraphs are excerpts from the volume previously mentioned:

"On the morning of the 16th of July, 1859, we resumed our march, moving eastwardly for nine miles over an easily swelling prairie region, timbered for the last three miles, to a point which I had selected for a depot camp, while our work was progressing in advance. We had left the plains of the Columbia proper and reached the spurs of the Bitter Root mountains, where our more difficult work commenced. We had chosen for our location a line which, jutting upon the southern edge of the Coeur d'Alene lake, would follow up for four miles the valley of the St. Joe river; when crossing it would make the most direct line across the divide of the Coeur d'Alene river; thence up the valley of that stream to the Coeur d'Alene mission. Our first work of difficulty was to make the descent of seven hundred feet from the table land to the valley of the St. Joe. Several points were examined, but none afforded a natural descent, and I was forced to make one over a long spur making down to the lake at the juncture of the St. Joe river with the outlet of the Poun lake. Over the outlet a bridge of sixty feet was constructed. This piece of excavation was rocky and difficult, but the bridge was completed in eight days. I then moved the entire camp four miles up the valley of the St. Joe to the point selected for crossing. We immediately set the whip-sawyers in the timber to get out the necessary timber, and some men to burning tar; and, being provided with the necessary oakum, we built two flat-boats, forty-two feet long, twelve feet broad and two feet deep, one for the St. Joe river and the other for the Coeur d'Alene. The latter, when completed, was rowed down into the lake, and thence up the Coeur d'Alene river to the point selected for crossing. While this was being accomplished the divide between the two streams was examined, the road marked out, and several parties placed at work upon it. This work from the St. Joe crossing involved the building of a corduroy road four hundred feet long over a wet section of the river bottom, and a heavy excavation up a suitable spur in order to gain the divide seven hundred feet above. This entire work occupied our force until the 5th day of August, 1859. During this interval our topographers were engaged in tracing the St. Joe to its sources in the Bitter Root mountains, marking its tributaries and defining its boundaries; also making a survey of the Coeur d'Alene lake.

"The line to the Coeur d'Alene river being completed by the 5th of August, I moved the entire train to its left bank, where it remained in camp until the 9th, when the road, for nine miles up its left bank to the point of crossing, was completed. This work consisted of a side cut of a fourth of a mile along a broken, rocky spur, jutting upon the river's edge, building bridges and cutting through a slight growth of timber near the point of crossing. Our boat being in readiness, we crossed the river on the 10th and remained on the left bank until the morning of the 16th, engaged with our entire force in opening the line thence to the Coeur d'Alene mission, which involved building three bridges, making a cut of one mile of excavation along difficult spurs, and cutting through timber for three miles, which, when completed, gave us an excellent road. On the morning of the 16th of August we reached the mission, two hundred miles from Walla Walla. This was one of our fixed points from which began our mountain work proper. That this proved a difficult task to handle our three years labor abundantly proves.

"Reaching the mission we determined to make it a depot point for our train until such time as our work in advance should enable us to move forward. Placing the depot under the charge of Lieutenant White, we divided our force into several sections and distributed them along the line of work for ten miles. This work consisted of timber cutting and clearing, building small bridges, corduroying wherever the ground was wet and marshy and making side cuts wherever it was sidling or where the formation of the spurs compelled it. Crossing the Coeur d'Alene a mile above the mission we lost sight of the river till reaching the Four Mile prairie, a point four miles beyond, and again lost sight of it until reaching a point we called the Ten Mile prairie. This section of the road for the first four miles passes mostly through a timbered region and along the south foot of the spurs; making back for the river until it reaches the Four Mile prairie; after which it again enters a timbered region till reaching the Seven Mile prairie, and then again through timber until it reaches Ten Mile prairie. The work from the mission to the Ten Mile prairie occupied us until the 17th of August, when we again brought forward our entire train to the new depot. Every one was moved except the astronomical party under Mr. Weisner and Mr. Koleski, who were left at the mission during a lunation to fix the position of that point. Our position at Walla Walla had already been determined by a six weeks' series of observation, and our plan was to occupy as many fixed points as time and circumstances would allow.

"While at the Coeur d'Alene mission we had sent out two parties to explore and bring back such data as would guide our judgment in our further movements. The one was assigned to Mr. P. M. Engle, whose duties were to cross the bed of mountains along the south fork of the Coeur d'Alene river and strike the Clark's Fork at or near Thompson's prairie, in order to see if the country along this route was adapted to a cheap location. In this undertaking he was provided with the necessary Indian guides and outfits, and directed to pursue his examinations up the Clark's Fork to the Pend Oreille mission, and return by way of the Bitter Roots, recrossing the mountains via Sohon's Pass and thence to our camp. This was fully and satisfactorily accomplished, and developed the fact that the features of the mountains precluded the possibility of securing a line in that direction. The second party was placed in charge of Mr. Sohon, with directions to pass rapidly forward and mark in a general manner the location; to ascertain the best point of passage over the Coeur d'Alene mountains, and to continue his examination down the valley of St. Regis Borgia to the Bitter Roots, and thence up to the Hell's Gate valley. For this purpose he, too, was provided with the best Indian guides we could procure, and fulfilled his mission satisfactorily, returning to camp by the 15th of September. From my own knowledge of the country, and the additional data brought in by Mr. Sohon, I saw that we had to content ourselves with the cheapest location that the peculiar features of the valleys of the Coeur d'Alene and St. Regis Borgia warranted. Both of these valleys were densely timbered, with here and there a prairie affording scanty grass. Both of the valleys at points verged toward canyons, and their rivers were serpentine in their course, leaving alternate flats and spurs along their banks; hence the character of the streams necessitated frequent crossings or long and difficult side cuts to avoid them. The latter was a work of great magnitude, and incompatible with the means at our disposal; hence the former was our only alternative. Our work, consequently, from the 16th day of August to the 4th of December, 1859, consisted in cutting through this densely timbered section of one hundred miles, building small bridges where required, and grading in thousands of places, made necessary by the physical nature of the country. We likewise graded an ascent of one and three-fourths miles, to the summit of the Coeur d'Alene mountains. This work was heavy, and in so brief a report as herewith given justice cannot be done to the industry and fortitude of the men while mastering this wilderness section. The standing timber was dense and the fallen timber that had accumulated for ages formed an intricate jungle well calculated to impress one with the character of impracticability. Suffice it to say that we mastered the many difficulties with which its construction was fraught and reached our winter camp in the St. Regis Borgia valley on the 4th of December."

Facts which came to the knowledge of Captain Mullan later caused him to make changes in the road during the summer of 1861, of which he thus speaks:

"From what I had seen of the wet and mucky character of the St. Joe valley in early spring, I found that we should be compelled this season to cross the Snake river and skirt the northern rim of the Coeur d'Alene lake, opening a new section of thirty miles from the lake to the mission. To this end I had the line explored in September, 1861, by Mr. W. W. Johnson. Crossing the Snake by the 20th of May, we worked the road up the bluffs on its right bank and gained the table land, where we had no difficulty in making a camp on the Palouse, fourteen miles from the former river.

"Leaving the Palouse on the morning of the 21st of May, we journeyed over the prairie hills to Cow creek, a distance of eleven miles, having an excellent road. The Colville wagon road from Walla Walla is one and the same with our own up to this point; thence it tends up the Cow creek, while our own leads toward the east in the direction of Antoine Plante's Ferry on the Spokane. This ferry is chartered by the legislature of Washington territory, and, being already established by a fixed settler, I determined to make it a point of my route. Leaving the Cow creek on the morning of the 22nd of May, we moved eighteen miles over an easy, open prairie country, with light work to Aspen Grove; cold springs of water were passed en route. From thence our next march was to a chain of lagoons distant two and one-half miles, for which distance we still had an excellent prairie road, and from thence to Rock creek, crossing it at the same point made by our old location. From Rock creek, in thirteen and one-half miles we reached Lake Williamson. From Lake Williamson in six miles we reached Hangman's creek, the valley of which is four hundred feet below the Spokane plain; this involved a cut of one-third of a mile, at the end of which we reached the point selected for the crossing. This stream was now swollen, and we camped upon it for four days while building a bridge fifty feet long. Having improved the road in advance, we moved on towards the Spokane at Antoine Plante's, reaching that point on the 1st of June, a distance of one hundred and twelve and one-half miles from Fort Walla Walla. At this point we were joined by another portion of the escort which had marched from Fort Colville under Lieutenant Harker, of the Ninth Infantry; these fully completed the complement of men originally intended for the expedition.

"The ferry at Spokane is a good one, consisting of a strong cable stretched across the river and a boat forty feet long. It is kept by a worthy man, Antoine Plante, a half-breed Flathead Indian, who speaks both French and English; he has a small field under cultivation on the left bank near the ferry landing, from which he obtains corn, wheat and vegetables; these, with the salmon found in the river, form an abundant supply for his Indian family. The winters here are generally mild, and stock range the hills and plains the whole season, no provision for forage being made. Small tracts of good soil are found bordering the river, as well as two or three miles back; several of these are under cultivation by the Indians, and a few Frenchmen; one of the finest of these is on the south bank, about ten miles from Plante's, in a re-entering angle of the mountains; here the Coeur d'Alene Indians have small farms enclosed. Effecting safely the crossing of the Spokane river, which is here three hundred feet broad and eight deep, with rapid current and high banks, on the morning of the 3rd of June we moved up its right bank to a camp at Seltisse's farm, distant nineteen miles. We had an excellent road, fifteen miles of which was over level prairie, and the remainder through a beautiful open pine forest; work in clearing away the timber was all that was required. We passed, during this march, an Indian burial ground of the Coeur d'Alenes, where a cross, erected over each grave, testified the cheering fruits of the labors of the noble Jesuit fathers in their midst. Seltisse is a worthy Coeur d'Alene Indian, who has several acres under cultivation, and while hunting, fishing and tilling the soil, leads the life of an independent chief. I have always found him frank, honest and friendly. From his camp we reached in four miles a considerable creek that drains a small sheet of water to the north, and empties into the Coeur d'Alene lake; here we entered a difficult belt of timber, extending for thirty miles to the Coeur d'Alene mission. I determined, therefore, to make this a depot point for such provisions as we had with us, and sent a wagon train back to the mouth of the Palouse, where the steamers were to deposit the remainder. Perfecting these arrangements, I set my men at work, a portion building a bridge over the stream, and the remainder making a side cut in the spurs that jutted upon the lake. Mr. Sohon, with a small party and an Indian guide, was kept in advance to mark out the road, and give us in full detail the features of the country. This thirty miles of new road was a difficult undertaking, and occupied us until the 1st of August. The country was broken and unfavorable to our purposes, but we took advantage of its features as far as possible, following the bottoms of small creeks, and only cutting through the dense timber when it could not be avoided, by these means eventually securing a fair location. The Wolf's lodge prairie, with an area of a square mile, occurs midway between the mission and the lake, and with the fine grasses on the hills that surround it constitutes a fixed and favorable camping ground. Traces of gold are said to have been found in it; and I myself came across a small camp of men here on my return from the mission in 1862. Quartz is found on many of the neighboring hills, and rumor would set forth that this immediate section was favorable for gold developments. Reaching the Coeur d'Alene mission, we united with our old road of 1859."

From Fort Walla Walla to Fort Benton, via the Mullan road, is six hundred and twenty-four miles. The object in view in the construction of the road, as stated by Mr. Mullan, was to open a base line from the plains of the Spokane, on the west, to the plains of the Missouri on the east, from which other lines could subsequently be opened, and by means of which the correct geography of the country could be delineated. Another object was to ascertain whether there was a practicable railroad route through the valleys and a practicable pass through the mountains, through which a railroad could subsequently be built. These objects were fully attained and the road became the most famous of the early routes of travel, broadening eventually into a mighty way for a great civilization from sea to sea. Pioneer newspapers published in the late seventies carried a standing column which was headed, "How to Get Here." These papers were sent east for the benefit of those contemplating emigration to the west. Several routes were described, among them the following: To Ogden by rail; thence to Walla Walla by wagon road; thence to Spokane Falls by the Mullan road to Spokane river. Another route recommended was by rail to Kelton; thence by wagon to Walla Walla; thence by wagon over the Mullan road to Spokane. Still another route was up the Missouri river to Fort Benton, Montana; thence by wagon over the Mullan road to the plains of Spokane river. In 1879 the old road was repaired, east of the Coeur d'Alene mountains, by General Penrose, and west by a detachment under command of Lieutenant Turner, from Fort Sherman. There were found to be thirty-eight bridges on the St. Regis Borgia in Montana, twenty-six of the crossings being made in a distance of eighteen miles. The road is still in use through the mountain regions. The old, old wilderness road has had a wonderful history. For twenty years it was in constant use by hunters, adventurers, tourists and emigrants, who "stained it with their blood and tears and lined it with their graves." Were all the comedies and tragedies enacted along this wilderness way retold, they would store volumes with perhaps the most interesting and at the same time pathetic and tragic incidents associated with the reclaiming of the great northwest.

The development of Kootenai county may be said to have begun with the completion of the Mullan road. Although no material progress was made until two decades later there were settlements in various parts of the county in 1863 and 1864. The advantages offered by adjacent territory were doubtless apparent to the west-bound emigrants over this route and some are known to have returned at a later date and made permanent homes here. A. L. Coffey, now living near Sandpoint, assisted in construction work on this road. Data in our possession do not show a direct connection between the settlement of the country and the existence of the road; but the first comers entered the county over it and it was no doubt an important factor in the later process of development. Covering the period between 1861 and 1881, Kootenai county remained practically an uninhabited wilderness. The first permanent establishments were ferries over the Kootenai and Pend Oreille rivers, a pony mail route station at "Westwood," now Rathdrum, government steamer service on the lakes, and the location of Fort Sherman on Lake Coeur d'Alene. We have already told of the coming of the Jesuit missionaries, and of the work performed by them; we will now write briefly of the affairs of the sixties and seventies.

The discovery of placer mines in the Wild Horse country, British Columbia, early in the sixties, resulted in a great rush to that country. Many went by the Columbia river route, and many others by what was first called the boundary commission trail and later became known as the Wild Horse trail, which entered the county near the old Plante ferry on the Spokane river; proceeded via the present site of Rathdrum and Seneaquoteen to the Campfield Ferry on the Pend Oreille river; thence to Bonner's Ferry was on the Kootenai river and down that stream to British Columbia. The establishment of Bonner's Ferry was the first business enterprise within the present county boundaries; we will therefore give some of the details as we have gathered them from various reliable sources. On July 10, 1902, there died at Missoula, Montana, one of the wealthiest and most prominent pioneer citizens of that state. He had lived in the northwest since 1853 and had been closely identified with all efforts for its development and advancement. He took an active interest in trans-continental railroad construction, and in 1893 was appointed one of the receivers of the Northern Pacific railroad in Montana. At the time of his death he was Montana's member of the national Republican committee. We refer to Edwin L. Bonner, for whom Bonner's Ferry was named. When the rush to the Wild Horse country began, prospectors were taken over the Kootenai river in canoes by old Chief Abraham and other members of his tribe. In the summer of 1863 Edwin L. Bonner and his cousin, R. A. Eddy, together with Hiram Robertson and John Walton, journeying from Walla Walla to the Kootenai country in British Columbia, camped on the bank of the Kootenai river at the point where the gold seekers were rowed across by the Indians. Circumstances made it necessary for Mr. Bonner and his party to remain in camp for several days, and during this stay he conceived the idea of building and operating a ferry, it being evident to his mind from the constant travel this way, that it would prove a good investment from a financial standpoint. Negotiations were at once opened with Chief Abraham, from whom Mr. Bonner purchased the right to build and operate the ferry. The ferry was put in operation in 1864 and Mr. Bonner also established a trading post in connection. As an interesting item of information relating to this establishment we print below an act passed at the second session of the Idaho territorial legislature.

"Be it enacted by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Idaho, as follows:

"Section 1. That R. A. Eddy, E. L. Bonner and J. W. Walton, their heirs and assigns, be and they are hereby authorized to establish a ferry across the Kootenai river at a point known as Bonner's Ferry or Chulimtah; and that the said R. A. Eddy, E. L. Bonner and John W. Walton, their heirs and assigns, shall have the exclusive privilege of ferrying upon said river for a distance of two miles up and five miles down said river, from the above described point of said ferry, for the term of five years from and after the passage of this act.

"Section 2. It shall be lawful for the said R. A. Eddy, E. L. Bonner and John W. Walton, their heirs and assigns, to receive and collect in United States gold and silver coin, or its equivalent, the following rates of toll ferriage across said river, viz: For each footman, fifty cents; for each man and horse or mule, one dollar and fifty cents; for pack animals, loaded, one dollar and fifty cents; for pack animals, empty, seventy-five cents; for loose animals, other than sheep or hogs, fifty cents; for sheep and hogs, each twenty cents. Approved, December 22, 1864."

A similar act was passed at the same session granting like ferry privileges to J. B. Roberts, A. E. Ridles and J. T. Galbraith, at a point on the Kootenai river fifteen miles below "Linklighter's Station," but there is no record of a permanent ferry at this place. Still another act of this session of the legislature granted to Charles H. Campfield and associates the authority to operate a ferry on the Pend Oreille river for a distance of three miles up and down the river from a point "twelve miles above the point where the military or boundary commission road crossed said river." At this ferry they were authorized to collect the following tolls: For each wagon and two animals, three dollars; for each additional span of horses or cattle, one dollar; for each man and horse, one dollar and fifty cents; for each pack animal, one dollar; for each footman, fifty cents; for loose animals, other than sheep or hogs, per head, twenty-five cents; for sheep or hogs, per head, ten cents.

Although some settlements were made later in the vicinity of the Campfield and Roberts ferries, the events of historical value and interest associated with this period are grouped about Bonner's Ferry and trading post. Mr. Bonner did not take personal charge of the business, but employed as his agent, John Walton, who continued in charge until 1874, when he was succeeded by Louis Lee. In 1875 Richard Fry came to Bonner's Ferry from the Wild Horse country. Mr. Fry was another of the sturdy pioneers. He crossed the plains in 1849, and resided until 1858 in Linn county, Oregon, serving in the Indian wars of 1855 and 1856 and taking part in the battle of Walla Walla in December, 1855, at the time the famous old Walla Walla warrior, Pio-Pio-Mox-Mox, was slain. Richard Fry, who died at Rathdrum December 15, 1898, was one of the most prominent and respected pioneers of Kootenai county. He was a man of strong personality, generous and just in all his dealings with his white and Indian neighbors and all who knew him regarded him as a personal friend. As an incident illustrative of the esteem in which he was held we quote the following from an issue of the Kootenai Herald, dated December 25, 1898:

"An impressive scene was witnessed at the funeral services of the late Richard Fry. When the lid of the casket was opened for the last time at the church to allow the relatives and friends to view the features of the dead, there filed down the aisle a long line of Kootenai Indians with slow and solemn tread. Each touched the casket and made the sign of the cross as he passed by his dead friend. The confidence of the Indians in Richard Fry was something marvelous. For years he had been an adviser in their troubles and so tempered with justice had been all his dealings with them that they had learned to trust him implicitly, and their mourning for the dead was no less sorrowful than that of their pale face brothers."

Richard Fry leased the ferry and trading post of E. L. Bonner in 1875 and for many years did an extensive business with miners, trappers and Indians, in the earlier years taking their gold dust and furs in exchange for goods and supplies. In 1876 his brother, Martin M. Fry, located at Bonner's Ferry and assisted in conducting the ferry and post. After the retirement of Richard Fry in 1892, the business was continued for many years by Martin Fry and his sons. The ownership of the ferry eventually passed to Malcom Bruce, from whom it was purchased by the county in 1902 for the sum of five hundred dollars. It is still in operation, but a bridge will doubtless be built across the Kootenai river at this point in the near future as the question of its construction is now being agitated.

During the seventies mail was received at Bonner's Ferry once each month. During the summer months it was carried on horse back from Victoria, British Columbia, via Fort Hope and Okanogan lake, British Columbia, Colville, Washington, Seneaquoteen, Pend Oreille lake, Bonner's Ferry and on to Wild Horse, British Columbia. In winter it was carried on snow shoes over the same route. Among the mail carriers were James Wardell, John Shelton and Ned Bray, all Canadians; Mr. Shelton, however, made his home at Colville, Washington. During this period four pack trains made regular trips through Kootenai county from Wild Horse, British Columbia, to Walla Walla. They were owned, respectively, by Galbraith Brothers and Robert Mathers, of Wild Horse, George Dacre, of Walla Walla, and Fry Brothers, of Bonner's Ferry. Between the years 1873 and 1884 there was but one family of white settlers in this region, that of Martin Fry. Their only neighbors were Indians, with whom they never had serious trouble. There was a "scare" in 1878 when the Bannock war broke out, but no harmful results followed. At this time the Kootenai Indians became very restless. There were among them some relatives of Indians who had been executed for participation in the massacre of 1866 and these sought to lead the Kootenais out on the warpath. Richard Fry was at Victoria at the time, with the pack train, and the Indians assumed such a threatening attitude that Martin concluded it the better part of wisdom, on his family's account, to escape to a place of greater security. With the assistance of his wife he buried the stock of goods from the store, working nearly all night, and just before daybreak they mounted mules belonging to the Dacre pack train, which chanced along on a down trip, and rode to the present site of Rathdrum, where they stopped with the family of Wesley Wood until quiet was restored among the red men. Settlers never afterward had any serious difficulties with the Kootenai Indians. Most of the Kootenais eventually became Catholics under the teachings of Father Fouquet of the St. Mary's Mission near Wild Horse, B. C. In 1889 Major Ronan was sent to these Indians by the government with instructions to offer them a choice between allotments of land here or residence on the Flathead reservation in Montana. Some accepted land and are now living on their allotments in northern Kootenai and others went to the reservation, where they still reside. We have referred to the massacre of 1866, an account of which will be found in the chapter on reminiscences.

Early in the seventies a relay station on the pony mail route from The Dalles and Walla Walla to Missoula, Montana, was established at the Wesley Wood ranch, where Rathdrum is now located. Details concerning settlements in the central portion of the county are given in another portion of this volume in connection with the history of Rathdrum and of Post Falls. The mail route to which we refer crossed the county from Spokane Bridge via the Wood ranch to Steamboat Landing at the head of Lake Pend Oreille; thence by government steamers down the lake to a small settlement near the present site of Sandpoint; thence in a southeasterly direction over the mountains to Missoula. It connected with the Mullan road at Rock creek, fifty miles southwest of Spokane, and followed it to Spokane Bridge. From Walla Walla to Missoula the distance as traversed was four hundred miles. There were twenty-one stations and twenty-five riders, each rider making from forty to seventy miles per day, with several relays, carrying mail and small packages of express. Wesley Wood, now living at Rathdrum, carried mail over this route for five years. C. C. Huntley had the star-route mail contract for a term of years with a yearly compensation of $33,333. To facilitate the handling of the mails between these two points, and to the country north, the government constructed three steamers for use on the Pend Oreille lake, the first of which was the Mary Moody, built at Seneaquoteen in 1864.

Settlements at Bonner's Ferry, Rathdrum and Seneaquoteen were the first made in the county. They were followed closely by others in different localities, but as this period of settlement was prior to county organization, we have given details in connection with the history of the various towns as separate corporations.

The last important event preceding county organization was the establishment of Fort Coeur d'Alene, later called Fort Sherman. While on a tour of inspection in 1877 General William T. Sherman came from Fort Benton, Montana, over the Mullan road, to Lake Coeur d'Alene. He was on his way to Fort Walla Walla, but spent some time on and about the lake, visiting the missions and acquainting himself with the Indian situation at the various agencies. He was charmed with the beauty of the surroundings and his soldier's eye readily discerned the superior advantages offered as a location for an army post. On his recommendations a military reservation was created here containing 999 acres. The site chosen was at the foot of the lake, bordering on the lake and on the Spokane river. The reservoir was established in 1878, but the army post was not fully equipped and officered until the following year. As has been stated the post was first named by General Sherman, Fort Coeur d'Alene, but at the time of the General's death in 1891 the name was changed in his honor to Fort Sherman.

The first commander at the post was Col. H. C. Merriam of the Second U. S. Infantry, five companies of soldiers being stationed here in the beginning. Col. Merriam was followed in command by Col. Wheaton, who in turn was successively followed by Maj. (now General) Randall, Lieut. Col. Cook, Col. Carlin, and Col. Hall. The last officer in command was Col. Thatcher, who had under him five companies of the Sixteenth U. S. Infantry. The post was never regularly garrisoned after the breaking out of the Cuban war in 1898. In the early summer of 1894 the melting of the deep snows in the Coeur d'Alene and Bitter Root mountains raised the waters in the lake and river to such an extent that the post grounds were flooded and continued so for several weeks. After this freshet army officers made continued and persistent efforts to have the post abandoned, claiming that the site was liable to overflows each spring. By those acquainted with the situation, however, it is claimed that the true reason for the desire to abandon the post was because of its isolation. There were no great centers of population within easy reach, and officers with families desired social and educational advantages that could not be enjoyed at Fort Sherman. Their influence eventually prevailed and the reservation was turned over to the interior department in April, 1901, the post being entirely abandoned by the war department in August of the same year.

At the time of the declaration of war against Spain there were garrisoned here twelve officers and about three hundred and fifty men. With the exception of a detachment of eleven men under Lieut. B. B. Buck, this force was ordered to the front. The officers included in this order were Col. Thatcher, commander; Chaplain Bateman, who was granted special leave by the war department to accompany the troops; Co. C, under command of Capt. L. C. Allen; Co. D, commanded by Capt. W. T. Morrison and Lieut. B. T. Simmons; Co. F, by Capt. T. C. Woodbury and Lieut. J. E. Woodward; Co. G, by Capt. W. Lassiter and Lieut. E. Chandler; and Co. H, by Capt. S. R. Whital and Lieut. J. Irwin. On April 21, 1898, accompanied by a band of twenty-three musicians and an eagle presented by J. R. Sanburn, the force left Coeur d'Alene on a special train for New Orleans, and Fort Sherman was practically abandoned as an army post.

Many thousands of dollars were expended here in the erection of buildings and in the equipment and care of the grounds. There are fifty-two buildings, including the commander's and the officers' residences, which are cared for by John Fernan, who first came to the post May 26, 1878, and has, since its abandonment, had sole care of buildings and grounds. An effort has been made by the citizens of Coeur d'Alene to have the reservation thrown open to settlement, but without success. A movement is now under way to secure the establishment here of a national soldiers' home. The location is an admirable one for such a purpose. The reserve is a natural park of forest pines, and with its lake frontage and mountain background is one of the most beautiful of the many beautiful spots in the lake region of Kootenai county.

CHAPTER II.

EVENTS, 1880–1890—AS A POLITICAL DIVISION OF THE TERRITORY.

The close of the 'seventies, or rather, the opening of the next decade, marks the beginning of the most important epoch in the history of Kootenai county, that of organized existence. Kootenai county has had a creative existence since 1864. At that date her boundaries enclosed only about one-half of the territory which they now enclose, but the present lines were defined as early as 1867. It may be well, before entering upon these later details to mention a few interesting facts concerning the political affiliations of the county prior to the creative act of 1864. It first belonged to the Oregon country which had indefinite boundaries; later, as a part of that portion of Oregon lying north of the Columbia river and the 46th parallel of latitude, it belonged to Vancouver county, which was organized in 1845, the name of the county being changed in 1849 to Clark, in honor of the explorer. The Columbia river and the 46th parallel of latitude, east to the summit of the Rocky mountains, constituted the southern boundary of Washington in 1853, and Kootenai was a portion of Walla Walla county, Washington. January 29, 1859, Shoshone county, Washington, was created including all that country north of the Snake river, east of the Columbia and west of the Rocky mountains, embracing Kootenai county. The county seat was on the land claim of Angus McDonald, who was the Hudson's Bay Company's agent at the station where Colville is now located.

At the first session of the Idaho territorial legislature, opening December 7, 1863, and closing February 4, 1864, all that territory north of the Clearwater river, which included all the present counties of Latah and Kootenai, together with a section of country bordering directly on the north bank of the river was attached to the original Nez Perces county for civil and judicial purposes, but was without a distinguishing name.

At the second session of the territorial legislature in the winter of 1864 the first creative act was passed, defining the boundaries of Kootenai county. The following is the text of the act:

Be it enacted by the legislative assembly of the territory of Idaho as follows:

Section 2. That all that portion of Idaho territory embraced within the following described boundaries be, and the same is hereby created into and shall be known as the county of Kootenai, to wit: Beginning at a point on the forty-eighth degree of north latitide, on the dividing line between Washington and Idaho territories; thence north with said dividing line of longtude to the forty-ninth degree of north latitude; thence east with the said degree of latitude to the northwest corner of the boundary line of Montana territory; thence southerly with the boundary line of said territory to the forty-eighth degree of north latitude, and thence west along said degree of latitude to the place of beginning; and the county seat of the said county of Kootenai is hereby located Seneaquoteen. Approved, December 22, 1864.

The forty-eighth parallel of latitude passes through Granite; the territory included within the first established lines, therefore, was but little more than half as great as the county's present area. Section one of this same act created "Lah-toh" county out of the country south of the forty-eighth parallel and north of the Clearwater river and named Coeur d'Alene as the county seat. No county organization was ever effected under this act but, later, the northern boundary of Nez Perces county was moved north from the Clearwater river to the irregular summit of the divide between the Palouse river and Hangman's creek, the present southern boundary of Kootenai county. In 1867 the present boundaries of Kootenai were defined by amendments to the original act as follows:

Section 2. All that portion of the territory of Idaho north of the counties of Nez Perces and Shoshone shall comprise the county of Kootenai.

Section 3. That whenever the inhabitants, to the number of fifty or more of the said county of Kootenai, shall desire to perfect a county organization, they shall apply by petition to the governor, who, if he deems it advisable, shall proceed to designate by appointment three discreet and well qualified citizens of the county or counties so applying, to act as a board of county commissioners of such county. The board of county commissioners so appointed, after they shall have qualified in pursuance of law, and entered upon the duties of their office, may proceed to fill, by the appointment of suitable residents of the county, the various county offices as required by law for other organized counties in this territory.

Section 4. Whenever the county commissioners shall be appointed as provided by law, they shall have power to locate the county seat of said county. As amended, Act January 9, 1867.

"Fifty or more" citizens of Kootenai could not be gathered together to perfect a county organization under this old act for eighteen years after its passage. Bancroft says "Kootenai county had almost no white population until the building of the Northern Pacific railroad brought people there to perform the labor of its construction, between 1880 and 1883." Elliot, an Idaho historian, says of Kootenai county in 1882: "It is a wild, unsettled country of lakes and grand scenery." With the advent of the railroad came the desire for county organization. In July, 1881, M. D. Wright and George B. Wonnacott called a meeting of all the settlers known to be in the county for the purpose of discussing the question. Two or three meetings were held and much canvassing was done before the required number of petitioners could be obtained. Two of these meetings were held at Mr. Wonnacott's store two miles west of Fort Coeur d'Alene and the third meeting was held at Rathdrum, then called Westwood, where the organization was finally completed in October, 1881. From the petitioners it was a difficult matter to secure men enough to fill the various county offices, owing to the fact that most of the settlers had business affairs of their own to attend to and the offices were not especially desirable either because of the emoluments attaching or because of the honor they conferred on the individual. Appointments, however, were eventually made by the governor and the following have the distinction of being the first officers of Kootenai county: Sheriff, Fred Haines; recorder, George B. Wonnacott; assessor and collector, M. D. Wright; treasurer, Max Weil; probate judge, Charles Chilburg. Mr. Chilburg did not qualify and A. L. Bradbury was appointed in his stead. Mr. Bradbury soon resigned and was followed by Henry Melder. Sheriff Haines died before his term had expired and the commissioners appointed Bregg Parmenter to fill the vacancy. R. W. Cochran and C. W. Wood were appointed justices; J. L. Steen and Michael Martin, constables. Commissioners appointed by the governor were, O. F. Canfield, J. T. Rankin and William Martin. The officers were sworn in by Justice Frank Points, a noted character who lived on Deep creek in what was then the northern part of Nez Perces county. At the first regular election which was held in 1882, George B. Wonnacott was continued in office as recorder, Max Weil as treasurer, and Henry Melder as probate judge and ex-officio superintendent of county schools. Charles Hampton was elected sheriff, and Robt. Wicks, Louis Lee and O. F. Canfield, commissioners. Bregg Parmenter was elected assessor and collector, failed to qualify and was superseded by appointment, by A. M. Martin of Rathdrum. Charles Hampton served as sheriff until July, 1883, when he resigned in favor of Joseph Brophy. Mr. Brophy did not want the place and canvassed the county for signatures to a petition to the commissioners advising the appointment of William Martin. The request of the petitioners was granted and Mr. Martin became sheriff. At the 12th session of the territorial legislature, which convened December 11, 1882, Kootenai county was represented in the senate, or council, with Nez Perces and Shoshone counties, by I. B. Cowen, and in the house of representatives with Shoshone, by O. A. Dodge.

During the first four years of political life, magical changes were wrought in general conditions and numerous thriving towns sprang up along the line of railroad. The building of the road was of course the cause of the wonderful transformation. In 1880 Kootenai county had a population of 318 including many railroad laborers who were not permanent settlers; in 1884 the population had increased to 2000. In 1880 there was no assessment roll; in 1884 the assessment roll footed $544,138.98. In 1882 there were but 89 taxable inhabitants; in that year, however, there was collected a property tax of $558.89, a poll tax of $502, and $530.60 were collected on licenses, making the total receipts $1,591.49. After erecting a small jail and paying the current expenses, the first set of county officers turned over to their successors the sum of $90.00. As soon as travel began over the Northern Pacific and a knowledge of the almost inexhaustible timber resources of the county reached the populated centers, immigrants began to pour in and the country adjacent to the road, along the streams, and about the lakes was thoroughly explored; many homesteads were located, a great deal of mineral prospecting was done in the mountain regions, and in furnishing supplies for the nomadic caravan, the towns became exceedingly prosperous and grew rapidly. In 1884 Rathdrum had a population of over one thousand, exceeding by two or three hundred, that of Spokane Falls. There was a special reason, however, for a great deal of this prosperity, which centered about Rathdrum and which was not so great in other parts of the county. The Coeur d'Alene mines were discovered in 1883. The region of these mines had been most inaccessible until the completion of the Northern Pacific railroad, which opened a comparatively easy route, via Rathdrum, Lake Coeur d'Alene, the Coeur d'Alene river and the Mullan road. The rush to the mines during the latter months of 1883 and for two or three years following, was over this route, and Rathdrum became an outfitting and supply point, and consequently a place of considerable importance. While some progress was made during this period at Bonner's Ferry, Kootenai, Coeur d'Alene and other points, it was inconsiderable when compared with the growth and development at and about the county seat.

The first court house was a small store building at Rathdrum in 1884 and was presided over by Judge Norman Buck, now a resident of Spokane. The first cases tried in Kootenai county were from the mines and were not of great importance nor of general interest to the public, being petty disputes between miners over mineral claims. One of the first cases of minor importance tried before Judge Buck at this term of court was brought by Thomas Brophy against O. A. Dodge, who had built a saw mill in 1882 at the foot of Fish lake. The plaintiff asked that Mr. Dodge be enjoined from dumping sawdust into the outlet of the lake and thereby causing his lands to be flooded by backwater. Frank Ganahl and J. Hooloman were attorneys for the plaintiff, C. D. Hyde and M. W. Musgrove for defendant. The injunction was granted.

A case of real importance, involving the settlement of a boundary lne dispute between Kootenai and Shoshone counties, and the jurisdiction over the Coeur d'Alene mines, was tried before Judge Buck at Rathdrum in June, 1884. This case grew out of the misinterpretation of the legal description of the Shoshone county boundaries. Shortly after their discovery the authorities of Kootenai county laid claim to jurisdiction over the mines, asserting that the northern boundary of Shoshone county was a small spur of the Bitter Root mountains extending west below the South Fork of the Coeur d'Alene river, while Shoshone county authorities claimed their north boundary to be the summit of the main Bitter Root mountains where they turned west and formed the divide between Clark's Fork river and the North Fork of the Coeur d'Alene, the spur being known as the Coeur d'Alene mountains. Officers of Kootenai county attempted to exercise authority over this mining region by collecting licences and levying other taxes. Shoshone county officers protested and forbade this exercise of jurisdiction. In order to settle the matter Kootenai county authorities brought suit against the officers of Shoshone county, seeking to enjoin them from the exercise of authority over the district, and requiring them to appear for trial at Rathdrum, the county seat. The title of the case was William Martin vs. L. A. Dunwell. These gentlemen were respectively, sheriffs of Kootenai and Shoshone counties, and the case was in reality a civil contest between these two political divisions of the territory of Idaho. While the real object of the suit was the settlement of the boundary questions, it was brought by Martin vs. Dunwell for the recovery of moneys collected by the Shoshone county sheriff, for taxes and licenses in the gold field in and around Pritchard creek. Attorneys Claggett, Williams, and Musgrove appeared for the plaintiff; attorneys Elder, Allen, and Moody for the defendant. Eleven days were consumed in the trial and the costs fell heavily on the new county of Kootenai. The plaintiff brought witnesses from Montana and other distant points; old histories, old and new maps, legislative acts and other similar publications were introduced as evidence by both sides. The old reports of Captain John Mullan, of Mullan Road fame, were read, discussed and offered in evidence. The trial creaed a great deal of interest and was attended daily by large crowds. Shoshone county gained the victory, and, as later developments have proven, untold wealth from the mountains of precious minerals in the disputed territory.

During the period of which we write there was an increasing demand for traveling and shipping facilities on the navigable rivers and lakes of the county. In reaching the mining regions from Coeur d'Alene, via the lake, there were but two available steamers for transporting passengers and supplies; both were small and one of them had been built by the government for the use of the garrison at Fort Coeur d'Alene. There was a great deal of travel also, to and from the British Columbia mining regions and there was need of transportation facilities in that direction. Several steamers were built, among them one by C. B. King, to ply on the lake between Coeur d'Alene and Old Mission on the Coeur d'Alene river, carrying prospectors and outfits. The first steamer taken to the Kootenai river was built by Baillic Groham, of the Kootenai reclamation scheme. It was a small boat, twenty-five feet long and six foot beam and was shipped to Kootenai station on the Northern Pacific railroad, from whence it was dragged over the trail to Bonner's Ferry. It was christened the "Midge" but came to be known as the "Mud Hen." Another steamer was taken to Bonner's Ferry over the same route a few months later by Lundy and Wright. It was somewhat larger than the Mud Hen and was called the "Ozier." Both boats were put in service on the Kootenai river, between Bonner's Ferry and the Wild Horse mining region.

At the first regular election in 1882, party lines were not drawn: in 1884, however, politics entered into the campaign and both Republicans and Democrats held a convention and placed tickets in the field. We were unable to secure official record of elections prior to 1892 and can therefore give only general results in the earlier campaigns. Candidates for commissioners were: R. J. Weeks, J. H. Masterson, John Russell, Henry H. Newhall, George B. Wonnacott, Tony Tubbs, Thomas Ford, Alex Powers, George Ellis, O. F. Canfield, J. T. Mulkins, J. R. Masterson, and John Fernan. Of these candidates John Russell was elected from the Northern district, George B. Wonnacott from the central district, and Henry H.

Newhall from the southern district. Candidates for probate judge were Louis Lee, Democrat, and Henry Melder, Republican. Mr. Melder was elected. For sheriff, William Martin was re-elected. Candidates for district attorney were Mark W. Musgrove of Rathdrum and Isaac S. Daly of Coeur d'Alene. Mr. Musgrove won at the polls. W. C. Jackson, Republican, and Henry Reiniger, Democrat, were opposing candidates for the office of county treasurer. Mr. Jackson was chosen. John Fernan, Republican, and W. J. McClure, Democrat, both of Coeur d'Alene, contested for the assessorship and Mr. McClure secured the office. S. W. Moody represented Nez Perces, Shoshone and Kootenai counties in the senate and William King was elected to the house from Shoshone and Kootenai.

The year 1885 was signalized by a contest on the county seat question. The creative act of 1864 named Seneaquoteen as the county seat. The amendment of 1867 vested in the commissioners the power to locate the seat of government. As has been previously stated the first meetings for the purpose of county organization, were held in 1881 at the store of George B. Wonnacott, about two miles below Fort Coeur d'Alene. This place of meeting was selected as a matter of convenience and because Mr. Wonnacott was prominent in the work of organization and was one of the commissioners appointed by Gov. John B. Neil. The organization was completed and the officers appointed in July, 1881. In August of the same year Mr. Wonnacott moved his store to Rathdrum and thereafter the business of the county was conducted at this point. There is no record of any special action on the part of the commissioners designating Rathdrum as the county seat, but M. D. Wright, one of the first county officers, is authority for the statement, that upon the removal of the Wonnacott store to Rathdrum in August, 1881, the commissioners agreed among themselves that this should be the seat of government. Judge Norman Buck, who tried the Kootenai-Shoshone boundary case in 1884, states that the defendant was cited to appear for trial at "Rathdrum, the county seat of Kootenai county." Had there been no special action on the question by the first commissioners, this recognition of Rathdrum as the county seat by the county authorities in 1884 would seem to have settled the matter. In 1885, however, a determined effort was made to remove the county capital to Coeur d'Alene, the commissioners claiming the right to do so on the ground that they had never acted on the question as they were empowered to do by the legislative amendment of 1867. H. H. Newhall was at this time commissioner from the southern part of the county, George B. Wonnacott from the central portion, and John Russell from the northern portion. Newhall and Wonnacott favored the removal and Russell opposed it. There was a division of sentiment and opinion among the county officials and a great deal of feeling between the opposing factions both within and without official circles. The citizens of Rathdrum and of the towns to the north, rallied to the support of Mr. Russell in his efforts to prevent the change to Coeur d'Alene, and for about three months the county records were guarded by citizens of Rathdrum in anticipation of forced removal. No overt acts were committed, however, bitter feelings engendered in the beginning of the struggle gradually subsided, the guards were removed, affairs resumed their former peaceful condition, and the fight, if it may be so termed, came to an end. Rathdrum has since remained the recognized legal seat of government.

In agricultural regions a special degree of prosperity was not enjoyed in the year 1885, crops were below the average yield and prevailing prices were low. But as yet there were not many improved farms in Kootenai county; a few were profitably engaged in stock raising, but the majority of the inhabitants outside the settlements were employed in the tie, post and pole industry; the Coeur d'Alene miners were paying rich tribute to Rathdrum and the town of Coeur d'Alene, and the people all over the county were fairly prosperous. The total valuation of property in 1885 was $475,465.68, on which was collected a territorial tax of $1,189.06, a county tax of $7,132.06 and a school tax of $1,901.82. Of the total amount collected, $10,222.94, Assessor McClure received as his remuneration for the work of assessment and collection, seven per cent, or $715.60. During this year two new steamers were placed in commission on the lakes, a toll wagon road was constructed between the towns of Kootenai and Bonner's Ferry by Dr. Hendryx, and in the fall of the year after the final settlement of the county seat question, a court house was erected at Rathdrum, costing $3,500.

A United States land office was established at Coeur d'Alene in 1885 but was not in full operation until the year following. The first land entry, however, was dated December 1, 1885. It was made by Valentine W. Sander, who preempted lots 3 and 4, section 24, township 50 north, range 4 west of Boise meridian. The second was a homestead entry made by Thadius K. Hireen December 21, 1885, on the southeast quarter of sec. 12, same township and range as the preemption. These lands adjoin the present town of Coeur d'Alene. James F. Legate was the first register and R. E. McFarland the first receiver of the land office. Mr. Legate resigned and W. J. McClure was appointed in his stead. In 1886, three thousand nine hundred and thirty acres of land were disposed of and the total receipts of the office were $3,241.27. Last year, 1902, entries were made on 124,468 acres and the receipts for the year reached $138,641.60. The total amount of land appropriated to the close of the year 1902 was 1,177,534 acres and the total receipts were $523,971.64.

In 1886 the question of annexation to Washington agitated the citizens of Kootenai county in common with the citizens of all northern Idaho. It is not our purpose to give the details of this campaign here, as its full history has been written in another chapter of this volume. To show the sentiments of the people, however, we reproduce below a resolution passed at a meeting held at the court house in Rathdrum,

March 19. Pursuant to a call, the citizens without party distinction, met to consider the question. Hon. O. A. Dodge was chosen chairman and M. W. Musgrove secretary. After a full and fair discussion, Judge Henry Melder presented the following resolution, which was adopted: "Resolved, that we, the citizens of Kootenai county, Idaho territory, assembled in Rathdrum, our county seat, express it as the sentiment of our substantial citizens, that it is of the utmost importance to the prosperity of north Idaho, that it be annexed to Washington."

The year 1886 witnessed the building of the Coeur d'Alene branch of the Northern Pacific railroad from Hanser Junction to the foot of the lake. The immediate effect of the completion of this branch was to divert from Rathdrum much of the support it had previously received from the mining camps in the Coeur d'Alene Mountains, and to add very materially to the importance of Coeur d'Alene as a supply point. It gave an impetus to the tie and pole industry, thereby adding in a general way to the prosperity of the people, besides making the mining regions much more accessible and supplying needed shipping facilities for both the mining and the lumber industries in the lake region.

The question of annexation entered into the election of 1886. There was such unanimity of sentiment on the subject, however, in all factions, that it may hardly be said to have been an issue in the campaign. J. M. Manning was elected prosecuting attorney. Henry Melder, Republican, was elected probate judge, his opponent being Isaac S. Daly, Democrat. William Martin and Thomas Hunter were opposing candidates for sheriff and Mr. Martin was successful in the race. Robert S. Bragaw defeated Fred Bradbury as a candidate for the office of county auditor. W. C. Jackson, Republican, and H. Reimger, Democrat, made the race as candidates for treasurer, Mr. Jackson being successful. John Russell, John Fernan and Louis Lee were elected commissioners. Charles Lohr was elected assessor. Alexander E. Mayhew was sent to the state senate from Kootenai and Shoshone and John M. Burke was sent to the house of representatives.

The winter of 1886-1887 was a severe one on stock; more snow than usual fell in the mountains and the temperature during the winter was below the average. But as the hay crop of the previous summer had been especially large, stock men suffered but few losses. Promising mineral prospects were discovered about the head of the Lake Pend Oreille and in the region of Granite Creek causing a rush of people into the country, and a consequent season of business activity in all the towns. Between one and two thousand prospectors are said to have spent the summer in the region of Pend Oreille lake, Heyden lake and Granite creek. With a population less than 3,000, Kootenai was still most sparsely settled county in the state. It had an assessment roll however of $966,000, due chiefly to the railroads, and in this respect compared favorably with other counties. Good schools were being taught in all the settlements and there was one weekly newspaper published, the Kootenai Courier, by Mark W. Musgrove, at Rathdrum.

An event of the year 1887 was a serious accident which occured April 4th above Old Mission on the Coeur d'Alene river. A small boat that had previously been used as an excursion steamer on Pend Oreille lake, had been purchased by Nelson Martin, brought to Coeur d'Alene and fitted up for passenger and freight business between Coeur d'Alene and Old Mission,,and during high water it made Kingston about twelve miles above Old Mission. Mr. Martin had named the boat the "Spokane." On the occasion of which we write the Spokane was on the down trip from Kingston. Some distance above Old Mission the steamer struck a pile of drift wood banked against a small island, swung out of her course, across the current, and capsized, throwing passengers and crew into the water. There were twenty passengers aboard when the accident happened, some of whom reached the banks of the river in safety, while others were drowned. Among the drowned were Col. N. J. Higgins of Bangor, Me., and J. C. Hanna, former city clerk, and a business man of Spokane.. The accident created a great deal of excitement at the time owing to the prominence of those who were drowned and of other passengers who escaped. Captain Martin and the engineer, George Ellis, were arrested but were never brought to trial.

Party lines were more discernable than heretofore, in the campaign of 1888, the tariff question being the chief issue. Official reports of this election were not obtainable, hence we are unable to give details. A number of the incumbent officials were continued in office, among them Robert S. Bragaw as auditor, Henry Melder as probate judge and William Martin as Sheriff. A. E. Mayhew and J. R. Sanburn were sent as representatives to the territorial legislature. As an incident of this campaign the encounter between Morris Green and M. W. Musgrove will doubtless be remembered by many. Mr. Musgrove had published some campaign yarns about one of the Republican candidates whose defeat he desired, and was taken to task for it by Mr. Green. Words were soon followed by blows and Mr. Green was proving the better of the two in the fistic encounter when Mr. Musgrove suddenly drew a revolver and fired point blank at his antagonist, whose face was only about four feet away. The ball knocked out half a dozen teeth and lodged in the muscles of his neck. Mr. Green pulled out the loose teeth and cooly hurled them in Musgrove's face. This ended the fight.

CHAPTER III.

AS A POLITICAL DIVISION OF THE STATE.

The honors of statehood conferred upon the territory added dignity and responsibility to the county organization, and became an inspiration as well to the private citizen. All classes were prosperous in 1890; good crops and good prices prevailed; the mines in the Pend Oreille region yielded well in gold, silver and lead, and gave promise of better returns when more fully developed; $5,000 were appropriated by congress for the improvement of the Kootenai river from Bonner's ferry to the International boundary; the north half of the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation was thrown open to settlement; the O. R. & N. railroad was built across the county; immigration of home-seekers increased rapidly, and all circumstances conspired together for the general welfare and advancement of the people. The census of this year showed a population of 4,108. Kootnai county's representative in the work of planning the state constitution was Judge Henry Melder, of Rathdrum.

The Great Northern railroad was built in 1892 and the activity attending its construction counteracted in a great measure the somewhat depressing effects of the comparatively short crops of this and the previous year. The northern part of the county especially felt the impetus given to the timber and mining industries. During the past three years fully $700,000 had been expended in the erection of saw-mills on the lakes and rivers. About this time the lumber trade began to assume immense proportions and capital flowed into the county for investment from all the lumber centers of the middle west. A struggle began between the large lumber companies of Minnesota and Wisconsin for the possession of the vast timbered areas of Kootenai county, one company alone securing title to 60,000 acres in various parts of the county. The year was fairly prosperous in all lines of business.

In the political campaign of 1892 the People's party of Idaho made its first efforts to get into power, and new issues were brought before the voters, such as the loaning of money by the government direct to the people at two per cent; the free and unlimited coinage of silver; the ownership by the government of railroads, telephone and telegraph lines and other well known declarations from the party's state platform. The results of the November elections were as follows: William J. Quirk, of Hope, Democratic candidate for joint senator from the second district, which then included Kootenai and Latah counties, received 672 votes, a plurality of 40 votes over those received by the Republican candidate, Fred L. Burgan, of Harrison; Andrew J. Hopper received 647 votes for joint representative against 632 votes for John Donahue, of Bonner's Ferry, the Democratic nominee; A. A. Crane, Republican; Albert Hagan, Democrat, and William Ferrell, Populist, were elected representative over J. H. McPhearson, H. D. Barber and Arthur B. Bains; John J. Costello, of Coeur d'Alene, Democrat, received 838 votes for sheriff, against William Martin, who received 755 votes, and Hiram B. Savage, of Hope, who received 14 votes; James W. Kennedy, Democrat, of Post Falls, was elected senator. The vote for probate judge was: A. K. White, 672; John E. White, 572; Henry Melder, 205; candidates for assessor were William Ryan, of Rathdrum; William A. Reiniger, of Coeur d'Alene; Silas M. Johnson and A. M. Newson. Ryan received 731 votes, Reiniger 613, Johnson 191, and Newson 13. Mr. Ryan's plurality being 118. For treasurer, Frank O. Hill, Republican, of Rathdrum, received 779 votes; Fred H. Bradbury, Democrat, of Rathdrum, 528; Louis Chanibard. Populist, of Rathdrum, 189, and Thornton Wheatly, Prohibitionist, of Post Falls, 17 votes. Mr. Hill's plurality was 251. The vote on county surveyor stood: William Ashley, Republican, 812 votes; A. D. Robinson, Democrat, 653 votes. Dr. John Sabins, Republican, of Coeur d'Alene, was elected coroner by a plurality of 136, his opponents being T. Martin and James H. Masterson. County commissioners elected at this time were: J. P. Quarles, first district; Charles W. Clark, second district, and Wilburt J. Pilling, third district. By a vote of 66 for and 678 against, the propositon to incur an indebtedness of $45,600 to construct a steel bridge over the Kootenai river at Bonner's Ferry was defeated.

The year 1893 will long be remembered as a season of great financial distress. While this period of depression covered in a gradually decreasing degree the two or three years following, the shock and the greatest suffering were experienced during the latter half of 1893. Spokane was the banking point for all Kootenai county towns and the failure of the Spokane banks paralyzed every industry in the county. Every community, every town, almost every family and every individual was brought face to face with ruinous conditions. Details of failures in public and private enterprises, of the privations endured in the homes, of the trouble caused by the inability of the debtor to satisfy the demands of the creditor, would cover much more space than we have at our disposal. We will give a single illustration of the changed conditions brought about by the financial panic. In the fall of 1892 a citizen of Kootenai county purchased a team of horses and a light wagon for $300. He paid in cash $50, and for the remaining $250 gave an interest-bearing note, due November 1, 1893, and secured by mortgage on other horses and carriages. When the note came due his creditor demanded settlement. The debtor could raise but $25 in cash, although hundreds of dollars were owing him on account by customers. In order to make settlement, owing to the depreciation in values, he handed over to his creditor $25 in cash, returned the team for which he had given the note, and in addition surrendered another team, harness and carriage.

The year 1894 is "high water year" in the history of Kootenai county. Nearly all the towns along the streams and about the lakes were flooded and a great deal of damage was done in the river valleys. Bonner's Ferry perhaps experienced more trouble than any of the other towns, the people being driven from their homes into the surrounding hills for safety. The Great Northern railroad tracks were several feet under water at this point and for a time all traffic was stopped. The post grounds at Fort Sherman were flooded, the water covering the lower floors of all the buildings, the use of row boats being necessary for some time by officers and men in getting about over the grounds. Very heavy snows fell in the mountain regions during the winter of 1893-94, and the following spring being unusually late and cold the snows remained banked up in the mountains until early summer, when the sudden change to warm weather precipitated vast quantities of water into the streams, whose banks were soon overflowed. Lake Pend Oreille rose 22 feet and Lake Coeur d'Alene was proportionately high. The outlets of these lakes are comparatively small, when we consider the numerous tributaries, and their capacity is not great enough to carry off the water as rapidly as it flows in when the mountain snows melt quickly. The floods of 1894 resulted from a combination of these conditons, which very rarely occurs. Similar conditions produced the overflow at Bonner's Ferry, the banks of the Kootenai river being low and the greater portion of the town being but little above the level of the banks.

In the political campaign of 1894 about the same issues were before the people as in the campaign of 1892. The Populists showed more strength than in the former election, while the Democrats lost ground. This is accounted for by the fact that a great deal of the Populists strength was absorbed from the Democratic party. In the year 1894 Kootenai was the banner Republican county of the state, giving the state, legislative and county candidates a good plurality over Democrats and Populists. The following are the official returns of the election:

For district attorney, first judicial district, including Kootenai and Shoshone counties, Charles W. Beal, Republican, of Wallace, received 657 votes; Robt. E. McFarland, Democrat, of Coeur d'Alene, 429; Walter A. Jones, Populist, of Wallace, 363; joint senator, second senatorial district, including Kootenai and Latah counties, Robert S. Browne, Republican, of Moscow, received 715 votes, and Thomas F. Nelson, Democrat, 491; joint representative, Samuel E. Henry, Republican, of Bonner's Ferry, received 627; William Van Gasker, Democrat, of the same place, 358, and Sylvania R. Catlow, Populist, of Clark's Fork, 308; county representative, A. A. Crane, Harrison, Republican, 604; John M. Burke, Coeur d'Alene, Democrat, 479; Charles D. Rowell, Bonner's Ferry, Populist, 349. Clerk of district court: Robert S. Bragaw, Rathdrum, Republican, 617; William J. Quirk, Hope, Democrat, 526; Thomas Hydornn, Rathdrum, Populist, 335; sheriff, William Ryan, Rathdrum, Republican, 673; G. W. Brockhagen, Hope, Democrat, 5; John F. Stark, Rathdrum, Populist, 264; William Martin, Rathdrum, Independent, 554. Assessor: J. P. Quarles, Lane, Republican, 707; John J. Costello, Coeur d'Alene, Democrat, 461; Louis Chambard, Rathdrum, Populist, 305. Probate judge: Henry Melder, Rathdrum, Republican, 629; P. E. Cusick, Sandpoint, Democrat, 290; James E. Matheson, Post Falls, Prohibitionist, 286; A. K. White, Clarkia, Populist, 242. Treasurer: Frank O. Hill, Republican, Rathdrum, 806; L. T. Dittemore, Rathdrum, Democrat, 413, and as an endorsement on the Populist ticket, 201. Surveyor, William Ashley, Jr., Rathdrum, Republican, 599; William Ashley, Sr., Rathdrum, Populist, 442; Charles D. Schroeder, Democrat, 340. Coroner: John Sabin, Coeur d'Alene, Republican, 658; M. T. Loop, Hope, Democrat, 310; U. G. Campbell, Bonner's Ferry, Populist, 394. The commissioners elected were: From the first district, N. Palmeter; second district, Otis F. Warren; third district, J. A. Ball, all Republicans.

The assessed valuation of property in 1895 was $2,232,039.89. Of this amount $1,441,229.64 represented the value of railroad property for purposes of taxation. Besides the amount necessary for county expenses Kootenai was required to raise $17,788.30 for state purposes and was also assessed $700 as its share of the Idaho Immigration Association fund. This was a year of short crops, and as low prices still prevailed there was but little if any relief from the depressing conditions of the two previous years. The county indebtedness at this time was $47,629. A special election was held August 27, 1895, at which time 419 votes were cast for and 155 against the proposition to issue bonds to redeem this outstanding obligation. The bonds, bearing six per cent interest, were accordingly issued, and were sold to Thiers and Barroll, of Spokane, at a premium of $21.

In May of this year, an addition was built to the court house, containing office rooms for assessor, probate judge, surveyor, and grand jury, the work being done by Messrs. Smith, Conners and Curry, of Coeur d'Alene.

Populism reached the crest of the wave in 1896. In Kootenai county the party elected treasurer, assessor and representatives to the state legislature. As free silver was the "long cry" in this campaign, making many converts from the ranks of the Republican party, and as there was a certain degree of harmony between the Democratic and populist platforms, many Populists voting with the Democrats, there were resultant gains in Democratic votes. The latter elected state senator, sheriff, probate judge, and one commissioner, leaving for the Republicans the election of coroner, surveyor and two commissioners.

The following are the official figures: William E. Borah, Democratic candidate for 55th congress, received in Kootenai 794 votes, a plurality of 204 over the candidates of the other parties; Frank Stunenberg, Democratic candidate for governor, received 1356 votes, a majority of 1037 over Budlong and Fowler, candidates of the Republican and Populist parties, respectively; state senator, William Ryan, Republican, Rathdrum, 199; S. R. Catlow, Populist, Clark's Fork, 557; S. P. Donnelly, Lakeview, Democrat, 880, majority, 124; J. I. Barnes, Bonner's Ferry; W. A. Hart, Rathdrum; Charles D. Warner, Coeur d'Alene, were Republican candidates for state representatives; Barnes's vote was 171, Hart's 181, Warner's 170; Democratic nominees were H. C. Tait, Coeur d'Alene; John F. Stark, Rathdrum; Fred H. Bradbury, Rathdrum; they received, respectively, 556, 560 and 726 votes; Populist nominees were N. G. Sisson, Hope, George R. Gray, Bonner's Ferry, James A. Keat, Harrison; Sisson received 931, Gray 921, and Keat 782 votes; sheriff, J. H. Harris, Coeur d'Alene, Republican, 389; George H. Pease, Hope, Democrat, 667; J. P. Quarles, Lane, Populist, 661; treasurer, James E. Russell, Coeur d'Alene, Republican, 217; Thornton Wheatley, Post Falls, Democrat, 637; Frank O. Hill, Rathdrum, Populist, 788; probate judge, Henry Melder, Rathdrum, Republican, 372; Edwin McBee, Rathdrum, Democrat, 694; A. K. White, Clarkia, Populist, 592; assessor, Otis F. Warren, Post Falls, Republican, 328; Louis Chambard, Rathdrum, Populist, 611, John C. Callahan, Bonner's Ferry, Democrat, 700; coroner, John Sabin, Coeur d'Alene, Republican, 897; E. L. Dennison, Populist, 707; surveyor, William Ashley, Jr., Rathdrum, Republican, 868; B. H. Williams, Coeur d'Alene, Democrat, 555; A. D. Robinson, Rathdrum, Populist, 201. Commissioners elected were Thomas Smith, Republican, first district; William H. Cable, Republican, second district; W. B. Dishman, Democrat, third district. A vote was taken at this election on the following amendments to the state constitution: Shall sec. 2, article VI, be so amended as to extend to women the equal right of suffrage; 633 votes were cast for and 383 against the amendment. Shall sec. 18, article V, be amended so as to abolish the office of district attorney and create the office of county attorney; for, 827; against, 175. Shall sec. 6, article XVIII, be so amended as to separate the offices of probate judge and county superintendent of public instruction; for, 759; against, 213.

February 27th, 1897, President Cleveland issued a proclamation creating the Priest River forest reserve. This reserve occupies the northwest portion of the county and spreads over the state line a few miles into Washington. It is fifty-five miles long, with an average width of about twenty miles. It contains 650,000 acres, of which, according to government surveys, 10,000 acres are agricultural lands. Prior to the creation of the reserve about sixty settlers had taken up homesteads, which are located mostly in the valley of Priest river. The tying up of this immense area has proven disastrous to these settlers, who are isolated, with no prospects of the development of the surrounding country and with no opportunities for bettering their conditons. Progress has been retarded in the towns along the north of Pend Oreille lake and river and in many other respects the creation of the reserve has been a detriment to the county. The railroads owned large tracts of timber land within the reserve, on which they have paid taxes into the county treasury. A few years ago the roads accepted script from the government in lieu of the land and this source of revenue was cut off, necessitating a higher rate of taxation over the county. From the government's point of view its action will eventually enhance timber and agricultural land values in adjacent tracts which are just beginning the process of development, as water sources will escape exhaustion and valuable timber resources will be preserved until there is greater need for the timber than at present. Government surveyors estimate that only fifteen per cent of the lands of the reserve is fit for agricultural use even after the timber is removed. Several efforts have been made to secure its return to the public domain for purposes of settlement, but thus far these have proven fruitless of satisfactory results.

The year 1898, an eventful one in the history of the nation, was also an eventful year in the history of Kootenai county, inasmuch as the manifested spirit of loyalty to the government and sympathy for the Cubans in their struggle against Spanish tyranny, led many of its citizens to offer their services, and if need be, their lives, for the liberation of Cuba and for the punishment of despotic Spain. When the declaration of war was made and there came a call for troops, in no portion of the country was there displayed greater eagerness on the part of the young men to enroll themselves under the old flag, than in Kootenai county. Nor was this impatience confined exclusively to the young men; veterans of the Civil war, both Union and Confederate, came forward and expressed their willingness to re-enter the service. The splendid record of Company B, Idaho Volunteers, made in the Philippines, is well known, and received prominent recognition by the state legislature and governor of Idaho and by the war department at Washington. The company took part in seven engagements, including those at Santa Ana, Coolacan and Manila, in none of which were they defeated. Of those who went out from Kootenai county, Frank Caldwell, of Harrison, and James Frazer, of Standpoint, were killed; Frank A. McCall and Richard B. Jones, of Rathdrum, were wounded. Mr. McCall resigned his position as teacher in the Rathdrum public schools at the beginning of the war and enlisted as a private. After the battle of Santa Ana, February 5, 1899, in which he was wounded, he was commissioned a lieutenant by Governor Stunenberg. On his return from Manila he organized Company E, I. N. G., of which he is now the captain. Political honors have since fallen to Mr. McCall, and he is at the present time the probate judge of Kootenai county.

The Kootenai county volunteers of Company B, numbering fifty-one, left Rathdrum May 12, 1898, amid "rousing cheers, broken with tears" of friends and loved ones, the citizens both of Coeur d'Alene and Rathdrum turning out en masse to bid the young patriots a sorrowful good-bye and a hearty Godspeed. They sailed from San Francisco June 27, 1898, on the transport Morgan City. Many of the volunteers failed from numerous causes to get into the service and returned home, but all were fearless, earnest and patriotic in their enlistment, and as a roll of honor we record their names on these pages. Twenty-one of the number were from Coeur d'Alene and vicinity, several were from Rathdrum, and the remainder came from various towns over the county. The following is a complete list: John Wilson, John Frederick, Frank A. McCall, Robert L. Baldwin, Horace J. Carroll, William Ritzheimer, Christian Brown, Charles H. Blakeslee, Herbert M. Caswell, John O. Derr, Horace D. Vanalstine, Alfred E. Ritter, Walter W. Rhoades, Frank B. Flora, Stanton P. Jellum, Donald O. Merritt, Guy Simpson, John F. O'Donnell, George H. Nash, Frank R. Caldwell, Fred D. Farr, Bert Weeks, Morris J. Cooney, Guy Overstreet, L. A. Powless, Joseph Meen, Theodore Link, James Weston, Caleb P. Hann, Charles W. Alkire, Joseph Stroble, William F. O'Harra, William H. Frederick, William E. Merriam, Frank C. Duncan, William A. Bennett, Richard B. Jones, William Hall, Chippear Wilcot, Martin Starling, Herman Wilde, J. Robert Ross, Frank Cerveny, Charles Lebrook, Fred B. McKee, Thomas Martin, H. B. Ford, Fred W. Soule, J. R. Gross, William Becknell, T. J. Dendurent, Samuel Gray, James Frazer. James Graham, of Coeur d'Alene, went into the service later and eventually beame captain of the company.

The returning heroes reached Coeur d'Alene via the O. R. and N. railroad, Harrison, and the lake, October 2, 1899, and were given a royal reception. From the columns of the Rathdrum Silver Blade we quote an account of the great ovation: "Almost every section of our county was represented at the grand demonstration at Coeur d'Alene on last Monday in honor of the volunteers from Kootenai, who returned on that day from more than a year's campaign in the Philippine Islands. It was the most beautiful and eventful chapter in the annals of our county's history, and will be remembered long after other events are forgotten. The special train bearing the Kootenai and Shoshone volunteers arrived at Harrison at 7:30 o'clock Monday morning. Here they were met by members of the reception committee from the various towns. They were breakfasted before being taken on board the barge which was to convey them to Coeur d'Alene. The journey from Harrison was a pleasant one. About midway on the lake the steamer Schley, bearing friends and relatives of the boys, met the barge, which was being towed by the steamer Elk. The second steamer was attached and the trip to Coeur d'Alene was enlivened by the State Line band, which rendered several selections on the way. The boys were met at the lake shore by Noble's Dramatic band and Company E, Idaho National Guards, in command of Lieutenant Quarles, Captain McCall having been sent to Harrison as a member of the reception committee.

From the balcony of the Coeur d'Alene Inn C. L. Heitman delivered the address of welcome. It met with a hearty response from the vast audience assembled in front of the hotel. The response to the address of welcome was made by Captain James Graham, who spoke with his usual eloquence. At the conclusion of the response the doors of the pavilion were opened and the volunteers given seats of honor at the tables prepared for them. The banquet was the towering success of the whole occasion. The tables were beautifully spread and the whole affair was one of which the ladies in charge were justly proud. It is estimated that one thousand people dined in the pavilion during the afternoon. In the evening the opera house was jammed to the doors with citizens and soldiers who assembled to enjoy the exercises. They consisted of short speeches by J. M. Heaton, of Harrison; John B. Goode, of Coeur d'Alene; James A. Keat, of Harrison; Lieutenant Heintzleman, of Ft. Sherman, and Wm. Piplin, one of the returning volunteers. The speaking was interspersed with a piano solo by Miss Florence Wright, a clarinet solo by Geo. Donovan, basso solo by Mr. Renshaw, a solo by Miss Mamie Bump, and a cornet solo by Mr. Kelser."

In April, 1898, James Meany and William Allen were convicted in the district court at Rathdrum of murdering Mike Kidder at a logging camp near Sandpoint. At a recent session of the state legislature a law had been passed making it the duty of the warden of the penitentiary, or a guard by him appointed, to convey all convicted prisoners to Boise. This law was not satisfactory to Idaho sheriffs, who had counted as a part of their perquisites the mileage, fees an dexpense allowance in taking prisoners to the penitentiary. Sheriff Pease had already made one effort to have this law annulled. Two brothers named Valk had been sentenced to thirty years each in the state penitentiary. The sheriff notified the warden at Boise, but when he arrived for the prisoners, Pease refused to turn them over to him. He then took them to Boise at his own expense and endeavored to collect from the state, but his attorney informed him that he had no grounds for action. Stung by defeat, Sheriff Pease resolved to put the state to all the expense and trouble possible in the application of the law referred to. When Meany and Allen were convicted and Warden Van Dorn came from Boise for them, Pease employed attorneys J.

L. Crotty and F. C. Robertson of Spokane to institute habeas corpus proceedings against Van Dorn when he reached Spokane with the convicts. This was done and the prisoners were lodged in the Spokane jail pending trial. Judge Richardson of the Superior Court of Spokane county refused the writ of habeas corpus, but also refused to return the prisoners to Warden Van Dorn, and held them in the Spokane jail pending an appeal to the Supreme Court of Washington. In the Supreme Court, Crotty and Robertson appeared for the prisoners and Foster and Wakefield for the Idaho authorities. The case involved the right of Idaho officials to pass into other states in conveying prisoners to the penitentiary at Boise. On the grounds of public policy and comity between states, the court sustained that right, and, after spending a year in the Spokane jail, the convicts were returned to Warden Van Dorn, who took them to the penitentiary, where they are now serving their terms.

The total assessment of Kootenai county in 1898 was $904,818. It was a fairly prosperous year in all lines of business. The effects of the financial troubles of former years were entirely effaced and new capital was seeking investment in timber lands and in sawmills. Efforts to enforce the Idaho alien labor law caused some trouble along the lines of railroads where Chinese and Japanese were employed as laborers; no serious encounters occurred however, and the endeavors to drive out the foreigners proved futile. During the summer of this year a bridge was constructed over the Spokane river about one-fourth of a mile below the lake. Oliver Bros., of Spokane, were the builders. The cost of construction was $2,475, of which the county provided $1,000, the balance being raised by subscription.

In the political campaign of 1898 three parties were in the field: Republican, Fusionist and Prohibitionist. The Silver Republicans, Democrats and Populists held separate conventions, but all nominated the same candidates for the various offices and placed them before the people on what was known as the Fusionist ticket. On this ticket were eight Democrats, four Silver Republicans and four Populists, all of whom were elected. The Prohibition party placed candidates in the field for the more important offices and endorsed the Republican candidates for the others. The Silver Republicans, Democrats and Populists all declared for free silver, making this the paramount issue, but on Cuban War questions and the tariff they made declarations along old party lines. The Republican party reaffirmed its faith in the gold standard as the foundation of the national currency, favored a protective tariff and the retention of territory wrested from Spain. A vigorous campaign was made by all parties with results as previously given. We record the official figures as follows:

For state senator: Otis F. Warren, Post Falls, Republican, 771 votes; William Ainslee, Bonner's Ferry, Fusionist, 1069 votes; S. R. Catlow, Clark's Fork, Prohibitionist, 2 votes; Ainslee's majority, 296. Representatives: Steven Adams, Rathdrum, Republican, 683; George W. Lovewell, Harrison, Republican, 685; Otto C. Smith, Hope, Republican, 684; Mrs. Mary A. Wright, Rathdrum, Fusion, 1123; John C. Glahe, Hope, Fusion, 1082; Edward McBee, Rathdrum, Fusion, 1143; T. G. Hodgson, Coeur d'Alene, Prohibition, 100; A. M. Martin, Kootenai, Prohibition, 81; Thomas Anderson, St. Maries, Prohibition, 1. Auditor and clerk of court: O. E. Bar, St. Maries, Republican, 816; John C. Callahan, Rathdrum, Fusion, 1172; Callahan's majority, 356. Sheriff: William H. Cable, State Line, Republican, 737; Fred H. Bradbury, Rathdrum, Fusion, 1172; E. N. Jellum, Coeur d'Alene, Prohibition, 100; Bradbury's majority, 335. Assessor: James E. Russell, Coeur d'Alene, Republican, 737; Joseph Buckle, Rathdrum, Fusion, 1174; James H. Kennedy, Post Falls, Prohibition, 47; Buckle's majority, 390. Treasurer: Minnie A. Rose, Rathdrum, Republican, 927; William J. McClure, Rathdrum, Fusion, 1014; majority, 85. Probate judge, A. W. Post, Rathdrum, Republican, 823; John C. Brady, Rathdrum, Fusion, 1099; majority, 276. County attorney: Samuel E. Henry, Bonner's Ferry, Republican, 651; John B. Goode, Coeur d'Alene, Fusion, 1209; majority, 558. County superintendent of public instruction: W. H. Edelblute, Harrison, Republican, 619; Daniel Van Duzer, Rathdrum, Fusion, 1172; Mrs. M. Matheson, Post Falls, Prohibition, 82; Van Duzer's majority, 471. Surveyor: William Ashley, Jr., Rathdrum, Republican, 923; Joseph C. White, Clarkia, Fusion, 972; majority, 49. Coroner, Dr. T. A. Bishop, Bonner's Ferry, Republican, 709; Mark T. Loop, Hope, Fusion, 1097; E. L. Denmison, State Line, Prohibition, 67; Loop's majority, 321. Commissioners elected: Louis T. Dittemore, first district; Aaron N. Tucker, second district; Nathan G. Sisson third district, all Fusionists. Frank Stumenberg, Democratic candidate for governor, was given 972 votes in the county, a majority of five over all other candidates. Edgar Wilson, Fusion candidate for congress, received 992 votes, a majority of 26 over all other candidates. The following amendments to the State constitution were voted upon: Shall sec. 4, Article 18, be so amended as to prescribe a property qualification for division and creation of counties; for, 584 votes: against, 158 votes; shall Sec. 7, Art. 18, be so amended as to provide for the compensation of all county officials by annual salaries instead of fees, and for the payment of actual necessary expenses of such officers, instead of mileage; for, 746 votes; against, 55 votes; shall Sec. 9, Art. 18, be so amended as to make it a felony for any county official, or deputy, to neglect or refuse to pay into the county treasury all fees in excess of his actual and necessary expenses; for, 773 votes; against, 30 votes.

In the latter part of January, 1899, Sheriff Pease disappeared from his accustomed haunts without explanation to his deputies or friends and later events and investigations proved that he had absconded with several thousand dollars of the county's money. He has never returned and his whereabouts is still a matter of conjecture only. In November, 1899, County Attorney Goode filed an action in the district court against George H. Pease as principal and W. A. Hart,

Frank Wentz, B. F. Butler and Henry Reiniger as sureties on his official bond. The complaint alleged that "George H. Pease while acting as sheriff of Kootenai county did collect and receive between the 1st day of January, 1898, and the 9th day of January, 1899, certain license taxes from divers persons engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors in Kootenai county, state of Idaho, to the aggregate sum of $4,000, and did receipt for the same as sheriff, and did fail and refuse, and still fails and refuses to pay the same or any part thereof to the treasurer of Kootenai county, or to the auditor of Kootenai county, or to any one at all, as is by law required, but has converted the same to his own use and has absconded from this county to parts unknown."

The Kootenai Valley railroad was completed from Bonner's Ferry across the International boundary at Porthill in September, 1899, the distance being something less than twenty-six miles. Since 1893 Porthill has been a port of import, chosen because of its location on the trail leading to and from the Wild Horse mining region in British Columbia. Prior to this date United States customs officers and immigrant inspectors had been stationed at Bonner's Ferry, which was also on the old trail and at the head of navigation on the Kootenai river, up which large quantities of ore and coal were shipped from the British possessions into the United States. The effect of the building of the Kootenai Valley railroad to Porthill and on to Kuskonook, B. C., on the Kootenai lake, was to divert the import trade from the Kootenai river through Bonner's Ferry, to the K. V. railroad through Porthill. The road will eventually prove the principal factor in the development of the Kootenai valley when drainage systems shall have turned this vast swamp into an arable area.

The fee system of paying the salaries of county officers was abolished by legislative enactment in 1899. The act provided for Kootenai county salaries as follows: Sheriff, $2,000; assessor, $3,000; auditor, $2,000; treasurer, $1,500; probate judge, $1,500; school superintendent, $1,200; surveyor, $800; coroner, $300; commissioners, each, $1,000. From the assessor's returns for this year we learn that there were in the county 40,924 acres of patented lands, assessed for purpose of taxation at a valuation of $553,353. The total valuation of real and personal property, including railroad, telegraph and telephone lines, was $3,168,665.26. The report showed a considerable advance in the stock, and also in the lumber industry.

In December, 1900, placer mines were discovered in Camas Cove near St. Maries river, in the southeast part of the county. The discoveries were made by James and Henry Tyson and Henry Renfro. The properties have come to be known as the Tyson mines, a town so named having grown up about the site of the original prospect grounds. The region is a promising one and a great deal of capital is being invested there, in development work and in the introduction of mining machinery. Further details concerning the mines will be found in the descriptive chapter of this work and in the history of the town of Tyson.

In 1891 the total bonded indebtedness of Kootenai county was $56,513.31. This had increased by the year 1899 to $166,623.57, owing to several issues of bonds for public improvements, including road and bridge building. In 1887 bonds to the amount of $12,000 were issued, bearing seven per cent interest; in 1889 $6,000 in eight per cent bonds were issued; in 1892 $80,000 in six per cent bonds were issued; in 1896 $49,000 in bonds were issued, bearing six per cent interest. In 1899, while but one thousand dollars of the principal became due, the county had to pay $9,357.83 in interest and these payments in addition to the usual amounts collected for current expenses, constituted a heavy burden, that, but for the large amounts paid into the treasury by the railroads, could scarcely have been borne by the citizens. In 1900 railroad property in Kootenai county was valued for taxation at $1,947,695.82, all other property at $1,486,238.36, showing the railroad interests to exceed in value all other interests combined, by $461,457.46. That Kootenai county bonds are always at a premium at a fair rate of interest is due largely to the mills or railroads that are within its limits, adding as they do so materially to real values.

As a record to which it will be interesting to turn in future years when the county shall have become fully developed and thickly populated, we give the census report of 1900 by precincts, which is as follows: Harrison precinct, including the town, 1004, Coeur d'Alene precinct, including the town, 931; Rathdrum precinct, including the town, 985; Athol precinct, 274; Bellgrove, 193; Bonner's Ferry precinct, including the town, 594; Boulder, 52; Boundary, 222; Carlin Bay, 98; Clark's Fork, 229; Cocolalla, 179; Elk Mountain, 93; Granite, 230; Hauser Junction, 116; Hope, 316; Indian Creek, 66; Kootenai, 137; Lake Creek, 70; Lakeview, 84; Markham, 75; Medimont, 157; Mica Bay, 165; Mission, 336; Naples, 156; Northside, 65; Post Falls precinct, including the town, 396; Priest River, 284; Priest Lake, 54; Prairie, 128; St. Joe, 70; St. Maries, 268; Sandpoint, 507; Santa, 143; Seneaquoteen, 170; Spirit Valley, 180; Stateline, 148; Valley, 305; Wolf Lodge, 37; Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation, including Indians and whites, 752; total, 10,269. Harrison was then the largest town in the county, with a population of 702; Coeur d'Alene followed with 508, Rathdrum with 407, Bonner's Ferry with 349, Post Falls with 287.

The political campaign of 1900 was fought on the same issues, with but little variance, announced in the platforms of 1898. There were several parties in the field and four tickets, the Republican, Fusion, Middle of the Road Populist and Prohibition, the Fusion ticket being made up of representative Democrats, Silver Republicans and Populists. The Prohibitionists and Middle of the Road Populists polled an insignificant vote. A few Silver Republicans returned to old party affiliations this year, but there were not enough penitents to enable the Republican party to overcome the combined forces arrayed against them and they went down under majorities ranging from 111 for county attorney to 436 received by Dwyer, Fusion candidate for representative. The election was held November 6, with results as follows: State senator, S. P. Donnelly, Fusion, 1799; William F. Whitaker, Republican, 1389; Donnelly's majority, 410; representatives, Kline Wanamaker, Carrie E. Lieberg and George C. Thompson, Republicans, 1407, 1350 and 1417, respectively; J. T. Scott, J. C. White and P. J. Dwyer, Fusionists, 1796, 1843, 1786, respectively; Fusion majorities, 389, 426 and 436; sheriff, Edwin Doust, Republican, 1,481; C. W. Dyer, Fusion, 776, majority, 295; treasurer, Frank O. Hill, Republican, 1,418, W. J. McClure, Fusion, 1,826, majority, 408; probate judge, A. W. Post, Republican, 1,418, J. C. Brady, Fusion, 1,798, majority, 380; county attorney, Ralph T. Morgan, Republican, 1,539, James Graham, Fusion, 1,650, majority, 111; assessor, Herbert Orvis, Republican, 1,467, H. J. Brothwick, Fusion, 1,723, majority, 256; superintendent of instruction, R. C. Egbers, Republican, 1,461, Daniel Van Duzer, Fusion, 1,788, majority, 327; surveyor, William Ashley, Jr., Republican, 1,596, B. H. Williams, Fusion, 1,573, Ashley's majority, 23; (Ashley was the only Republican elected to office); coroner, John Bushy, Republican, 1,520, Dr. G. E. Barker, Fusion, 1,658, majority, 133; commissioner, first district Clem B. King, Republican, 1,390, R. D. McKinnis, Fusion, 1,774, majority, 384; second district, R. C. Thompson, Republican, 1,489, J. W. Ryan, Fusion 1,656, majority, 167; third district, George Ross, Republican, 1452, W. W. Bush, Fusion, 1745, majority, 293; Thomas L. Glenn, Fusion candidate for congress, received 1,783 votes in Kootenai county, a majority of 322 over his Republican opponent, John T. Morrison. For governor, Frank W. Hunt, Fusion candidate, received 1,809 votes, a majority of 396 over D. W. Stanwood, Republican candidate.

In 1901 a resolution was introduced in the Washington state legislature, reviving the question of the annexation of the Idaho Panhandle to Washington. It was proposed that committees from the legislatures of the two states meet and formulate a plan for the cession of the territory by the state of Idaho to the state of Washington. The newspapers of Kootenai county were outspoken in their opposition to the scheme, one paper saying editorially that "That there was a time when the citizens of the panhandle of Idaho were willing to be annexed to Washington, but that was about the time when Washington was admitted as a state and when the chances of Idaho remaining a territory for many years was very bright. Things have changed now and it can safely be said that not one in a hundred in this county at least would favor being annexed to Washington. The consent and co-operation of the legislature of Idaho will never be secured to aid and abet the dismemberment of our proud 'Gem of the Mountains,'" The efforts of the Washington legislatures came to naught.

This year development work in all the industries of Kootenai county made giant strides, in fact during the two preceding years advancement was rapid. Many new settlements were made and the commissioners were constantly petitioned for roads and bridges for the convenience of ranchers and stockmen all over the county. In compliance with these petitions the following bridges and ferries were constructed at a total cost of $12,192.07: Mission bridge, at Cataldo, $365.34, Priest river bridge, $1,543.70, Coeur d'Alene bridge, $3,254.30. Trestle Creek bridge and road, $2,760.85,, Wilson Creek bridge, $100.00, bridge signs, $15.00, Feeney creek bridge, Coeur d'Alene river, $272.67, Mission creek bridge, $100.00, Lane bridge at Lake Killarney outlet $698.05, bridge near Kootenai, $90.00, bridge, district No. 13, $54.00, bridge, district No. 43, $40.09, Sand creek bridge, $70.00, bridge over Baldwin's slough, $168.16, miscellaneous small bridges and culverts occasioned by the creation of new roads, $795.50, Harrison trestle and ferry, $1,401.80, Lane ferry on Coeur d'Alene river, $140.73, Clark's ferry, $162.15, Green's ferry, Spokane river, $138.82. As an evidence that a new era of progress began in 1901, we cite a number of stock companies that filed articles of incorporation with the county recorder this year: William Howard Land and Lumber Company., capital stock $500,000, Humbird Lumber Company, $500,000, Cameron Lumber Company, $200,000, Hope Lumber Company, $25,000, LaClede Lumber Company, $100,000, Empire Lumber Company, $200,000, Heyden Lake Mining and Milling Company, $25,000, North Dakota Mining Company, $75,000, Bonner Mercantile Company, $20,000, St. Joe Improvement Company, $100,000, Spokane Valley Land and Improvement Company, $500,000. In March of this year a deed was recorded with the county auditor in which the Northern Pacific Railroad Company transferred to the Humbird Lumber Company twenty thousand and eighteen acres of timber land situated in the Priest River forest reserve. The price paid was $144,133, or over seven dollars per acre.

We have to chronicle, as a portion of the record of this year, an event of a tragic and sorrowful nature, one that will long be remembered by the citizens of Rathdrum in particular, though men's hearts were stirred throughout the county, and, as with one voice, an angry cry, tempered with sorrow, went up from every town, hamlet and home. We refer to the assassination of Judge John C. Brady at Rathdrum on the night of July 5, 1901. At the time of his murder Mr. Brady was editor of the Rathdrum Silver Blade and was also probate judge of the county. In the summer of 1899 a man named Henry Williambusse was brought before the Judge on a charge of insanity and after the hearing was consigned to the asylum for the insane at Blackfoot. Several months after he had been an inmate of the asylum he escaped therefrom, and in a few days was apprehended at Ogden, Utah, and returned to the asylum, and remained an inmate there until the month of June, 1900, when he again escaped and made his way back to Kootenai county to his home or farm near Rathdrum.

The superintendent of the asylum wrote to the sheriff of Williambusse's escape and requested the sheriff to keep "an eye on him;" that if he showed symptoms of a recurrence of his trouble to take him in charge and to notify him (the superintendent). No steps were taken to return him to the asylum, although he made no secret of the deep-seated grudge he held against all who had in any way been responsible for his former trial, conviction and incarceration, and made many threats against their lives. On the night of July 5th he came to Rathdrum with the evident purpose of executing his threats against Judge Brady. Shortly after ten o'clock on that evening he found the Judge at work with the typewriter in his office. He entered unceremoniously and accosted him in the following language: "How are you, Brady? How do you feel tonight?" The Judge looked up, unsuspicious of all harm, and replied lightly, "Pretty fair; how are you?" The assassin then said: "Take that in your old face," drew his revolver and fired; after which he put out the light and left the office. The ball struck the Judge in the face, under the right eye, and went almost horizontally backward, lodging against the brain. The base of the skull, as learned afterward, was penetrated and fractured.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheriff Dyer were retiring in their rooms in the jail building, which is separated by a small yard, perhaps fifty feet across, from Judge Brady's office. They heard the shot, but the report being muffled by the walls of both buildings, they were in doubt as to whether it was a pistol shot or the report of a cannon fire cracker, the celebration of the Fourth being scarcely over. They raised a window and peered out into the darkness. A light was burning in Judge Brady's office, which flickered a moment and went out. Then came to their ears an agonized cry from the Judge: "I am murdered!" "I am murdered!" Seizing his revolver, Sheriff Dyer hastened to his relief. As he reached his office the stricken man staggered out and fell bleeding to the side-walk. A figure, supposed to be the murderer, was seen in the shadows and heard running down by the Catholic church. The sheriff gave pursuit, but the figure disappeared in the darkness. The deputies were then summoned and a determined pursuit instituted. Meantime the wounded man had been taken into the office of the jail and his wounds dressed by Dr. Wenz, who had been hastily summoned. Mr. Brady was able to speak in a rational manner of the terrible affair, and gave an account of the shooting substantially as above, saying that he had been shot by that crazy man, Williambusse.

Mr. Brady died at the Sacred Heart Hospital, Spokane, July 17, after eleven days of great suffering. Immediately after the shooting Sheriff Dyer offered a reward of $200 for the assassin, dead or alive, and a posse of twenty men besides his own deputies scoured the country in every direction. On Tuesday evening following the murder Williambusse was captured, after a terrible struggle, on Howard street in Spokane, by Police Officer McDermott. He was returned to Rathdrum and lodged in jail. In February, 1902, he was tried in the district court and convicted of murder in the second degree and on February 27th was sentenced to hard labor for the rest of his natural life in the state penitentiary at Boise.

There were three parties in the field in the political campaign of 1902, Republican, Democrat and Socialist. The Republicans held their convention at Sandpoint, August 5th, and placed in nomination John F. Yost, of that place, for senator; William Ashley, of Rathdrum, James Reid, of Coeur d'Alene, and Warren Flint, of Harrison, representatives; A. V. Chamberlain, of Coeur d'Alene, clerk of the court; E. L. Whitney, of Bonner's Ferry, sheriff; R. C. Thompson, of Rathdrum, assessor; George L. Fitzsimmons, of Mica Bay, treasurer; T. H. Wilson, of Harrison, attorney; John R. Wilson, of Rathdrum, probate judge; Robert C. Egbers, of Athol, superintendent of schools; W. H. Edelblute, of Lane, surveyor; T. A. Bishop, of Bonner's Ferry, coroner; Joseph Fisher, of St. Maries, first district, A. A. Merritt, second district, Alex Quirrie, of Hope, third district, commissioners. The convention endorsed the national administration, and, among other declarations, favored the opening to settlement of the agricultural portion of the Priest River forest reserve, and a portion of the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation.

The Democratic convention was held at Coeur d'Alene August 21st and 22nd. The Populists convened at the same time and place. The parties held separate conventions and adopted resolutions in endorsement of the national platform of each, but nominated a fusion ticket as follows: treasurer, W. J. McClure, of Rathdrum; auditor, T. L. Quarles, of Rathdrum; assessor, Charles Waggoner, of Post Falls; attorney, James Graham, of Coeur d'Alene; probate judge, F. A. McCall, of Sandpoint; sheriff, F. H. Bradbury, of Rathdrum; superintendent of schools, Daniel Van Duzer, of Rathdrum; surveyor, Oscar Sheffield, of Rathdrum; coroner, Dr. O. F. Page, of Sandpoint; commissioners, first district, R. D. McKinnis, of Coeur d'Alene; second district, S. H. Watkins, of Athol; third district, M. V. Bogel, of Bonner's Ferry; state senator, J. C. White, of Coeur d'Alene; representatives, S. A. Frear, of Hauser, W. F. Ninneman, of Hope, and Charles S. Moody, of Sandpoint. C. S. Moody, of Sandpoint, Daniel Van Duzer, of Rathdrum, Charles Wagoner, of Post Falls, and R. D. McKinnis, of Coeur d'Alene, nominees, respectively, for the offices of representative, school superintendent, assessor and commissioner first district, were Populists; the remaining candidates were Democrats.

The Socialists met at Coeur d'Alene September 22nd and nominated for state senator William Platt, for representatives, J. R. Danborn, Walter Ellin and George Wright, for clerk of the court, K. Brundage, for sheriff, Andrew Thomas, for school superintendent, J. L. Kennedy, for coroner, S. A. Stowe, for commissioners, first and second districts, Samuel Reid and Jerry Crather.

In the election, which was held November 4th, the Republicans were successful, electing their candidates to all the county offices with the exception of clerk of the district court and probate judge, these offices going to Democrats by small pluralities. B. L. French, Republican candidate for congress, was given a plurality of 383; John T. Morrison, Republican for governor, a plurality of 404: Ralph T. Morgan, Republican candidate for judge of the first judicial district, a plurality of 378. The official returns of the county are as follows:

For state senator, J. C. White, Democrat, 1,677 votes, John F. Yost, Republican, 1,845 votes, William Platt, Socialist, 180 votes, Yost's plurality, 168; for representatives, S. A. Frear, Democrat, 1,561, James Reid, Republican, 1,930, J. R. Sanborn, Socialist, 229, W. F. Ninneman, Democrat, 1,484, William Ashley, Jr., Republican, 2,029, William Ellin, Socialist, 171, C. S. Moody, Democrat, 1,554, Warren Flint, Republican, 1,873, George Wright, Socialist, 185, Reid's plurality, 168, Ashley's plurality, 445, Flint's plurality, 319; clerk of district court, Thomas L. Quarles, Democrat, 1,811, A. V. Chamberlain, Republican, 1,762, K. Brundage, Socialist, 159, Quarles' plurality, 49; sheriff, Fred H. Bradbury, Democrat, 1,659, Eugene L. Whitney, Republican, 1,927, Andrew Thomas, Socialist, 165, Whitney's plurality, 268; treasurer, W. J. McClure, Democrat, 1,789, G. L. Fitzsimmons, Republican, 1,862, Fitzsimmons' plurality, 73; assessor, Charles Waggoner, Democrat, 1,698, Robert C. Thompson, Republican, 1,884, plurality, 186; probate judge, Frank A. McCall, Democrat, 1,825, John R. Wilson, Republican, 1,793, McCall's plurality, 32; county attorney, James Graham, Democrat, 1,268, Thomas R. Wilson, 2,275, plurality, 1,007; superintendent of schools, Daniel Van Duzer, Democrat, 1,576, Robert C. Egbers, Republican, 1,957, J. L. Kennedy, Socialist, 170, Egber's plurality, 381; surveyor, Oscar L. Sheffield, Democrat, 1,607, William H. Edelblute, Republican, 1,951, plurality, 344; coroner, O. F. Page, Democrat, 1,537, Thomas Bishop, Republican, 1,891, S. A. Stowe, Socialist, 161, Bishop's plurality, 354; commissioner, first district, R. D. McKinnis, Democrat, 1,607, Joseph Fisher, Republican, 1,880, Samuel Reid, Socialist, 161, Fisher's plurality, 173; second district, S. H. Watkins, Democrat, 1,498, A. A. Merritt, Republican, 1,957, Jerry Crather, Socialist, 154, Merritt's plurality, 459; third district, M. V. Bogue, Democrat, 1,433, Alex Quirrie, Republican, 2,085, plurality, 622.

A few months ago there was organized in British Columbia the Alberta and British Columbia Reclamation Company, whose purpose was to build dykes along the Kootenai river in British Columbia in order to enclose and save from overflow seventeen thousand acres of land in the Kootenai valley on the Canadian side. When the work of dyking began it was discovered by the farmers on the American side of the International boundary that their lands would be greatly damaged on account of the back water causing a longer and deeper overflow than they had heretofore suffered by the usual spring and summer freshets. Protests proving of no avail, C. S. Smith, representing himself and sixty other settlers in the Idaho Kootenai valley, began proceedings by injunction in November, 1902, in the Kootenai district court before Judge Mayhew, to enjoin the reclamation company from completing the dykes. A temporary restraining order was granted on an ex parte application. Soon afterward the defendants in the suit made a motion to dissolve this restraining order. A week was consumed in hearing the arguments on this motion, and, on account of the general equities disclosed by the pleadings and evidence and because of the conflicting testimony of the witnesses examined, Judge Mayhew made a second order dissolving and vacating the injunction. At the following term of court, held at Rathdrum in March, 1903, Judge Morgan presiding, C. S. Smith entered personal suit against the Canadian Reclamation Company for five thousand dollars, on account of damage done to his land by floods, caused by the dykes. Judge Morgan rendered a judgment in his favor for the amount asked. With this precedent established it is probable that other similar suits will follow. The reclamation of the lands of the Kootenai valley by dykes, or some system of drainage, is a question that will demand attention in the future, and the accomplishment of the task will require the expenditure of a vast amount of capital. But the expenditure will prove a splendid investment, as perhaps the richest agricultural lands in the county are in this valley and they only need to be properly drained to become highly productive.

Advancement in Kootenai county in 1902 exceeded, if possible, that of 1901. The total valuation of all property at the close of the year was $4,095,946.40, an increase of $366,733.89 over the valuation of 1901. There were 574,997 acres of patented lands, valued, with improvements, at $1,148,763. This is of course far below the market value. Twenty-six saw mills were in full operation and fourteen steamers plied on lakes and rivers. The Spokane Valley Improvement Company began the work of irrigating Rathdrum prairie. The erection of new saw mills on the lakes and streams, and the building of stamp mills and smelters in the mining regions was a feature of the closing months. That the spirit of progress has not wearied is evidenced in the fact that during the first three months of 1903 there were 396 deeds, 96 mortgages, 65 mining locations, 76 U. S. Patents and receivers receipts, 48 possessory right claims, 15 mining deeds and 33 mortgage releases filed with the county auditor. During this time there were also filed, articles of incorporation by the Richmond Gold Mining and Milling Company, capital $100,000; Conjecture Mining and Milling Company, capital, $62,500; St. Joe Boom Company, capital, $82,000; Northland Pine Company, capital $100,000; Springston Lumber Company, capital, $75,000; Wisconsin Log and Lumber Company, capital $500,000. There are now more miles of railroad in Kootenai county than in any other county in the state, the total of the four main lines and the Coeur d'Alene branch of the Northern Pacific being 260 miles; and other lines are projected, among them an electric road from Spokane to Coeur d'Alene, the surveys for which have been made and the material ordered; a branch of the O. R. and N. is contemplated from Farmington, Washington, to Coeur d'Alene, through a heavily timbered section; the Spokane and Kootenai railroad, for which surveys have been made, will run, when built, from Spokane to Rathdrum; thence to Sandpoint and north to Bonner's Ferry; thence up the Kootenai to the mouth of the Moyie river; thence up the Moyie to the Canadian line, where connection will be made with the Canadian Pacific railroad. With the completion of these roads the lumber and mining industries of Kootenai county will be equipped with splendid shipping facilities and will continue to advance as wealth producers, adding wonderfully each year to the general prosperity of the county.

For a number of years Kootenai county made less progress than did some other sections of Idaho, but her record in the past four years is unsurpassed and scarcely equalled by that of any other county in the state, and all her industries are in the early stages of development. While we laud the energy and enterprise of the managers of business corporations that are now invading its forests and mining regions with roads and mills and machinery, building up and beautifying its towns, planting here and there institutions of learning and bringing with them the best gifts and the highest virtues of civilization, adorning the wilderness with the home, the church and the school, we must not forget to honor the sturdy pioneer who blazed the way over which have come the forces that vitalize and energize and enlighten. In Kootenai county there is no pioneer's association and we are unable to give a complete list of the frontiersmen who first penetrated the unexplored mountain recesses and went fearlessly into the depths of the black forest, making the slender, winding trail that eventually broadened into a highway for the march of advancing civilization. But there are many of these old heroes in different parts of the county and their names will be found in connection with the history of the various settlements and towns. They are in every particular worthy the high tribute recently paid the pioneeers at Edgemont, South Dakota, by President Roosevelt when he said: "Honor to all good citizens, but honor most of all to the men who took the lead in taming the shaggy wilderness, to the trail blazers, to the men who marked out that earliest of highways, the spotted line, the blazed trail. You belong to that body of men who conquered a continent for a race and a people and you did your full share in making the nineteenth century the most wonderful upon which the sun has ever shown." The pioneer days are gone but many of the pioneers yet live. All honor to their sturdy manhood, their fearless natures and their lofty virtues.

CHAPTER IV.

CITIES AND TOWNS.

RATHDRUM.

In pleasing contrast with the arid regions of Montana on the east and Washington on the west are the wooded hills and mountains, the winding, picturesque valleys, and the beautiful lake regions of the Panhandle of Idaho. The west bound traveler on the Northern Pacific railroad is enchanted with the beauty and grandeur of the vanishing views thrown upon the vista as the coach speeds along the broken shores of the magnificent lake Pend Oreille. To the left spreads the level body of water, in storm lashing its rocky confines with power and fury, in calm, reflecting rugged mountains clothed with primeval forests and crowned with everlasting snows. To the right is a bold outline of peaks and ridges with intervening canyons receding into depths of mystery and gloom. After an hour's ride amid changing lake and mountain scenes a level timbered stretch is traversed which terminates at the foothills on the northern edge of the valley of the Spokane river, termed locally the Rathdrum prairie.

Here when plain and forest, vale and mountain meet has been built the village of Rathdrum, one of the older towns of Northern Idaho, and the present county seat of Kootenai county. Since the first settlers laid the foundations of permanent homes in this part of the state less than a quarter of a century ago Rathdrum has been a town of importance geographically and politically. In it has centered the political life and about it have been fought the political battles of the commonwealth. In 1871, in a cabin which stood near the present site of the home of Charles Wesley Wood, the rider on the pony mail and express route from Walla Walla, Washington, to Misssoula, Montana, rested for a brief period and made a hasty meal of venison or bear meat and beans while saddle and pack were being transferred to the back of a fresh relay. About the cabin was a small clearing, but beyond this the trail wound in either direction through a dense forest of pine, primitive and unexplored except by wild beasts and savages. Over all of the present site of the village spreads this wilderness of pines and the occupant of the lone cabin was the only dweller within the present limits of the village.

The close of the next decade witnessed but few transformations. The cabin was still buried in the forest. The trail had but recently been widened to a passable road, and the wild beast and savage still roamed where now stand the homes and commercial buildings of a civilized and prosperous people.

The first occupant of the lone cabin was a hunter and trapper named Connors who squatted on the land and built the structure in 1861. In 1871 his squatter rights were purchased by Frederick Post, who, after the government survey had been made, journeyed by horse and boat all the way to Lewiston, where a United States land office had recently been established, to file on the claim. Mr. Post's title to the land was afterwards transferred to his son-in-law, Charles Wesley Wood, who still resides on it and who has the distinction of being the pioneer citizen of Rathdrum. The greater part of the present town site lies within the original boundary lines of this homestead, whose legal description is as follows: Southeast quarter of section thirty-six, township fifty-two north, range five west of Boise meridian. Rathdrum was at first called Westwood in honor of her pioneer. In 1881 a post-office was regularly established with Zach Lewis as postmaster. Shortly after its establishment instructions were received from the postoffice authorities at Washington to give the office a new name. The reason assigned for desiring a change was the existence of other offices throughout the territory bearing names similar to Westwood. Mr. Lewis was unable to choose one to his own satisfaction and appealed to M. M. Cowley, ex-president of the Traders' National Bank, of Spokane, then living at Spokane Bridge on the boundary line between Washington and Idaho. Mr. Cowley recited a number of names, among them, incidentally, Rathdrum, the place of his nativity in Ireland. This was selected by Mr. Lewis as a name likely to be sufficiently satisfactory to the Washington authorities, and Westwood became Rathdrum. During the 'sixties and 'seventies there were no permanent white settlers, other than those named, in the vicinity of the Wood ranch. At Bonner's Ferry and at Seneaquoteen were fur trading posts, and in the mountains and along the streams were a few temporary habitations occupied by trappers and hunters. These were usually squaw men who had taken unto themselves wives from the Spokane or Kootenai tribes of Indians, and who took no part in the future development of the country's resources. There were at this time no apparent causes that would naturally produce a commercial and political center in the wilderness.

The period of transformation came with the dawning of the next decade. Important events crowded themselves thick and fast into the early 'eighties. Before the close of the year 1882 the wilderness of 1879 had been transformed into a town site; a new county had been organized; the steel rails of trans-continental road had been laid through what had become a growing village; a saw mill had been erected and was manufacturing lumber to supply the demands of men who were building permanent homes; from a cabin station on a frontier pony mail route, there had developed the village of Rathdrum, the county seat of Kootenai county, and less than two years later it boasted a population of more than one thousand.

The survey of the Northern Pacific railroad was made in 1880. Immediately thereafter settlements began to be made in the vicinity of the Wood cabin. Aside from the fact that this had been a relay point on the overland mail route, it afforded no special advantage as a railroad station or as a location for a town. But in the minds of the railroad people this constituted a sufficient reason and when the track was eventually laid in July, 1881, Rathdrum became a station on the road and in consequence the most important town in extreme northern Idaho. At the time of the establishment of the station there were not more than half a dozen men within the present limits of the village who had come in quest of permanent homes. Among these were Louis Eilert, Fred H. Bradbury, Wesley Wood, J. G. Brophy and M. D. Wright. Bradbury and Eilert were the first to erect a building and open a general store. They were followed by Wonnacott and Sander, who conducted a general merchandise store. George B. Wonnacott followed Zach Lewis as postmaster. Aside from the advent of the railroad, the most important events of the years 1881 and 1882 were the laying out and platting of the town site by M. D. Wright and C. W. Wood in July, 1881, and the erection of a saw mill by Frederick Post in 1882. In 1882 Henry Reiniger came to Rathdrum from Calvills, Washington, and built a brewery on Fish Creek one-half mile from town. The cost of construction was something over five thousand dollars. In the winter of 1881 and 1882 C. W. Wood erected a livery barn on the ground now occupied by the office building of the Panhandle Abstract Company. Others who were in business in 1882 were Lewis Lee, J. G. Brophy and Samuel Hayes.

As has before been stated the present site of the town was at that time covered with a forest of yellow pine. It was nearly all saw timber and for several years the Post mill was kept running to its fullest capacity in order to supply the local demand for lumber for building purposes, much of the timber being taken from the town site. Planing machinery had been installed in connection with the mill plant which proved a most profitable investment for its builder and owner. M. D. Wright came to the county in 1881 and in July of the same year moved to Rathdrum and purchased one-half interest in sixty acres of land from C. W. Wood and thus became interested with him in the town site. Mr. Wright is an energetic business man who has the faculty of making everything succeed with which he identifies himself and to him is due much of the substantial prosperity of Rathdrum in later years. Realizing that Rathdrum must eventually become the center of a prosperous farming community, he opened a general store with Fred H. Bradbury as partner, the firm name being M. D. Wright & Co. Later he became sole proprietor. By careful management, from a comparatively small beginning he has built up a trade the most extensive of any commercial house in the village.

In the Rathdrum store he now carries a stock of goods valued at $30,000. In the year 1902 the business transactions at this stand and at another store conducted at St. Maries together footed $120,000. In 1886 Mr. Wright secured the tie contract from the Northern Pacific railroad company for the branch road from Hauser Junction to Coeur d'Alene and ever since that time he has furnished ties for the company. He has each year furnished from 150,000 to 300,000 ties for which he has received an average of about twenty-six cents each. The company has paid him for ties furnished in Kootenai county since 1886 about $1,000,000. In this work he has added very materially to the general prosperity of town and county.

The town site was surveyed and platted in July, 1881, and its real history may be said to date from this event. Almost the first subject to claim the consideration of the community when it consisted of scarcely more than a dozen families was that of educational facilities. Realizing the importance of intellectual training to assure success in the varied walks of life and being considerate of the needs of the very few youths whose homes were in and about the village they soon began preparations for a term of school. This school was taught in the winter of 1882 and 1883 by Miss Viola Mulkins in a small building back of the present site of the Heitman law office. Miss Mulkins resigned before her term was completed and it was finished by Miss Kate Powers, who taught until the fire in September, 1884, when the school house was destroyed. This was the beginning of the school work in Rathdrum, in which the citizens have always taken a special interest, and which has developed into the public schools of the present day, second to none in the county in modern appointments and efficiency.

The year 1883 inaugurated a period of marked prosperity for Rathdrum which lasted through the following three or four years. The Coeur d'Alene mines had been discovered and there was a great rush of prospectors into the promising region from all points of the compass. The most accessible route to the mines at that time was via the Northern Pacific railroad from the east or west to Rathdrum, thence across the country to Cœur d'Alene and up the lake and the Cœur d'Alene river. Rathdrum became the outfitting point for the Cœur d'Alene mines, and as a result many business houses and residences were erected, all lines of business enjoyed a prosperous era and the population of the village increased and multiplied until it passed the one thousand mark in 1884. Among the business men of this period were Wonnacott & Sanders, Eilert & Bradbury, Cominski & Sons, Thomas Ford, J. G. Brophy, George B. McCabe, who conducted a livery and stage line to Coeur d'Alene; Levi Esch, J. S. Woolery, W. H. Cleland, liveries; James H. Kennedy and A. M. Martin, blacksmiths; A. W. Post, justice of the peace, also conducted the saw mill; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Cutting, restaurant. Mrs. Cutting followed George B. Wonnacott as postmistress, and was in turn followed in this office by Mrs. S. F. Smith. In 1883 Joseph Porier purchased the lot where stands the present Woodman Lodge building, paying for it the sum of four hundred dollars. He erected here the first village blacksmith shop. The building was burned in August, 1884. Mr. Porier rebuilt in September of the same year on the site which he now occupies and was again burned out in 1886. His present shop was erected in the fall of the same year. During these pioneer years a live newspaper, known as the Rathdrum Courier, was published by Mark Musgrove.

Water works were put in by Frederick Post in 1883. It is a gravity system, the water coming from Spring Branch, which has its source in the mountains north of town. A dam in the stream forms a reservoir from which the water is piped directly to the mains in the village. In later years a tank was built for storage purposes with a capacity of eight hundred barrels. Its elevation above the town is sufficient to produce a pressure of sixty-five pounds at the street hydrants, thus giving adequate protection against fire. In 1884 Mr. Post sold the plant to Henry Reiniger, who organized a stock company for its management and operation, disposing of a portion of his interest to the members of the company. The stockholders are John Russell, Frank Wenz, estate of Henry Reiniger, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Porier, David Holgman and Lorenzo Nicholson, of Spokane, and Benjamin F. Butler, of Sandpoint. Mr. Russell is president and treasurer, and Mr. Wenz is secretary. The first cost of the plant was seven thousand dollars. Since 1883, however, several thousand dollars have been expended in improvements and its present value is more than double the original cost.

In the summer of 1882 a small school building was erected back of the present site of the Heitman law office. It was burned in September, 1884, and during the winter of 1884 and 1885 a school was taught by R. D. Robinson in a house which stood opposite the present site of the Catholic church, and which had been built for a residence. The next year the building was purchased from Thomas Ford for school purposes and it continued to be used as a school house for several years until eventually purchased by the Catholics and converted into a church. It was torn down in 1900 at the time of the erection of the present brick church. The school term of 1885 and 1886 was taught by Miss Nettie Pipes. The members of the school board during this period were Louis Lee, Henry Remiger and Dr. Masterson, and among the early school teachers not mentioned above were Miss Paul and Mrs. J. G. Brophy.

Rathdrum's booming period continued until the branch of the Northern Pacific was completed to Coeur d'Alene City in 1886. Up to this time an immense trade was carried on with the mining camp of the Cœur d'Alenes and nearly all prospectors who were bound for the camps came to Rathdrum to purchase supplies. As is invariably the case during periods of unnatural building and business activity there were at this time many transients located at Rathdrum, who, as soon as the depot of supplies was transferred to the terminus of the new branch of railroad, and travel to and from the mines was diverted to the new route, drifted with the outgoing tide and in a few months the population of Rathdrum dropped from a thousand to a few hundred. In the seventeen years that have elapsed since this reactionary period the village has not regained more than half what it lost in numbers during the years of 1886 and 1887.

Following this eventful period were several years of comparative inactivity in business matters. Aside from the shipment of railroad ties, of lumber from the saw mill and wild hay from the adjacent prairie there was little doing in a business way. There were no industrial demands that could be supplied from the undeveloped resources of the surrounding country. Some prospecting was done in the foot hills and in many cases promising assays were obtained from surface excavations. Expectations ran high at times that Rathdrum was destined to become a great mining center, and there are those who still believe that when processes for handling low grade ores are cheapened and capital can be induced to erect mills in the vicinity, Rathdrum mountain and its lesser neighbors will give up rich yields of the precious metals. But thus far none of the prospects have developed into producing properties. Although there is a considerable area of agricultural land tributary to Rathdrum at the time of which we write the farming and stock raising industries were in their infancy; but few locations had been taken up and those that were occupied were yielding barely enough for home consumption.

Among the obstacles with which Rathdrum has had to contend have been numerous disastrous fires, which, although they have in a way acted as a temporary clog in the wheel of progress, have ultimately resulted in the erection of handsome and substantial business houses and dwellings over the ruins of the old structures, thus giving to the village a much better general appearance. The first of these fires occurred in September, 1883, when the school house and some small structures near it were destroyed. A general fire occurred in October, 1884, an account of which is as follows: Fire broke out at ten p. m., the 27th, in a small unoccupied building in the rear of Rector's drug store, destroying the entire business portion of the town—fifty-five buildings. Losses aggregated $85,000 as follows: Lee & Jackson, saloon, $4,000; Hanry Gordon, saloon, $4,000; Wonnacott & Glass, general merchandise, $19,000; J. H. Smith, $3,500; Dr. C. W. Weaver, Coeur d'Alene hotel, including office and instruments, $4,500; Rector Bros., drugs, $2,500; John W. Smith, liquors in storage, $2,500; George W. McCabe, livery and stage company, $2,500; J. G. Brophy, saloon, $2,000; E. A. Boblett, American Hotel, $2,000: Sibley & Ish, $2,000; C. M. Benson, $2,000; C. W. Wood, livery, $25,000; John McCrea, hardware, $2,000; Sun Chung Company, $2,000; S. C. Cramer, $2,000; Thomas Ford, $2,500; T. K. Hireen, $2,000; A. P. Powell, $1,000; John Russell, $1,000; Oliver Edmund, $1,000; Henry Keiser, $1,500; Branch of Sprague Brewery, $1,500; W. A. Hart, $1,100; George Stafford, $1,000; W. W. Musgrove, residence and office of the Kootenai Courier, $1,000; and others in smaller amounts. No insurance was carried except on the Wonnacott & Glass property. Over twenty families were made destitute. Not a business house was left in town and no provisions were on hand. Temporary relief was obtained from Spokane. The fire was supposed to have been of incendiary origin.

Again in August, 1886, a similar but less disastrous fire consumed several structures on the main business street. May 29, 1890, a fire started in a restaurant adjoining a saloon conducted by Bradley & Butler. Although the fire was discovered soon after it had broken out the flames got beyond control and buildings occupied as follows were rapidly destroyed: Oliver Edmonds' restaurant; Bradley & Butler, two saloons; George Jacobs, saloon; W. A. Hart, general merchandise; F. H. Bradbury, groceries; D. Rodner, boots and shoes; the Franco-American hotel. The loss at this time was about twenty thousand dollars.

In 1883 the brewery which Mr. Reiniger had built just out of town two years previously, was destroyed by fire. In the same year he rebuilt the brewery and in addition, a commodious and handsome dwelling in the village, the two costing about twenty thousand dollars. On August 25, 1899, fire completely consumed both dwelling and brewery, and a general conflagration was averted only by the most strenuous efforts on the part of the voluntary firemen aided by citizens.

Although in the earlier days Rathdrum was frequented by a few individual members of that class which has so often given bad reputations to frontier settlements, it was never a rendezvous for gangs of desperadoes. There were a few minor disturbances in the first years, and even in later years the peace and quiet of the village has occasionally been broken by the lawless acts of some irresponsible rowdy, but it has generally sustained the reputation of a law abiding community. Burglaries and holdups have been infrequent occurrences. The M. D. Wright store has been burglarized on two or three occasions, the last time on the night of November 6, 1902, when the safe was blown open and robbed of $900.00 in cash and a check for $100.00. The next evening the thieves were captured at Hope and brought back by Sheriff C. W. Dyer. In May, 1899, during the administration of John F. Yost as postmaster, the postoffice safe was blown open and robbed of one hundred and seventy-five dollars in cash and fifty dollars in stamps. In this instance the robbers were never apprehended.

The only real tragedy enacted in the village, which shocked and cast a pall of gloom over the village and country, was the assassination of Judge J. C. Brady by Henry Williambusse Friday night, July 5, 1901 The general depression produced by the cowardly attack upon Judge Brady was appropriately expressed in the editorial columns of the "Silver Blade" on the following morning in these sentences,—"Words can not express the sorrow displayed on every hand by our citizens. It will be many a long day before the gloom which now hangs over our city will vanish." A full account of the murder and the trial and conviction of the assassin will be found in another portion of this volume in the chapter on the general history of Kootenai county.

As matter historical it may be well to mention two defunct enterprises that, during their existence, were sources of revenue and factors in the general prosperity of the town. One of these was the Exchange Bank conducted by W. A. Hart for a short time during the middle nineties. The other was the Rathdrum creamery, which began operations in May, 1895. The building was located in Ray's addition, had a twelve-horsepower boiler, cold storage and work rooms, three vats of three hundred gallons capacity each, cream separator, churn, butter worker and numerous other appliances and fixtures. Farmer patrons were scattered from Hauser Junction to Hayden Lake and were paid an average of about eighty cents per cwt. for milk. Of the company which owned and operated the creamery, Henry Reiniger was the president and Frank Wenz secretary. During this period the main portion of the court house building was put up at a cost of $3,500. Vaults and enlargements have since been made entailing an additional cost of $3,000. The first work on the court house was done in 1889. The jail was erected in 1890 and cost about $2,500.

Rathdrum was incorporated in 1891. At this time the agricultural section on the south and west had been partially developed and was contributing materially to the prosperity of the town. C. A. McDonald had erected and was operating a shingle and saw mill two miles east of town. Hayden Lake, Spirit Lake and Fish Lake were becoming popular as resorts and Rathdrum became temporary headquarters each season for numerous parties of tourists. A considerable trade had developed with the mining camps of the Pend Oreille region. Future prospects were gradually improving in many directions. In spite of the depressing effects of the financial crisis of 1893 and 1894 Rathdrum enjoyed a fair degree of prosperity. That the village was growing is evidenced by the fact in 1895 it became necessary to employ a third teacher in the public schools. Miss Lulu Leonard, of Post Falls, was given the place. September 11th of this year there were enrolled 111 pupils. From the files of the Silver Blade for 1895 we learn that Fred H. Bradbury was at that time postmaster, and it was estimated that Rathdrum had a population of about four hundred. In this year the telephone wires were strung to Rathdrum, the first message being sent to Coeur d'Alene August 27, 1895.

RATHDRUM IN 1903.

The conditions prevailing in Rathdrum today are decidedly favorable to a substantial growth and to its continued advancement as a commercial center. The citizens are a unit in all efforts to further their best interests as a community, public spirited men have the community affairs in hand and they have the support of energetic business men and private citizens in all moves looking to the attainment of a high standard as a progressive, modern town. The present members of the town board are J. W. Handy, Louis Larsen, W. A. Hart, Louis Chambard and Robert McCrae. Jefferson Davis is city marshal.

The history of Rathdrum would not be complete without a review of the business and professional circles as we find them today. As a record of present conditions it will be valuable to those who are interested in home affairs and invaluable to the future historians who may assume the task of compiling the records of events for the benefit of the next generation.

M. D. Wright has been a leading merchant of Rathdrum for fourteen years. His business was first conducted in what is now the side store. Later he occupied a building north of the railroad. In 1900 the present store building was erected. The firm of M. D. Wright & Company incorporated in 1900. Incorporators were M. D. Wright, B. L. Gordon, of Spokane, Mrs. M. D. Wright, John Sherman and Clyde Mullidy. Mr. Wright is president of the company, which is capitalized at $50,000 and the firm conducts a general merchandise, milling and lumbering business. It has gained an enviable success over a wide field and its business transactions are increasing each year in number and importance. A branch store is conducted at Post Falls.

Henry Reiniger, who died January 11, of the present year, had always been one of the foremost business men of Rathdrum. Mention has already been made of his business ventures in the earlier years. In 1901 he opened a hardware store which he was conducting at the time of his death. Mr. Reiniger came to Rathdrum from Colville, Washington, in 1881 and up to within a short time before his death, was engaged in active pursuits and he had built up quite an extensive trade in hardware, stoves, etc. John Russell is president of the Rathdrum Mercantile Co., incorporated. Mr. Russell is a pioneer merchant of Kootenai county, having engaged in business at Sandpoint in 1881. He came to Rathdrum in 1890 and opened a general store in the building now occupied by the Silver Blade. In 1892 he erected a three-story brick business building at a cost of $16,000, which he now occupies. He has a very large trade in general merchandise, implements, carriages and wagons. E. P. Manor conducts a general store in a substantial and attractive white brick building, 30 by 110 feet, which he built in 1902. Mr. Manor came to Rathdrum in 1894 from Hauser Junction, where he had previously engaged in mercantile pursuits. W. A. Hart has been in business in Rathdrum continuously since 1884. He built the first brick business house in the town. He now occupies the lower floor of the building with a stock of general merchandise. The upper floor is fitted up as a hall and is used for public meetings, balls and plays.

Another general store that enjoys a large and growing trade is that of Larsen Bros., Walter and Lewis, which was established in 1901. A bakery is also conducted in the connection with the store. Although their advent into the business circles of Rathdrum is comparatively recent, the Larsen Bros.' store is becoming a popular trading place. Lewis Larsen was formerly a citizen of British Columbia, and Walter, of Spokane. Grant Vess runs the Rathdrum meat market which was opened in October, 1902. A harness and shoe shop was opened in August, 1902, by Robert Buckley, who came to Rathdrum from Arizona. E. P. Dyer has a jewelry store and is justice of the peace. Mr. Dyer came from Spokane in 1895. John W. Peters conducts a news and stationery store and serves the village as postmaster. C. H. Peters deals in jewelry and does watch repairing, while Mrs. Peters has opened a millinery establishment. W. W. Stoddard runs a barber shop. Mr. Stoddard came from South Dakota in 1901. An implement agency is under the efficient management of W. C. Royce. Mrs. Rozetta Mulledy has a confectionery and bakery and is the local operator of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Co. A lodging house and millinery establishment is conducted by Mrs. W. C. Rodgers. The Wilson Hotel is owned by B. S. Wishard, who came here from Coeur d'Alene in 1895.

The Mountain View Hotel was built by M. D. Wright and Benjamin F. Butler in 1890, at a cost of $10,000, and was for many years known as the Wright Hotel. In 1893 Mr. Wright sold his interest to Mr. Butler. It is a four-story frame structure, at present the largest and best hotel in the county. It occupies a location convenient to town and railroad station and from its upper floors is obtained a good view of the mountains on the north and the valley on the south and west. The hotel has changed hands a number of times. Among its former proprietors were Butler & Bradley, and Mrs. Laura Herron. In 1898 the hotel was purchased by Mrs. O. Lavin for $6,000. Mrs. Lavin has had personal charge of the hotel since and under her management it has become a most popular hostelry and a valuable property.

The Panhandle Abstract Co., Ltd., was incorporated November 25, 1901. Its president is A. Cook; vice-president, J. C. White; treasurer, Ruida Cook; secretary, Edwin McBee; J. R. Wilson and H. M. Stontenburg are real estate and loan agents. Mr. Wilson is also justice of the peace. Another real estate agency is maintained by M. D. Wright and John Crenshaw. Mr. Crenshaw is an early settler, having homesteaded a claim on Hayden Lake in 1880. Stewart Young and A. E. Duff are also in the real estate business. B. F. Bourn is manager of the Homefinders' Real Estate and Insurance Company. Livery and feed stables are owned by Levi Esch, W. H. Cleland and J. S. Woolery. Mr. Esch put up his livery barn in the fall of 1884 and has been in the business continuously since. Mr. Cleland and Mr. Woolery began business in the early nineties. Joseph Porier and George Umphrey are the village blacksmiths. William Havs is a house and sign painter; James A. Dyer, contractor and builder; C. W. Wood, general trucking business; G. R. Klopf, furniture and undertaking. Richard Tautenhaher, brickmaker, yards four miles west of Rathdrum. The Rathdrum pharmacy is conducted by Dr. F. Wenz, who is the only physician practicing in Rathdrum; D. F. Hallister, dentist; William Ashley, Jr., civil and mining engineer; R. C. Thompson, contractor and builder; James W. Peters, contractor and builder; General Sparks, city dray; Sidney Vidgers, sawmill, two and one-half miles west of town; A. W. Post, planing and sawmill. Mr. Post has applied to the council for a franchise permitting him to operate an electric lighting plant within the town limits. Mrs. J. C. Lane runs the Hotel Lane north of the railroad tracks.

Joseph R. M. and Charles W. Culp are owners and publishers of the Silver Blade, a well edited weekly paper, Republican in politics and devoted to the best interests of town and county. W. A. Logue publishes the Panhandle News, a live Democratic paper issued weekly. The pioneer attorney of Rathdrum is C. L. Heitman. In the person of Judge Edwin McBee the village has another lawyer. The town council has granted a franchise to B. O. Graham, of Spokane, for lighting the streets and dwellings of the city by electricity. The Fraternity Building Association has recently been organized with John C. Callahan, president. The capital stock of the association is $5,000. It is proposed to erect a modern city and fraternity hall on the lot owned by the Knights of Pythias, two blocks north of the courthouse. On May 1, 1903, was established the Rathdrum Bank of Commerce. Of this institution, J. G. Thomas, of Newport, Washington, is president; John C. Callahan, of Rathdrum, cashier, and R. E. Young, assistant cashier.

The fraternal lodges are well represented in Rathdrum. There are chapters of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Foresters (Rathdrum Court No. 14), Modern Woodmen of America, No. 6843; Rathbone Sisters, K. O. T. M., Rebekahs, Royal Neighbors, No. 2317; Knights of Pythias, Panhandle Lodge No. 13; Maccabees, Kootenai Lodge No. 7. Lawton Post No. 29 of the Grand Army of the Republic was organized May 11, 1901, with the following charter members: Ewin B. Marsh, Company B, 62d Illinois Infantry; John R. Wilson, Company G, 18th Indiana Infantry; W. H. Cable, Company E, 12th Kansas Infantry; W. A. Hart, Company G, 95th Wisconsin Infantry; D. McCall, Company E, 92d Illinois Infantry; Albert G. C. Slocum, Company C, 78th Pennsylvania Infantry; James A. Fisher, Company G, 40th Ohio Infantry; L. A. Berry, Company E, 6th Michigan Cavalry; Emory B. Martin, Company I, 46th Missouri Infantry; James H. Kennedy, Elisha E. Taylor, Anton Builder, A. T. McReynolds, Henry Geck, Samuel Gambier, Thomas Brophy, Hamilton Davis. The ceremonies attendant upon the formation of the lodge were conducted by Deputy Commander Charles A. Clark and Assistant Adj. General Darius F. Baker of Boise. The present officers are: J. R. Wilson, commander; Thomas Brophy, Sr., vice-commander; L. A. Berry, officer of the day; A. C. G. Slocum, chaplain; John Lyons, adjutant; E. B. Martin, officer of the guard; R. C. Bothwick, sergeant.

The churches of Rathdrum have done much to elevate the standard of morals at home and give the village a good name abroad. There are three church buildings, owned by the Presbyterians, Adventists and Catholics. There is not at present an organization of the Adventists and the building has been closed for some time. Rev. C. T. Cook conducts the Methodist meetings in the building once occupied by the Baptists, whose organization is defunct. The Presbyterians have had an organization since 1883. The building stands on a lot donated by Frederick Post. Rev. W. C. Beebee was the first pastor of the congregation, coming to Rathdrum in 1884. At that time there were but five members of the congregation, A. W. Post and wife, Job Hemick, Mrs. Sarah J. Milder, and Mrs. Pearl Power. Ministers who have since been located in Rathdrum are Rev. John A. McArthur; Rev. Williams Cobleigh; Rev. Charles J. Godsman; Rev. Norman McLeod and the present pastor, Rev. Eugene A. Walker.

For a number of years the Catholics held services in a building which had formerly been used for a school house. In 1901 they erected a neat brick edifice at a cost of about $3,000. At the time of its completion it was the only brick Catholic church in the state of Idaho. The church was dedicated by Right Rev. A. J. Gloreiux, of Boise, to St. Stanislaus Kostka. Father Thomas J. Purcell has conducted the services of this organization since its foundation and it was through his personal effort that the funds were raised for the building of the church edifice. He is now assisted in his parish work by Father Kelly.

The citizens of Rathdrum are justly proud of their public schools. They have always taken special interest in school matters, in the selection of competent instructors, in the proper and generous equipment of the school room and in educational results. With such an interest in the work it is only natural that the schools should attain a high degree of excellence. Their present standing is such that graduates are admitted to the State University at Moscow without special examination. The building is a two-story frame, with four rooms and was erected in 1890 at a cost of $5,000. It stands on a commanding site in the east part of the town and presents an attractive and substantial appearance. The principal in charge of the schools at present is Professor D. E. Danley, who has been exceptionally successful in his work. He is assisted in the grammar grade by Miss India Tarkington, in the intermediate, by Miss Laura Reiniger, and in the primary by Miss Eliza Kercheval. The principal is paid a salary of eighty dollars per month and the assistants fifty-five dollars per month. The members of the school board are T. L. Quarels, R. S. McCrea and Dr. F. Wenz. During the last school year the enrollment reached two hundred and twelve.

Rathdrum is about twenty-eight miles northeast of Spokane on the main line of the Northern Pacific railroad. From a sanitary and scenic point of view, it is most fortunately situated. It has been built on a bench of land at the base of a mountain which is known by the numerous appellations of Rathdrum Mountain, Kootenai Mountain and Storm King. The elevation of this mountain is 4070 feet. From its summit may be seen the Pend Oreille, the Coeur d'Alene, Hayden, Fish and Spirit lakes, together with several smaller bodies of water. A range of hills south of Pend Oreille river hides Priest lake from view, but the white peaks of the Canadian Cabinets are plainly visible, although many miles north of the lake. The elevation is 2216 feet in the village, which is perhaps one hundred feet above the level of the plain on the south and west. This plain known locally as "Rathdrum prairie" is a portion of the valley of the Spokane river. The greater part of it is now under cultivation. Wheat, oats, hay, vegetables and fruits are the principal products of the farm. Stock raising has grown to be a profitable industry. This section is directly tributary to Rathdrum.

In the mineral regions in the mountains on the north, and about Hayden lake there are not at present any producing mines, but it is believed to be only a question of time until mines will be opened here as there are known to be heavy ore deposits; but being of a low grade special machinery is needed to handle it profitably and capitalists have thus far made no investigations or investments in the section. There are heavy forests of yellow pine on the north and east and lumbering is the principal industry. There are five saw mills within a radius of four miles from Rathdrum, having an average capacity of twenty thousand feet per day. The lakes of Kootenai are fast becoming famous as summer resorts. Hundreds of tourists visit them each summer and Rathdrum is made headquarters for supplies. With an agricultural region on one side which is every year becoming more productive and which a nearly completed system of irrigating ditches will make vastly more so in the future than it has ever been heretofore; with a mineral and timber region on the other side with next to inexhaustible supplies of each product; with the beautiful lake region on all sides attracting not only the transient pleasure seekers, but the permanent home builders, Rathdrum has every reason for faith in the future. It must continue to be an important commercial center. It is fast assuming the general appearance of a prosperous modern town. Frame structures are giving way to brick on the business streets. More attention is being paid each year to the improvements of streets and sidewalks. Her business men are progressive and energetic. In her professional and social circles are men and women of intelligence, refinement and great moral worth. Here the home builder may settle amid surroundings and advantages of an attractive and superior nature. Here the business man may safely invest his capital, and the professional man may meet with success in his life work. Here may always be found those essentials to happy homes and successful lives—attractive surroundings and good business opportunities.

COEUR D'ALENE.

The site of the town of Coeur d'Alene was one of the spots first visited by the earliest voyageurs to Northern Idaho and to Kootenai county. It was here that the Jesuit missionary, Father DeSmet, first met with the Indians to instruct them in the Catholic faith, and it was just a short distance west of the present city limits where was built, in 1842, the first log chapel erected as a temporary house of worship by the father and his associates. The site was chosen at the time because of its central location with reference to the larger camps of the various tribes of Indians then occupying this portion of Northern Idaho and adjacent territory in what is now eastern Washington.

More than a decade later, in 1853, General Isaac Stevens, while on his transcontinental expedition, spent several weeks exploring the territory about Coeur d'Alene lake and he counseled with representative chiefs of the Indian tribes in camp at its foot. In his report to the government the General occupied much space with descriptions of the lake and its surroundings, including its outlet, the Spokane river. As he was looking out a northern route for a railroad across the Rocky mountains to the coast, his expeditions were extensive and his descriptions very much in detail. Of the lake itself he says: "One of the most beautiful features of the country is the Coeur d'Alene lake, which is embosomed in the midst of gently sloping hills covered with a dense forest growth; the irregularity of its form and the changing aspect of the scenery about it makes it one of the most picturesque objects in the interior."

Following General Stevens, the then primeval wilderness was next visited by Captain John Mullan in 1861. The famous military road built by Capt. Mullan from Walla Walla to Fort Benton, was at first laid out around the southern end of the lake to Old Mission, but, during the summer of 1861, a portion of it was reconstructed and a new route chosen around the north end of the lake. Portions of this old road are now occupied by Sherman street and Mullan avenue, Coeur d'Alene.

The next prominent visitor to the site of the present city was General William T. Sherman, who came in the summer of 1877 while on a tour of inspection of the military forts of the northwest. General Sherman was so pleased with the surroundings that he recommended to congress the establishment here of a military reservation and fort. His recommendations were followed and in 1878 the reservation was platted, bordering on the waters of the lake and on the Spokane river. It was made to include about one thousand acres. The fort was regularly established and garrisoned in the spring of 1879, the first commander being Lieut. Col. H. C. Merriman, who had under command five companies of the Second regiment, U. S. infantry. While the establishment of Ft. Coeur d'Alene, as it was then called, was not directly connected with the building of the town of Coeur d'Alene, it was indirectly responsible for the early settlements made in the immediate vicinity, and the history of the town may be said to date from the time the fort was garrisoned. The presence of the garrison made a supply point necessary. For two or three years after the arrival of Col. Merriman and the troops, the post trader, C. F. Yeaton, had a monopoly of the mercantile business. During the years 1882 and 1883, however, there was great activity outside the reservation, and as if by magic, the wilderness gave place to a thriving village which has never ceased to grow in size and importance, and which is now conceded to be one of the best and most promising towns of Northern Idaho.

A portion of the present town site was purchased from the Northern Pacific railroad company by C. F. Yeaton, the old post trader, in 1880. Another portion is a part of a homestead taken up by Tony Tubbs about the same time. In the spring of the year 1883 a census of the settlers in and about Fort Coeur d'Alene, exclusive of the garrison, would have included Robert Cochran, John Miner, James Turner and James Carrol, who lived along the Spokane river road; John Clinton, W. H. McLaughlin and Oscar Canfield, located out on the prairie; John Fernan and John C. Costello, at Fernan lake; Tony Tubbs, on the homestead referred to; John Hickey and John Hagar, near Hayden lake. The discovery of the Coeur d'Alene mines in the summer of 1883 resulted in a great deal of travel from Northern Pacific connections at Rathdrum, via the fort and the lake, to the Coeur d'Alene mountains; and the town of Coeur d'Alene naturally taking the name of the fort, began to build up in answer to a demand for a supply point. The Amelia Wheaton, the first steamer on the lake, had been put in commission by the government for the use of the soldiers, but was extensively used in transporting miners and their outfits to the head of the lake, on their way to the mines. We may conclude that the action of the government in establishing the military reservation, the excitement attending the discovery of the mines, the presence of the government steamer, affording transportation up the lake from the fort, taken in connection with a naturally advantageous site, led to the preliminary steps in the location of the town.

In the fall of the year 1883, Tony Tubbs staked off his homestead into town lots, which were sold rapidly. In the early winter of the same year C. B. King and James Monagham purchased of C. F. Yeaton the land he had secured from the railroad company, and immediately platted the same into an addition to the Tubbs' site. The legal description of the original town site reads as follows: East one half of southwest one fourth, and lots eight and nine, section thirteen, township fifty, north, range four, west of Boise Meridian. Being the rendezvous for prospectors, tourists and adventurers of all classes, while it never had the bad name that has attached to many of the western mining towns, still during several of the earliest years of its existence, gambling and dance halls were well patronized institutions, and though the "wild west" air that permeated the streets and lake front was bracing and lurid it was enough to satisfy wildest revelers. It is not our purpose, however, to dwell upon the transient element that bore no part in laying the permanent foundation of the city, whose energies were spent in the enjoyment of the present, with no interest in the city's future and whose departure only awaited the establishment of law and order.

In compliance with the request of the citizens made by petition in the summer of 1884, a postoffice was established with V. W. Sander as postmaster. The first to engage in general merchandising were C. B. King & Co., Warner and Hart, Tedford and Bleaumer, and V. W. Sander. John Caveland conducted a drug store. Hotel d'Landing was the first hostelry and was under the management of Tony Tubbs. In March, 1880, a hotel twenty-eight by sixty feet in dimensions and two stories high was erected some distance east of the garrison on the military reservation. Its first proprietor was James Smith, who was later succeeded by C. B. King. In 1884 this building was moved to the town site, reopened on the lake front, named the Lakeside and was managed by Vincent Wells. Additions and numerous improvements have been made to this building and it is now known as the Coeur d'Alene Inn. The first attorney to settle in the new town was Isaac S. Daly, who came here from Massachusetts in 1883, and who afterward became prominent in the politics of the country. Tony Tubbs served as the first justice of the peace. The first case before Justice Tubbs was a charge of assault brought by one Chinaman against another. Colonel Nash of Spokane prosecuted and Isaac Daly defended. Mr. Daly's client won. During the winter of 1884-85, a number of changes took place in the management of the various hotels. The Hotel d'Landing closed its doors; John Harrison, Major Manning and H. L. Bancroft became successively proprietors of the Lakeside; the Cochran House was built by Robert Cochran and managed at first by Michael Martin and later by John Howard. H. L. Bancroft, who came here in 1883 from Colfax, eventually purchased the Cochran House, re-named it the Bancroft House and took personal charge. Mr. Bancroft has continued proprietor of that hotel for twenty years. A. U. S. land office was established at Coeur d'Alene in 1885 with Robert B. McFarland register and James E. Legato receiver. Mr. Legato resigned and William J. McClure was appointed in his stead.

The following from the Portland "Oregonian" December 15, 1883, is interesting as a review of conditions prevailing in Coeur d'Alene at that time.

"Tony A. Tubbs arrived here from lake Coeur d'Alene yesterday morning. He reports great activity in building and other improvements in the town of Coeur d'Alene City. Several hotels are projected; a large restaurant is being built; wharves are being constructed for the two new steamers which are being rapidly pushed to completion; a portable sawmill will be shipped from here to-day which will be put into operation immediately; a large force of men are getting out saw logs for which they receive good prices; a large warehouse is being built near the steamer landing and lots are selling like hot cakes. So rapidly have they advanced and so valuable have they become since the Coeur d'Alene mines have proven rich, that Mr. Tubbs has bought back a large number of the lots he sold in his town site, in some cases paying $200 profit to the seller. C. C. McCoy has made arrangements to start within a few weeks a well equipped line of daily stages between Rathdrum, on the Northern Pacific, and the Coeur d'Alene mines, via the lake."

Until the winter of 1884-85, the children of the neighborhood attended school at the fort, where arrangements had been made for the instruction of the children of officers and men having families, and who were garrisoned here. In the fall of 1884, however, through the efforts of Isaac S. Daly, a district was organized (the first of the county,) with W. H. McLaughlin, John German and William Bissel, trustees. A small house recently built by a man named Henderson and vacated shortly after its completion, was utilized as a school building, a carpenter, Samuel Smith, being employed to equip it with seats and blackboards. In this building the first two terms of school were taught by Isaac S. Daly. The pioneers of Coeur d'Alene cannot look back with tender memories to the "log school house" of their early youth, but many of them do have fond recollections of many incidents with which the first teacher, the first school house and their school mate chums were associated.

Judge Norman Buck held a term of the district court at Coeur d'Alene in the summer of 1885. Attorneys present were J. H. McNaught, attorney for the Northern Pacific railroad; John Allen of Walla Walla; Colonel Nash, C. Hyde and Frank Graves of Spokane; J. Hollaman and Mark W. Musgrove of Rathdrum; Robert B. McFarland and Isaac S. Daly of Coeur d'Alene. Cases tried at this term were mostly disputes between miners over claims and suits between miners and the Northern Pacific railroad. The most important case tried was a suit brought by Levi Esch against the Northern Pacific to recover damages sustained through the loss of stock killed on the railroad.

In chapter two we have referred to a county seat contest between Rathdrum and Coeur d'Alene in 1885. In the summer of this year George B. Wonnacott called a meeting of the county commissioners at Coeur d'Alene. Mr. Wonnacott was commissioner from the Central district, while H. H. Newhall represented the Southern district. Messrs. Wonnacott and Newhall accordingly organized a regular session of the commissioners and selected Isaac S. Daly to act as clerk, pro tem; John Russell, the commissioner from the northern district, declining to be present on the ground that Rathdrum was the county seat. It was the desire of the two commissioners named to change the county seat from Rathdrum to Coeur d'Alene, but their plans failed to materialize.

The Amelia Wheaton, heretofore mentioned as the first steamboat on the Coeur d'Alene lake, was built for the government by Captain Sorenson. The second was named the General Sherman and was built by Captain Sorenson for C. B. King & Co. The third boat was built by a Portland company and was commanded by Captain I. B. Sanborn. These pioneer steamers did the carrying trade on the lake until the Coeur d'Alene branch of the Northern Pacific was built in 1886. The railroad company then built the Steamer Kootenai, which was stripped of her machinery and put out of commission in 1898. For many years the Kootenai transported the bulk of the freight that went to the mines. The steamer was built to break ten inches of ice and make good time. It kept lake and river open all winter. The old steamer Coeur d'Alene was remodeled a number of years ago and is now the Georgia Oakes, so named for the daughter of President Oakes of the Northern Pacific.

Although a great deal of building was done and there was a great deal of traffic in real estate during the first three years of the life of the city, it had a bonafide population of only 150 in 1885. During the summer of 1884 it was a tent town. Many families dwelt in tents; business houses, saloons and dance halls were some of them under canvas roofs, and the lake front had more the appearance of a summer encampment of soldiers or vacationers, than of a town. The tents were only occupied, however, while waiting the completion of buildings. Lumber was not easily obtained. The first mill put up was a small one on Sander Beach, operated by Glassford & Hawley, and was unable to supply building material as rapidly as it was needed. During the period from 1883 to 1886, Rathdrum, being on the railroad, was the real outfitting place for the mines, and Coeur d'Alene, being enroute between the two points, was practically only a transfer point from stage line to steamer, and the merchants did not carry extensive stocks. All this was changed, however, in 1886. D. C. Corbin and associates built the Spokane Falls and Idaho railroad (now the Coeur d'Alene branch of the Northern Pacific) into Coeur d'Alene, which at once supplemented Rathdrum as an outfitting point. From this date the town began to grow and its progress has been steady and substantial ever since. Excepting during the period of financial distress which followed the panic of 1893, there has been no material diminution of activity in the process of development. New steamers to supply the gradually increasing passenger and freight business on lake and rivers have been in constant demand and have been built; sawmills have occupied available sites along the lake; tributary mining and agricultural sections have been developed; business and educational institutions have become established on sure foundations, and the town has taken rank among the most populous, progressive and substantial cities of Northern Idaho.

In 1887 the village of Coeur d'Alene was incorporated under the territorial laws with V. W. Sander, Isaac S. Daly, C. D. Warner, John Brown and Douglas Ballard as trustees. Mr. Daly was elected chairman and was, exofficio, the first mayor. H. L. Bancroft was appointed treasurer and Warren Baldwin, city marshal. Among the early postmasters were: George B. Wonnacott, Terrance O'Reilly, Major C. D. Warner and Mrs. C. D. Warner. The present postmaster, David F. Mason, was first appointed in 1898. In 1889 the town was visited by two small fires. The second fire occurred Sunday morning November 10th, destroying the city jail, a wooden structure of one story, and in the conflagration an inmate, P. J. Breen, lost his life. Breen was an ex-soldier and prospector, about forty years of age, who had been incarcerated the previous evening on some petty charge. From evidence given at the inquest held by Judge J. E. Russell, the jury rendered a verdict that "deceased came to his death by his own hands in an attempt to burn his way out of jail." That most disastrous fire from a monetary standpoint, which has ever visited the city, occurred Saturday night, July 6, 1895, when the plant of the Coeur d'Alene Mill Company was destroyed.

As a matter of record and for the purpose of showing the conditions prevailing in the late eighties, we quote the following paragraphs from a very interesting pamphlet, written in 1889 by James Graham, who served as register of the land office under President Cleveland, has served one term as county attorney and is now a prominent citizen and attorney of Coeur d'Alene.

"One of Coeur d'Alene's best attractions is Fort Sherman, only one mile west. It looks out on a dainty, land-locked bay where the placid waters leave Lake Coeur d'Alene and form the mighty Spokane river. The tourist is charmed by the military drills, parades, etc., interspersed with sweet strains of music by the Fourth U. S. Infantry band, and the place itself has a fine equipoise and is neither disturbed nor disturbing. Its beauties do not command—they implore attention. Unless the visitor is inclined he is not compelled to lift his eyes and behold the snow glistening on the distant mountain tops; neither is he obliged to peer over the picket fences into those exclusive officers' gardens for the pleasure of beholding flowers of tropical luxuriance; but he will do so if he stays, and if he has leisure he will certainly stay, for greater charm of mountain, river, wood and lake than has Fort Sherman, whether for the sportsman, the artist, the idler or the dreamer, are seldom found.

"Coeur d'Alene is the headquarters of the Coeur d'Alene Railway and Navigation Co.; terminus of the Spokane Falls and Idaho Railroad Co.; terminus of the St. Joe Railroad Co., and also terminus of the Idaho Navigation Co., with headquarters at Saginaw, Michigan. The steamers Coeur d'Alene, General Sherman, and Kootenai ply between Coeur d'Alene and Mission. The steamers Echo, Volunteer, Amelia Wheaton, Korwine, Torpedo and Irene ply between Coeur d'Alene and the head of navigation on St. Joe river, a distance of sixty-five miles.

"Coeur d'Alene has a commodious school house, two churches built and one in contemplation, four general merchandise stores, one cigar store, two book and news stores, one hardware, one grocery, one commission wholesale, two drug stores, four hotels, three restaurants, two bakeries, twelve saloons, two barber shops, two liveries, one photograph gallery, two blacksmith shops, two paint shops, three butcher shops, three real estate and insurance offices, one saw and planing mill, capacity fifty thousand feet per day, one shingle mill, capacity fifty thousand shingles per day, two brick yards, a system of water works, cost $20,000, a good volunteer fire department, one weekly newspaper, the Coeur d'Alene Times, and a U. S. Land Office.

"The city now has a population of eight hundred and an assessed valuation of $180,000, both having increased three-fold in two years. The advent of opening 250,000 acres of land on the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation, will greatly increase the city's business. There is timber enough thereon to build many cities like Chicago, and all the navies of the world. Its valleys are fertile and thousands of tons of hay that now go to waste will be saved and sold for twenty dollars per ton. Its mountains are full of precious metals, and the hearty prospector is camped on its borders awaiting the action of congress.

"Coeur d'Alene has a monthly payroll of $25,000: $7,000 at the post; $6,000 by the Coeur d'Alene Railway and Navigation Co.; $4,000 by the St. Joe Transportation Company, $4,000 by the Saginaw Mill Co., and $3,000 by the Simms Shingle Company. To the pleasure loving tourist or connoisseur of Nature's gems, the beauties of Lake Coeur d'Alene and surroundings carry with them a charm and interest intirely unique and excelled by no other wonder of the northwest."

The above was written thirteen years ago by one who had unbounded faith in the future of the city and who prophesied substantial growth in the near future. A review of the present business and educational institutions will show how wisely he prophesied.

The city is now lighted by electricity and has a system of water works that was constructed in 1889 by James Monaghan, C. B. King and D. C. Corbin. Messrs. Monaghan and King are the present owners, Mr. Corbin disposed of his interests. There are five miles of mains and the pumping capacity of the machinery is 55,000 gallons per hour. The plant is under the management of James Graham.

The present school building was erected in 1890; it is a handsome two-story frame facing Seventeenth street and has a campus of one entire block; the original cost was $9,000. The present valuation of school property is about $12,000. Plans have been made to double the capacity of the present building, as it is not capable of accommodating the increasing enrollment, which, during the past school year, was two hundred and twenty-five. The present school board consists of V. W. Sander, chairman, C. L. Deffenbaugh, clerk, D. F. Mason, W. B. McFarland, George C. Thompson and Dr. S. H. McEuen. During the school year just closed the schools were in charge of Professor Ben C. Camps, principal; Miss Bertha Burrows, grammar grade, Miss Metta H. Miles, first intermediate, Miss Susie L. Davis, second intermediate, Miss Lillian Pennington, primary department. For the coming school year the following faculty has been engaged: Principal, Prof. W. O. Cummings; assistant principal, Miss Agnes Maine. Miss Susie Davis and Miss Lillian Pennington are re-elected to their former positions. The principal is paid a salary of eighty-five dollars per month, and the assistants fifty dollars. The schools have been remarkably successful; the citizens have taken a special interest and pride in their progress, and the competent corps of instructors by enthusiastic endeavor have won the confidence of the community and accomplished splendid results in the upbuilding of character and in the right culture of the minds of the youths entrusted to their care.

The Methodists and Presbyterians have good houses of worship; the latter erected a building in 1890, and the former erected one in 1894. Rev. T. G. Hodgson is the Methodist pastor, and Rev. G. L. Deffenbaugh the Presbyterian. Rev. C. P. Burnett conducts Episcopal services every two weeks. The Catholics are planning a church building, under the directions of Father Purcell, who has recently moved to Coeur d'Alene from Rathdrum. Rev. Mr. Deffenbaugh was the first Presbyterian minister to hold services in Coeur d'Alene, his first pastorate beginning in 1889. After an absence of a few years he returned to the city in 1895, and has remained here since. The first Methodist services were conducted by Chaplain McCumber, of the Post, in 1889. The churches are all in a flourishing condition and are working harmoniously for the elevation of the standard of intellectual and moral sentiment in the city.

The fraternal spirit permeates all circles in Coeur d'Alene; the lodges are numerous and each has a large membership roll. The following is the list: Kootenai Masonic Lodge, E. N. Jellum, W. M.; Geo. Thomas, S. W.; J. R. White, J. W.; William Dollar, treasurer; A. Chamberlin, secretary. Kootenai Lodge, No. 7, Knights of Pythias; J. T. Scott, C. C.; J. A. Waters, V. C., Coeur d'Alene. I. O. O. F.: J. Y. Scott, N. G.; Perry Smith, V. G.; T. E. Hedel, recording secretary; F. F. Rosen, financial secretary; J. W. Wigget, treasurer. Improved Order of Red Men, Coeur d'Alene Tribe: James E. Russell, prophet; Joseph Burzynski, sachem; Fred Lange, senior sagamore; J. B. Frederick, junior sagamore; J. C. Clark, chief of records; Frank Dunn, collector of wampum; Clement Wilkins, keeper of wampum. Aldrich Field Hive No. 7, Maccabees: Ella Reynolds, lady commander; Jennie Groves, lieutenant commander; Maude Dittmore, record keeper. Sherman Tent, No. 1, Knights of Maccabees: Wm. Fredrick, commander; Frank Weeds, lieutenant commander; Joseph L. Burzynski, record and financier keeper. M. W. A.: L. S. Ayatte, V. C.; G. W. Bradley, W. A.; Leroy Weston, banker; A. V. Chamberlin, clerk. Royal Neighbors, Ida Wells, oracle; Mable Barnes, V. O.: Hattie McEwen, P. O.; Mary Waters, chancellor; Eva Hahn, recorder.

The town board is composed of J. C. Thomas, chairman and ex officio mayor of the city, Armand Perrenoud, C. Chamberlin, W. B. McFarland and V. W. Sander. C. Clayton is city treasurer; J. H. Harte, city clerk, and John Schneider, city marshal. Of the Coeur d'Alene Fire Department George Groves is foreman; H. M. Thanke, assistant; George Thompson, second assistant; F. A. Shallis, third assistant; James H. Harte, president; W. B. McFarland, vice president; T. A. Shallis, secretary; D. F. Mason, treasurer.

The Coeur d'Alene Press is an ably edited weekly paper, which has been under the editorial and business management of J. T. Scott since 1892. It is Democratic in politics, but is devoted to the best interests of Coeur d'Alene and Kootenai county. The Independent is also a weekly paper published by C. A. Smith and O. B. Moon. Its publication began in July, 1902. Mr. Smith and Mr. Moon are recent arrivals in the city, the former from Duluth, Minnesota, and the latter from Eagle River, Wisconsin. The paper is independent in politics, and the editors are making many friends for themselves and for the city by their progressive and energetic methods. The business establishments of Coeur d'Alene are too numerous for detailed mention, but we will review them at as great length as our space will permit:

The Idaho Mercantile Co. is a pioneer house, of which V. W. Sander is president and James Roche secretary and treasurer. The company conducts a general store and enjoys an immense trade. F. B. Keller & Co. are also general merchants and carry a large stock; Charles L. Dittmore is associated with M. Keller in this house. Another general store is conducted by W. B. McFarland, a pioneer citizen. Fred A. Shallis carries a large stock of groceries. Armand Perrenoud is the hardware merchant; Mr. Perrenoud has a branch store at St. Maries. Other prominent and successful business men are James H. Harte, Brennan and Steele, and A. V. Chamberlin, real estate agents; Thomas E. Hedal, furniture and undertaking; M. C. Normoyle, president and manager, and Felix Le Marinel, secretary and treasurer of the Coeur d'Alene Inn Co.; Emanuel G. Hoelzele, proprietor of the Sorenson House; H. L. Bancroft, of the Bancroft House; Theodore G. Kaesemeyer, city meat market; W. P. Lumpkin, Lakeside Pharmacy; Robt. R. Maun and Otto Nikolas, blacksmiths; Clement Wilkins, druggist; Geo. C. Thompson, baker; The Wiggett & Empey Co., Ltd., genral merchandise; B. H. Williams, boots and shoes; the Potter general store; Stewart the Haberdasher; the Exchange Bank, Willliam Dollar, president, Harry A. Kunz, cashier; J. O. Jones, tailor, the Ashton Furniture Company, O. B. Moon, O. M. Sparks and C. A. Smith, of the Coeur d'Alene Law and Land Co.; Ed. Turner, cleaning and repairing; H. W. Frixzel, jewelry; John B. Goode, J. L. McClear, Earl Sanders, H. B. King, Willis Sweet (recently appointed Attorney General for Porto Rico), James Graham, attorneys at law; S. H. McEuen, dentist; H. R. Elderkin, John Sabin, and P. J. Scallon, physicians. Among the mill companies having plants at Coeur d'Alene, or contemplating their erection, are the Coeur d'Alene Lumber Company, capital stock $50,000; Herman Swanke, president; William Dollar, vice-president; Chas. R. Stwer, secretary, and Joseph Roener, treasurer. The Howard Lumber Co., of which E. A. Blackwell is manager, contemplates the erection of a mill with a capacity of 250,000 feet per day. The Robins Lumber Co. has purchased a mill site. The Big Four Lumber Co., successors to Lyon Lumber Co., has purchased mill machinery to equip a plant with a capacity of 100,000 feet per day; H. W. Gallehee, E. F. Dodd, W. E. Fore and Frank Leighton are prominent stockholders in this company. The Woodruff-McGuire Lumber Co. and the Starett & Rice Co. will erect mills on the Spokane river a short distance below the city. The Weyerhaueser syndicate contemplates the erection of a mill at Coeur d'Alene in the near future. Allen & Gunderson have completed a mill with a capacity of 25,000 feet per day.

Besides great activity in the milling business, Coeur d'Alene has splendid prospects in other directions. It has always been a favorite summer resort and is each year receiving an increased patronage from tourists and sportsmen. Every provision has been made for caring for the great crowds that yearly come to the lake for recreation and rest. The Northern Pacific steamer, Georgia Oaks, makes daily trips between Coeur d'Alene and Harrison. Other steamers plying from Coeur d'Alene to the head of navigation on Coeur d'Alene and St. Joe rivers, are the Spokane, Capt. J. D. McDonald; the new steamer Colfax; the Defender, which has recently been rebuilt; the Torpedo, Capt. Sparks; the Schley, Capt. Joe Cole; the Telephone; the Bonnie Doon; the Hunter, and a new steamer, the Idaho, which has accommodations for 1,000 people. Besides these there are sail and row boats at the command of the tourist.

The business men of Coeur d'Alene have formed themselves into an association for the purpose of furthering the best interests of the city. The name of the association is the Coeur d'Alene Commercial Club, and the officers are as follows: President, J. F. Scott; vice president, M. C. Normoyle; secretary, Earl Sanders; treasurer, Otto Schmidt; executive committee, James Roche, chairman, A. V. Chamberlin, C. A. Smith and B. H. Williams. The Cable Milling Co., of Postfalls, has been granted a franchise to construct and operate a new water system in the city and also an electric lighting plant. New docks and a new station are soon to be built by the Northern Pacific Co. In November, 1902, articles of incorporation of the Coeur d'Alene and Spokane Electric Railway were filed at Boise. The capital stock of the company was placed at $500,000; directors, F. A. Blackwell, William Dollar, A. Bettis, of Coeur d'Alene; F. S. Rubins, of Rhinelander, Wisconsin, and C. P. Lindsay, of Spokane. F. A. Blackstone is president; A. Bettis, general manager; J. C. White, chief engineer. The road will be an electric passenger and freight line from Coeur d'Alene to Spokane; the construction work is well under way and the road will be in operation in the fall. Coeur d'Alene is fourteen miles south of Rathdrum, the county seat, and thirty-three miles east of Spokane; its population is about twelve hundred. Tributary to the city is almost limitless timbered area; in addition it must always receive material support from the mining regions at present in various stages of development: an extensive agricultural section is fast developing to the west and north; its natural advantages and beautiful surroundings are becoming widely known, and it must continue to grow in favor as a summer resort; its citizens are a unit in all efforts to advance the city's best interests. Coeur d'Alene must for these reasons continue to grow and prosper and it will eventually become one of the most populous and wealthy, as it is now one of the most attractive and progressive cities of Idaho.

SANDPOINT.

At Sandpoint the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroads are but little more than one mile apart. In their course across the western half of the continent from St. Paul to Seattle this is the nearest approach to a junction made by the main lines of these roads except at Spokane. No town in northern Idaho has undergone more wonderful transformations than have taken place at Sandpoint, during the past few years. In comparison with the other settlements of this section in point of time, it is a prisoner, but the period of transformation has extended back only a few years. In 1900 it was credited with a population of five hundred and seven. There are now said to be about twelve hundred people permanently settled within its corporate limits. From Spokane Sandpoint is distant sixty-nine miles over the Northern Pacific and seventy-four miles over the Great Northern railroad. In many respects it is most advantageously located. Excellent shipping facilities are afforded by the two trans-continental roads. It is near the foot of Lake Pend Oreille and directly on the shores of this magnificent body of water. Freight and passenger steamers ply the lake to and from the mining camps in the Lakeview region at the head of the lake. To the west the Pend Oreille river is navigable for about thirty miles, as far as the town of Priest River, making the agricultural valley of this river in a measure tributary to Sandpoint. The timber supply to the north and along the streams entering the lake is practically inexhaustible, insuring the permanence of the lumber industry which is already assuming gigantic proportions.

The history of Sandpoint as a settlement dates back to the year 1880, when Robert Weeks opened a general store and dealt in furs. At the same time he conducted a hotel and bar and operated a small sawmill. Later a general merchandise store was opened by his son Barton and the son's wife. His daughters were also interested in the business, which was conducted under the firm name of E. L. Weeks & Company. The survey of the Northern Pacific railroad was made in 1880, but even before it was completed the certainty of its coming led a few to make permanent settlements and to engage in business. John Russell, now a citizen of Rathdrum, opened a general store in 1880. He was followed by James Baldwin, who owned a restaurant. A little later Harry Baldwin put up a hotel, the Baldwin House, which afterward burned with Weeks' store building. The following year Mr. Weeks erected a saw-mill, in which venture he failed financially. The town was for a long time known as Pend Oreille. On an old railroad map we find it so named as a station on the Northern Pacific railroad. The first postoffice was at a little settlement called Venton, distant about three and one-half miles across the lake from the present town. When the Northern Pacific railroad was completed the town of Venton collapsed, the postoffice was removed to Sandpoint, or, as it was then called, Pend Oreille, and shortly afterward John Russell was made postmaster. The second person in charge of the postoffice was Mrs. Emma L. Weeks. The name of the railroad station and postoffice was changed to Sandpoint about the time that Mrs. Weeks became postmistress.

Interest in educational matters was manifested early in the history of the settlement. The first school was of short duration, lasting but three months, and was taught by S. L. Smith, familiarly known as "Pap" Smith, who is now a prosperous rancher and fruit grower living near Rathdrum. It was a subscription school, as were the schools that followed in the middle eighties. This first term was held in the building now occupied by Thomas E. Murphy as a residence. Mr. Smith received fifty dollars per month for his services. The next school was taught by Mrs. T. E. Murphy in the same building. Early teachers who followed Mrs. Murphy were Mrs. Harper, Miss Gorch and Miss Andrews. Miss Gorch taught in the old Pend Oreille hotel and Miss Andrews in a church building.

During the period extending from 1885 to 1893, the growth of the village was very slow, but there was a gradual increase in population as the surrounding territory was being settled, prospecting was continued in the mountains adjacent to the lake, and the lumber, pole and tie industries were gradually becoming more important. Among the business men of this period were J. L. Pritchard who conducted a general store and was one of the early postmasters; Herron and Carpenter, and Butler and Culver, general merchandise; H. M. Casey, now of Bonner's Ferry, restaurant; Samuel Hayes, general store; Harvy Baldwin, hotel. In 1891 Ignatz Weil bought the Weeks store and for many years was the leading merchant and manager of the Sandpoint Mercantile Company. Mr. Weil withdrew from this position in November, 1895, and was succeeded by W. C. King. He has since been proprietor of one of the additions to the town site. The Sandpoint Mercantile Company operated a sawmill. Other mills in operation about this time were the Cannon and Gray mill, in which Mr. Weil was interested, and the Fowle Shingle mill, J. Nesbit, manager, which had a capacity of one hundred thousand shingles per day. The N. P. Hotel was the main hostelry and a lodging house was conducted by Mrs. Maloney. C. E. Redman was agent for the Northern Pacific. He succeeded Thomas E. Murphy, who came in 1885 and remained in the employ of the company for seven years. Mr. Murphy now owns and operates a ranch across the lake and a number of prospects in the mining regions. The earlier newspaper men of the town were L. H. Faust, now a state senator in the Montana legislature, and J. R. Law, who came here from Hope, and for a time published the Sandpoint Journal.

The building of the Great Northern R. R. in 1891-92 improved conditions very materially for a time, as it gave employment to a great many and revived interest in the future of the town. New investments were made by capitalists from the outside and the fact became established that Sandpoint must eventually become an important trading, shipping, mining and manufacturing center. In building to Bonner's Ferry the Great Northern cut off from Standpoint a certain amount of support it had previously enjoyed, but in the increase of business from other sources, this loss was scarcely felt.

In 1892 L. D. Farmin came to Standpoint as agent of the Great Northern. Mrs. Farmin succeeded him in this position, the two remaining with the company until recent years. In September, 1893, Mr. Farmin filed on a tract of land which includes the original town site. It was at that time unsurveyed and in the patent the boundary is described as follows: "Commencing at the old Northern Pacific turn table and running one-half mile west to the line of W. B. Dishman's land, thence one-half mile east along the old country road to Sand Creek, thence one-half mile north to the point of starting.' After being surveyed the legal description of the land was northeast quarter of section 22, township 57 north, range 2 west of Boise meridian.

During the financial panic of the early nineties business was at a standstill, as it was every where, but from this period of depression Sandpoint has rapidly recovered and is now one of the best business points in northern Idaho. Besides financial troubles, the people have had to contend with other disturbing factors that have from time to time operated temporarily against rapid progress in business and manufacturing enterprises. Among these have been several disastrous fires that have laid waste the business portions of the town. The N. P. depot, Mr. Murphy's residence and the small building next to it are the only buildings of the original town that are still standing. In 1887 the Baldwin House and some near-by buildings were destroyed by fire. In 1892 the old Pend Oreille hotel, owned by Baldwin and Bradley, was consumed and with it went some smaller structures. In November, 1895, the town had a narrow escape from total destruction. Fire originated this time in the Northern Pacific hotel, which was destroyed. The Fremont House and the residence of B. F. Butler were also burned. The most destructive fire occurred in November, 1900. All that portion of the town east of the N. P. R. R. track, from the depot to the residence of Harry Baldwin, was destroyed. The fire started in the Park Hotel and soon spread to adjoining buildings. The block was composed of frame buildings entirely and although a volunteer fire department assisted by citizens, made every effort to stay the work of the flames, the entire block was razed to the ground. To prevent the destruction of the residence portion of the town a dwelling belonging to Mrs. Hines was blown up with dynamite. The losses in this fire were as follows: B. F. Butler & Company, saloon and fixtures, $2,000, insurance $700; H. Boyle, Park Hotel, $1,200; J. M. Bradley, saloon and restaurant, $2,500; F. Courtway, saloon, $1,000; L. Knaak, two buildings, $2,500; I. Underwood, restaurant, $250.00; H. Sawyer, lodging house, $450; Mrs. Hines, dwelling, $450.

The town site of Sandpoint was laid out in 1898 by L. D. Farmin. Its level is ten feet above the high water mark of 1894. In this year the water in the lake raised thirty-one feet and a few houses that had been built in the flat back of the town were floated away on the flood.

The damage done by the water at this time was not considerable, however, and there never has been a time before nor since the year 1894 when there has been danger from high water at Sandpoint. The elevation of the lake surface at this point is two thousand and fifty feet at low water stage, while the elevation of the main portion of the town site is two thousand, one hundred and nineteen feet. At the present time there are three divisions of the town site within the corporate limits, the original portion laid out by Mr. Farmin, I. Weil's addition and Law's addition. Outside of the corporate limits is what is known as the Mill addition, containing about eighty residences, which have been built and are owned by the company and rented to employes.

Sandpoint was incorporated in 1900. The members of the first town board were H. C. Culver, J. M. Bradley, P. H. Moran, C. F. Ewing and C. W. Wilson. The first municipal election was held in 1901. The members of the present town board are O. F. Page, chairman, J. F. Yost, O. L. Peavy, C. R. Foss and J. M. Bradley.' F. E. Catlin is town clerk, W. F. Whitaker treasurer and H. Sawyer marshal. In March, 1901, the town council passed the following ordinance defining the town limits and describing the town seal:

Be it ordained by the board of trustees of the village of Sandpoint:

Chapter I. Section 1. The following described lines shall, for the present and until changed or altered, be and compose the limits of the territory of the village of Sandpoint, to-wit: Beginning at the northeast corner of the northeast quarter of section 22, township 57 north, range 2 west B. M., running thence one-half mile west; thence one-half mile south; thence due east to the low water mark of Lake Pend Oreille, thence in a northerly direction along said low water mark to the section mark to the section line between sections 23 and 14 in said township and range: thence west to place of beginning.

Chapter II. Seal. Section 1. That a seal in circular form with the words "Town of Sandpoint, Idaho," on the outer circle and the words, "Koonetai County" and the word "Seal" in center, and the same is hereby made the corporate seal of the village of Sandpoint, Idaho, to be used in all cases in which by the laws of Idaho and the customs of nations it is necessary to use a seal by a corporation.

The public schools of Sandpoint deserve special mention. The success which has invariably attended the conduct of these schools is in a measure explained by the following remarks recently made by a prominent citizen in speaking of the conditions prevailing in the town. He said: "We take special pride in our public schools. There are none better elsewhere. Our teachers are efficient, enthusiastic and conscientious, and the school building does the people of the town credit. 'Progress' is our watchword, and we take a keen interest in all that pertains to educational matters." We have already given some of the very early school history. After incorporation a small school house was erected, which was afterward purchased by the Methodist church people, was remodeled and is now used as a church building. Land for its occupation was donated by L. D. Farmin. Among those who taught school here just prior to the erection of this building were Miss Minnie E. Price, who taught in an old shack that stood on the Prichard place, and Mrs. Bellamy, who occupied a former saloon building. In 1897 the present handsome structure was built on ground donated to the school district by L. D. Farmin. It is a two-story frame, containing five rooms. The cost of the building and furniture was about four thousand dollars. At the time of the organization of Kootenai county there were but two school districts. Number one included Coeur d'Alene and all the territory south; number two included Rathdrum and all the territory north. The first district formed after county organization was number three, which included the settlement at Sandpoint and a great deal of territory north and west. It is now known as independent district number three. The present board of trustees consists of W. E. Hutchinson, chairman, B. L. Walrad, clerk, and W. F. Whitaker. The enrollment for the present school year has reached two hundred and twenty-five. The corps of instructors now in charge of the schools is made up of Professor F. W. Roberts, principal, Miss Bertha Huey, Miss Leona Hern, Miss Clara Sydow, Miss Carrie Bullock. The principal receives a salary of seventy-five dollars per month, his assistants, each fifty-five dollars.

Sandpoint has one church building which is occupied by the Methodists. Rev. J. C. Reed is pastor. The building was reconstructed from the old school house. There are other church organizations, but they have not as yet built houses of worship.

The fraternal spirit pervades all circles at Sandpoint and the lodges are well represented. The following orders have regular chapters and good membership rolls: Helmer Lodge No. 32, K. of P., S. G. Yoder, C. C.; L. D. Farmin, K. of R. and S.; I. O. O. F., Sandpoint Lodge No. 59, Alex Platt, N. G., P. H. Moran, R. S.; Royal Tent, No. 23, K. O. T. M., W. F. Whitaker, Com., E. A. Sherburne, R. K.; Mizpah Hive, No. 15, L. O. T. M., Louisa Wilson, Com., Blanch Hurd, R. K.; M. W. A., Sandpoint camp No. 7191, P. H. Moran, V. C., C. R. Foss, clerk. Lakeside Camp No. 2373, R. N. A., Mrs. Ella Farmin, oracle, Mrs. Maude Miller, recorder. Foresters of America, Pend Oreille, Court No. 12, Joseph Helms, C. R., Thomas Martin, F. S.

The business houses and manufacturing establishments of Standpoint rest upon a sure monetary foundation. Some of them have had struggles in the past but they have weathered financial storms safely and the prospects for the future are as good as could be desired. A review of these interests is essential and will complete the history of the growing city.

The absorption of the Sandpoint Lumber Company in 1901 by the Humbird Lumber Company was a great thing for Sandpoint. The new company has practically reconstructed the saw, shingle and planing mills, installing new machinery that has more than doubled the former capacity of the plant. The company also built eighty houses for the use of its employees, and installed an electric light plant, which furnishes light for the mill and yard and also for the town. The sawmill is the largest in the region between the Rocky and the Coeur d'Alene ranges of mountains. It has a cutting capacity of two hundred thousand feet every twenty-four hours, while the shingle mill output is four hundred thousand in a like period. The mill has a most convenient location on the lake. Recently the company put on a night shift and are now employing two hundred and twenty-five men regularly. The company also conducts a large general merchandise store. The mill was put up in August, 1900, at a cost of two hundred thousand dollars. The officers of the company are John A. Humbird, of St. Paul, president; F. Weyerhaueser, of St. Paul, vice-president; E. Rutledge, of Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, secretary. The mill is under the local management of A. E. Rickerd. The transactions of this firm foot up over three hundred thousand dollars yearly. The company employs, on the outside and inside, about three hundred and fifty men. It now operates two steamers on the lake, the Pend Oreille and the Daisy, and has two others in course of construction.

B. F. Butler and H. C. Culver constitute one of the pioneer business firms of the city. Mr. Butler has been a resident of Kootenai county since 1881. Mr. Culver came to Sandpoint in 1899. They have an extensive trade in general merchandise, cedar posts and poles. They are men of excellent business qualifications and have contributed very materially to the city's growth and prestige.

C. W. Wilson, the present postmaster, has a stationery, fruit and cigar store. He has always had faith in the future of the town and surrounding country and has been identified with all public measures for the common good and the advancement of the city's best interests. He was appointed postmaster in 1900. T. J. Stonestreet is manager, and W. F. Whitaker, treasurer of the Idaho Cedar Co., which deals in poles, posts, piling, etc. Mr. Whitaker came in 1898 as secretary and cashier of the Sandpoint Mercantile & Lumber Co., now the Humbird Co. He is now a justice of the peace. Charles R. Foss, the druggist, opened his present business in 1900. His establishment is one of the most popular trading places in the city. Mr. Foss is a member of the city council. L. D. Farmin and J. O. Burket are proprietors of the Sandpoint Hardware & Furniture Co., established in 1902. L. D. Farmin, I. Weil, J. R. Law and the Sandpoint Real Estate Agency, deal in city lots and outside property. A. R. Sweet has been established for two years in the jewelry and repairing business. W. H. Wells is a painter and decorator. A livery stable and transfer is conduced by C. B. LeDean. L. D. Farmin also owns a transfer line between the two railroad stations. E. J. Cosscallen has a good trade in hardware, vehicles and furniture. T. H. Darrow conducts the Sandpoint meat market. Charles Hutchins and Mr. Ewing are photographers. Ferguson & Morrison deal in gent's furnishing goods. The Sandpoint Hospital is conducted by Dr. N. A. Goddard, formerly senior physician and surgeon to St. Joseph's Hospital at St. Paul. The Peoples Store Co., which has an extensive general trade and ships poles and timber, is under the management of Frank Ewing. In the list of professional men are H. H. Taylor, John A. Steinlein, Peter Johnson and D. H. Tandy, attorneys; Mr. Steinlein is justice of the peace. Dr. O. F. Page and Dr. Charles S. Moody are physicians and surgeons. Dr. J. B. Buchanan practices dentistry. H. E. Hunt is an undertaker and embalmer. Nelson & Perkins are proprietors of a new bakery. J. C. Helms is a contractor. V. M. Underwood & Co., have a laundry and lodging house. Warren & Richards deal in gent's furnishings, notions, cigars, etc. There is an opera house with a seating capacity of about four hundred. The Bazaar millinery and dress goods establishment is conducted by Mrs. E. E. Brey. O. D. Juergs is a practical shoemaker. A cigar factory is operated by M. J. Krakenburg. W. F. Springer is proprietor of the Queen barber shop. C. B. Jones conducts the Jones feed sore. Jack Mullen is a painter and paper hanger. J. W. Lea is a custom tailor and has a good trade. W. E. Hutchinson maintains an insurance agency. J. H. Ashley is a civil engineer. The Star meat market is owned by T. D. Pritchard. The Lumber Jacks eating house is conducted by William Hanna; the Palace Hotel by Mrs. J. Maloney; the Pend Oreille Hotel by John Murray, and the Baldwin Hotel by Harry Baldwin. Mr. Murray came to Sandpoint in 1900; his hotel is modern in its appointments and enjoys a good patronage. Harry Baldwin was one of the pioneers of the town, having built the first hotel; the building he now occupies is a new twenty-room hotel and is a credit to the growing city.

Sandpoint has excellent prospects for the future. For months there has been a rush for business and residence lots. Seventy-five buildings were erected from the first of March to the last of July, 1892, and there has thus far been no material decrease in the building boom. At the present time the buildings are with one exception frames. Mr. D. H. Tandy has the distinction of having erected the first brick business building. The Sandpoint Brick Co., of which H. H. Taylor is secretary and treasurer, has installed machinery with a capaciy to turn out twenty thousand bricks per day. This is a new industry here but will doubtless prove a profitable one and brick structures will no doubt in time replace the frame store buildings of the present. While Sandpoint has exceptionally good shipping facilities, mail, telephone and express accommodations, it as yet has no water or electric light plant. These modern conveniences, however, are soon to be supplied. In Sand creek, three miles from town, there is a direct fall of twenty-two feet and the volume of water is sufficient to produce one thousand horse power. The elevation at the falls is seven hundred feet above the city. The water rights here have been taken up by Peter Johnson and D. H. Tandy, who propose constructing a system of water works and putting in an electric light plant in the near future. Besides the mills already in operation, the Kootenai Bay Lumber Co. is constructing a mill on the lake, three miles east of the city. Their present timber supply is located in the Pack river district. It is estimated that there will be almost one million feet of logs for the Sandpoint mills put into the lake during the season. It is believed it will require thirty or forty years to saw the visible supply of timber tributary to this point. In addition to the agricultural areas now surrounding Sandpoint there are about six townships on the flat at the foot of the lake, now covered by a heavy growth of timber, that will, when cleared, make the best of farming land. This territory will in the future contribute of its wealth to the further upbuilding of the city. Material support is destined soon to come from the lake mineral region. A vulcan smelter, costing about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, is about to be built at Sandpoint. The Panhandle Smelting & Refining Co., of which H. M. Williams, of Spokane, is general manager, has the matter in hand and proposes to have the works in operation by September 1st. Other officers of the company are president, Jacob Hines, Minneapolis; vice-president, M. A. Murphy, St. Paul; secretary, W. E. Nelson, Denver. T. W. Teasdale, F. W. Condron, and E. J. Norton, all of St. Paul, are directors. The plant will be located about two miles east of the city and will have a capacity of three hundred tons of ore per day. The company has already purchased boats for use on the lakes and have closed contracts with mines not only in the Pend Oreille region but along the line of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroad in Montana. This enterprise will bring a great deal of business to Sandpoint.

In eastern lumber markets Sandpoint is known as the largest shipper of cedar telegraph, telephone and electric light poles, and piling in the northwest, the annual shipments being about four thousand cars. The development of many of the natural resources of the surrounding country is still in its infancy, which assures a continuance of growth and prosperity. Although much has been accomplished in the lumber industry it is only partially developed. Within a radius of thirty miles there still remains 500,000,000 feet of timber, the chief varieties being cedar, white and yellow pine, fir and tamarack. Dairying and fruit raising have passed the experimental stage and are destined to become important industries. Close by the town, along the lake, are immense beds of the finest aluminum clay, where brick factories are certain to be built. As a summer resort Sandpoint possesses excellent advantages, as Pend Oreille is the largest and most magnificent body of water in Idaho. The scenery along its shores is indescribably grand and beautiful. The lake is over sixy miles long and has a shore line of more than three hundred miles. Portions of its surface are shadowed by the most majestic mountains, and occasional wooded island adds its charm to the natural grandure of the surroundings and in places long beaches and shallow water afford excellent opportunities for bathing. Fish are plentiful and the wooded shores and hillsides afford excellent grouse and deer shooting. In the higher ranges of mountains bear, cougar, and caribou are found. Steamers run from Sandpoint to Hope, Lakeview and Idlewild on the lake and as far down the Pend Oreille river as the towns of Priest River and Albany Falls. Almost invariably there is a lawless element in frontier towns and in its earlier days Sandpoint was temporary headquarters for a few individuals of this class. But in the process of development she has driven this disturbing element to seek other places of rendezvous and through the efforts of efficient executive officers, has become a quiet, law abiding city. The older portion of the town was built along the Northern Pacific railroad right of way, near the lake, but the rapid growth of the past few years has forced it across Sand creek to an ideal site, above the highest water mark of lake and river, where there is plenty of room for a very large city.

Much of the prosperity that has come to Sandpoint in the past two years has resulted from the advertising its advantages have received in the newspapers and magazines of the northwest, and no small portion of the credit is due the Kootenai County Republicans, the local newspaper so ably edited by State Senator John F. Yost. Its descriptive and statistical matter has been copied extensively by exchanges and as a consequence the peculiar advantages of the location and the wonderful opportunities afforded have become known far and wide. There is no more desirable location in the northwest for the business man, the professional man, the home builder or the capitalist than Sandpoint, Idaho.

BONNERS FERRY.

Bonners Ferry is a town about which center the most interesting reminiscent and historical events associated with the early history not only of Kootenai county but of northern Idaho. The trail made by the Boundary Commission in 1859 when on its expedition to locate a point on the forty-ninth parallel of latitude which had been agreed upon as the international boundary line between the United States and British America, led by the present site of the town. The old Kootenai chief, Abraham, and his braves carried the members of the commission over the Kootenai river in their long canoes, entertained them in their tepees and furnished them with guides for the remainder of the journey. This old trail was used afterward by the pony riders in the Star mail route service, and was better known after the early sixties as the Wild Horse trail. After the discovery of the Wild Horse mines of British Columbia in 1863 it was used for years by the great army of prospectors that rushed to that region from California, Colorado, Oregon and central Idaho. When the rush to the Wild Horse mines began Edwin L. Bonner was in the mercantile business in Walla Walla. From this point the caravan traveled over the old Mullan road until it joined the Boundary Commission trail at the Antoine Plante ferry over the Spokane river at the present site of Spokane bridge. In company with his cousin, R. A. Eddy, and two other business associates, Herman Roberts and John Walton, Mr. Bonner joined one of the northbound parties, accompanying it as far as the present site of the ferry over the Kootenai river. He saw the need of a good ferry at this point and realized that it would prove a remunerative investment. He at once began negotiating with Chief Abraham and from him purchased land on either side of the river for use in establishing the ferry and a trading post. Following these preliminaries he secured the passage of an act through the Idaho territorial legislature, at its first session, a copy of which will be found in the first chapter of the history of Kootenai county, granting him exclusive ferry privileges at this point and fixing transfer charges. John Walton became Mr. Bonner's agent and managed the ferry and trading post until 1874, when he was succeeded by Louis Lee. (Mr. Bonner died at Missoula, Montana, July 10, 1902.) This ferry and trading post constituted the first business enterprise in Kootenai county and the pioneer establishment of Bonners Ferry. The ferry and post were leased in 1875 by Richard Fry, who eventually became proprietor. Mr. Fry established a pack train service between Bonners Ferry and Victoria, British Columbia, via the Wild Horse country, bringing in supplies which he disposed of to the prospectors and Indians, from the former receiving gold dust and some coin, and from the latter, furs. Besides Mr. Fry's pack train there were four trains carrying supplies from Walla Walla to Wild Horse creek. Martin Fry came with his family to Bonners Ferry in 1876, associating himself with his brother Richard in conducting the ferry, the post and pack trains. From this date until 1884 his was the only white family in this part of the country. In the fall of 1884 a Mr. Stone, with his family, settled near the river about three miles below the ferry.

From the beginning Bonners Ferry has developed, through many vicissitudes, to its present standing as a progressive commercial center. During the eighties but little progress was made. It remained a trading post, but only in a small way did it attempt to furnish supplies for the mining camps in the north and the scattered ranchers and stock raisers in the valley. After the completion of the Northern Pacific railroad, in 1882, Kootenai became the supply point for the north. In 1885 a toll road between Kootenai and Bonners Ferry was constructed by Dr. Hendyrx and Bonners Ferry being at the head of navigation on the Kootenai river it gradually assumed a position of importance as a transfer point from freight wagons to steamer and from steamer to freight wagons. In 1888 William Eaton established a general store which gave an impetus to trade. But is was not until 1892 that the town really began to grow. In that year the tracks of the Great Northern railroad were laid and immediately thereafter people flocked in from all points and the town began to assume the appearance of a thriving business center. The town of Kootenai,

A VIEW ON LAKE COEUR d'ALENE.

INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY STONE NEAR PORTHILL.
David McLaughlin, one of the First Settlers in the Valley, and Son of Dr. John M. McLaughlin, Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company.

having fulfilled its mission as a supply point for the north country, was abandoned by most of its business men who came to Bonners Ferry. Among those who settled in Bonners Ferry about this time we may name W. L. Kinnear and W. I. Williams, who established a grocery and provision store with a stock valued at $20,000; H. W. Gates & Co., stationers and confectioners; W. W. Johnson and son, S. W. Johnson, who opened a wholesale and retail meat market; John C. Callahan, who invested in town property and opened a real estate office; A. J. Stauffer, a general merchant; B. H. Williams & Co., harness and saddles; Brandenburg & Vangasken, general merchandise; A. L. Jameson and Capt. G. R. Gray, proprietors of the Holly Hardware Co.; J. F. Cooke, Jr., druggist. General A. Kaiser built the Palace Hotel at the cost of $10,000. H. P. Green became proprietor of the Bonner House. Among the professional men of this period were S. E. Henry, Bartlett Sinclair and Judge J. C. Harkness, attorneys; T. A. Bishop, G. H. Barker and U. G. Campbell, physicians.

The town was first known as Fry; a postoffice was established under that name and Richard Fry was appointed first postmaster. The old post trading store, not being fitted up with mail boxes, a dry goods box was used as a receptacle for all mail. This portion of the town afterward became known as Bonnerport. William Eaton platted an adjoining townsite, which he named Eatonville. In 1899 the two sites were combined under one name, Bonners Ferry. The owners of the original townsite were Richard Fry and William Ainslie. J. C. Callahan was also, at one time, an interested party.

In 1892 a custom-house was established at Bonners Ferry, at first through the courtesy of the chief officer of the district, and later by congressional act. James E. Dolan and Rufus L. Cheney were the first custom officers stationed at this port. Three-fourths of the passenger and freight business to and from the British Columbia mining regions at this time was via Kootenai river and Bonners Ferry. The freight was principally coal and ores. Since the building of the Kootenai Valley Railroad in 1899 the bulk of the imports and exports has passed through Porthill. A custom officer, Judge Henry Melder, is still stationed at Bonners Ferry to look after the business that comes and goes via the Kootenai river.

The first steamer on the river was a small affair, twenty-five feet long by six feet beam, built by Baillie Gorman and dragged over the trail from Kootenai. It was named the Midge, but was later known as the Mud Hen. Another vessel, the Ozier, was brought in over the same trail a few months later by Lundy and Wright. The Alton was another of the early boats and G. R. Gray built still another about 1890, which he named the Spokane. The largest and finest steamer engaged in the import and export trade on the Kootenai river was built by the Bonners Ferry and Kaslo Transportation Co., in which Richard Fry was interested, in 1893. This vessel was named the State of Idaho; it was designed and modeled by Capt. H. S. Depuy and was one hundred and forty-two feet in length, with a beam twenty-three feet across and a hold depth of six feet. Its registered tonnage was two hundred and seventy-two tons and it was equipped with two high-pressure engines. It still plys the river between Bonners Ferry and points on Kootenai lake, British Columbia.

With the advent of the Great Northern railroad in 1892 came a colony of Chinese. The aliens quartered themselves in a collection of shacks on the outskirts of town as is usually their custom where they are settled in numbers. This was about the time the effort was being made to enforce the alien labor law in northern Idaho and as its enforcement was being resisted by the railroad companies there was general and intense feeling against all foreigners of this class. In June, 1892, the citizens of Bonners Ferry took the law into their own hands. They assembled by appointment, discussed the situation, declared the Chinese colony a nuisance and decided to take immediate action, expelling them from the community. They marched in a body, two hundred strong, to the laundries and dwellings and informed the celestials that they would be allowed two hours in which to pack their goods and go. There were fifty members of the colony and they stood not on the order of their going but immediately prepared for departure. No overt acts of violence were committed by any of the citizens; they furnished two box cars into which the Chinese were instructed to pack themselves and their belongings. When all was in readiness, the engines whistled and the Chinese train moved out of town amid the wild yells of the entire populace that had gathered to witness their departure.

In 1893 Bonners Ferry was visited by a disastrous fire, which destroyed half the business portion of the town. For a year or two previous there had been great activity both in the business and residence portions and many buildings had been erected, some of them costing several thousand dollars. This fire, coming at a time when the panic in financial circles had paralyzed all business enterprises, was a very heavy blow to Bonners Ferry and one from which it did not recover for years. In addition to losses by panic and fire, the city has suffered on three occasions from overflows of the river. In 1894 the lower portion of the city was flooded and the people driven from their homes and places of business to seek refuge in the higher altitudes on the hillsides. Considerable damage was done to residences, business houses and to merchandise. A few of the frailest dwellings were washed away. The postoffice building, which stood near the banks of the river, was undermined and carried away on the flood and was afterwards found stranded on the low lands, one hundred miles down the river. The tracks and small bridges of the Great Northern railroad were washed out in some places and badly damaged in others; traffic was stopped for almost two weeks while roadbed and track were being replaced. The year 1898 was another high water year in the history of the town. The lower floors of dwellings and business houses were flooded and the railroad traffic delayed, but no serious damage was done. Again, in June, 1903, the river overflowed its banks and swept through the town. The streets and lower floors of all buildings were under three feet of water; sidewalks were floated and many of them carried away; boats afforded the only means of transportation about the town; but little business was transacted and families took refuge in a portion of the town that is terraced upon foothills on the south, many of them putting up tents for shelter. The railroad tracks were under five feet of water; a number of small bridges and in places sections of the roadbed and tracks were washed out. Three engines and a number of cars were ditched and the Kootenai Valley Railroad bridge across the river was swung two feet out of place by the force of the current and driftwood. For a time all traffic on the railroads stopped and it was several weeks before all repairs were completed and business was able to resume its uninterrupted course. The overflows have never been accompanied by loss of life, and aside from the damage to the railroads, the destruction of property has been comparatively small when the volume of water and the location of the business district are taken into consideration. The sources of the Kootenai river are in the Rocky mountains where precipitation of snow is, during some winters, very great. When a winter of unusually heavy snowfall is followed by a late spring, the snow remains banked in the mountains, and a sudden change to warm weather in June causes it to melt rapidly, thus sending down a volume of water that quickly fills and overflows the low banks of the river. This is an unusual combination of conditions; as a rule the snows are gradually melted during the month of May and the waters escape without causing overflow except in the lower valley where the lowlands are subject to annual inundation.

Interest in educational matters began early in the history of Bonners Ferry. The first school was taught by Mrs. Martin Fry in the fall and winter of 1883-84. Her own children were the only whites in attendance, the remainder being half-breed Indians; she had in all, ten pupils. During the winter of 1884-85 a Mr. Tailard taught a three-months' term, after which there was no school until five years later, when Mrs. Fry again taught a short term, this time numbering among her pupils the children of white families that had made their homes in the village. The first school house was a small log building and Mrs. Fry was succeeded as instructor by Miss Bell Jones, now Mrs. Dr. T. A. Bishop. Among other teachers in the early schools were Miss Christiana Winterbottom, Miss Jennie Jackworth and Thomas Hydorn. The present handsome school building was erected in 1894 at a cost of $2,500; in addition to this amount there was expended on furnishings $800 and on text-books and library $500. The district has no debt. There is an enrollment of ninety pupils and three teachers are employed, the principal receiving a salary of seventy dollars, and the two assistants each fifty dollars per month. During the school year just closed the schools were in charge of Prof. O. R. Shern, principal, and Misses Bertha Reeder and Viola Macartor, assistants. These instructors have been eminently successful and have made the schools a credit to themselves and to the city. The present school board is composed of James Dolan, Andrew Kent and John Mulfeldt.

There are congregations of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Catholic churches. The Presbyterian church was erected some years ago under the pastorate of Rev. M. M. Marshall. Rev. John Hope is the present pastor. The Catholic church was built in 1894 at a cost of $1,200 and was dedicated by Bishop Glorieux of Boise. Father J. Purcell is the officiating pastor. Rev. J. M. Eastland conducts services for the Methodists.

The following fraternal orders have well supported lodges: Utopia Lodge, No. 36, I. O. O. F.; T. A. Bishop, N. G.; William Vangasken, Sec. Loyal Rebecca Lodge, No. 43, I. O. O. F.; Mrs. Anna Bishop, N. G.; Mrs. J. E. Dolan, Sec. Acme Lodge, No. 15, K. of P.; John Mulfeldt, C. C.; S. E. Henry, K. of R. & S. Crescent Temple, No. 10, Rathbone Sisters; Mrs. Ella McLaughlin, M. E. C.; Mrs. Minnie Little, M. of R. & C. Kootenai Tent, No. 20, K. O. T. M.; S. D. Taylor, Com.; B. W. Luddington, R. K. North Star Hive, No. 16, L. O. T. M.; Miss Maude Collins, L. C.; Mrs. W. R. Eddy, R. K. North Star Camp, No. 6160, M. W. A.; Clarence Collins, V. C.; E. R. Little, clerk.

The town was incorporated in 1894. It now has a population estimated to be eight hundred and is growing steadily. The present members of the board of trustees are S. R. Gray, chairman and ex-officio mayor; William Eaton, William Elderton, N. B. Williams and Benjamin Morrow. A. J. Kent is city marshal. John F. Cooke, Jr., has served as postmaster since 1897. A review of the present business establishments will complete this article. Much of the support of the future will come to the city from the lumber industry which is rapidly developing. William Eaton put up a small sawmill in 1891 and from this beginning there has been a gradual increase in the production of lumber. The local demand is now supplied by the mill of the International Lumber Company, William O'Connell, manager. The Stein Lumber Company of Glenwood, Wisconsin, has recently purchased of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company ten thousand acres of heavily timbered land tributary to the town and is preparing to expend $200,000 in the erection of a sawmill. This company is composed of Wisconsin capitalists, H. C. Stein being manager, and will operate under the corporation name of the Bonner Manufacturing Company. The Bonner Mercantile Company, established in 1891 and incoporated in 1894, carries a very large stock of general merchandise and implements. Their present store building was erected in 1896. Of this company E. N. Kinnear is president; W. L. Kinnear, manager; E. G. Stuyvesant, secretary, and E. L. Little, treasurer. The C. C. Mercantile Company, Ltd., carries a large stock of general merchandise. It also handles feed, flour, hay and grain. William Van Gasken is manager of the Kootenai Trading Company, which also deals in general merchandise. John F. Cook and T. J. Jones are druggists. Other establishments are James Egan, restaurant; William Elberton, bakery and livery; Mary Hollinger, dry goods; J. G. Jorgenson, shoemaker; T. W. McLaughlin, confectioner; Charles O'Callaghan, real estate and U. S. commissioner; John O'Hogge, meat market; Emery and Cane, barbers. J. Muhlfeld is a contractor and builder and deals in lumber and all kinds of building material. S. S. Combs is the village blacksmith. J. P. Beeler is proprietor of the International Hotel, and H. M. Casey of Hotel Casey. S. E. Henry, James E. Dolan, C. H. Merriam and Elbert Owen are attorneys. Wallace S. Beebee has established a dentistry. G. E. Barker and T. A. Bishop are physicians.

The Kootenai Herald is a weekly newspaper ably managed and edited by S. D. Taylor, who came from Kootenai with his paper in 1892 and has since been energetically devoted to the advancement of the best interests of Bonners Ferry and Kootenai county.

Bonners Ferry is in many ways fortunately located and it is reasonable to believe that the city will grow and become populous and prosperous. On three sides are extensive timbered sections that must contribute to its growth. The Boulder, Grouse Mountain, Libby and Rainey creek mining regions on the east and north, and the Priest river mining region on the west are tributary to the town. Its elevation is but sixteen hundred feet and it is in the center of a fruit and stock raising section that is developing rapidly. It is at the head of the Kootenai valley, that, when properly drained, is destined to become the richest agricultural section in northern Idaho. There are no extremes of temperature either in winter or in summer and it is regarded as an exceptionally healthful location. The site of the Moyie Falls, seven miles up the river, has been taken up by J. F. Cook, who is putting in a power station with machinery that will harness one hundred and sixty horse power, with which he purposes to operate an electric lighting plant. The shipping facilities by rail and water are excellent. In 1899 the receipts of the Great Northern Railroad at this point were $144,000: those of the Kootenai Valley Railroad $67,679, and each year shows a material increase. As the varied industries of the surrounding sections are developed, Bonners Ferry must of necessity develop with them. The standing of the city among the advanced and prosperous centers of northern Idaho is assured.

HARRISON.

Harrison is located on the east side of Lake Coeur d'Alene. It is within seven miles of the head of the lake and the mouth of the St. Joe river. On the northeast the mouth of the Coeur d'Alene river is but half a mile away. It is on a branch of the O. R. & N. Railroad that leaves the main line at Tekoa, Washington, and runs via Harrison and Wallace to a connection with a Montana branch of the Northern Pacific. It is distant about twenty-five miles from Coeur d'Alene city with which it has direct communication by steamers. All Coeur d'Alene steamers from Harrison make direct connections with a branch of the Northern Pacific Railroad. Harrison is built on a hill or rather it may be said to be terraced up the side of a mountain, residences in the upper part of town being several hundred feet higher than those on the lake front. In approaching on the lake almost every building in the city is visible from the deck of the steamer. It is about thirty miles, as the crow flies, from Rathdrum, the county seat. According to the 1900 census it was credited with being the largest town in the county, with a population of seven hundred and two. The precinct including the town, at that time, had a population of 1004. At the present time it is claimed there are about twelve hundred permanent residents within the town limits.

Harrison has developed from a squatter homestead to a thriving city in about twelve years. In 1891 S. W. Crane settled on a timbered tract which joins the present corporation on the south and east. In the following year his sons, A. A., W. E. and E. S. Crane, settled here. W. E. Crane occupied what is now the site of the town. Being near the mouth of the Coeur d'Alene river on which there was a great deal of travel to and from the Coeur d'Alene mines, a demand arose for a trading point and in 1892 S. W. Crane opened a general store. In 1893 a postoffice was established, the name was chosen and W. E. Crane became postmaster. From this date there has been continuous growth, although the period of rapid development did not commence until several years later. W. S. Bridgman and Company established a general merchandise store in 1893. The railroad was completed to Harrison in 1890 and has always been a prime factor in the development of town and country. W. E. Crane, with the assistance of R. M. Wark, erected the first building in 1891. In 1889 the Fisher brothers had put up a sawmill at St. Marie's which had a capacity of twenty thousand feet per day. This plant was purchased in 1891 by Fred Grant and moved to Harrison. It was greatly enlarged and is now known as the Grant mill. It has a capacity of sixty thousand feet per day. In 1893 Mr. Sexton built a mill which he afterwards sold to J. L. Cameron of the Cameron Lumber Company. The mill was rebuilt on a much larger scale. The next mill was put up in 1895 by C. W. Russel. Another of the earlier business men was W. A. Reiniger, who established a general store about 1894. A newspaper called first the Signal and later the Mountain Messenger was established in 1895 and published in turn by several proprietors, among whom were S. W. Crane, Hubbard & Company, Thompson & Biggs and Thomas Lawson. The name of the paper was again changed in 1900 to The Searchlight and since April, 1902, has been ably edited by S. M. Logan. It has aided very materially in the advancement of the city's best interests.

Interest in educational matters began early in the history of the settlement. The district, No. 29, was formed in 1895. The first school was taught in the winter of 1895 and 1896 in the M. E. church building by Mr. Edelblute. There were at this time fifty-nine pupils in the district. Among the other early school teachers was E. W. Burleigh, who conducted the schools continuously for three years. A school building was erected in 1896. The Methodists were the first to erect a church building, which was begun in 1895, but was not entirely finished and furnished until the following year.

The town site of Harrison is in the form of a triangle, with the lake front as the base, and it contains twenty-two and fifty-eight hundredths acres. The plat was made in 1897, but owing to the fact that it was on unsurveyed land, until November, 1902, town property was held only by lease from W. E. Crane, the first settler on the land. Proof on the townsite was made in November, 1902, and deeds were issued in February of the present year. From the proceedings of the county commissioners in August, 1899, we take the following:

That the inhabitants of the territory hereinafter described be and the same are hereby incorporated into a village to be governed by the provisions of the laws of this state applicable to the government of villages, under the name of the village of Harrison. It is further ordered that the boundaries of said village be as follows: Commencing at a point on the east side of Lake Coeur d'Alene in said county of Kootenai, where the north boundary line of the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation intersects said lake, thence east along said reservation line to a stone set by the government surveyors and witnessed by two pine trees, and designed to make a quarter section corner when said survey is accepted by the government; thence north on what, when said survey is accepted, will be the north and south quarter line to the southeast corner of the northwest quarter of section 31, township 48 north, range 3 west, of Boise meridian; thence west along the east and west quarter line of section 36, township 48 north, range 4 west, until said line interesects with the waters of Lake Coeur d'Alene; thence southerly along the shore of said lake, at the water's edge at low water, to the place of beginning. And it is further ordered that A. P. Harris, George E. Thompson, E. W. Wheeler, George S. Johnson and M. W. Frost be and the same are hereby appointed as trustees of said village to hold their offices and perform all the duties required of them by law until the election and qualification of their successors at the time and in the manner prescribed by law; and it is further ordered that the clerk of this board forward a certified copy of this order to George E. Thompson, one of the trustees hereby appointed, and also give notice to each of the other trustees named of their appointment to such office. The present officers are Dr. John Busby, O. B. Steward, E. W. Wheeler, H. A. Laumeister and J. L. Boutellier.

In August, 1901, a franchise was granted to parties from Spokane to put in a system of waterworks and through the efforts of Village Clerk A. A. Crane right of way for laying pipes over the city was quickly secured. The cost of the plant was twelve thousand dollars. It is now the property of A. P. Powell. Water for city consumption is obtained from two sources. A flowing spring, high up on the mountain, supplies about ten thousand gallons per day and the balance is pumped from the lake into two tanks built on the mountain side above the town. The cost of the pumping plant was ten thousand dollars. Each of the tanks mentioned has a capacity of fifty-two thousand gallons. Pipes from these tanks connect directly with the mains on the business streets below, and the pressure at the hydrants is abundantly sufficient for protection against fire. A fire company was organized several years ago and the city owns hose carts and a quantity of fire hose, which are kept always in readiness for use, in a building erected for the purpose.

An electric lighting plant was installed in 1901 by Kimmel Brothers, at a cost of eight thousand dollars. The officers of the light company are G. H. Kimmel, president; L. J. Kimmel, vice-president and superintendent; H. O. Thompson, secretary. Commercial lighting is furnished at one dollar per light and residence light at a lower figure.

A telephone line connecting Harrison with various points up the St. Joe and Coeur d'Alene rivers was built in 1902. It was erected by the Interstate Telephone Company. The Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Company purchased the property in the same year and Harrison now has long distance connections with all points. Mrs. A. M. Thanke has charge of the local office.

All these modern conveniences and improvements came to Harrison within the short space of a year. From an editorial in the columns of the Searchlight, published February 14, 1902, we quote the following words: "In the past year Harrison has made rapid advancement in the way of public improvements. One year ago the inhabitants of our town were carrying water for all purposes from the lake in pails, as it was absolutely impossible to procure water by sinking wells. Today water is piped to every house and the hardships that once prevailed in our midst along those lines have disappeared through the thrift and enterprise of the Harrison Water Company. Last fall Kimmel and Kimmel came to our town and applied to the trustees for a franchise to put in an electric light plant; the result is to-day, instead of our business houses and residences being lighted by the dingy kerosene lamp, the button is pushed and the electric light is on in every corner of the house. We no longer grope our way through the streets in the dark hours of the night, but the glare of the arc light has turned night into day. Up to the present we have had no mode of communication with the outside world except by mail or telegraph, today we talk over the line of the Interstate Telephone Company to people living in the most remote parts of the county. The crew and apparatus of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Company are now at Harrison and in less than thirty days we will have a complete telephone exchange and a long-distance line connecting us with the outside world. The Washington Electric Power line passes through our county within four miles of our town, affording an opportunity to procure electric power for whatever purpose we may have occasion to use it. All of this has come to our town in less than one year."

A review of the business enterprises of the present includes the following: No enterprise brought to Harrison more wealth and greater prosperity than did the Cameron Lumber Company's mill plant. Although it has been destroyed, the history of Harrison would be incomplete without a record of its existence. The company commenced operations in 1893, when the Sexton mill was purchased and rebuilt. It eventually became one of the largest mills in the country. The entire plant was destroyed by fire on August 27, 1902. Two million feet of lumber belonging to the company was burned with the mill. The loss was two hundred thousand dollars, with twenty thousand dollars insurance. At the time of this fire the town of Harrison narrowly escaped destruction. Roofs of houses caught fire all over the city and it was only by united and continued effort on the part of fire companies and citizens that a general conflagration was averted. The fire company from Wallace came to the rescue and did splendid service in keeping the flames confined to the mill and yards. The officers of the Cameron Lumber Company are A. B. Campbell, president; T. L. Greenough, vice-president; C. Herbert Moore, secretary and treasurer; Donald R. Cameron, manager.

The St. Joe Lumber Company was organized in 1901 with a capital of twenty-five thousand dollars. Three months later this was increased to seventy-five thousand dollars. The mill was built in 1900 and has a capacity of fifty thousand feet per day. Fifty men are employed and the pay roll is about $2,500 per month. The mill is fitted with planing machines and dry kilns. The officers of the company are Warren Flint, president; George E. Thompson, vice-president; J. H. Barlow, general manager; Fred C. Barlow, secretary and treasurer. The oldest plant is the Grant mill, which was established in 1891 by Hogue Fisher, and purchased in 1894 by Fred Grant. It has been enlarged to a capacity of sixty-five thousand feet per day. It is equipped with planers, moulders, stickers and lath machines and has its own electric light plant. It employs fifty men besides its logging force. Fred Grant is owner and manager. The C. W. Russell mill was built in 1895. It has a capacity of twenty-five thousand feet per day, employs about twenty-five men and has a monthy pay roll of about $1,200. Planing and moulding machines are also operated here. The Harrison Box and Lumber Company mill is owned and operated by William Gray and Lee Knutson. Its capacity is twenty thousand feet per day and its monthly pay roll about $1,000. It makes a specialty of all kinds of fruit boxes. William Gray is general business manager. The Empire mill is operated by Albert G. Kroetch and Lawrence S. Kroetch. It has a capacity of fifty thousand feet per day. The Eureka shingle mill is owned by Joseph and Samuel Avery and Victor Carlson. These mills do a good business. The Lyon Navigation Company operates tugs, barges and excursion boats and engages in a general freight and passenger business on the lake and rivers. Among others they own the steamer Victoria, which has accommodations for sixty passengers and is the swiftest boat on the lake. W. E. Lyon is local manager for the company, which has a monthly pay roll varying from $500 to $1,000. The First Bank of Harrison was organized February 1, 1902, and is capitalized at ten thousand dollars. O. B. Steward is president and O. E. Barr, cashier. Harrison has a good opera house, with a seating capacity of four hundred. The building is one hundred feet long and has a stage 25 by 26 feet in dimensions. It is owned and managed by B. S. Laferty. Drug stores are conducted by Essig Bros., George G., Charles C. and Hal H., also by William Cope and by James M. and John A. Corskie. The Harrison Hardware Company is managed by W. O. Wheeler. Hardware, stoves, etc., are also handled by E. C. Ribsiein. General stores are conducted by S. P. Lant, John F. Pollock and John H. Sampson, the Kootenai Commercial Company and by William A. Reiniger. A. W. Burleigh and Charles S. Manning deal in groceries. The Harrison bakery is run by Benjamin S. Lafferty. J. W. Jamison is proprietor of the Gem restaurant and hotel. Confectionery and fruits are sold by E. V. Fulkerson and by Clarence Cole. A confectionery, book and stationery store is conducted by W. S. Logan & Company. The Owl cafe is owned by Otto Varner. M. E. Peterson has a jewelry store. The Harrison meat market is conducted by E. W. Wheeler. O. B. Steward has a furniture and undertaking establishment. Ike S. Copeland has a boat building plant and conducts a floating cafe. Notions are sold by Mrs. H. C. York. Tailoring is done by H. Brink and shoemaking by Frank Parker. Second hand goods are handled by Alex. Musser. Barber shops are owned by C. L. Maynard, William E. Rich and by H. Haskins. John Helms is the village blacksmith. S. W. Crane has a photograph studio. W. H. Armstrong and J. C. McElhinnie are contractors and builders. Busch & Co. are sign writers and paper hangers. R. K. Wheeler is a notary public, writes insurance and attends to collections. O. E. Barr maintains an insurance and investment agency. Harrison physicians are Dr. John Busby, Dr. Herman Schmalhausen and Dr. J. C. Dwyer. Dr. Youngbug practices dentistry. Attorneys at law are A. A. Crane, Fred Burgen, T. H. Wilson. The present postmaster is O. J. Butler.

The Methodists erected a house of worship in 1895, the Baptists in 1900 and the Presbyterians in 1901. Rev. R. C. Gaily is now pastor of the M. E. congregation. The Baptists have no regular pastor at present, but regular services are held each Sunday. The Adventists have a building, but the society is defunct and no services are held. The Catholics hold services in the Adventists' building. The first Presbyterian minister located in Harrison was Rev. J. H. Rodgers; the present pastor is Rev. I. N. Roberts.

The fraternal orders are well represented. The following societies have chapters in Harrison: Harrison Lodge No. 35, A. F. & A. M.; A. A. Crane, W. M.; O. E. Barr, secretary. I. O. O. F., Harrison Lodge No. 54; Ralph Bakkin, N. G.; S. M. Logan, secretary. Foresters, Harrison Court, No. 13; E. P. Harris, C. R.; W. E. Fuller, recording secretary. Maccabees, Harrison Tent No. 5; William Gray, Com.; Louis Stuve, record keeper. Improved Order of Red Men, Wildshoe Tribe No. 5; O. P. Calef, sachem; Gilbert Stuve, chief of records. M. W. A. Camp No. 6676; Asa Bowman, V. C.; L. Stuve, clerk. Syringa Chapter O. E. Star Lodge; Mrs. Ella Wheeler, secretary. Viola Rebekah Lodge No. 38; E. May Gilbert, N. G.; A. P. Powell, secretary. L. O. T. M., Lady Orchard Hive No. 11; Mrs. Helen Wark, Com.; Miss Minnie Diche, R. K. Harrison Labor Union No. 253; James Manning, president; B. P. Rice, recording secretary; E. R. Jones, Fin. Secy.; W. E. Stone, treasurer.

The public school building was erected in 1896. As the school population has increased, additions have been added to the original structure, the last being built in 1900. There are now five rooms and the enrollment during the past school year reached two hundred and twenty-five. Prof. F. E. Ball was in charge of the schools during the term just closed. He was assisted by Mrs. Fred Bergan, Miss Eliza Sexton, Miss Theodora DeSaussure and Miss Emily Clancy. This corps of instructors proved themselves eminently competent and the results of their labor have been satisfactory to the citizens, who have always taken special pride and interest in educational matters. The present school board is composed of M. W. Frost, Louis Stuve and Edward Crane. M. W. Frost is justice of the peace.

The nine sawmills of Harrison occupy the available spaces on the lake front for over a mile and when all are running to their fullest capacity the daily output is about five hundred thousand feet and the combined pay roll foots about twenty-five thousand dollars monthly. Harrison is a town whose marvelous growth has resulted solely from the development of the lumber industry, and this development is not by any means complete. In the lake and river regions there are still dense forests of cedar, fir, tamarack and pine that have scarcely been touched. For all this wealth of timber, Harrison, with its shipping facilities is the natural outlet. There are also other industries which in the near future will begin to contribute their support to the growing city. While there are no extensive agricultural areas in the immediate vicinity, in the valleys of the St. Joe and St. Maries rivers, farming, stock and fruit raising are soon to become leading industries. This is also true of the Coeur d'Alene river valley. On these rivers there are immense tracts that will become most productive farming regions when the forests are cleared away. These valleys are already great hay producers, it being estimated that eight thousand tons were raised in 1902. All this territory is tributary to Harrison and will in time contribute largely to its prosperity. The entire section of country bordering on these rivers and on the lake is believed to be rich in minerals. A great many claims have been located from which good assays have been obtained. When transportation facilities and machinery are at hand, paying properties will doubtless be worked in many of these localities and Harrison is certain to reap her share of the harvest of wealth that inevitably flows from prosperous mining camps.

There is no town in Kootenai county that has fairer prospects than has Harrison. Her citizens are public spirited and aggressive; they will allow no opportunity to pass unimproved to advance their best interests as a community. The spirit of progress pervades the business circles. Unity of sentiment and action on the part of town officials and citizens is a characteristic to which is attributable much of the prosperity of the past and it is certain to accomplish much more in the future. Harrison is one of the coming cities of northern Idaho.

PRIEST RIVER.

No town in northern Idaho can boast of such rapid and at the same time substantial growth as can Priest River. In the census report of 1900 the entire voting precinct was credited with a population of but two hundred and eighty-four, while the town alone contained but fifty people. The town now has a population of four or five hundred and its period of development is scarcely more than begun. What has been accomplished in Priest River has not been the result of special boom advertising by townsite owners. While there has been a boom in the truest sense of the term, the growth, although rapid, has been natural and in pace with the development of the surrounding country.

Priest River is the natural center or outlet of a heavily timbered section of country lying to the north. Several years ago a sawmill was built here, but only during the past two years has the development of the lumber industry been pushed with vigor and earnestness. The sure foundations for a thriving business center were laid in the forests and in the mountains long ago, and as soon as the speculative spirit of man invaded the virgin fields with the pick and spade, the ax and saw, the town began to grow in answer to an unmistakable demand.

Prior to the building of the Great Northern Railroad in 1891 Priest River had no official existence. Even then it was not designated as a regular station, being for years only a flag station where occasional stops were made. For ten years after the completion of the railroad it had no depot. This building was not erected until late in the fall of 1901. But in 1891 it was made a postoffice, with the late James Judge as postmaster. Mr. Judge, who was deputy sheriff of the county from 1897 to 1902, was one of the first permanent settlers in the vicinity of the present town. In the spring of 1890 he took up a homestead at the junction of the Pend Oreille and Priest rivers, one-half mile from the town. He had been preceded, in 1888, by Henry Keyser and in 1889 by John Canton, who also took up homesteads on the rivers named. The Judge and the Canton farms are directly at the junction of the rivers. The Keyser ranch joins them on the north. These farms are today very valuable properties, both because of location at the confluence of these streams and because of natural advantages as stock and fruit ranches. Among others who were early settlers are Thomas Benton, J. C. Finstad, M. S. Lindsey, and C. C. Lemley, who came in 1890, and W. H. Lemley, who came in 1891. Charles Jackson has conducted a general merchandise store for ten years. John A. Gowanlock, Mrs. M. P. Jones and Mears Brothers are also among the earlier merchants who have not only been exceptionally successful in business matters, but have done much in building up the town and making it what it is today, a live city with excellent future prospects. Unlike some of the other towns of northern Idaho, Priest River has not had to contend with disasters of flood and flame. While there have been fires and high waters, they came at a time when there was but little to destroy, before the present town had been built. For several weeks in the spring of 1890 snow covered the surrounding country five feet deep on the level. While the section was but sparsely settled, considerable suffering was caused by the deep snow which stopped travel of all kinds over the trails and the few roads that had been made, and a great deal of stock perished. Water was high in the streams when the snow melted and some damage resulted in a few localities along the banks, but the snow went off so slowly that losses were comparatively light. The development of the lumber industry has come by leaps and bounds in late years, but very little was accomplished in the decade closing with the year 1900. Some logging was done up the Priest river before a sawmill was erected at the town, the first logs being cut on section 12, about three miles north of town. These were floated down Priest river to its mouth and towed up the Pend Oreille river to Sandpoint.

The town site of Priest River slopes from the Pend Oreille river, north to the crest of a range of hills. The elevation at the railroad tracks is two thousand one hundred and seventy feet. On the north limit of the town it is perhaps two hundred feet higher. The site is situated in the north half of section 25, township 56 north, range 4 west, of Boise meridian. The portion of the town now occupied by the White Pine Lumber Company's mill and yards, was first owned by William Baberstock, who squatted on the land before it was surveyed. Mr. Baberstock transferred his squatter rights to M. P. Jones, who in turn sold to the lumber company after survey had been made. The town site proper, including the business and residence portions, is now owned by Charles Jackson and M. S. Lindsey. Joseph Horner first held squatter rights to the property. He sold his interests in 1893 to Mr. Jackson, with whom Mr. Lindsey is now interested. Mr. Jackson laid out the town in September, 1901. After the government survey, it was found that a portion of the town was platted on railroad land. Later this portion was purchased from the company. The Horner cabin was the first building erected within the present town limits. Although the present population is sufficient to warrant incorporation and to entitle the citizens to enabling legislation, for this purpose, it is not yet incorporated, a majority of the citizens believing that a city government would be of no special benefit under present conditions. Trials for offenses against law and order are taken before Justice J. C. Finstad. Amos McBee serves the community as constable.

From the beginning there has been a commendable interest in educational matters. The first school building is now occupied by C. C. Lemley as a residence. The building now in use for school purposes was erected in 1893. Among the earlier teachers of Priest River were J. C. Brady, afterward editor of the Silver Blade at Rathdrum, and probate pudge of the county, and Frank A. McCall, the present probate judge. The schools are now in charge of Miss Sophia McAbee, principal, Miss Mary Dawson and Miss McDougall, assistants. The members of the school board are Dr. F. B. McCormick, Charles Jackson and John Prater. The school district is numbered 25, and was created in 1891. The school building has already outgrown its usefulness because of the rapid increase in school population during the past two years, and it is the intention to put up a new building next year which will be modern in all its appointments and a credit to the town. The school house site occupies an elevated position in the north end of town from which is obtained a beautiful view of the whole city, the river, the valley and the mountain ranges beyond.

A list of the present business and professional men would include Charles Jackson, general merchandise. Mr. Jackson came in 1891 and has been in business since 1892. John A. Gowanlock has also conducted a general merchandise store since 1892. This business was originally conducted under the firm name of The Priest River Mercantile Company. Mr. Gowanlock and Joseph Porier were the proprietors. Mr. Porier sold out in 1897 to Mr. Gowanlock. Charles L. and Richard M. Mears have an extensive trade in general merchandise. Charles L. Mears is postmaster. The proprietor of the "New Store" is H. T. Winter, recently from Minneapolis. The "Welcome" cigar store and club is owned by H. Ingamells, who commenced business January 1, 1903. The Fair, opened July 23, 1902, is a ladies' furnishings establishment owned by Mrs. H. Childs. Barbers are P. M. Bondanza and C. H. Bolling. Robert Bragaw, whose headquarters are here, is supervisor of the Priest River forest reserve. The Eagle is a general store and rooming house conducted by Mrs. Jones, who settled here in 1898. Dr. F. P. McCormick is the local physician and Dr. F. A. Gregory practices dentistry. There is the Depot Hotel; Priest River Hotel, conducted by Mrs. Baker; a restaurant by Joseph A. Amons and J. W. Wray; St. Elmo Hotel, by Charles W. Beardmore, and the Western Hotel, by Mrs. Callahan.

A Congregational church building has just been completed. Rev. Chamberlain is pastor. A Catholic church has also just been finished under the supervision of Father Purcell, of Rathdrum. The fraternal lodges are represented by the Rebekahs; Modern Woodmen, Camp No. 40, whose officers are Joseph Young, V. C.; August Lartze, W. A.; John Hickman, clerk. Maccabees, William Martin, commander; J. C. Finstad, P. C.; J. W. Wray, secretary; J. A. Amon, chaplain. I. O. O. F., Ben Amon, N. G.; Samuel Davis, V. G.; J. W. Wray, treasurer. Foresters, W. H. Lemley, C. R.: Harvey Wright, secretary; A. C. Harris, treasurer. The Priest River Enterprise is a weekly paper devoted to the best interests of town and country. It is ably edited by A. B. Hoag, who came here from Mt. Idaho and commenced the publication of the paper July 4, 1902.

Priest River's growth is dependent upon the development of the lumber industry. Three mills are in operation now and others are expected to locate here in the future. The Graham and Robinson plant is a small mill erected about two years ago to supply the local trade. The Priest River Company, whose buildings were erected in 1901, manufactures red cedar shingles. It has a capacity of one hundred thousand shingles per day of ten hours. In the sheds belonging to this company are stored at the present time five million shingles undergoing the air drying process preparatory to shipping. The officers of this company are Francis J. Gillingham, president; D. W. Bergstrom, vice-president; W. C. Bergstrom, secretary and treasurer. The White Pine Lumber Company, Ltd., completed its Priest River mills last summer. It now cuts between seventy-five thousand and one hundred thousand feet of lumber per day. It will eventually become one of the largest mills in the state. It is provided with machinery for turning out shingles, laths and finished lumber. The boom facilities on the river at this point are unsurpassed and the dry kilns have a capacity of forty thousand feet per day. This company owns twenty-seven thousand acres of timber land in eastern Washington and Idaho, and is composed mainly of eastern capitalists. The local manager and secretary of the company is A. V. Brodrick. Captain Thomas Downs is president.

The prospects for the future growth of Priest River are as good as could be desired. New buildings, both business and residence houses, are going up in all parts of town. Good brick clay is plentiful in the vicinity and a brick manufacturing plant is about to be put in operation. Frame buildings will in time give way to brick structures. The south line of the Priest River forest reserve is but six miles away. When this reserve is opened, its development will contribute very materially to the prosperity of the town. Dairying and fruit raising are industries that are beginning to be developed in surrounding territory. Stock raising and feeding is becoming a remunerative business. The mineral resources of the region promise much when mills are built for handling low grade ores. There are several prospects in the vicinity of the town and in the Priest Lake section that are considered valuable properties and only await mills and transportation facilities to develop into paying claims. There is along both rivers quite an extensive area of agricultural land now in a state of cultivation that is tributary to Priest River, and as the forests are cleared this area will grow.

Priest River is fifty-three miles from Spokane on the Great Northern Railroad. From a scenic and sanitary point of view it has an ideal town site consisting of eighty-seven acres. With its lumber mills an assured fact, with other industries only awaiting development, with excellent transportation facilities, both by rail and water, with progressive citizens, with good churches and good schools, there is every reason to believe that it will continue to grow and will always remain a desirable place to live, and an important commercial center.

POST FALLS.

From an issue of the "Spokane Times" dated December 25, 1879, we quote the following: "Mr. Frederick Post, owner of the grist mill at this place, left on last Tuesday to go to his old place at what is known as the Upper Falls. Mr. Post located there some eight years ago (1871), and began the construction of a sawmill at that point. He had the necessary machinery for a grist mill and sawmill. He finally gave up for the time the completion of his project there, and moved the machinery for the grist mill to this point. He now returns to complete the sawmill partially finished then. He informs us that there is almost a natural mill race formed in the solid rock at the side of the fall, where, by the use of blasting powder, he will complete the work of nature."

Although there were but few settlements made at Post Falls for a number of years later, its history may be said to date from the completion of this sawmill, early in 1880. At this time the northern boundary of the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation was, at this point, the Spokane river, and Mr. Post purchased of the Indians the mill site and adjacent lands. The mill and townsite proved by later survey to be located on the northeast quarter of section 3, township No. 50, range 5, west of Boise meridian. As this mill has been the life of the town, it is appropriate that we give its history in brief outline. At the time of its completion Mr. Post had business interests in Spokane that required his attention, and the mill was leased to other parties for a number of years. It was first leased and operated by a Mr. Lewis and later by Fred Bish. These two in turn ran the mill until 1886, when Mr. Post himself took charge of it. He conducted it for about three years, when it was again leased to Fred Bish. In the summer of 1892 Mr. Bish and a companion were working at a boom of logs just above the falls, in a row boat, which was tied to the logs. The fastenings broke and the boat and its occupants went over the falls. Both lives were lost. After the accident the mill was leased to S. D. Bader, who operated it until 1894, when Mr. Post sold out to the Spokane & Idaho Lumber Company, of which H. M. Strathern was president. The other members of the company were J. M. and C. Patterson. In November, 1901, the Patterson interests were purchased by Daniel McGillis and Chester D. Gibbs, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. In December of the same year the name of the company was changed to the Idaho Lumber & Manufacturing Company, Mr. Strathern continuing as president of the company.

The mill plant was destroyed by fire December 30, 1902. As an evidence of the importance of the mill as a factor in the prosperity of the town it may be stated that at the time of the fire Post Falls had a population of six hundred. Two months later the population was but little more that half that number. The mill had a capacity of seventy thousand feet of lumber in twenty-four hours and was valued at eighty thousand dollars. The company carried fifty-seven thousand dollars insurance. Although definite arrangements have not been completed for rebuilding the probabilities are that another mill will be erected. The site is an exceptionally good one on account of the immense water power available and the excellent boom facilities. Just above the falls the river is wide and deep, with a slow current. Logs are floated down the river from Lake Coeur d'Alene, and the boom will accommodate at one time fifteen million feet. It is considered the finest mill site in Kootenai county.

In connection with the plant was a planing and lath mill and a sash and door factory.

When Mr. Post sold the mill in 1894 he reserved the perpetual right to power sufficient to pump water for town use, having put in a system of water works in 1885. In 1892 mains of distribution pipes were renewed. The water works plant now belongs to Mrs. Alice Martin, a daughter of Mr. Post. Frederick Post, the pioneer of Post Falls and also a pioneer of Rathdrum and one of the pioneers of Spokane, where he built the first flouring mill and where there is a street (Post) named for him, is still living at Post Falls with his daughter, Mrs. Martin.

Post Falls has the distinction of having the only flouring mill in Kootenai county. This mill was erected in 1889 by Dart Brothers. It was owned and operated by Dart Brothers and J. H. Sullivan, the latter a resident of Seattle, until December, 1902, when it was sold to the Cable Milling Company, of which E. J. Dyer is president, E. G. Russell, vice president, B. O. Graham, secretary and treasurer, and Leon H. Graham, manager. The mill has a capacity of one hundred and fifty barrels of flour per day and operates an electric light plant for lighting the building. During the year 1900 it ground one hundred and forty thousand bushels of wheat and shipped one hundred and fifty cars of mill products.

A woolen mill was built here in 1895 by Cane Brothers from Massachusetts. It was well equipped with machinery, but never did any weaving. It manufactured hosiery principally while running, but has been closed for sometime and nothing is known of the future intentions of the owners. It is now the property of Mrs. Smith, of Spokane.

Among the early settlers at Post Falls was James H. Kennedy, who took up a soldier's homestead October 17, 1884. The legal description of this land, which joins the town site, is Lots 1, 2, 3 and 7, section 4, township 50, north, range 5, west of Boise meridian. Mr. Kennedy opened a blacksmith shop in 1886 and is still conducting it. M. S. McCrea had a general store here before the railroad was built, in 1881. Maj. George A. Manning and son, C. F., and W. J. Butterfield established a general store in 1889. Mrs. George Stafford, the wife of the Northern Pacific section foreman, handled United States mail in 1888, through an arrangement with the railroad company, but she was not a regularly appointed postmistress. The post-office was regularly established in 1889, with W. S. McCrea as postmaster. Among the other early postmasters were C. F. Manning, A. M. Martin and Charles McCrea, all of whom conducted general merchandise stores. C. H. Walizer opened a real estate agency in 1890 and H. L. Tauton a hardware store in the same year.

School matters early engaged the attention of the settlers at Post Falls, and they succeeded in securing the formation of a district (No. 7) in the summer of 1886. The first board of trustees were James H. Kennedy, John Green and J. R. Compton. The first term of school commenced November 22, 1886. It continued three months and was taught by Oliver L. Kenedy. This term was taught in a building that had been erected by James H. Kennedy and J. R. Compton, as a residence for William Dillard, with the understanding that it could be used two years for a school house. The second term in the same house was taught by Laura Agnew. The first school house, which is now used as a wood shed for the present school, was built in March, 1888, and Blanche Parsons was its first occupant in the capacity of teacher. She was followed by F. D. Cook, Mary Baslington, Mr. Sprague, Frank Reeves and Mrs. Frank Reeves. This school house was built by subscription and by donation work. For furnishings money was raised by giving dances. They were well patronized and funds were soon collected and the house properly equipped. An election, at which bonds were voted for the erection of the building now in use, was held June 15, 1890. In the present building Warren Lucas and Miss A. E. Nichols were the first instructors. The cost of this building was four thousand dollars in 1890. The school property, including grounds, building and furniture, is now valued at about three thousand five hundred dollars. The members of the present school board are S. Young, chairman, A. M. Martin, clerk, H. M. Strathern, treasurer, and A. J. Shanks. During the past school year the schools were under the charge of W. O. Cummings, principal, salary eighty-five dollars; Pearl Boleman, intermediate department, salary fifty dollars; Bertha Ross, primary department, salary forty dollars. Miss Ross has an assistant in Cora Kennedy. All these instructors are efficient workers and the schools are a credit to the town.

There are two church organizations at Post Falls, —the Methodists under the charge of Rev. H. Hudson, and the Presbyterians, with Rev. D. D. Allen as pastor. Both denominations have good houses of worship.

By an act of the county commissioners May 28, 1891, the town was incorporated and the following board of trustees appointed. Thomas Ford, W. J. Butterfield, C. M. Brown, C. H. Walizer and H. L. Tauton. On the fourth of June in the same year an organization was effected by the election of C. H.

Walizer chairman of the board and H. L. Tauton clerk. The first town election was held April 4, 1892, at which time the same board was elected, with the exception of W. J. Butterfield. C. H. Clayton was elected in his place. Until 1901 the corporation was never able to enforce any of its ordinances, owing to the fact that legality of the incorporating act was questioned. In 1901 the legislature passed a special act legalizing the corporation and the acts of its several boards of trustees. The present town board consists of S. H. Smith, chairman; S. E. Bennet, clerk; H. M. Strathern, treasurer; A. J. Manor and Captain James Fisher. The city marshal is S. A. Irwin. A. J. Manor has been postmaster since 1901, and James H. Kennedy is serving his third term as justice of the peace.

Beside the destruction of the sawmill, Post Falls has had one other fire. This occurred in December, 1895. McCrea Brothers' livery barn was destroyed; loss, eight hundred dollars. The second story of the barn was owned and occupied by the Knights of Pythias. This story, with furnishings, cost about six thousand dollars, and was insured for one thousand dollars. A blacksmith shop was also burned.

A review of the business houses of the present day includes the following: A. J. Manor, general merchandise, established 1898. General stores are conducted by George A. Manning, G. L. Scott, W. S. Butterfield, M. D. Wright and C. W. Brown. The Post Falls Mercantile Company was established in December, 1902, by G. O. Dart and John Young. A meat market is conducted by N. C. Ballard; a general store by J. F. Enders; blacksmith shops by James H. Kennedy and J. W. Jamison; a general store by A. N. Tucker, established 1890; a real estate agency by C. H. Walizer; a hardware store by H. L. Tauton; hotels by Samuel Young and J. H. Daner; a livery by H. W. Enders; a barber shop by A. L. Hawthorne; C. H. Warren and John Mitchell are painters and paper hangers. Lodging houses are kept by M. S. Warren and L. A. Dillard. For use in protection against fires the town owns a small chemical engine. Long distance telephone lines connect the town with all outside points.

Post Falls is located on the Spokane river and on the Coeur d'Alene branch of the Northern Pacific railroad, eight miles south of Rathdrum and twenty-five miles east of Spokane. It is in the center of quite an extensive agricultural, stock and fruit region, that is every year becoming more productive. An irrigating ditch from Heyden Lake to the Spokane river at Trent, a small town eight miles from the state line in Washington, will pass near Post Falls in traversing the valley and will add very materially to the productiveness of the section. The falls in the river were formerly known as Little Falls, and Upper Falls; but the name was changed to Post Falls in honor of Frederick Post, the builder of the mill and founder of the town. The power generated by the falls is next to incalculable, and this force will doubtless be utilized in the future. There is no better site anywhere for mills and factories, and when there is added to this advantage of location, the unfailing support that it must always receive from the surrounding farming community, one cannot but realize that the citizens of Post Falls have good grounds for faith in the future prosperity of their town.

ST. MARIES.

One of the most delightful summer resorts in Idaho is found at St. Maries, on the St. Joe river, and at the mouth of the St. Maries. Until about three years ago its popularity rested almost entirely upon its healthful climate, its beautiful surrounding and its summer hotels. But shrewd business men have lately noted its central location in a vast and heavily timbered region, and its accessibility from points on the O. R. & N. and the Northern Pacific railroads. They have noted the fact that it has the peculiar advantages necessary to commercial centers, and these discoveries have worked wonderful transformations in and about the village. In the future it must attract both the business man and the tourist, and on this double foundation it may safely hope to become a populous and prosperous city.

The census of 1900 credited the settlement with a population of seventy-five. It now has at least five hundred permanent residents, and is growing rapidly. Joseph Fisher, now one of the county commissioners, came here in 1888 and settled on land which includes the present townsite. The land was leased at the time by Mr. Fisher from Monroe Duggett, who claimed it as a part of a ranch to which he held squatter's rights. When the section was surveyed it was found that the land belonged to the Union Pacific railroad, and Mr. Fisher then purchased it from the company. In 1889 William, John and Jesse Fisher located here, shipping in and putting up a sawmill. This mill had a capacity of twenty thousand feet per day. It cut a great deal of the timber used by the O. R. & N. in construction work, and nearly all the ties and timbers used in the bridge and trestle at Chatcolet. The mill was sold in 1891 to Fred Grant, who moved it to Harrison. Its capacity was enlarged, and it is now known as the Grant sawmill. Among others who were early settlers in this vicinity are James Nevins, who came in 1889, R. B. Dickenson, who came in 1894, C. F. Montandon, Eugene Gay and F. G. Scott, who came in 1895. The history of the town may be said to date from July, 1889, when a postoffice was established here, with Joseph Fisher postmaster. Mr. Fisher retained the office for six years. Joseph Fisher, F. W. Haveland and M. A. Phelps laid out and platted the townsite, Mr. Haveland and Mr. Phelps having previously purchased one-third interest each in the railroad land bought by Mr. Fisher.

For a number of years there was but little progress made in building up the town, but the country up and down the rivers was gradually developing. During the rush to the Coeur d'Alene mines in 1884 and for several years following, there was a great deal of travel up and down the rivers and some prospecting through the country. In this way the timber and mineral resources and the natural advantages of the country, with its water ways and railroad prospects, became generally known, and since that period there has been slow but substantial improvement. About the year 1899 St. Maries began to assume the appearance of a thriving town, and since that time development has been rapid. The principal cause of her growth has thus far been her advantages as a summer resort, but with the opening of ranches, of stock and fruit farms and dairies, and with the establishment of logging camps, new and better inducements have been offered the business man, and today it is a thriving business center at all seasons of the year.

The following is a review of the business interests of St. Maries at the present time. The St. Maries Hotel is owned and managed by William McCarter. It is modern in all its appointments and is considered one of the finest hotels in northern Idaho. It is on the river front and commands a fine view of the country for miles around. It is three stories, with eighty rooms, and is lighted by electricity. The hotel Mountain View occupies a commanding site on the crest of a hill overlooking the river and the broad meadows beyond. Joseph Fisher is proprietor of the Mountain View, which was the first hotel erected in the town. The Hotel Butler was opened in July, 1902, by Jerry Butler. It is two stories, has thirty rooms, and is located in the central portion of the town. Besides the hotel Mr. Fisher has a general merchandise store. The Perrenoud Company carries a large stock of hardware and miners' supplies. Skelton & Warren have a general store. Another general merchandise establishment is conducted by Winship & Henderson, who recently purchased the business from M. D. Wright. J. Lindstrum runs a meat market. The St. Maries Livery, Feed and Sale stable is owned by Trueman & Wunderlick, who also operate stage lines to Santa, Fernwood and Tyson. J. E. Williams & Company conduct a real estate agency and deal in timber lands. E. Compo has a shoe and harness shop. Samuel B. Grimsrud is the village blacksmith. The St. Maries Townsite & Improvement Company deals in town property. The steamer Schley makes scheduled trips to Harrison and Coeur d'Alene. A United States mail boat plying between St. Maries and Chatcolet and making connections with O. R. & N. trains, carries mail, passengers and express and is managed by J. Schaaf. There is a sawmill and manufacturing plant with a capacity of twenty-five thousand feet per day. William McCarter is local manager. Smith & Eno have a jewelry store. The St. Maries drug store is managed by A. C. Scurr. The St. Maries has an opera house and a newly organized band. William and Joseph Cole and Joseph Fisher own and operate a creamery and cheese factory with a capacity of six hundred pounds per week. The Silver Brand cheese has a wide reputation and this is one of the most remunerative businesses of the town. It has been in successful operation for five years. The Interstate telephone line connects the town with outside points. The local physicians are Dr. G. S. Thompson and Dr. C. E. Wilber. The St. Maries Hospital is a new institution that is well patronized. Thomas B. Rollins and E. Compo are justices and J. E. Williams is a notary public. A. C. Scurr is the present postmaster. The St. Maries Courier is a semi-weekly publication, established February 19, 1901, by E. Deuerslie. It is well edited and is doing much in the interests of St. Maries and the surrounding country. Rev. J. H. Martin is pastor of the M. E. congregation, which has a neat church building and parsonage, built in 1898. The first log school house was erected in the fall of 1888 by subscription, and the first term of school was taught by Mrs. P. E. Girard. In the summer of 1901 the present two-story frame school house was built, at a cost of fifteen hundred dollars. The estimated value of school property, including building, grounds and furniture, is about three thousand dollars. The school board is composed of A. A. Darknell, chairman; John Fisher, clerk; and George Mutch. During the past year the schools have been conducted by Prof. A. F. Burton, assisted by Miss Etta M. Andrews. There is a Chapter of the I. O. O. F. and of the M. W. A. Officers of Odd Fellows Lodge, No. 32, are John W. Fisher, N. G., Levi Nussbaum, Secy. A bridge has been constructed across the St. Maries river here, at a cost of five thousand dollars. Including the approaches it is twenty-eight hundred feet long.

St. Maries is about forty miles southeast of Rathdrum, the county seat, and about twelve miles from Harrison, on Coeur d'Alene lake. The town site is on a slight elevation, above the river, and is surrounded by scenery as beautiful and grand as may be found anywhere in Idaho. Hunting, fishing and boating are sports that may be indulged in to the heart's content. To the lover of the grand and beautiful, to the tourist, and also to the business man, St. Maries and the surrounding country offer inducements and opportunities rarely found. Timber resources are almost inexhaustible, the agricultural areas will increase as the forests are cleared and there are good reasons to believe that paying mining properties will develop in many tributary localities in the not distant future. St. Maries is the natural distributing point for an immense territory, whose resources are just beginning to be developed. Its business enterprises are on a solid financial basis. Substantial business blocks and dwellings are being erected. A system of water works has been installed. Nearly all the lots in a town site of forty acres have been sold. The citizens have faith in the future of the town and work together for the success of all public enterprises. St. Maries is destined to become an important commercial center, as it is now one of the most popular summer resorts.

ST. JOE AND FERRELL.

Sixteen miles above St. Maries, at the head of steamboat navigation on the St. Joe river, and about sixty miles from Coeur d'Alene, is located the settlement of St. Joe. Just above it has been platted the new town of Ferrell, by William Ferrell, who settled here in 1884, taking up a ranch of three hundred and twenty acres. There are fifty or seventy-five permanent residents at St. Joe at the present time, and new arrivals are buying lots and building residences. Mr. Ferrell is the pioneer resident of the town and section, and was the first postmaster. In 1884, with two companions, he traveled over the trails from Wardner in order to locate the ranch which is now the most valuable on the river. He has from time to time been followed by other home-seekers, until at the present time the St. Joe valley is entirely occupied by ranchers, their buildings appearing all the way up the river about one mile apart. The E. Deighton ranch of three hundred and twenty acres, which joins Mr. Ferrell's townsite, was also located in 1884. It consists principally of meadow land, although it includes about sixty-five acres of heavy timber. It produced three hundred tons of hay in 1892 and is stocked with a herd of ninety Jersey cattle. The ranch is now valued at $14,000. The valley of the St. Joe is about a mile wide. It is practically a long narrow meadow, whose soil is rich and very productive. The river being navigable, these farms are each year becoming more valuable. About three hundred settlers on these valley lands do the most of their trading at St. Joe, making it an important center. The Warner store does an extensive business of a general character. William Ferrell also has a general store and a very large trade. Mrs. Mildred Girard is the present postmistress. J. H. Wagner is kept constantly employed as a contractor and builder. The Interstate telephone line connects St. Joe with other points. A good school is maintained. The St. Joe hotel is owned by William O'Neil. It is a two-story modern building, built for winter or summer occupation, and accommodates seventy-five guests. G. B. May, located at this hotel, rents row boats to campers and excursionists. The Elk House is owned and managed by William Ferrell. It is a three-story frame building and accommodates one hundred guests. Mr. Ferrell has recently erected another hotel. The St. Joe Budget was established in December, 1902, and is ably conducted by Will E. Dockery.

While campers and boathouse dwellers are found the whole length of the St. Joe river during the summer season, the Mecca for most vacationists is St. Joe. It is surrounded by natural camping grounds. Exquisitely set in a natural vale and sheltered by encircling mountains, St. Joe is favored with wonderful scenic attractions. At the foot of the rapids is fine trout fishing. A boat trip up the swift waters and the tributary creeks is a most enjoyable experience. Game, including deer and bear, is plentiful back in the mountains, making the location an ideal place for either a summer sojourn or a fall hunting trip. But St Joe is not alone a pleasant resort. Back of it is an area of forty square miles covered with dense forests of fir, cedar, tamarack and pine, where almost no development work has been done. Only during the past year or two has timber been taken from this region. It is estimated that there was driven down the St. Joe river in 1892 seven million feet of logs, ten thousand cedar telegraph poles and one hundred thousand posts. The mineral resources of this section are yet to be developed. The Manhattan mine, eight miles from St. Joe, is considered a valuable silver and lead property. The owners are expending considerable money in development work. On Marble creek, further up the river, a large deposit of silver and lead has been discovered. A fine grade of marble has also been discovered here, and a company organized to develop it. The district is in the same mineral belt as the producing Coeur d'Alene mines, on the opposite slope of the Bitter Root mountains, and it is believed the St. Joe slope will eventually be a mineral producing region.

A stage line is operated between St. Joe and St. Maries and the steamers Spokane and Colfax make regular trips from St. Joe to all points on the lake, making railroad connections at Chatcolet, Harrison and Coeur d'Alene. With so many advantages as a summer resort and surrounded as it is by vast forests of saw timber and mountains of minerals, St. Joe is certain to develop into one of the important towns of Kootenai county.

HOPE.

Picturesquely situated on the north shore of the beautiful Pend Oreille lake is the town of Hope, a divisional point on the Northern Pacific railroad, being the end of the Idaho and the beginning of the Rocky Mountain division. It is fifty-eight miles northeast of Rathdrum, the county seat, and eighty-four miles east of the city of Spokane, and is connected with Sandpoint and Lakeview by three lines of steamboats. On its terraced site overlooking the broad waters of the lake, its appearance recalls a tourist's description of Seattle, which he writes "Clings to a steep hillside; a little shake, it seems, would send it sliding down into the water."

Although typical of railroad life, the town is also a summer resort of considerable prominence. Established here are several good hotels; sail and row boats are furnished for the accommodation of guests; the lake is well stocked with trout and other fish, and in the surrounding mountains is plenty of large game to attract the adventurous sportsman.

The history of Hope begins with the construction of the railroad, in 1882. The town is said to have received the name of the veterinary surgeon, Dr. Hope, who cared for the horses of the contractors during the building of the road, and whose advice was often sought in matters of importance.

The legal description of the townsite is as follows: southeast quarter of section 10, and southwest quarter of section 11, township 57, range 1, east of B. M. When the government survey was made, several years after the town was built, it was discovered that one section was on railroad and one on government land. In 1888 O. C. Smith attempted to homestead a portion of the townsite, but the townsite people objected and appealed to the Department of the Interior. Smith was represented by Attorneys Sweet and Morgan, Charles L. Heitman and George Lamar, and the townsite people by Attorneys Edwin McBee and Copp & Duckett. But although Mr. Smith was ably defended and the case carried to the highest tribunal, the matter resulted in a final and decisive victory for the townsite claimants. The town was eventually platted by the government in 1896. In April, 1903, a petition for incorporation was signed by a majority of the taxpayers, and by order of the county commissioners it was duly incorporated. K. Wanamaker, H. L. Bidwell, John Larsen, L. H. Jeannot and J. M. Jeannot were appointed trustees. In 1888 W. J. Quirk held the office of postmaster. He afterwards opened a general store, but was burned out in 1889, and removed his residence to Spokane. Amongst other early settlers who contributed to the advancement of the town was Dr. Tallyrand Martin, who settled in Hope in 1888, conducted a drug store and engaged in various other enterprises. In 1890 a newspaper, the Hope Prospector, was established by J. F. Yost, but ceased publication in 1894. Mr. Yost was one of several publishers. Kline Wanamaker was the proprietor of the first hotel, called the Pend Oreille, after the burning of which he opened a general store and is still in business. N. G. Sisson also had a store of general merchandise and continues in that business. Another pioneer was Alexander Quirie, who in 1890 took up a homestead, three miles west of the town, at the mouth of Trestle creek. For eight years Mr. Quirie kept a dairy, but is now engaged in the stock business.

In April, 1900, Hope was devastated by a disastrous fire which started in S. N. Chase's saloon. From that place the fire spread to the buildings on the west, consuming in its rapid progress the store and warehouse of W. J. Quirk, and all other buildings on Main street as far as K. Wanamaker's store. On Highland avenue the only residence burned was Mr. Christenson's. George Weigle's house caught fire several times, but he had fortunately supplied himself with a water hose which saved his residence. To stay the progress of the flames, several buildings, including the Congregational church, Spence Horning's residence and the building occupied by A. Jenkins were blown up with giant powder. An easterly wind and the splendid water supply of the Northern Pacific was all that saved the upper part of the town. At the first shot of powder, Harry Auxer, a miner who was assisting at the work, was struck in the throat by a flying piece of timber. A fatal accident and one which plunged the community into sorrow, was the accidental discharge of a revolver, causing the death of William Monroe. He, with several other boys, was looking over the ruins and found a revolver which was still hot from the fire. In handing it to one of his companions it exploded. The ball entered his right breast just above the heart. He was taken to a house, where he died in a few minutes.

A serious accident on the Northern Pacific railroad occurred on March 25, 1890, two miles east of the town. Train No. 2, consisting of eleven coaches, was thrown from the track by a broken rail. Seven cars were ditched, the mail and express, the baggage car, and one first class coach burned. C. S. Miles, of Bald Mountain, messenger of the Northern Pacific Express Company, met a frightful fate, being caught between the rods of his car and burned to death. Three tramps were killed and many others injured.

The school district is No. 13, and the first school house, which is still the only school building, was built in 1890. It consists of two rooms. The first teacher was Miss Haines. The present teachers are Mrs. Piersons and Miss Barbara Hage. The school board consists of H. L. Bidwell, John Larsen and Moses Cookson. There is one church, the Congregational, of which Rev. Victor Roth, of Clark's Fork, is the pastor. The different lodges are well represented in Hope. They are as follows: Foresters, M. W. A., Order of Pindo, Hope Federation of Labor, (Chas. Smith, president), the I. O. O. F. (J. W. Ramsay, N. G.; E. J. Phelps, V. G.; H. L. Bidwell, secretary; Alex. Quirie, treasurer), the A. O. U. W. (H. L. Bidwell, P. M.; E. H. North, M. W.; D. C. Rowell, recorder; H. L. Bidwell, financier), D. of H. (Emma Sherman, P. C. of H.; Nettie Hooning, C. of H.; Mabel Crandall, L. of H.; Mamie Rowell, financier; Ella Brewer, recorder), the Rebekahs (P. N. G., Emma Wanamaker; N. G., Ella Brewer; V. G., Mabel Crandall; secretary, Thomas Thompson; treasurer, K. Wanamaker).

The citizens and business men of Hope are enterprising and they take a deep interest in all matters tending to promote the welfare of their town. The business directory of the town at present would include a postoffice, John Larsen, postmaster; two hotels, Prescott House, Mrs. Thomas Davey, and the Lake Side N. P. railroad hotel, Charles J. Jenkins manager; two restaurants, Jos. Jeannot and Edwin Leet; three barber shops, H. L. Bidwell, who owns a shop and employs a barber, Jef. Tigue and James C. Davis; meat market, Fred Hartman; general store, L. H. Jeannot, who kept a restaurant until 1893; Lumber Company blacksmith shop; drug store, A. H. Allen; shingle and lath mill, O. W. Perkins & Company; Mark T. Loop is the only physician; Robert W. Morris is the railroad, express and telepraph agent; Grant Sherman and J. Sladin are expressmen; Nathan G. Sisson and Kline Wanamaker have general stores; Twin Woo Company, Chinese goods, Donavon, Hopkins & Nineman are general dealers; Frank Albaugh will soon put up a building for a meat market; H. L. Bidwell and John Dooley are justices of the peace.

The establishment of the Hope Lumber Company in 1901 infused new life into Hope. The company, composed of experienced lumbermen from Michigan, got the mill in operation in November. The plant is conveniently located on the lake just east of the station, and is a band saw mill, with lath and planing mills. In its construction the most experienced millwrights were employed, and most modern and labor-saving machinery used, and the result is the model mill of the country. The planing mill, as a protection against fire, is detached, power being transmitted from the engine house by means of steel cables. The whole premises are lighted by electric lights. The company started up the mill with a stock of over twenty million feet of logs in the pond. They have now five million feet of lumber, of which three million is white pine. One hundred men are regularly employed. A night crew has been put on and one hundred thousand feet of lumber is turned out every twenty-four hours. O. M. Field is the president of the company; W. F. Ninneman, secretary and treasurer; Will Ninneman, manager.

Considerable prospecting has been done in the vicinity of Hope, and valuable discoveries made in the Black Tail and Lakeview districts, which are located from fifteen to twenty miles to the south, and also in the mining regions of Trestle creek and Granite creek. The Panhandle Mining Company, the Park River Mining Company, the Pend Oreille Mining Company and Tilsey & Tanner Mining Company own mineral properties in this vicinity.

Hope has a population of about five hundred, but with mineral wealth susceptible of great future development and exceptional railroad facilities, it is destined to become a supply point of considerable importance.

CLARK'S FORK.

In a fertile valley between the Cabinet mountains on the north and the foothills of the Coeur d'Alene range on the south is the thriving little village of Clark's Fork. It has an elevation of two thousand feet, fine climate, good soil and good water. Two beautiful creeks flow through the suburbs of the town, which in time will furnish large supplies of water for the future city. Gardening is successfully carried on, a variety of fruits extensively raised and farms are cultivated along the banks of the river, the farmer finding a home market for all his products. But this region is as prolific in mining and lumber as in agricultural products. There are millions of feet of the finest timber, composed of pine, fir, cedar and tamarack, growing along the streams and on the mountain sides, and within a radius of twenty-five miles are many valuable mines. In 1890 the trail over the Cabinet mountains to Madison on the upper Kootenai river opened up new mineral prospects, where was found fine galena ore. The mines on Mosquito creek were also vigorously worked and large shipments of valuable ore sent to Helena smelter with good returns.

Amongst the names recorded in the earliest annals of the town we find that of J. G. Nagel, who was first postmaster in 1884; later, in 1891, Nagel, Whitcomb & Company had a sawmill and general store, and in 1897 Mr. Nagel put up a shingle and planing mill, which was run by steam power. In 1884 two shingle mills were owned and operated by Casey & McHugh and James Ewart. A. B. Railton and M. P. Steyhaus were early settlers who did much to attract homesteaders to the vicinity. A contest between J. E. White, who took up a homestead in 1895, and the commissioners of the general landoffice, was decided in 1899, in favor of White, and entitled him to his homestead entry on land now embraced in the town of Clark's Fork. A list of the present business houses of the town would include the following: Two general merchandise stores, those of John W. White and Whitcomb Brothers, the last mentioned being a two-story building, of which the upper part is a hall; two hotels, John Reed and Gordon Dougherty; the Columbia Mining Company; the Copper King Mining Company; the Grand Copper Mining Company; the Leona Mining Company. There are two religious organizations, the Free Methodists and the Congregationalists. The former have a church building and Rev. H. S. Yockey is the pastor. The latter worship in the school house and Rev. V. W. Roth is the pastor. Mrs. Roth is the present postmistress. A good school is well supported, the school building having two rooms below and a hall upstairs. Two teachers are employed, Coral Paxson and Miss Rosa Kennedy.

The present population of the town is about two hundred. It is situated three miles from Lake Pend Oreille, ninety-five from Spokane and sixty-five from Rathdrum, the county seat.

It has been said of Clark's Fork that "it is a good place for both rich and poor to live in," a sentiment readily understood by those who are acquainted with its resources and the enterprise of its citizens.

PORTHILL.

Porthill is the most northern station on the Kootenai Valley railroad in the United States. It is about twenty-five miles north of Bonner's Ferry and about one hundred and thirty miles northeast of Spokane. It is distant from Rathdrum, the county seat, about one hundred and twenty-five miles. The international boundary line separating the United States and British Columbia runs about two hundred yards north of the postoffice and general store building of French & Barnes. The town was formerly known as Ockonook (the Indian name for rocky point). This name was given it by Maj. J. I. Barnes in 1893. In the spring of that year the United States government established a port of import here, and Major Barnes was sent as a customs collector. The postoffice was established the same year, and Major Barnes was made postmaster. He afterward opened a general merchandise store, which he conducted until the time of his death, in 1898.

David McLaughlin, a son of John McLaughlin, in early days governor of the Hudson's Bay Co., and closely identified with the first settlements of "Old Oregon," squatted on land here over forty years ago. The present townsite occupies a portion of the old McLaughlin claim. Mr. McLaughlin until recently lived in a log cabin close to the boundary line, and about one-fourth of a mile from the Porthill postoffice; he died May 5th, of the present year. In 1892 C. P. Hill located a mineral claim on the McLaughlin place, and the townsite was laid out on this land, a one-third interest in which was given to Mr. McLaughlin.

Porthill is located on what was once the Hudson's Bay Company trail from Bonner's Ferry to Ft. Steel, B. C., afterwards the trail used by the miners in the rush to the Wild Horse mines in British Columbia, in the early sixties. The town occupies a table land on the slope of the foothills of the Cabinet range of mountains, and is on the east bank of the Kootenai river. At the present time it has a population of less than one hundred, and immediate prospects of substantial and material growth are not especially good. It has real advantages of location, however, that will in the future be improved. The site is a good one and there is room in abundance for a large city. There are good mineral prospects which, when transportation facilities are provided, will be tributary to this point. Within a radius of twenty-five miles from Porthill there are a number of promising mineral claims, among them what is known as the Continental mine. Ores have been mined showing assays of fifty dollars per ton in silver and lead. But transportation facilities are lacking, and the development of the mineral resources must await the investment of capital in railroads. The soil of the valley of the Kootenai river is rich and very productive. In this valley are immense areas of agricultural land that will some day be put under cultivation, and when that day comes Porthill will be the center of an extensive and wealthy farming community. At the present time the Kootenai river overflows the whole valley each year, and this great area is practically useless, except in some locations for the production of hay. Porthill occupies a central location in a section, part of which is in the United States and the remainder in British Columbia, that is wealthy in resources, and when their development begins the town will begin to grow.

Among the early settlers here, besides those already named, were William Hall, who took up the place known as Hale's Rranch, where it is said a distillery was operated in early days, supplying the miners and others with stimulants; and Mrs. M. C. Barnes, the present postmistress, who came here with her husband in 1893. For two years Mrs. Barnes was the only white woman in the settlement. A. P. Whitney came here in 1897, from Bonner's Ferry, and opened the Whitney hotel. A little later the Montgomery brothers,—Marion, Thomas and Z.—settled here. G. H. Finrow & Company also opened a general store. The Ockonook general store was established by Maj. J. I. Barnes in 1892. H. A. French and Mrs. M. C. Barnes now conduct the business. Mr. French is justice of the peace.

A school house was erected in 1896 and the first school term was taught by Miss Agnes McRay. At present the school is in charge of Prof. Thomas Hydorn, who has about thirty pupils enrolled. The members of the school board are C. S. Smith, chairman; Mrs. M. C. Barnes, clerk; and E. Osborn.

The officers in charge of the United States customs station are Otis F. Warren and William Ryan. Mr. Ryan was formerly sheriff of Kootenai county. William B. Thews, United States immigrant inspector, is also stationed here. The principal imports on which duties are collected at Porthill are coal, coke and ores. Some idea of the receipts of the customs office may be had from a knowledge of the fact that in April and May, 1900, duties were collected on $311,949 worth of lead ore alone. Before the construction of the K. V. R. R., in 1899, from Bonner's Ferry to Kuskonook, B. C., these shipments entered the United States by way of the Kootenai river, and the duties were collected at Bonner's Ferry, which is at the head of navigation on that river. When the railroad was built the company named the station Porthill, and in 1900 the postoffice name of Ockonook was dropped and Porthill substituted. Mail is still carried by stage to and from Bonners Ferry.

Interest has but recently developed in the resources of this section. But very little has yet been accomplished by agriculturalists, and less by miners. Progress has thus far been very slow, owing to discouraging conditions, which still exist. A good many Indians from the Kootenai and other tribes occupy some of the lands, and while a few of them cultivate farms in crude fashion and engage in a small way in stock raising, they accomplish but little in the production of wealth and in the substantial development of the section. Present conditions, however, cannot long remain unchanged, and the time will doubtless come in the near future when capital and the accompanying forces that revolutionize conditions, people the rural districts and build cities, will invade the boundary region. When these things take place Porthill will become a populous and thriving city.

LAKEVIEW.

Lakeview is one of the older mining settlements of Kootenai county. The history of the mines of this region will be found in the descriptive chapter. The first were located in 1888 by William Bell and others, who had been outfitted by Fred Weber and S. P. Donnelly. The town started about the same time. The townsite locaters were Archie O'Donnel, Robert Rocheford, George Macer, S. P. Donnelly and Fount Perry. It is situated at the head of Lake Pend Oreille, a little back from the shore. Its elevation is two thousand two hundred and eighty-five feet. A postoffice was established in 1892, with Ernest Rammelmeyer as postmaster. He served in this capacity until 1896, when he was succeeded by the present postmaster, W. H. Lyon. A general merchandise store was established in 1888 by a Mr. Shelton, who sold out to Robert Baldwin in 1890. Mr. Baldwin in turn sold out to G. B. Bannatter in 1896. Mr. Bannatter was succeeded in 1899 by Louis Eilert, who sold June 1, 1900, to W. H. Lyon, who still conducts the business and serves as postmaster.

School district number thirty-seven was formed here in 1896, and the first school board, appointed by Judge Melder, was composed of W. H. Lyon, William Preston and Robert Baldwin. There is a good school house and a good school is maintained each year. In 1900 Lakeview had a population of eighty-four. There are now something over one hundred and fifty residents. Boats ply from this point on the lake to Hope, making connections there with the Northern Pacific railroad. Boats also, carrying mails and passengers, run daily to Steamboat Landing (now called Idlewilde) on the west, and from this place a stage line is operated to Athol, eight miles across the country, where connections are made with Northern Pacific trains. Lakeview is in the center of an extensive mining region and does an immense amount of business in general merchandise and miners' supplies. The mines are becoming each year more productive, machinery is being introduced, shipping facilities, via the lake to Hope and Sandpoint, are being improved, and the town has every assurance of permanence and prosperity as a mining center.

ATHOL.

Athol has been platted on school section No. 16, township 53, range 3, W. B. M. The town was laid out by the state and as yet the citizens have no titles to their property. This is a matter that will soon be adjusted, however, and has in no way interfered with the progress of the town. In 1900 it was credited with a population of forty-eight, which has increased to something over one hundred. Athol is a station on the main line of the Northern Pacific railroad, ten miles northeast of Rathdrum. It is eight miles from Steamboat Landing, on Pend Oreille, on the east, and about the same distance from Spirit Lake, on the west. The surrounding country is heavily timbered and will make excellent agricultural land when eventually cleared. Grains, vegetables and fruits grow abundantly where clearings have been made. Stock raising is also a profitable industry. Lumber manufacturing is now the chief industry. A sawmill was built here in December, 1902, by Hackett & Wilson. In January, 1903, Huber Rasher and Charles Kingman bought an interest in the plant. It is now owned and officered by Huber Rasher, president, R. L. Hackett, vice-president, and Charles Kingman, secretary. The mill has a capacity of twenty-five thousand feet per day.

A store of general merchandise is owned by S. H. Watkins; Butler Bros. conduct a drug store; the Pacific hotel is owned by George Balters; Horsler & Wike have a general store; Snyder & Williams run a blacksmith and wood shop; James J. Dumar is postmaster; R. N. Studley has a restaurant; J. A. Williams is manager of the Athol Mercantile Company; a feed barn is owned by Hilbert & Studley; a hall has been erected by the Athol Improvement Company, in which the I. O. O. F. have a controlling interest. The Methodists have a good church building, which was put up in 1900; Rev. C. T. Coon is pastor of the congregation: the Baptists are about to erect a building; their services are now conducted by Rev. C. M. Hurt and Rev. C. C. Hand. The public schools were taught the past year by Professor Daniel Van Duzer, formerly county superintendent of schools.

The first settlers at Athol were the railroad section foremen, S. and P. L. Bennett, who were sent here shortly after the track was laid. Aside from these the first permanent settler was A. H. Noble, who took up a homestead, which adjoins the townsite, in 1892. The postoffice was established in 1895, with I. F. Irons, postmaster. The pioneer business man is S. H. Watkins, who opened his store in 1895. A school house was built in 1902; before its construction school was taught in the M. E. church building, the first teacher being a Miss Moss. The first minister located at Athol was Rev. Hobson, now of Coeur d'Alene. Early in the history of the village lodges of the I. O. O. F. and M. W. A. were organized, and they now have a membership of eighty and forty, respectively.

Athol is far enough removed from the neighboring business centers—Rathdrum and Sandpoint—to make a good town. There are extensive heavily timbered areas all around the town and the development of the timber industry is certain to bring men and mills to the locality. Its shipping facilities are good and in time it will receive splendid support from the farming areas which are yearly becoming more extensive and more productive. Athol is certain to grow into a thriving business center.

HAUSER.

Hauser is the junction of the main line with the Coeur d'Alene branch of the Northern Pacific railroad. It is twenty-one miles east of Spokane and six miles southwest of Rathdrum, the county seat of Kootenai county. It is in the Spokane valley, or what is termed locally Rathdrum prairie, about midway between Mud Lake on the north and Spokane river on the south. The surrounding lands are largely agricultural and some of the best ranches in the county are in this vicinity. Its proximity to Post Falls, which is only about five miles away, has retarded progress at Hauser in a business way, but to the north and west is quite a large expanse of territory that must when fully settled become in a measure tributary to the town, and consequently there is reason to believe that it will in the future become a thriving village.

Settlements were made here as early as 1880, but in 1900 it was credited with a population of only thirty-eight. E. P. Manor, now of Rathdrum, was one of the early settlers and business men. He moved his business to Rathdrum in 1894.

The main line of the railroad and its branch afford great shipping facilities. John Cogan is the present postmaster. He also conducts a general merchandise store. The town is pleasantly situated, with the prairie stretching away to the east and west and the mountains rising on the north and south. There is an abundance of timber land to the north that is valuable not alone for the timber, but for its productive qualities when cleared. It is a desirable location for home builders, and adjoining lands on all sides are being rapidly settled.

CAMAS COVE, TYSON, SANTA, FERNWOOD, EMIDA AND CLARKIA.

In 1895 the Tyson brothers, James, Henry and George, located in the southeastern part of Kootenai county, on land which now includes the town site of Tyson. Their property is located on Tyson creek, formerly known as Ridue creek. The Tysons purchased the land of S. B. Richie, who had several years previously taken it up as a homestead. The surrounding country is now known as the Camas Cove mining district. It is a sheltered cove in the mountains about five miles square, and took its name from the camas root, which is abundant here. It is on the southern slope of the mountain range which forms the divide between the St. Joe and St. Maries rivers. Here the Tyson brothers engaged in stock raising for two years before having any knowledge of the presence of gold on their land. In 1897 Burt Renfro found on the place a piece of float that contained gold. After this find James and Henry Tyson began prospecting. Their first discovery was the War Eagle, now one of the richest mines in the district. A little later rich placer discoveries were made, causing a great deal of excitement and resulting in a rush of miners and prospectors. A large camp was soon formed, and since that time there has been continued development of the mining properties and the establishment of a thriving mining town, which was very naturally named Tyson.

Tyson is located about eighteen miles southeast of St. Maries in the heart of the mining district. In five years it has developed from a stock ranch to a well populated town. The placer mines have yielded many thousands of dollars to their owners and the development of the quartz claims is well under way. Stores and hotels have been opened. There is a post-office and a good school. A saw mill has been erected and a stamp mill is contemplated. Regular stages run between Tyson and St. Maries, and a telephone line connects the town with outside points. Among those now residing here who were here when the first mineral discoveries were made are the Tyson brothers, Burt Renfro, H. Desgranges, Joe Dugan, A. C. Schrader, C. J. Cole, J. W. McNeil and Peter Desgranges. There are now about two hundred people in and about the town.

The most valuable claims now being worked are the War Eagle, Gold Nugget and Sixteen to One, located by James Tyson. The Gold Nugget has yielded to date upwards of seventy-five thousand dollars. There are also the Bluebird, Topping's Ironclad, and the Kelly Corbin claims. The Richmond Group consists of five claims, owned by the Richmond Gold Mining and Milling Company, of which J. W. McNeil is manager. The Ironclad is owned by Charles Topping and W. H. Haverland.

The town of Tyson is in a beautiful valley and has many advantages of location which insure its permanence. The town site was patented by James Tyson in January, 1901, and the lots have nearly all been sold at prices ranging from forty dollars to one hundred dollars each. An addition to this original site has been platted and is now being sold out. Experienced mining men have invested here and have faith in the future of the mining industry. Every indication is that Tyson will grow in population and in importance as a mining center.

Santa is three miles north of Tyson, fifty miles south of Rathdrum, and twenty-five miles east of Farmington, Washington. It is connected by stage with St. Maries, fifteen miles down the river. It has a population of about fifty. It is a distributing point for logging camps located in the surrounding forests. The saw mills of Harrison and Coeur d'Alene have installed logging camps in this section that give employment to upwards of one thousand men. The St. Joe Improvement Company has built a dam on the St. Maries river four miles below Santa, which has greatly increased rafting facilities. About one hundred thousand dollars have been spent in river improvements in this region, and last season's output of logs amounted to about twenty million feet. Ranchers are settled all along the St. Maries river and many of them trade at Santa. A town site has been platted by S. T. Renfro. H. H. Renfro is postmaster, and has a general store. The Elk Hotel is conducted by W. Jones and Everett Markham. There is also a blacksmith shop and livery barn owned by B. Walkup. The timbered areas are immense here and there is also a good deal of agricultural land, and as the territory needs the town as a distributing point, Santa is likely to grow and become prosperous. Fernwood is a settlement four miles west of Santa. C. D. McGregor has secured a town site patent. It is in the midst of a splendid forest of saw timber. J. K. Hord has established a general store, and a hotel is conducted by Mrs. Blair. Game is plentiful here, including bear, cougar, deer, elk, grouse, and pheasants. Emida is a small settlement ten miles west of Santa. There are about fifty people here. A general store is conducted by Hugh East. Clarkia is another small postoffice in the extreme southeast corner of the county. It is on the upper St. Maries river, sixty miles southeast of Rathdrum.

SMALL STATIONS AND POSTOFFICES ON THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Granite is eighteen miles northeast of Rathdrum. It is a heavily timbered section. What is known as the Severance sawmill is near here at King's Spur. It uses a forty-horse power boiler and employs a crew of about sixty men. Miss Carrie B. Jordan is postmistress at Granite and conducts a general store. Mrs. Leadbette is proprietor of Hotel Leadbette. Ramsey is about midway between Rathdrum and Athol; prospecting and logging are the chief industries. When the timber is eventually cleared away a considerable amount of agricultural land will come under cultivation and contribute towards the building of a prosperous village at this point. The present merchant and postmaster is Frank Tripp. Cocolalla is twenty-eight miles northeast of Rathdrum. It is on Lake Cocolalla, from which it takes its name. Immense quarries of the finest granite are being opened on the shores of this lake. Algoma is about six miles south of Sandpoint. Settlements were first made here in 1900. Nathan Powell is postmaster and has a general store. Sagle is a star route postoffice between Algoma on the N. P. railroad and Lake Pend Oreille. Panhandle is a new town that has been platted about two miles east of Sandpoint, where the smelter is being erected. The proposed new railroad, the Spokane and Kootenai, will run near the site. Kootenai is four miles northeast of Sandpoint. This was once a thriving town of about one thousand people. It had a newspaper and supported several stores and supply houses. It was then the shipping point for freight and supplies by wagon to Bonner's Ferry on the Kootenai river, and to points north. In 1892, when the Great Northern railroad was completed to Bonner's Ferry, the people, newspaper, business houses, etc., followed the new road or sought other localities and the population dropped to less than one hundred. It is on the shores of Lake Pend Oreille and is surrounded by timber and mineral lands. Its proximity to Sandpoint will probably prevent material growth. Oden is three or four miles east of Kootenai and is also on the lake shore. Pack River is five miles northwest of Hope. It is on the shores of the lake and at the mouth of the river bearing the same name. A good deal of prospecting is being done up this river. Black Tail is a mining settlement fourteen miles from Hope, from which place it is reached by steamers. Thornton is a flag station four miles southeast of Hope. Cabinet is seven miles southeast of Clark's Fork and close to the Montana state line.

SOME GREAT NORTHERN AND KOOTENAI VALLEY RAILROAD STATIONS.

Leonia is on the Montana state line about fifteen miles southeast of Bonner's Ferry and ninety miles from the county seat. It is the center of a fine lumbering region. Lena Mervin is postmistress. E. E. Gilson runs a hotel. The Leonia Mercantile Company, of which W. E. R. Brewster is manager, has a large general store and a good trade. Katka is the next station west, distant six miles from Leonia. Crossport is a small station four miles east of Bonner's Ferry. Moravia is about the same distance southwest of Bonner's Ferry. Naples is the next station south. The White Mercantile Company has a general store here. Elmira is about fifteen miles north of Sandpoint. Colburn is about half way between Sandpoint and Elmira. Urencoe Station (or Markham postoffice) is west of Sandpoint at the extreme foot of Lake Pend Oreille. La Clede, on the Pend Oreille river, is twenty-eight miles north of Rathdrum. It has a population of perhaps one hundred and fifty. Mining and lumbering are its industries. Jerome M. Bunker is postmaster; a blacksmith shop is owned by Charles Bradbury; a general store is conducted by Mrs. B. Cass; A. Christenson has a general store and ships poles; R. H. Graves runs a restaurant; Fred Burdick is justice of the peace; the town has a good hotel, the La Clede. The large general store of the La Clede Lumber Company, of which J. M. Bunker is president, William A. Burdick, secretary, and Mr. McKinney manager, was totally destroyed by fire in the early morning of March 15, 1903. The store also contained the postoffice and in the upper story was a large public hall. The loss on the building was about twenty thousand dollars. The stock of general merchandise, which was almost entirely destroyed, was valued at six thousand dollars. Albany Falls is about two miles from the Washington state line. It is about thirty miles northwest of Rathdrum and four miles west of Priest River. This will develop into a thriving place in the future, as the falls in the Pend Oreille river will furnish immense power, which will no doubt be utilized sooner or later by mills and factories. On the north bank of the river and extending three miles to the east, is an immense deposit of aluminum clay, from which the finest grades of brick may be manufactured. The settlement is in school district No. 24, which was organized August 30, 1892. The present valuation of the school property is about eight hundred dollars. The settlement has good prospects. Newport is but two miles west of Albany Falls and is directly on the boundary line between Idaho and Washington. A portion of the town is in each state. It is surrounded by rich mineral lands, fine timber belts and numerous valleys of fertile agricultural lands. It has in addition peculiar advantages as a pleasure resort. The scenery is enchanting and the excellent hunting and fishing afforded by the nearby mountain valleys and streams, and the Pend Oreille river, make the locality truly a sportsman's paradise. It has general stores, long distance telephone connections, good schools and churches, and will grow in population and importance, as the surrounding country is developed.

Copeland is a station on the Kootenai Valley railroad, north of Bonner's Ferry. The International boundary line is about seven miles directly north. It is about ten miles southeast of Porthill, seventy miles northeast of the county seat and one hundred and eight miles northeast of Spokane. The postoffice was established July 1, 1900, with L. P. Cole as postmaster. Mr. Cole is also manager of a general store, conducted under the firm of L. P. Cole & Company. Among the prominent settlers of this locality is Charles F. Fischer, who is interested in the reclamation of the swamp lands of the Kootenai valley, and in the development of other resources of the country.

O. R. & N. RAILROAD STATIONS.

Cataldo is on the boundary line between Kootenai and Shoshone counties. It is thirty-five miles southeast of Rathdrum. There is a sawmill here owned by Roland and Burris. A general store is conducted by A. E. Frost and another by W. P. Dwyer. C. J. Cole and Son are loggers. It is on the Coeur d'Alene river in a heavily timbered section. Mission is a flag station a few miles west of Cataldo. Dudley is the next small station west. Lane is a station of greater importance a short distance west of Dudley. It has a population of about one hundred. There is a hotel here kept by H. Roden. P. L. Zimmerman has a large general store. Another general store has recently been put in by the Kootenai Commercial Company, formerly engaged in business at Harrison. Medimont is about nine miles east of Harrison. Titus Blessing and Jonathan Mauk took up homesteads here several years ago, and in 1895 a town site was laid out on their land.

This resulted in a contest between the homesteaders and townsite people before the Coeur d'Alene land office and the Interior Department. The townsite people won, but generously gave to Blessing and Mauk all the land not used for townsite purposes. A patent to the townsite was issued to the probate judge of the county, who conveyed the lots to the occupants. The name Medimont was coined from "Medicine Mountain," a local land mark. There has been a settlement here since 1890. It is the center of a mineral district. There is also a good deal of farming land along the river in this section, and the stock industry has developed to good proportions. J. W. Slayter is postmaster. A hotel is conducted by Robert P. Short, and a general store by Mr. Slater. About seventy-five people are permanent settlers in the town. Anderson is a station a short distance east of Harrison. Its postoffice name is Springston. Mining and lumbering are well developed industries. D. B. Stowell is postmaster. Nathan R. Bowers runs a blacksmith shop. Stowell and Shingstead have a general store and a sawmill. The Waters Mining Company, of which N. R. Bowers is president, and P. T. Wagner secretary, owns several good prospects in the vicinity. Lacon is a flag station seven miles south of Harrison, on Lake Coeur d'Alene. Watts is a station in the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation, ten miles east of Tekoa, Washington.

SOME INLAND AND LAKESIDE SETTLEMENTS.

Steamboat Landing is a settlement at the extreme southern point of Lake Pend Oreille. Boats ply from this point to Lakeview and stages run to Athol on the Northern Pacific railroad. It is about eight miles east of Athol. Squaw Bay is a settlement on an arm of Lake Pend Oreille about two miles north of Steamboat Landing. It has become a summer resort and the name has been changed to Idlewilde. Hotels and cottages have been erected. It is a beautiful location and the scenery is especially grand. It has excellent advantages as a resort. Weber is a mining settlement fifteen miles south of Hope on the lake shore. It is reached from Hope and Lakeview by steamer. The Weber Milling and Mining Company have valuable properties here. Mica is a postoffice in the western part of the county, fifteen miles south of Rathdrum, and nine miles south of Coeur d'Alene City. It is near the west shore of the lake. Len Landing is a postoffice and steamboat landing on the west shore of Lake Coeur d'Alene, about midway between Coeur d'Alene City and Harrison. Lumbering, dairying and fruit growing are profitable industries here. A stage runs to Bellgrove on the west. Len H. Nichols is postmaster. Mr. Nichols also handles general merchandise, farm products and lumber. Eli Stinson conducts a grocery store. Beligrove is a postoffice near the Washington state line, in the western part of the county, directly west of Len Landing on the lake. Williams was formerly called Coolin. It is west of the foot of Priest Lake, about twenty-five miles north of the town of Priest River, and is in the Priest River forest reserve. It has a population of something more than one hundred. Stages convey mail and passengers to and from Priest River. Lee Downey is postmaster. A general store is conducted by A. Coolin. Farming, stock raising, and dairying are carried on to a considerable extent in the surrounding country. Further development of the town is prevented by its location in the government reserve, but when this is thrown open to settlement it must become an important business center, for it is surrounded by timbered and agricultural lands that when taken up and improved by settlers, will contribute very materially to the growth and prosperity of the settlement. Seneaquoteen is one of the oldest settlements in the county. The Hudson's Bay Company had a trading post here in very early days, and in 1864 when the act was passed by the territorial legislature creating Kootenai county, Seneaquoteen was named as the temporary county seat. No county business was ever transacted here, however, and the settlement has remained a small trading point. It is thirty miles north of Rathdrum and seven miles southeast of La Clede. Andrew Christenson is postmaster and proprietor of a general store. A saw mill is operated here by the La Clede Lumber Company. The population is about twenty-five.

CHAPTER V.

EDUCATIONAL.

In this particular instance "Education" by local application may be defined as the foundation upon which rests the magnificent superstructure of Kootenai county's commercial, political, educational, religious and social instituttions. This is true in a double sense. The journalists, the managers of the greater industrial corporations and the lesser mercantile companies, the professional men, the leaders in social life and religious work, are men and women of education. Coming to the county from educational centers in various sections of the east and west they have conquered the wilderness and formed other and new educational centers by the shores of its lakes and rivers and in the midst of its valley plains. Knowing much of the power of education and realizing the need of intellectual training in the varied walks of life, their best thought and their best energies have been directed toward the early and permanent establishmnt of good common and high schools.

In this age as well as in all ages of the past, many of the leaders in commercial, industrial, political and even professional life, are, and have been, self-made men; men who in their early manhood were deprived of scholastic advantages. In the active affairs of man the failure of many who have had every advantage of intellectual training has led some to decry education. Extremists have gone so far as to declare that some men have too much education. But as the majority of us are practical men in this age and not philosophers, we do not waste much time theorizing on the advantages or disadvantages of education, but get it if we can. The efforts of instructors in pursuing "fad" methods may at times be misdirected and consequently fail in producing satisfactory results in the training of the student. Again the student may be in school solely because of parental command or entreaty, with no aim or ambition to accomplish anything further than the completion of the course of study in any manner that will speedily bring his school life to a close. No one should expect such a student to succeed in after life. The right instructor can accomplish wonderful results with the right kind of material. Kootenai county is an industrial community. The spirit of the day there as in many other localities is commercial. Many have come to believe that the capacity to make and the genius to use money constitute the full man; but there are many also who believe that these are not all the things that the fullness of life holds. In the ultimate judgment it is not wealth, it is not power, it is not even that which the world calls success that really counts. Character is the touchstone that makes true greatness. The best citizens are the men of character, and when these men have had the advantages of education they have lived powerful and influential lives. While the industrial and commercial interests of Kootenai county are great and the citizens are deeply absorbed in the material development of its varied resources; yet in the rush and under the weight of business cares the common and the high schools have not been neglected. In every community special pride has manifested itself in the conduct of the school. The qualifications of teachers have always been a matter for special investigation and as a consequence there exist as good schools in Kootenai county as may be found anywhere in the Northwest.

Education in Kootenai county began at a very early date. The first school in the county was conducted at the foot of Lake Coeur d'Alene, near the present site of Coeur d'Alene City, in 1842. It was in truth a sectarian school and in fact a promulgator of the dogmas of Catholicism; but it was nevertheless a school. The pupils were Indians and the teacher a Jesuit missionary, Father DeSmet. In the first chapter of the history of this county will be found the details concerning this school. From 1842 to the present time the Catholics have continuously maintained good schools among the Indians, and at DeSmet on the Coeur d'Alene reservation, there is now both a boys' and a girls' school, where both Indian and white children may obtain a good education under the guidance of priests and sisters of the Order of Providence. Out of an Indian population of 495 on this reservation, about 300 have received a fair education, can read and use enough English to carry on an intelligent conversation. These results have been obtained after sixty years of earnest work on the part of the missionaries.

But the Indians on the reservation do not enter into the intellectual life of the county and it is only as a matter of record that we note the foregoing facts. The first school taught by a white person was at Rathdrum during the winter of 1882-83. Miss Viola Mulkins was in charge and she therefore has the distinction of being the pioneer teacher of Kootenai county. As Miss Mulkins resigned before the completion of the term and was succeeded by Miss Kate Powers, the latter is entitled to share with her the honor, especially as she continued to conduct the school until the building was destroyed by fire in the fall of 1884. The traditional log school house has not played a very prominent part in the school history of Kootenai county. There have been a few, particularly in the northern part; but the saw mill was a pioneer institution in many of the settlements and the necessity for the log building was obviated.

In November, 1883, one year after the beginning of the first term of school at Rathdrum, then called Westwood, a school was opened at Bonner's Ferry by Mrs. Martin Fry. Mrs. Fry taught ten pupils during this term, three of her own children and seven half-breed Kootenai Indian children. The term lasted nine months, and was taught without compensation. In the winter of 1883-4, children of the new town of Coeur d'Alene attended school at Fort Coeur d'Alene, and in the winter of 1884-85, Isaac S. Daly taught a term of school at Coeur d'Alene. These were the beginnings of the common schools of Kootenai county.

Among the first acts of the county commissioners, after county organization, was that of creating school districts. The county was divided approximately in half. Coeur d'Alene and all territory south of it was called district No. 1; Rathdrum, vicinity and all territory north was called district No. 2. In 1885 the first of the new districts was formed, No. 3 at Sandpoint, and S. L. Smith was its pioneer teacher.

Among the early school superintendents were Mark M. Musgrove, Henry Melder and Miss Agnew. In the early 'eighties a territorial law made the probate judge ex officio superintendent of public instruction. Under this law Probate Judge Henry Melder served almost continuously as school superintendent from 1886 to 1898. At the general electon of 1896 Kootenai county cast 759 votes for, and 213 votes against the proposition to amend Art. XVIII, Sec. 6, of the state constitution so as to separate the offices of probate judge and county superintendent of public instruction. The amendment carried throughout the state, and in 1898 Daniel VanDuzer was elected the first county superintendent under the new law. The first county institute was held at Rathdrum November 4th to 8th, 1895. At this time a Kootenai County Teachers' Association was formed, with Henry Melder, president; T. N. Creekmur, first vice president; Louise Allbaugh, second vice president; Christine Winterbottom, third vice president; W. E. Edelblute, secretary. At the first institute the following teachers were in attendance: A. E. Torelle, T. N. Creekmur, J. C. Brady, Mary Spencer, Grace Burns, Louise Allbaugh, Margaret Buckly, Agnes McRae, F. V. Yeager, George W. Hayes, Christine Winterbottom, W. S. Walker, Oscar Sheffield, Bessie Butterfield, Myrtle Andrews, T. H. Wilson, W. H. Edelblute, Mildred Humes, Hattie I. Smith, Eliza Kercheval, Anna Bothwick, Louise Preston, Thomas Hydorn, Ida Bush, Mrs. Jennie White, Minnie E. Price, C. P. Hartley, Mrs. W. Wright, Lena Boyce, Mary Crockett, Mrs. A. Pierce, Marie Wheatly, Lulu Leonardy.

The early school records of the county having been burned with the court records in the Rathdrum fire of 1884, we were unable to secure statistical information concerning the early schools. The records covering the period from 1885 to 1893 were poorly kept, being confused with those of the probate judge, and it was impossible to gather reliable figures from them. Even the state superintendent's office could furnish no information covering the period prior to 1893. The school census of Kootenai county, taken July 1, 1893, showed a school population of 1,462: boys, 735, and girls, 727. Of these, 906 were enrolled in the schools of the various districts, which numbered at that time 29. At that time there were five graded schools in the county, located at Rathdrum, Coeur d'Alene, Sandpoint, Bonners Ferry and Post Falls. Twenty-three of the twenty-nine school houses occupied were owned by the districts; the remaining six were rented buildings. Forty-one teachers were employed in the schools of the county at an average salary of $51 each per month. Of the forty-one teachers, twelve were gentlemen and twenty-nine were ladies; salaries paid to gentlemen averaged $53 per month, and to ladies $49 per month. Of the twenty teachers' certificates issued in 1893, three were first grade, twelve second grade and the balance third grade. In the school year ending August 31, 1893, Kootenai county paid to its teachers $10,167; for libraries and apparatus, $955; for fuel, rent, and incidentals, $5,608; for repairs and furniture, $1,536, a total expenditure for the year of $18,266.48. The receipts for the year were as follows: On hand at the beginning of the school year, $3,947.14; collected from all sources, $22, 197.59; total receipts, $26,144.73. Although the county was but ten years old, it stood seventh in the state in point of amounts collected and expended for school purposes. Although during the next school year beginning September 1, 1893, all the industries and commercial institutions of Kootenai county were paralyzed by the panic in financial centers, there was no material decrease in the receipts and expenditures for school purposes, and the average amount per month paid to teachers was increased one dollar. The enrollment was somewhat less owing perhaps to the hardships individual homes were forced to endure, or to removals from the county because of the depressing effects of the panic upon various industries; but on the whole the school year was a successful one and results were not noticeable below those of the year previous. Ten new districts were formed during the year and $1,695 expended for new school houses and grounds in rural communities. The total valuation of school property this year was $33,690.

There are but two independent districts in the county, those of Rathdrum and Sandpoint; but in all the larger and in some of the smaller towns excellent school buildings have been erected, some of them at a cost of many thousands of dollars, and courses of study have been established, the successful completion of which admits the graduate to the lower classes of the state university at Moscow without examination. The fact that many enter that institution direct from the public schools of Kootenai county, is a splendid endorsement of the work of its teachers and an evidence of the high standing of the common schools of the county in the long list of educational institutions in the state. It is a matter of common remark by visitors that the schools of Kootenai county would be a great credit to a much older community and one much more densely populated.

Since 1893 forty-seven new districts have been formed, making in all seventy-six districts at the close of the school year in 1902. For comparative purposes we will give statistics for the year 1902, showing that advancement is being made, in keeping with the general progress that has been made by all industries in the county during the past few years. There are now seventy-four school houses in the seventy-six districts, in nine of which graded schools are taught. The school census of 1902 shows a total school population of 3,149; of this number 1,571 are boys, and 1,578 are girls. The increase since 1893 is 1,687, showing that the school population has more than doubled in the last ten years. The enrollment for the year ending June 30, 1902, was, in all the schools, 2,821, showing that 328 of school age were not enrolled. Thirty-five male and eighty-five female, or one hundred and twenty teachers in all, were employed at a total cost to the county of $31,142.23, an increase of $20,975 over the amount paid teachers in 1893. Text books cost the county $1,378.50 and libraries $668. During this year there were received from all sources $73,899.42, of which $3,113 were raised by the sale of bonds issued for building purposes. The total bonded indebtedness of the county for school purposes was $18,750; estimated value of school houses and sites, $59,488; of school apparatus, $5,410; of school libraries, $1,502, and of all school property, $81,378.86.

The railroad mileage in Kootenai county is greater than in any other county in the state and the numerous school districts through which the roads run are consequently greatly benefitted by amounts paid as taxes and through the lessening of the burden of taxation borne by settlers on partially developed ranches or homesteads. The railroads are directly benefiting the schools also by developing the varied industries of the county, making it possible for settlers to occupy the outlying sections and by making all parts of the county accessible to the homeseeker and investor who comes with his family and with his worldly possessions to become a citizen of the county and a patron of its schools.

A state law makes it obligatory on the part of teachers to attend the institutes which are held annually in various parts of the county. Much of the success which has always attended the schools is no doubt in a large measure due to the training instructors receive at these gatherings. The Kootenai county institute for the year 1902 was held at Coeur d'Alene, beginning August 18th and continuing throughout the week. Seventy teachers were in attendance and the session was successful from a teacher's standpoint. Interest in educational matters in Kootenai county is not waning, on the contrary greater efforts are being continually put forth to raise the standard of perfection in teacher and student; while primary work is not being neglected, the higher education of the youth is receiving more attention than heretofore, it being considered desirable to afford them home advantages rather than to allow it to continue necessary for them to go away from home for the higher work. The public schools are turning out young men and women who are taking positions of trust and responsibility at home and in other localities, and these positions are being filled with credit and in a manner to credit greatly the institutions in which their holders have received their intellectual and moral training. Having been well founded and having the intelligent support of all good citizens, the schools of Kootenai county are destined to accomplish much for the intellectual and moral advancement of its citizens.

CHAPTER VI.

DESCRIPTIVE.

In area Kootenai county is fourth in the state, with 5,600 square miles. From its most southern point to the International Boundary, it is approximately 140 miles long with an average width of 40 miles. Its southern boundary follows the summit of the divide between Palouse river in Latah county and Hangman's Creek in Kootenai county. On the east, the line begins on the north slope of Beal's Butte at the eastern terminus of the Thatuna Hills, a low mountain range extending east and west through Latah county. From this point it dips into and crosses the valley of the St. Maries river, rising again on the north to the summit of the divide between the St. Maries and St. Joe rivers. From this divide to the crest of the Coeur d'Alenes, it alternately rises and falls in crossing the valleys of the St. Joe and the Coeur d'Alene rivers and the dividing ranges. From a point on the 48th parallel of latitude, it moves southeast for about fifteen miles, along the summit of the Coeur d'Alene mountains, to the Montana state line, when it again turns north, crossing the valley of Clark's Fork, the crest of the Cabinet mountains, the valley of Kootenai river, and intersecting the International Boundary a short distance west of the 116th meridian of longitude. In traversing this region the eastern boundary line crosses one of the most mountainous and broken sections of the northwest, reaching its lowest elevation at Leonia, on the Kootenai river, and its highest on the crests of the Cabinet and the Coeur d'Alene mountains. At Leonia is located one of the boundary stones between Idaho and Montana, a stone pillar six feet high, and ten inches square at the top. On the east side is chiseled the word Montana, and on the west side, Idaho. The elevation of this stone is 1833 feet, and its distance from the International Boundary is 26.64 miles. Fifty-four miles south of the boundary is another Idaho-Montana monument, on the summit of the Cabinets, with an elevation of 6,780 feet. July 9, 1898, a state-line monument was erected on the summit of the Coeur d'Alene mountains, 70.72 miles south of the 49th parallel. It has the same dimensions as the others but is in ten sections, the sections having been taken up the trails on pack animals, and afterward cemented and bolted together. The elevation here is 4,850 feet. There are ninety-two monuments and posts between the International Boundary and the summit of the Coeur d'Alene mountains, a distance of little more than seventy miles, four stone monuments and eighty-eight iron posts. Directly on the boundary line is a stone monument and the elevation given at this point is 4,505 feet. The survey of this portion of the Idaho-Montana line and the erecting of the posts and monuments was accomplished by Richard U. Goode of the United States Geological Survey, in the summer of 1898.

In passing from east to west, the International Boundary, which forms also the north line of Kootenai county, crosses the valley of the Kootenai river and lies for the remainder of the distance along the north slope of the Cabinet range, known locally as the Priest River mountains. The point of intersection with the Washington state line is about two miles west of the 117th meridian of longitude; the north half of the county is, therefore, one degree of longitude in width.

South from the International Boundary, the west county line follows the Pend Oreille range of mountains, whose greatest elevation is between 6,000 and 7,000 feet, to the valley of the Pend Oreille river. South of this river the divide between Pend Oreille and Spokane river is crossed, after which a semi-mountainous tract is traversed until the hills of the Palouse country are reached, where the line returns to the point of beginning, a few miles north of Farmington, Washington. The distance around the county is fully 375 miles, "as the crow flies;" following the line in its numberless and sharp depressions and elevations, it is much farther. Except at intervals along the south and east boundaries, the course is through a densely timbered area, much of it uninhabited, some of it almost inaccessible, where there are no roads and but few trails, a series of wild, canyon-cleft ranges, relieved only by narrow river valleys, and an occasional plateau, differing from the higher elevations in primeval environments only in the absence of the gorge and the eternal snow.

Everywhere apparent is the geological fact that Kootenai county has had a most wonderful physical history, beginning thousands of years ago, at a period when the titanic forces of nature were holding high carnival in the region now occupied by the states of the Pacific Northwest. Geologists agree that at one time the foothills of the Rocky Mountain range formed the shore line of the Pacific Ocean. In time the Cascade Mountains were thrown up, at first in the form of a long, low dyke, but, by successive upheavals and eruptions, to the present elevation. There was thus formed, between the Cascade and the Rocky Mountains, a vast inland sea, extending from the ice fields of the far north to the open sea in the far south. Dr. Thomas Condon, Professor of Geology, University of Oregon, in a recent work entitled "The Two Islands," asserts that the Coeur d'Alene and Bitter Root mountains formed the east shore of this inland sea. The presence of water-worn pebbles and shells on the slopes of the Cabinet and Coeur d'Alene mountains verify the Doctor's statement.

During this period, then, Kootenai county must have been just "off shore," a portion of it, in fact, forming the pebbly beach or the rocky shore of the sea. The presence of the worn pebbles and shells high up the mountain sides may not be understood to indicate that the waters approached the present elevation of the mountains. During a long period of inactivity, the fierce internal fires were but gathering energy for mightier work. In time the placid surface of the adjacent sea became a surging, boiling tempest, the mighty waves receding farther and farther from the former shore line, as the earth's crust was thrown up in giant folds, higher and higher, until the Rocky Mountain system, embracing its western spurs and ranges, attained its present elevation. During this eruptive period occurred the greatest lava flow of all the ages. Not only were the snowy peaks of the Cascades built up, but the flow extended inland, to the south and to the north, over the vast plains of the Columbia, covering an area of 200,000 square miles to an average depth of 2,000 feet. The life of the inland sea was at an end, and in its stead was a vast desert-waste of lava. By the lifting of the Cascade range the warm Japan current, which had previously washed the Rocky Mountain slopes in its passage to the north, was turned from its course and the inland areas experienced a radical change in temperature. A glacial era followed and in many places are discernable the paths of these mighty ice-floes, as in their slow but irresistible movement from north to south, they furrowed and planed down the broken face of the earth's crust, scarring the mountain sides, filling in the intervening depths, and forming the level and beauteous valleys of the present. Far extending moraines and wide glaciated surfaces tell plainly the story of this era. The path of the glacier is well marked in Kootenai county. From north to south, through the central portion of the county are found the deposits and accumulations peculiar to this period. From the mountain tops at the head of Lake Pend Oreille, the path of the ice mass is plainly visible, and some idea may be had of its gigantic proportions when it is known that beneath the surface of Rathdrum prairie the moraine has a depth of between two and three hundred feet.

There is not space here for a technical description of the structure and elemental constitution of the mountains of Kootenai county. They are of volcanic origin and many of the loftier peaks are extinct volcanoes. The period of volcanic and seismal disturbances in this region is comparatively recent, as evidenced by the presence of volcanic ash on the mountain summits, and, in places, the distibution over wide areas of boulders and fragmentary rock that have been hurled from the mountain sides. There have been no special geological surveys of these mountains, but in a general way government geologists have reported on their structure as a part of the Rocky Mountain system and to these works the student reader is referred for technical information.

The mountainous regions of Kootenai county have been a help and at the present time a hindrance to its development. Not many years ago the greater portion of the county might well have been described as a region of wild and beautiful scenery, untouched by the industrial hand of man. The mountains were for a long time, and, in locations, are still a hindrance to development, as they have delayed road and railroad building. For this reason many localities are difficult of access, are cut off from good markets, and progress along all lines is consequently slow. The mountains have, however, been a help in other directions, because of their mineral deposits, which have attracted many settlers; because of the game in their forests, the fish in their streams, and the deep snows on their rugged crests. The game and the fish of the mountain regions have induced many to locate in the nearby valleys, and the snows have been made to serve practical purposes by the construction of canals through which the waters of the resultant streams are carried to the agricultural lands for purposes of irrigation. Two decades ago when the Northern Pacific was pushing through to the coast, agriculture was in its infancy in Kootenai county. Some stock ranged over the valleys and in the mountains. Here and there along the streams might be found a small farm with a very few acres in grain and potatoes. But even these small farms were widely separated by unoccupied tracts, and it was not thought possible to cultivate any but the lands directly adjacent to the waterways. A revolution has been wrought in these twenty years. During the first decade progress was slow, but in the last ten years great strides have been made; it has been demonstrated that the low lands and the foothill slopes of Kootenai county are rich in productive qualities, and that climatic conditions make easy of production all kinds of grains and grasses, fruits, berries and vegetables. In proportion to the aggregate timber, lake, and mountain areas, the per cent of agricultural lands the county over is comparatively small, a liberal estimate by the best informed being about one-fifth of the total area of the county. Agriculture is not and probably never will be the chief industry, but good markets in the mining and timber regions and in the numerous populous towns make farming a profitable industry and there are farm lands enough to support a large population. The soil in the smaller valleys is of volcanic and alluvial origin, very deep near the mountains, in many places of a black loam color and sufficiently rich in the potashes, phosphates and silicates to assure success in the cultivation of grains, vegetables and fruits. In the larger valleys, such as that of the Spokane river, a soil composed of vegetable mould, silt and wash from the adjacent mountains, rests upon a moraine accumulation of great depth. Above the glacial deposits the soil varies in depth, over many wide areas the gravel and stones approaching within two or three feet of the surface. In favorable seasons excellent crops are produced on the moraine prairies, but thus far efforts to irrigate them have not met with decided success.

Climatic conditions in Kootenai county are as favorable to health and to the production of crops as anywhere in the northwest. The winters are not severe even in the most northern portions of the county except in the high mountain altitudes, which are uninhabited. Ice goes out of the lower Kootenai river early in February; except in the shallower portions Lake Pend Oreille never freezes, and it is only during a short period each winter that steamers do not ply from Coeur d'Alene up the lake and the St. Joe, St. Maries and Coeur d'Alene rivers. The valleys are protected by high mountain walls on either side and the warm winds coming at intervals from "over Chinook Camp" crowd many a spring-like day into the wintry months. Pansies are frequently seen blooming on the lawns at Christmastide and it is only upon the smalier lakes, with considerable elevations above the valleys, that ice merchants can depend for the summer's supply of the natural product. There is always an abundance of snow in the mountains, the greatest precipitation occurring on the Cabinet mountains, on the lofty crests at the head of Lake Pend Oreille, and on the mountain divides between the Coeur d'Alene, St. Joe and St. Maries rivers. The presence of the snow banks tempers the heat of the summer months, which is never oppressive. The valley and lake elevations are comparatively low and this fact accounts in a measure for the pleasant winters. They are sufficiently nigh, however, to insure the absence of sultry heat in the summer, making of almost every town in the county a delightful summer resort. Lake Coeur d'Alene has an elevation of about 2,000 feet, Lake Pend Oreille 1,456 feet, the town of Bonner's Ferry 1,600 feet, Sandpoint 2,119 feet, Rathdrum 2,216 feet, the town of Priest River 2,170 feet.

The development of the agricultural resources of Kootenai county began about Heyden lake in the early 'eighties. Locations were made previous to this time, but the presence of heavy forests and the absence of good markets forbade the tillage of large areas. A little later the coming of the railroad, the establishment of the mining camps, and the influx of tourists, sportsmen and lumber companies, stimulated the farmer to activity; forests were cleared, the sod of the prairies was turned, each year seeds were sown over an increased acreage and the harvests began to return richer rewards to homesteaders. John Hager, now of Coeur d'Alene, took up a soldier's homestead on Heyden lake in 1878; C. B. King, of the same place, located in the same region at an early date, and his place, known as the Avondale farm, is now one of the best improved and most desirable homes in the county. The old Heyden place, at the lower end of Heyden lake, was perhaps the scene of the first attempts at systematic farming in the county. This farm was taken up by Matt Heyden, for whom the lake was named, in 1879. A year or two later the Gleason brothers, John, James and Mathew, located in the same neighborhood. Among others who located early in the central portion of the county we may name John Fernan, on Fernan lake, just east of Coeur d'Alene, 1880; Edwin Crockett, near Coeur d'Alene, 1880; Oliver Edwards, stock farm, eighteen miles north of Rathdrum, 1882; S. L. Smith and John Crenshaw, north of Rathdrum, 1888; Frank Buckle, east of Rathdrum, and M. B. Ross, near Post Falls. In the northern part of the county, Richard and Martin Fry engaged in agricultural pursuits in the early days near Bonner's Ferry, and twenty miles down the Kootenai valley from Bonner's Ferry, Z. Montgomery and a few others had hay and stock ranches and cultivated small patches to supply local demands for vegetables. In the earlier days the only markets were the military posts at Fort Colville, Fort Walla Walla and Fort Coeur d'Alene. In 1880 the following prices were paid for supplies at Colville and Coeur d'Alene: Oats, 2½ cents per pound; hay, $16 per ton; straw, $12 per ton; barley, one dollar per hundred pounds; dry wood, $3.35 per cord; green wood, $2.95 per cord. In 1885, according to the assessor's summary, the value of homesteaded and patented lands in Kootenai county, together with the improvements thereon, was placed at $205,693.50, and the total tax collection for the year was $10,222.94. In 1887 the assessment roll had increased to $666,000. This increase, however, was not due so much to advancement of farming industries as to the increase of railroad mileage and the establishment of saw mills.

The advance in agriculture and stock raising may be better appreciated by the review of some statistics taken from assessor's returns for later years. In 1898 there were in Kootenai county 4,567 cattle, 2,430 horses and 1906 sheep. In 1899 there were 40,924 acres in farms and stock ranches, patented, and valued for purposes of taxation at $668,037. The value of sheep, cattle and horses in the county was $169,482. In 1901 the taxable value of stock, which was far below the actual market value, was $184,058. This increased in 1902 to $213,310. In this year there were 820,771 acres of patented lands, valued with improvements at over one million dollars. There were 6,812 cattle and 2,474 horses. No record has been kept of the aggregate yield of grains, vegetables and fruits for any year, hence we are unable to give accurate information concerning the yearly output. From the report for 1900 by C. J. Bassett, Commissioner of Immigration for the State of Idaho, we learn that the county produced 50,000 bushels of grain. This was an estimate only, but is probably approximately correct. Agriculture and horticulture have kept pace with the stock industry and there has been a constant increase in acreage devoted to the production of grains and fruits with a proportionate increase in returns.

Interest in fruit culture began almost contemporaneously with the breaking of the sod for grain and vegetable raising. In the valley lands and on the slopes of the foothills, fruit does exceptionally well, and its culture is fast becoming one of the leading industries. Within a radius of ten miles from Coeur d'Alene, upwards of 30,000 trees are growing and bearing. On the C. H. Back place alone there are over 7,000 trees. There are one hundred orchards in the county containing more than 500 trees each. The peach orchard of B. M. Ross, near Post Falls, contains 1000 trees. Among other bearing orchards are those of S. L. Smith, 2,600 trees; D. W. Ross, sixty acres; John B. Leiburg, 3,000 trees; Thomas Fitzsimmons, 18 acres; A. D. Robinson and M. Bacon, 20 acres. These are only a few of the many orchards in the central portion of the county, on the prairie and on the shores to Lake Pend Oreille, Heyden Lake, Fish Lake and Lake Coeur d'Alene. In the valley of the Pend Oreille river orchards are owned by Henry Keyser, Lyman Markham, Mrs. Cramer, John Fox, J. C. Finstead and others. In the Kootenai valley: Z. Montgomery, W. T. McNear, Fry Bros., Charles Edwards, Empey Bros., and a number of others are engaged in fruit culture. In the valleys of the St. Joe and St. Maries rivers there are several orchards, and each year witnesses additions to the acreage so cultivated. Soil and seasons are favorable in Kootenai county to diversified farming and scarcely any of the farmers are confining themselves to specialties. As an example of the possibilities of the soil we may cite the exhibition made by Clem King at the market fair held at Coeur d'Alene, October 23, 24, 1895. It consisted of varieties of apples, plums, pears, peaches, strawberries (ripe and still clinging to the vines), currants, grapes, preserves, butter, eggs, cheese, vegetables, pumpkins, squashes, hay, straw, wheat and oats.

Dairying has always been a profitable industry in Kootenai county and is becoming more so as the towns build up, the other industries are developed and the markets and transportation facilities improve. There is a number of dairies along the west branch of Priest river, about Coeur d'Alene lake and on the St. Joe and St. Maries rivers. A cheese factory has been in successful operation for a number of years at St. Maries and is now owned by William and Joseph Cole and Joseph Fisher.

Besides the government mill on the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation, there is but one flouring mill in the county. It is located on the Spokane river at Post Falls. Full particulars concerning this enterprise will be found in the article on the history of that town.

The effects of irrigation have not thus far been fully demonstrated in Kootenai county. Many farmers have irrigated small tracts from private ditches, in some cases obtaining satisfactory results, and in others failing on account of the near approach to the surface soil of the gravel beds into which the water filters rapidly. Since 1899 systematic efforts have been made to irrigate portions of Rathdrum prairie. In July, 1899, three water rights were filed with the county recorder by W. L. Benham, of Spokane, and a party of civil engineers was placed in the field to make preliminary surveys. D. C. Corbin was behind the enterprise which was promised good support by the settlers on the prairie. The rights embraced the water of Heyden, Fish, and Sucker lakes. The ditch from Heyden lake was to be fifteen miles in length with a capacity of 500 cubic feet of water per second. The surveyed route for this ditch was west from the lake along the dividing line between townships 51 and 52 north, range 3 west of Boise meridian, and it was proposed to irrigate lands on either side of this line. The line surveyed for the Fish lake ditch was twenty miles long and it was proposed to irrigate with it the two lower tiers of sections in township 52 north, range 4, west of Boise meridian. The capacity of the ditch was to be the same as that from Heyden lake. From Sucker lake it was proposed to construct a canal with a capacity of 200 cubic feet of water per second. It was to be ten miles long and to irrigate a region west of Rathdrum. Meetings of citizens of Rathdrum and farmers of that vicinity were held, committees were appointed to confer with the ditch company and with settlers along the routes surveyed; great interest was taken in the enterprise which promised early and successful consummation. Various circumstances have interfered with the completion of these canals, but plans have not been materially changed and many believe that complete success will crown the efforts to irrigate the prairie. Irrigation is not necessary here to the production of fair crops in favorable years and in some seasons precipitation is sufficient for the production of excellent yields of grains and vegetables. If, however, an unfailing supply of water can be brought to the prairie it will insure enormous yields and will double land values through the whole valley. The Fish lake ditch is now five miles long and work on it is being continued. The Heyden lake ditch is also under way. The company owning these ditches, and of which D. C. Corbin is president, is known as the Spokane Valley Irrigation Co. Another company has recently been formed, the Valley Improvement Co., which proposes to irrigate a tract of over 6,000 acres on the Rathdrum prairie, north of the Spokane river and joining the Washington state line. The men behind this enterprise are J. K. Smith, president of the Washington Grain and Milling company; Charles W. Clark and Jas. C. Cunningham, all of Spokane; B. S. Wadsworth, vice-president of the Franklin county bank at Connell, and J. H. Edwards, vice-president of the Conrad National Bank of Kalispell, Mont. Mr. Cunningham is president, Mr. Wadsworth, vice-president, and Mr. Clark secretary and treasurer of the company, which has a paid in capital of $60,000. It is proposed to bring water to this section from Fish lake through the ditch now being constructed by the Spokane Valley Irrigation Co. As has been stated there are differences of opinion among the farmers as to the possibility of irrigating the prairie, but if experiments soon to be made prove successful, this will speedily become one of the richest valleys in the northwest.

Perhaps the richest agricultural lands in Kootenai county are found in the Coeur d'Alene Indian reservation. In this tract are approximately 400,000 acres, the greater portion of which is cultivable. It is occupied at present by a total Indian population of 717, divided as follows: Adult male Spokane Indians 46, female Spokanes 37, children of the same tribe, 12; adult Coeur d'Alene male Indians 250, female Coeur d'Alenes 245, Coeur d'Alene children, 127. Besides the Indians there is a small number of whites, missionaries and sisters of charity engaged in church and school work at De Smet. Charles O. Worley, U. S. Sub Indian Agent, also resides at De Smet. Of the reservation lands 101,000 acres are under fence and over 30,000 acres are under cultivation. The Coeur d'Alenes are good traders and average farmers. Statistics show that 130 of their number can read and 160 can use enough English for ordinary conversation. Two hundred and thirty-two frame dwellings are occupied by the Indians and their families. In 1902 there were actually cultivated by the Indians 30,750 acres, from which they produced 122,000 bushels of wheat, 130,000 bushels of oats, barley and rye, 18,000 bushels of vegetables, and 3,000 tons of hay. There are owned by the Indians, 2,760 horses, 1,540 cattle, 1,100 swine and 2,800 domestic fowls. In 1892 the government erected a saw mill and flouring mill about ten miles northeast of De Smet and six miles east of the Washington state line. These mills cost about $14,000 and were erected expressly for the Indians, where all their sawing and grinding is done free of charge. The expense of running the mills is paid from funds in possession of the government belonging to the Indians. The flouring mill has a capacity of twenty-five barrels and the sawmill ten thousand feet of lumber per day. They are operated by steam and have thirty and twenty-five horsepower, respectively. From the statistics given above, which are taken from the government reports, it will be seen that fully seventy-five per cent. of the lands of the reservation is unoccupied by the Indians. In his last report to the government, U. S. Indian Agent Albert M. Anderson says: "The Coeur d'Alene tribe is comparatively well advanced and well to do. The reservation which they occupy is a fertile and valuable piece of territory surrounded by a progressive white community. These Indians should have their lands allotted to them in severalty and be thrown on their own resources as promptly as possible." While the tribe is self supporting, receiving no aid whatever from the government, the unoccupied portion of the reservation should certainly be thrown open to the homeseeker as the Indians do not need it and cannot possibly utilize it. Doubtless it is only a question of a short time until this action will be taken, thereby adding very materially to the agricultural wealth of Kootenai county.

Kootenai county's greatest source of wealth is the lumber, pole and tie industries. In the northern part of the county is one of the greatest areas of unbroken timber ever found on the continent. It covers 2,600 square miles. Other areas of dense forests are found in the valleys of the Priest and Pend Oreille rivers, along the St. Joe, St. Maries and Coeur d'Alene rivers, and upon the uplands bordering all these valleys and surrounding all the lakes in the county much of this timber is far back from present railway lines, lumber mills and markets. It is estimated that it will require at least forty years to manufacture into lumber the forests of Kootenai county. Small saw mills were put up in the county very early in the eighties, the first being those of O. A. Dodge at the outlet of Fish lake and Frederick Post at Rathdrum, both built in 1882. For more than a decade following the organization of the county the lumber industry made but little progress. During the past four or five years, however, it has pushed to the front by leaps and bounds. Besides several small mills that supply local demands there are now upwards of twenty large mills, some of them capitalized at $500,000. The larger mills are located at Coeur d'Alene, Harrison, Sand Point, Priest River and Bonner's Ferry, and have various capacities, ranging from 25,000 to 150,000 feet of lumber per day. These mills have been built by eastern capital principally although considerable stock is held by citizens of the various towns where they are located. Each company has secured title from the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., and from private individuals, to immense areas of timber land, insuring permanency of the industry and with improved facilities for handling logs, a continual increase in the mill products. Among the larger corporations are the Weyerhaeuser Syndicate, operating principally at Sandpoint and Priest River, the Stern Lumber Co. and the Bonner Co., at Bonner's Ferry; the Coeur d'Alene Lumber Co., the Howard Lumber Co., the Empire Lumber Co., at Coeur d'Alene; the Grant and the Cameron Cos., at Harrison; the Priest River Co. and the White Pine Co., at Priest River; and the Idaho Lumber and Manufacturing Co., at Post Falls. In the histories of the various towns of the county will be found particulars concerning these and other plants. In order to facilitate the handling of logs from the heavily timbered sections a number of franchises have been granted companies for the improvement of the streams. Among these is a franchise granted the Weyerhaeuser Co., for the improvement of Priest river, and another to the St. Joe Improvement Co. for clearing Santa Creek, St. Joe and St. Maries rivers of obstructions, thereby opening a passage way for logs into Lake Coeur d'Alene from the timbered region in the southeastern part of the county. There is every indication that the lumber industry will continue to grow in Kootenai county, and its growth will not only keep a vast amount of capital in circulation, thus bringing prosperity to the people of the numerous communities where mills are operated, but it will clear and open large areas of valuable farming and grazing lands for profitable development.

That there are rich deposits of the precious metals in Kootenai county is a well established fact, although there are at present but few producing mines. Much of the county is yet a mountain wilderness which none but the early argonaut has penetrated. The ranchers have made their homes in the valleys; the lumbermen have visited the low foothills of the ranges, which are covered with merchantable timber, but the higher altitudes of the rugged fastnesses yet remain to be explored by the prospector. On the slopes of the lower timbered foothills, however, and along the margins of the valleys, many discoveries have been made of greater or lesser value. The first discoveries were made many years ago. It is said that French Canadian trappers found gold in the Pend Oreille river in 1852, and in 1854, we are told, gold was found near the same place, by General Lauder while exploring a route for a military road east from the Columbia river. The first authentic record is that of discoveries made by members of the party who assisted in the construction of the Mullan road in 1858 and 1859. In a letter dated Washington, D. C., June 4, 1884, and addressed to A. F. Parker, now of Grangeville, Idaho, Captain Mullan says: "I am not at all surprised at the discovery of numerous rich gold deposits in your mountains, because both on the waters of the St. Joseph and the Coeur d'Alene, when there many years ago, I frequently noticed vast masses of quartz strewing the ground particularly on the St. Joseph river, and wide veins of quartz projecting at numerous points along the line of my road up the Coeur d'Alene, all of which indicated the presence of gold. Nay, more: I now recall quite vividly the fact that one of my herders and hunters, a man by the name of Morse, coming into camp one day with a handful of coarse gold, which he said he found on the waters of the north fork of the Coeur d' Alene river while out hunting for our expedition. This was in 1858 or 1859. The members of my expedition were composed very largely of old miners from California, and having had more or less experience in noticing the indications of mineral deposits, their universal verdict was that the entire country, from Coeur d' Alene lake on toward and including the east slope of the Rocky mountains, was one vast gold bearing country, and I was always nervous as to the possible discovery of gold along the line of my road; and I am now frank to say that I did nothing to encourage its discovery at that time, for I feared that any rich discovery would lead to a general stampede of my men from my expedition, and thus destroy the probable consummation of my work during the time within which I desired to complete the same."

Since the discovery of gold in the Coeur d'Alene mountains in 1883 many sections of Kootenai county have been thoroughly prospected. The most promising and valuable mines are located near Lakeview on Pend Oreille lake; in the Black Tail mountain region east of Sandpoint; on Boulder creek in the northeast part of the county, and near Tyson in the southeast. In other regions, however, good assays have been obtained, and development work continues. Among these locations are Porthill, Mica Bay, Anderson mountain, Priest River, Medimont, Wold Lodge, Rathdrum mountain and Heyden lake. In the Lakeview region the Weber, Keep Cool and Conjecture mines are well known properties. The Weber mines were discovered in 1888 by Billy Bell and others while prospecting for Fred Weber and S. P. Donnelly. The Keep Cool, now owned by Thomas Griffith and others, Spokane, was discovered in 1888 by W. Franklin and Harry J. Steffey. The Conjecture was located in 1894 by Charles Graham. These have all been paying enterprises and it is said that $75,000 were taken from the Keep Cool in three years' development work. Silver, copper and gold are found here. In 1890 C. P. Price discovered a mine of free milling silver ore on the west side of Pend Oreille lake from which one specimen assayed 400 oz. and another 128 oz. per ton. The property was sold to Joseph Clark, a mining man of Butte, Montana, for $20,000. In the Black Tail region, northeast of Sandpoint, the Mexico, owned by Wisconsin people and managed by James Ferguson, is a valuable mine from which assays have been made showing upwards of $80 per ton in silver and gray copper. From the B. F. & H. mine in the same locality, J. A. Evans, the owner, netted from one shipment of 18 tons of silver ore, $6,000, and from another shipment of 16 tons, $3,280. Other claims here are bringing in fair returns. In the Yank mining district in the northern part of the county, are the Buckhorn, Hoosier Boy, Boston, Keystone, Scout, Lucky Three, and other mines. In February, 1901, the Buckhorn, owned by I. J. Brant, Joseph King, Charles Ewing and David Langley, was sold to G. P. Mulcahy of Spokane, and associates, for $100,000. On Boulder creek, eight miles above Bonner's Ferry, some placer mining was done by returning Wild Horse prospectors, as early as 1867. In 1884, H. H. Markley, of Cedar Falls, Iowa, had the placer grounds thoroughly tested, but found they could not be worked at a profit because of immense boulders, difficult to handle. He then located some quartz claims. In the spring of the same year Sandy Morrow discovered the Eureka and the Kate Fry claims which he sold to Richard Fry. Considerable wire silver and galena ore have been taken from these mines and from the Homestead and Ebba, located later. In the winter of 1888 the Granite creek mines were discovered and a great deal of development work has been done there. The mines yield a high grade of galena ore and have assayed besides, eight to twenty dollars in gold. Last winter John Edgar and Retzer Bros. bonded the Independence group to Glass and Winthrope for $35,000. Near Clark's Fork there are several good silver and lead prospects. North and East of Hope considerable prospecting has been done and some promising claims located. A prospect discovered by Harry Oxer fourteen years ago is now being developed by Mr. Oxer, Brandt Bros., and others who have organized the Concord Mining Co. The Coeur d'Alene Mining Co., of which J. W. Phillipps is president, F. H. Bradbury, vice-president, and S. G. Soule, treasurer, has done some development work on a group of claims near Heyden lake. The group includes five claims, Phillipps No. 1, Phillipps No. 2, Daisy, Ellen and Gordon, from which assays have shown from $11 to $16 per ton in gold, besides a small per cent. of silver. Claims were located here fifteen years ago but until recently not much work has been done on them. Good assays of gold and copper have been obtained from prospects in Rathdrum mountain. In December, 1902, Samuel Gompers, living two miles east of Rathdrum obtained an assay of $60 in gold per ton, from a sample of black sand taken, at a depth of seven feet, from the side of a well that was being dug on his place. In the Mica Bay mines, seven miles south of Coeur d'Alene, assays running from $5 to $60 per ton in gold and silver, have been obtained. In the Priest River district G. W. Armstrong, C. D. Cunningham, A. L. and A. J. Marsten, J. E. Peterkin and others, own claims north of the town. The Medimont district on the Coeur d'Alene river has been prospected for 10 years; but little work has been done here, however, until the past two years; splendid assays have been obtained in gold and silver and it is regarded as a promising district. At Anderson mountain, a few miles east of Harrison, several mines have been opened, the Waters Mining and Manufacturing Co. owning twenty-two claims. Of this company, Nathan Bowers of St. Paul, is president and P. T. Wagner, secretary. The latest discovered and probably the most valuable mines are on Santa Creek, in Camas Cove, in the southeastern part of the county. This is known as the Tyson mining region and particulars concerning discovery and development wil be found in the chapter on towns. Other prospects have been opened on Hagus creek, twelve miles above the head of navigation on St. Joe river by Daniel Davis and others. For handling ores, mills are being put up in the Tyson region and at Lakeview. At Sandpoint, on a site just east of the Humbird Lumber Company's mill, preparations are being made for the erection of a smelter to handle the ores from the Lakeview, Black Tail and other regions. H. M. Williams is the promoter and general superintendent of the enterprise. Other officers are Jacob Hines, Minneapolis, president; M. A. Murphy, St. Paul, vice-president; W. E. Nelson, Denver, secretary and manager: Paul Johnson has the contract for the building of the works. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars will be expended on the smelter, and in the purchase of boats and tugs for handling the business from the mines. Several groups of mines have also been purchased by the company which will be ready by fall to commence operations. The erection of this smelter will aid very materially in the development of all mining properties in the north end of the county and will make of many a prospect, a valuable mine.

Owing to the remoteness of several mineral locations it will be some time before all sections reach the highest state of development as the cost of transporting the ores at the present time is too great to admit of profitable investment in such properties. Although transportation facilities are lacking in a few sections, the county as a whole is remarkably well equipped with means of reaching the markets and mills not only with the products of the mines, but with those of all other industries. There are 256 miles of navigable lakes and rivers. These include Lake Pend Oreille, Lake Coeur d'Alene, the Coeur d' Alene river from Harrison to Cataldo or Old Mission, the St. Joe river from its mouth to St. Joe, and the Kootenai river from the International Boundary to Bonner's Ferry. In the matter of railroads Kootenai has more than any other county in the state, aggregating 260 miles, divided as follows: Great Northern, 81 miles; Northern Pacific, 84 miles; Couer d'Alene Branch, 14 miles; O. R. & N., 55 miles; Kootenai Valley, 26 miles. There are 250 miles of Western Union telegraph, and about 125 miles of telephone lines. In addition to the railroads already built across the county, several others are projected. Last winter the Spokane & Kootenai Railroad was incorporated by D. C. Corbin and ex-Senator George Turner, of Spokane, Jacob Furth, president of the Puget Sound National Bank, of Seattle, and Charles S. Bihler, of Tacoma, formerly assistant chief engineer of the Northern Pacific railroad. The capital stock of the company was placed at $3,000,000. The route to be followed by this road, over which some preliminary lines have been run, is from Spokane to Rathdrum; thence north to the Seneaquoteen ferry on Pend Oreille river; thence to the town of Priest River; thence northeast to Bonner's Ferry and up the Kootenai river to the mouth of Moyie creek; thence up Moyie creek to the International Boundary. This route is over the old historic trail used forty years ago by placer miners on their way to the Pend Oreille country and to the Wild Horse region in British Columbia. Another line is said to have been surveyed by the O. R. & N. from Rockford, Washington, through the thickly timbered land section in the western part of Kootenai county to Coeur d'Alene. The Coeur d'Alene and Spokane Electric Ry., of which F. A. Blackwell is president and A. Bettis manager, is already under headway. The surveys have been made by Chief Engineer J. C. White and the contract for the grading of the road bed has been let to M. D. Wright and S. A. Eslick, of Spokane. The road will be ready for use early in the fall. It will do both a freight and passenger business.

Kootenai county is becoming famed as one of the scenic regions of the northwest. For rugged snow-clad mountains, for misty waterfalls and roaring cataracts, for a picturesque profusion of evergreen trees and fern-like shrubs, it is unsurpassed. The greater portion of the surface is broken and extremely mountainous, belonging in reality to the great mountain range which forms the backbone of the western continent. It is rich in mountains, in valley lands, and most fortunately too, in waters. The rushing mountain streams and placid mountain lakes of Kootenai county, complete, by contrast with the wild wilderness environments, one of the most fascinating pictures to be found in western wonderland. A brief description of the principal water courses and lakes, with the regions drained, will give the reader a more vivid conception of the diversified character of the surface. Of the Lake Coeur d' Alene basin the St. Joe river is the largest and drains the most extensive area. About forty miles from its lake outlet it forks into three streams, two of which head in Shoshone county, in the ridges which form the divide between the North Fork of the Clearwater and the Coeur d'Alene basin. The third heads in the Bitter Root range a short distance south of Stevens' Peak. This latter is the longest of the tributaries and may be regarded as the continuation of the main stream. Regarding it as such the river is 137 miles long. It empties into Lake Coeur d'Alene at the southern extremity, and is navigable for lake steamers a distance of 26 miles from its mouth. The area covered by its basin is in the form of a trapezoid. The elevation of the upper portion of the valleys of the various forks is, in mean, 4,900 feet, and of the valley at the head of navigation, 2,198 feet. From the head of navigation to the outlet the fall is but 23 feet. Fifteen miles from its outlet it receives its largest tributary, the St. Maries river. The east fork of the St. Maries rises in the Clearwater divide in Shoshone county, and the west fork near the source of the Palouse river in the extreme southeastern corner of Kootenai county. The upper portion of its valley has a mean elevation of about 3,400 feet. At its junction with the St. Joseph the elevation is 2,200 feet. The lower and navigable portions of the St. Joseph, and also of the Coeur d'Alene river, have but a slight fall and a deep channel. This is due to the fact that this portion of their course is cut through a deep diluvial soil, clearly the old bottom of Lake Coeur d'Alene, which, not so very remotely in a geological sense, was far larger and extended well up into what is now in part the valleys of Coeur d'Alene and St. Joseph rivers. Above the navigable portions, the streams are clear, the valleys rise rapidly, the mountains close in, and the current becomes swift.

The Coeur d'Alene river empties into Lake Coeur d'Alene about twenty miles from the north end of the lake. Forty miles from the lake it divides into two streams, the North and South forks. The North Fork, which is the larger of the two, heads in the Coeur d' Alene mountains near the south end of Lake Pend Oreille. This branch is about 110 miles long. The elevation of the valley is 3,900 feet in the upper portion and 2,200 feet at its junction with the South Fork. The South Fork heads in the ridges of the Bitter Roots some distance north of Sohon's Pass. The elevation of the upper valley is 3,478 feet. The Coeur d'Alene is navigable in high water, to the junction of its two forks, a distance of four miles from its outlet. During the summer and fall stages of water, steamers do not ply farther than Old Mission, a distance of 29 miles. The total fall of the river from the head of summer navigation to the lake, is only sixteen feet. A multitude of canyons and ravines branch off from the larger stream valleys in all directions, each with a swift-flowing stream at the bottom, which in its turn is supplied by the springs that break out at frequent intervals from the inclosing ridges along their course. The mountain ridges in this portion of the county are extemely serpentine in their course, swinging often from east to west and from north to south, and vice versa. These twisting and turning divides, with their deep saddles and corresponding rises, dense forests, long, steep, tortuous ridges, deep, narrow canyons and rushing roaring streams, enclose a region of pristine wilderness, charming beauty and exceeding grandeur.

Lake Coeur d'Alene is about thirty miles long and averages two miles in width. Its elevation is 2,175 feet and its depth in some portions is said to be 185 feet. It fills a gorge in the mountains whose pine covered slopes are reflected most beautifully in its clear waters. On a cloudless summer day the lake presents a picture of rare beauty that appeals at once to man's love of nature and to his poetic fancy. From the crest of the ridges at the north end of the lake there is afforded a most entrancing view of a landscape that rolls for miles in every direction, embracing a pleasing variety of wooded and snow-clad peaks, of sunlit valleys and somber dells, of grassy slopes and rugged points. Below, and sweeping far away into the mountain recesses, lies the clear, blue lake, the matchless gem of the mountains, and winding away toward the valley, is the river, on its way with the waters of the lake, to the great Columbia. And yet, with all the matchless beauty of the prospect, a subtle charm is wanting, a crowning glory is lacking for it all; the associations of history are not here; as yet no poet's wand has touched this scene and invested it with that absorbing interest which Scott has given to the lochs of Scotland and Irving to the terraced slopes of the Hudson. Some day, when the passion for gold and power shall have a little abated, there will arise, perhaps from the secluded haunts of the prospector or the shepherd, a flame of poetic genius, that will supply this subtle charm and weave a garment of fancy that will complete the fascinating beauty of the scenic environments; but not while town lots and material resources are the sole topic of conversation and brick blocks and golden treasure the supreme aspiration of the people.

The channel of the Spokane river, the outlet of Lake Coeur d'Alene, is not wide and deep enough to carry off the waters of the lake as rapidly as they are poured into it by the numerous mountain inlets, hence the back or slack-water that renders the Coeur d'Alene and St. Joseph rivers navigable. Should this outlet channel be deepened or should the surface of the lake be lowered by any other means steamers will probably cease to ply to Old Mission and St. Joe. The Spokane river is not navigable. In its course through Kootenai county is winds through stretches of prairie land and plunges down rocky inclines of narrow canyons and great ravines. About eight miles below the lake, at Post Falls, the river has a total fall of 42 feet, and, below the first fall, all its waters are crowded into a narrow channel, scarcely thirty feet wide, while on either side rise the perpendicular walls of a box canyon. Along the river's course are many charming views of landscape scenery. There is a pleasing vista of rolling peak-like foothills. The level meadow and the bordering slopes are gray or green or white as the case may be. The distant hills lie whitened in the midst of a wintry morning or outlined in green against a summer sky, and on the loftier peaks the dazzling whiteness of the eternal snows affords at all seasons of the year, a pleasing contrast to the prevailing tones of pine-green and rock-gray and sky-blue. That portion of the Spokane valley lying in Kootenai county, and called locally Rathdrum Prairie, is fifteen miles long, and in places, ten miles wide, is nearly level throughout its course and in the upper part, is covered with a forest of pine.

In the central portion of the county are a number of small lakes that are becoming famous tourist resorts because of delightful summer climatic conditions and enchanting surroundings. They are isolated though not far distant from Northern Pacific railroad stations and the drives across country are pleasant and interesting features of a visit to any of them. The road, in many instances lined on either side with stately pines, cedars and tamaracks, so tall and dense that the sun cannot be seen at mid-day, winds through dense forests on the mountain sides, and at times drops into deep, shadowy canyons, where the rumble of a mountain stream adds its charm to the journey through the solitudes of nature. Again it skirts a minature valley or runs out upon the prairie amid the fields of grain and by the orchards and groves of the rancher. Surrounding the lakes are dense forests on sloping hills or precipitous mountains. Rare and delicate flora grow here in profusion, dipping gracefully into the water along the shore and forming at times a dense undergrowth in the forest above, contrasting strangely with the giant pine that casts its shadow over all. Among these water jewels is Fish lake, sometimes called Twin Lakes, because formed by two water bodies connected by a narrow channel, is three miles north of Rathdrum. The lake is five miles long and has a considerable elevation above the prairie. Tesemini, or Spirit lake, three miles north of Fish Lake, is seven miles long and in its widest portion, one mile across. Heyden lake is seven miles north of Coeur d'Alene and twelve miles east of Rathdrum. It is about eight miles long and, in places, two miles wide. In the extreme northern part of the county is Sullivan lake, four and one half miles long by three fourths of a mile in width. Other smaller bodies of water are Hoodoo lake, east of Granite; Cocolala lake, at the town of the same name, on the Northern Pacific railroad; Mud lake, two miles north of Hauser, and a number of small lakes in the valley of the Coeur d'Alene river.

Clark's Fork of the Columbia river, named for the famous explorer William Clark, rises in Montana, and from its source to its union with the Flathead river is known in different sections as the Deer Lodge river, Hellgate river and Missoula river; formerly throughout its length, it was known as Clark's Fork. This name now applies to it from its junction with the Flathead river to where it pours its waters into Lake Pend Oreille. From the lake to the Columbia it is known locally as the Pend Oreille river. It is about twelve miles from the point where the river crosses the Kootenai county line to its mouth at the lake. Fed, in its upper valley, by numerous large tributaries, which in turn have their sources in the everlasting snows of the Rocky mountains, it pours into Lake Pend Oreille immeasurable quantities of water, which, during the freshet season, the outlet of the lake is unable to carry off with equal rapidity. This results from the shallow channel of the outlet river and from the additional quantities of water that are emptied into the lake by numerous other streams. These conditions cause an annual rise of the waters of the lake of from fifteen to thirty feet. It never rises sufficiently high, however, to cause overflows, owing to its uniformly precipitous walls and to the deep channels of all inflowing streams.

The Pend Oreille river is in reality only a continuation of Clark's Fork which flows through the lake. For twenty-five miles its course lies southwest and west in Kootenai county, through a rugged, mountainous region timbered with pine and tamarack, with some cottonwood, poplar and maple along the banks. Priest river joins it seven miles east of the Idaho-Washington boundary line. The total drainage area of Pend Oreille river, including the water sheds draining into Clark's Fork, from its primary source in the Rocky mountains, to the Columbia, is 15,000 square miles. The upper river, or that portion of it between the lake and the mouth of Priest river, is from one to three thousand feet wide, with a depth of from twenty-five to fifty feet at extreme low water. Five miles below the mouth of Priest river and two miles east of the Idaho-Washington line, are Albany falls. Here the river is divided by a rocky island, having an area of five acres, the summit of which rises sixty feet above the water level. On either side of this island the falls have a descent of about seven feet. The Great Northern railroad crosses the river immediately above the falls, passing over the island referred to. From the lake to the state line the valley is not over one mile wide, is comparatively level and, in places, heavily timbered. On either side of the valley rise the forested foothills of the Priest river and Pend Oreille mountains.

Lake Pend Oreille is the largest lake in Kootenai county and the largest in the state of Idaho, its area being 180 square miles. The extreme length from Steamboat Landing in the south, to the outlet, in the north, is about sixty-five miles and its shore line is over three hundred miles. It is fifteen miles across in its widest portion. A few miles out from the town of Hope, soundings have been made to a depth of 2500 feet. Its low water elevation is 2050 feet, which is raised fifteen to thirty feet in the spring and early summer months. It never freezes except in the north where the waters are shallow. It was first known as Kalispelm lake, but later the name was changed to Pend Oreille, meaning ear pendant. Some writers state that it was so named because of its peculiar form, somewhat resembling in its windings the shape of an ear pendant worn by the aborigines; others, that it took the name of the Pend Oreille Indians who were so called by the French Canadian trappers, because of their custom of wearing rings to which various ornaments were attached, in the lobe of the ear. In the lake are a number of islands, the largest of which contains one hundred and sixty acres. This island is about one mile from the town of Hope and is the property of General Warren, who took it up in 1888, receiving a government patent in 1890. He has built here a palatial residence and makes it his summer home. A number of streams flow into the lake besides its chief inlet, Clark's Fork, the largest of which is Pack river, heading well up in the Cabinet mountains of the north, and entering the lake near the town of the same name. On all sides are lofty ranges of mountains, the Coeur d'Alenes on the south, the Cabinets on the east and north and the Granite range on the west. These ranges enclose a deep mountain gorge, which forms the bed of the lake, and about which are grouped, rounded hills, lofty, rugged peaks and sheer declivities which, for miles in portions of the lake, rise almost perpendicularly from the water. Along the south shore are precipices having a slope of over eighty degrees and a height, above the water level, of two thousand, eight hundred feet. Pend Oreille lake like a broad and winding valley in the mountains, filled to the brim with gathered waters, with its tortous shore line and imprisoning mountain walls, charms and bewilders with its rare beauty and its majestic grandeur. In all the northwest there is not afforded a better conception of the beautiful and the mighty and wonderful in the works of nature than is found on the bosom and on the surrounding heights of this magnificent lake.

The Kootenai river pursues an erratic course; rising in British Columbia, not far from Kootenai lake, into which it eventually empties, it flows first in a southwesterly direction to Jennings, Montana, where it makes an acute angle curve to the northwest; entering Kootenai county, it flows for fifty miles through the northeast portion, re-entering British Columbia at Porthill. Another peculiarity of this stream is that near its source it flows due south, while over a low divide, only five miles away, the Columbia river winds its way northward. The river is navigable for one hundred miles, from the lake to Bonner's Ferry. From Bonner's Ferry to Jennings, Montana, a distance of sixty-two miles, obstructions prevent navigation. Almost every year, from May to July, the valley of this stream is covered with water. This condition is caused by the inability of the lake below to discharge the great volume of water as rapidly as it is poured into the lake. Because of the low banks and many curves of the river, the water is more easily forced out upon the valley lands. On account of this great yearly overflow, the land is rendered valueless for the production of any crop except the native grasses. The valley is the old bed of the lake, which at one time extended as far north as Bonner's Ferry. Charles F. Fisher, of Copeland, is conducting a scheme to construct straight, lateral ditches on either side of the river from Bonner's Ferry to Kootenai lake, thus giving the accumulated waters swift passage down the valley, preventing overflows, and reclaiming seventy-five thousand acres of rich farming land. The lower valley is heavily timbered. On the west are the Priest River mountains, and on the east is a high and broken divide projected south from British Columbia.

The Priest River Forest Reserve, occupying the northwest corner of the county, contains six hundred and fifty thousand acres. It consists of the drainage basin of Priest river, which has its ultimate head at, or slightly beyond, the forty-ninth parallel and flows in a southerly direction to a junction with Pend Oreille river. The greater portion of this reserve is in Kootenai county, only a small part of the western area being in the state of Washington. It is essentially a mountain region, the approximately level tracts not forming more than fourteen per cent. of the whole. Its greatest length is fifty-five miles, and its average width twenty miles. On the east is the Pend Oreille range of mountains and on the west are the Priest River mountains. The elevations vary throughout the reserve from three thousand feet on the surface of Priest lake to eight thousand feet on the higher ridges of the western range of mountains. Priest lake is divided into two portions, the upper and the lower, connected by a tortuous channel, named the Thorofare, two miles long and varying in width from seventy-five to one hundred and twenty feeet. The upper lake is a shallow body of water two miles long and one mile wide. Lower Priest lake is eighteen miles long and from one-half mile to five miles in width. The eastern shore is bold and rocky, rising rapidly by steep escarpments and spurs to the summit of the main divide. The spurs and ridges of the western shore are mostly low, and broken at frequent intervals by broad valley openings and swampy areas stretching westward. The outlet is Priest river, which leaves the lake through a channel four hundred feet wide and about three feet deep. On its way to the Pend Oreille river it is joined by a number of tributaries, the most important being the lower West Fork and the East Fork. Among the many beautiful spots in the lake region of Kootenai county there are none more attractive than the region about Priest lake. It is essentially a forest-covered region. There are but few tracts within the boundaries of the reserve that do not support a dense, magnificent forest. Besides the young growth and fire-damaged trees, it is estimated by government survey that there are 4,833,600,000 feet of merchantable timber. The government supervisor is Robert S. Bragaw, who resides at the town of Priest River. Under Mr. Bragaw are six forest rangers whose duties consist in patrolling the reserve, preventing forest fires and unlawful timber cutting.

A paradise for hunters, fishermen and tourists lies in the mountains, lakes and rivers of Kootenai county. There are fish in every stream; on the valley prairies and in the grain fields are varieties of grouse and other birds; in the higher altitudes, back in the wilder mountain sections, are deer, bear, caribou, moose and mountain lion. Nowhere will be found a region more delightful and more satisfying from a sportsman's standpoint. From the wild ranges in the upper St. Joe region to the wilder confines of the Priest river reserve is one continuous game preserve where the bravest may find a "foeman worthy of his steel" and where the more timid may gratify his love for the chase to satiety.

Climate, soil, forests, mineral deposits, lakes and rivers unite in making of Kootenai county one of the most favored sections of the northwest. The valley and mountain streams, and lakes possess a rare beauty of lofty, broken crests and peaks and densely wooded slopes. There is, too, a pastoral charm of grain fields waving by the water's edge or out upon the plain, of orchards sloping up the hill, or grouped about the ranchman's home, all telling of a prosperous and happy people. In addition to its charm of mountain, wood and plain, Kootenai county offers to the investor and the homebuilders opportunities rarely found elsewhere, in the development of its mining industry, its great lumber industry and its agriculture, dairying and stock-raising. There is every reason to believe that the unparalleled prosperity of the past few years will continue and that the county will remain one of the richest and most progressive in the state.

FREDERICK POST.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

KOOTENAI COUNTY

FREDERICK POST does not need to be introduced to the people of northern Idaho by words. He has earned the encomium lavished by President Roosevelt on a leading citizen of the United States, "He is a man who has done things." Perhaps no man in this part of the inland empire has a better right to the leading place in the realm of real benefactor of the country than Frederick Post. He is a man of great ability, and is possessed of wonderful perception with unerring discrimination, while his executive force and exhaustless fund of practical sagacity have made him a man whose impress has been left for good in the institutions of this rich country and whose life of integrity and moral uprightness has been entirely commensurate with the giant achievements that it has been his good fortune to bring to a successful culmination.

With this brief introduction to the life of one of the leading and distinguished men of the northwest, we will enter more into detail regarding his personal career. From the land whence have come so many powerful men who have allied their lives with this republic, also comes Mr. Post. It was on Sepember 16, 1821, that he first saw the light, the place being Herburn, Germany, and his parents were Frederick W. and Ida E. (Sneider) Post, natives of Germany, where they remained until called to the eternal rest of another world. The father wrought at the cooper trade and the mother's brother was a statesman of note in his country. Our subject received a good education in his native land and at the age of fourteen went to work in the mines. At the age of twenty he was compelled to serve in the military, as was the custom for young men in his country. Seven years were spent in this service, the last portion of which was in the capacity of lieutenant of the rear guards, where he was granted considerable privilege. Susceeding his army career, which was one of credit and distinction, he was placed in the position of overseeing officer of the German English Mining Company, where four years were spent. In 1848 he was married and in 1850 he resigned his position and came with his wife to America. They settled in Kendall county, Illinois. His vigor and stirring qualities were engaged in farming, constructing lime kilns, handling a stone quarry, operating a saw mill and also a flour mill. He constructed a water power at Black Hawk cave on the Fox river, which bears his name at the present time. In 1871 he severed his connections with Illinois and his businesses were disposed of and he came to the boundless west. He first selected the northern part of Idaho, and had soon purchased from the Indian chief two hundred and ninety-eight acres where Postfalls now stands and at once began extensive improvements. He dammed the Spokane river at the falls which bears his name, erected there the first sawmill in that portion of the country and then he was forced to buy the land again from the government. This was done by special act of congress, as he had put on such a large amount of improvement. Mr. Post purchased forty acres from James Glover which included the large falls in the Spokane river in Spokane and he platted what is now known in that city as Post's addition. He erected the first flour mill in Spokane and did business there for ten years. He then sold his entire property there for ninety-seven thousand three hundred dollars. Immediately succeeding that he came to Postfalls again and continued the sawmill business here on a larger scale. He was active in this until 1898, when he retired from business. He now owns many lots in Postfalls and two hundred acres adjoining the town.

In 1848 Mr. Post married Miss Margaret, daughter of Philips and Catherine Hilt, natives of Germany, where they died. This wedding occurred in Germany. To Mr. and Mrs. Post there were born six children, two of whom are still living: Henrietta, wife of Herman Linke, a retired farmer living in Spokane: Eliza, wife of A. M. Martin, a popular resident of Postfalls Mr. Post and his estimable wife are worthy members of the Presbyterian church and in all their brilliant success they have not forgotten the genuine faith of the Christian and they are now in the golden years of their life cheered and sustained by that hope which is as an anchor. Mr. Post has always been a temperate man, using intoxicants only when demanded as a medicine, never allying his influence with the saloon. It is exceedingly gratifying to find one who has been so prominent a figure in the northwest, who has been crowned with brilliant success as charming and generous as one could wish, who has steadily lead the way in building the country up to its present prosperous condition, who has been a stanch supporter of the faith that makes faithful, who has made an example worthy for the rising generation to follow,—it is a great pleasure, we repeat, to see such a one now enjoying the ripe age that Mr. Post has attained to, in peace, happiness, and in the secure esteem, admiration and love of his fellow men. He has done his part nobly, he has always been a benefactor to his race, and it is fitting that he be accorded a prominent place in the history that succeeding generations will read with ever increasing interest, when they see more and more the beneficent results of his wise labors and the salutary influence of his noble and upright life.

LORENZO D. CORZINE. This industrious agriculturist of Kootenai county is located about two and one half miles north from Sandpoint, where he has taken a homestead which he is transforming into a fine farm, utilizing the timber as he clears it.

Lorenzo D. Corzine was born on June 11, 1871, in Montgomery county, Illinois, being the son of Francis M. and Mary A. (Clifton) Corzine, natives of Illinois and Tennessee, respectively. In 1873, they removed to Sumner county, Kansas, the seat of the family home for twenty years, the father dying there in 1901. The mother had died in 1892. They were the parents of four children, Lorenzo D., our subject; George R., married and living in Oklahoma; John C., living in Oklahoma, now visiting our subject; Myrtle, in Montgomery county, Illinois. There is one half brother, William T., living in Montgomery county, Illinois. Lorenzo was two years of age when the family went to Kansas and there he received his education. He worked with his father until sixteen and then started for himself. Two years were spent in general work and then he went to Portland, Oregon, and was engaged for two years there on a dairy farm. Another move was made, this time to Astoria, and in fishing in summer and working in the woods in the winter, he was occupied until 1896, when he came to Colfax, Washington, then worked in various places until 1897, the year in which he came to Sandpoint. He worked for a time in the woods and then being sick spent a month or so in the Sacred Heart hospital in Spokane. After that he made a visit to his people in Oklahoma then returned and took his present place. He has given his attention to its improvement and also to working in the timber since that time and he is prospering.

In August, 1901, Mr. Corzine married Miss Vella, a daughter of John and Sarah (Casey) Fouty, natives of Wisconsin and West Virginia, respectively. They came to Kootenai county in 1898 and the mother died here. The father is living with our subject at this time. Mr. Corzine is a Democrat in politics and active in local questions. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Sandpoint Lodge, No. 59, also of the M. W. A., Sandpoint Camp, No. 7191.

WILLIAM E. SISSON. This enterprising pioneer in northern Kootenai county is one of the well known and highly respected citizens, both because of his excellent worth in personal qualities and because of his faithful work in the pioneer lines. An account of his career fittingly forms a part of the county history and will be interesting reading for all.

William E. Sisson was born in Buffalo county, Wisconsin, on December 18, 1863, being the son of Ezra and Amelia (Plemon) Sisson, natives of New York and Canada, respectively. The mother came to the United States with her mother when she was young, locating in Baraboo, Wisconsin, where she met Mr. Sisson and was married. Then they removed to Buffalo county, where the family home was for many years and then another move was made, this time to Dunn county. In 1880, they came west, settling in Latah county and there farmed for ten years. Thence they went to Lewiston, where the father died in 1898, leaving a widow and six children.

William E. was educated in Buffalo and Dunn counties and when fifteen started in life for himself. He worked in the woods, on the drive, railroading, and saw milling until June, 1887, when he came west to Spokane. He farmed near Latah for a number of years and in 1891, he came to his present location, two and one half miles northwest from Kootenai. He took a homestead, built good buildings, and since that time he has been raising hay, doing general farming, and timber work.

In 1885, Mr. Sisson married Miss Cora M. Butterfield, whose parents were natives of New York, but pioneers to Wisconsin. Her father died when she was four years old. They lived in Cedar Falls, and Lochiel and now the mother lives in Minocqua, all in Wisconsin. To Mr. and Mrs. Sisson there have been born eight children, Harry W., Ralph E., Lora M., Harland G., Bert C., Charles P., Hazel F. and Hester G. Mr. Sisson is a member of the school board and has been for some time. He is a member of the F. of A., Court No. 12, at Sandpoint. He is a man of integrity and has always labored for the welfare of the country where he has resided, being a valuable citizen in this county.

MARTIN L. PIATT. Although the subject of this article has not been in this section of Kootenai county as long as some, still, he has performed excellent labors of development while here, and his achievements with his personal worth entitle him to representation in the history of this county.

Martin Piatt was born in Washington county, Ohio, on December 4, 1866, being the son of William and Ann V. (Truax) Piatt, natives of Ohio, but pioneers of Wisconsin. They farmed for many years in Wisconsin and there the father died in 1884. The mother still lives in Knapp, Wisconsin, aged sixty-five. Their ten children are mentioned elsewhere in this volume. Our subject was educated in the schools of Wisconsin and when eighteen he started in the battle of life on his own responsibility. Various occupations engaged him for two years and then he went to Cloquet, Minnesota, in the lumber woods for a time. Then he returned to Wisconsin and remained until 1897, when he determined to try the west, and accordingly came to northern Idaho. He selected Sandpoint as the place of his operations and soon began logging, taking contracts from the different millmen. He has a fine outfit for this purpose and is one of the most expert men at the business in these woods. Mr. Piatt has one team that weighs thirty-three hundred and forty pounds. They are doubtless the finest span of draft horses in the county. Mr. Piatt has his headquarters one mile west from Kootenai and is well known over the country in his line of business as a faithful man, an excellent hand to accomplish his undertakings and possessed of skill, wisdom, and executive ability, while he stands well with all.

In 1890, Mr. Piatt married Miss Emma, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Clingman) Humphrey, natives of Indiana, and pioneers to Wisconsin. They settled in Dunn county and there remained until their death, the mother's occurring in 1883, and the father passing away in 1895. The happy union of Mr. Piatt and his estimable wife has been blessed by the advent of seven children: James, Julia A., William H., Martin Luther, Elizabeth C., Virginia and Benjamin. Mr. Piatt takes an intelligent interest in the political questions of the day and local matters, being allied with the Democrats in principle. He is a charter member of the Sandpoint Lodge, No. 59, I. O. O. F., and also belongs to Panhandle Lodge, No. 22, of the Encampment. Mrs. Piatt is a member of the R. N. of A., of Sandpoint. Mr. Piatt is a man of business enterprise and ability and his stanch character and reliability have made him a host of friends.

AARON W. PALMER is one of the younger men of the vicinity of Sandpoint and has manifested an industry and enterprise that bid fair to make him one of the prominent men of this section. His farm is located three miles from Sandpoint and was taken from the wilds as a homestead. Mr. Palmer has been devoting his energies to its improvement and is making a good home place.

Aaron W. Palmer was born in Monroe county, Michigan, on August 10, 1870, being the son of James K. & Nancy (Lambkin) Palmer, natives of Michigan, where they now live, being farmers. They have four children: Minnie M., wife of Eli Collins; Aaron W., our subject; Willis S., married and living in Michigan; Goldie A., single and teaching school. Our subject received his education in the native place, going to school in the winters and working with his father in the balance of the year. At the age of seventeen he started to do for himself, and for three years he was occupied in the lumber woods. In 1892 he went to George Bay country and later went to Saginaw, where he spent that summer on the boom and then he made Menomonie, Wisconsin, his headquarters, working five winters in the woods and the summers in the Dakota harvest fields. It was 1898 that he made his way to the Sandpoint country and being enamored of this region, he determined to make it his home, and accordingly he took the homestead mentioned above and to the improvement of this and general timber contracting he has devoted his energies since. He has a portion of the farm in hay and grain and has horses with which he does teaming. Mr. Palmer is liberal in political matters but leans toward the Republican principles. He is a man of good standing and has the confidence of his neighbors.

ABRAM M. PIATT. In the worthy labors of developing the country and bringing out its resources, the subject of this article has had a goodly share. He is a man of stable qualities, enterprising and capable, and is well known for his executive ability and stirring energy.

Abram M. Piatt was born in Monroe county, Ohio, on April 3, 1871, being the son of William and Virginia (Truax) Piatt, natives of Ohio. They came to Dunn county, Wisconsin, in 1882, and there the mother still lives, the father having died in 1883. The mother conducted the farm for thirteen years after her husband's death, but is now retired. She had twelve children, ten of whom live, as follows: Margaret, wife of William Chickering, in Knapp, Wisconsin; Alexander, in Sandpoint; Martin, married and living in Sandpoint; George, married and living in Clarkfork; Abram M., the subject of this article; David, married and living in Sandpoint; Julia, wife of William Oldham, in Knapp, Wisconsin; Jennie, wife of L. Workman, in Sandpoint; Rosa, Ida, both single and living in Sandpoint. Abram received the major part of his schooling in Knapp, Wisconsin, and when eighteen started in life for himself. He worked in the iron mines for two years, then on the farm, in the woods, on the railroad and so forth, until 1897, when he came to Sandpoint. The first year he worked for his brother and then he took a contract of furnishing three thousand poles. About this time he took a trip to Knapp, Wisconsin, and remained for eight months. Then he returned to Sandpoint and has devoted himself to contracting logs, poles and timbers for the Sandpoint company, Butler & Company and others and in this business he is still engaged.

On April 3, 1897, Mr. Piatt married Miss Ella, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Bowersack) Thatcher, natives of Ohio, but pioneers to Wisconsin, and they still live in Dunn county, that state. Mrs. Piatt was born there. Mr. and Mrs. Piatt have one child, Velma. Politically our subject is allied with the Republicans and is active and interested in this field and the questions of the day.

JOHN NELSON resides three miles north from Sandpoint where he has a fine estate of two hundred acres of land, having acquired it by homestead and purchase. He is a man of reliability, integrity and sound principles, and is the recipient of the respect and good will of his fellows.

John Nelson was born in Vermland, Sweden, on November 3, 1858, being the son of Nels and Martha Pearson, also natives of Sweden, where they died some years since. Two sons and one daughter were born to them besides our subject, Ole, living in Rock Springs, Wyoming; Andrew; Betty, married to Mr. Greenwold, in Ogden, Utah. John received a common schooling and when ten went to work out. Two years later he went to Stockholm and learned the harness trade. In 1881 he came to America, May 29 being the exact date of landing. He made his way to Salt Lake City, Utah, where he wrought for the D. & R. G. Railroad and then mined for five years. Next we see him in Leadville, Colorado, then in the Black Hills, South Dakota, then in Ogden, Utah, and later in Portland, Oregon. Thence he went to the Cascade mountains and in 1894 Mr. Nelson came to Sandpoint and located on his present place, which has been his home ever since. He has good buildings and a fine orchard and does general farming in addition to timber work, having contracted piling and such timbers. Mr. Nelson is an active Republican and is always ready to do his part to forward the welfare of the county. He is a member of the Lutheran church and a man of good standing. Mr. Nelson has never seen fit to quit the peaceful life of the bachelor for the uncertain seas of matrimonial existence and seems quite content with the celebatarian's life.

JUDGE A. K. WHITE, deceased. No man was better or more favorably known in the southern part of Kootenai county than the subject of this article, and it is fitting that memorial to his name be granted in the volume that has to do with the history of this section.

A. K. White was born in Port Deposit, Maryland, on May 8, 1834. His mother died when he was a child, and he was taken by his father to what was known as the "Brick Meeting House," in Cecil county. There he remained until fifteen and finished his education in an academy in Pennsylvania. Following this he was engaged in keeping books for a number of years, then came to Peoria, Illinois, where he acted as salesman and also studied law. In February, 1860, Mr. White married Miss Frances Giles, daughter of Joseph and Susana (Redfern) Giles, both English, and to that union were born two children: Lota Alice, deceased; Joseph C., married to Miss Hattie Whitmore and now living in Coeur d'Alene, where he is engaged in civil engineering. Following his marriage Judge White removed to Nebraska and then to Colorado, where he practiced law. In 1887 he came to Farmington, Washington, and practiced law, and in 1890 made his way into the then unsettled region of St. Maries, near the north fork, Clarkia postoffice. One man, Captain James Wells, afterwards World's Fair commissioner, was dwelling here then. The Judge took land near the mouth of the Emerald creek and at once devoted himself to raising stock. The ranch is known as Meadow Lodge. He was successful in this venure and although he came here with limited means, he was soon among the prosperous citizens of the county. He was popular and served one term as county superintendent of schools and one term as probate judge, having also been judge of Clearcreek county, Colorado, for two terms. The Judge was called to depart this life on November 26, 1901, and was sincerely mourned by a large circle of true friends. He was a member of the Masonic order at Harrison, Idaho, and also of the G. A. R., having been a brave and faithful soldier for his country. Mrs. White was postmistress at Clarkia for four years, but has now resigned the position, rented her fine esate of nearly five hundred acres and removed to Coeur d'Alene, where she resides with her son.

Judge White was in Company F, Nebraska Second Cavalry, and served two years, when he was wounded and honorably discharged. Nellie Kemble, a niece, who lived with the family for a number of years, is married and living at Oakesdale, Washington.

DAVID E. BIGELOW is one of the well known and respected citizens of Sandpoint, being a skilled artisan in wood work and building, while he also owns a fine farm of one hundred acres, which he has improved in a becoming manner.

David E. Bigelow was born in Milwaukee county, Wisconsin, on August 9, 1852, being the son of Joseph and Rose (Sweet) Bigelow, natives of the same county in Wisconsin. The father went to dig gold in California in 1855 and died the next year; the mother overcome with trouble and hardship succumbed to death soon after. Then the children were taken by relatives and our subject knows nothing of his parents. Two sisters are dead and one brother was a noted scout and was one who hunted the James boys, but no tidings from him have ever come to our subject. David was taken by an uncle to Manitowoc, Wisconsin, where he remained until eighteen, having gained a common school education. Then he went for himself and labored to get means for an education, and when he was twenty-one he had graduated from the high school. Then he sailed on the lakes for two seasons, after which he took land in Clark county and eight years later sold that and removed to Ashland, Wisconsin, where he did carpenter work for thirteen years. It was 1898 that he came to his present location, bought one hundred acres from the railroad company and in addition to improving it in good shape, he has also done carpentering.

JUDGE A. K. WHITE.

In 1876 Mr. Bigelow married Miss Gertrude Smith and to them were born four children, Raymond, Fayette, Floyd, and Mabel, all living in Wisconsin. Later Mrs. Bigelow was taken away by death.

In 1901 Mr. Bigelow married Mrs. Nettie Cole, daughter of Able S. and Marie Thompson, residents of Garfield, Washington, who in 1902 celebrated their golden wedding. Mr. Thompson is a druggist and a prominent citizen of the town. Mr. Bigelow is an active Republican and is zealous for the advancement of the interests of the country. He is a member of the K. of P., Helmit, Lodge, No. 36, while he and his wife belong to the Methodist church, being devout supporters of the faith.

WILLIAM H. LEMLY is a man of enterprise, integrity and fine business judgment, as is evidenced thoroughly by his round of successful achievements in financial matters, while also he has ever maintained an unsullied reputation and displayed a stanch character.

William H. Lemley was born in Eugene, Oregon, on September 3, 1859, being the son of Pleasant G. and Nancy (Fletcher) Lemley, natives of Alabama and Arkansas, respectively. In 1853 they crossed the plains with ox teams to Benton county, Mr. Lemley swimming the streams with his stock. The next year they went to Lane county, which was the family home until 1878. Mr. Lemley was appointed county judge, being the first incumbent of that office, and served for four years. Then he was county commissioner for four years, then county treasurer for two years, also deputy sheriff for four years. He operated a large farm for six years and in 1878 he came to Farmington, Washington, where he remained until 1895, whence he removed to Priest river, where his sons were. There he died in May, 1902, his wife passing away in April, 1902, he being eighty three and his wife seventy-seven.

Reverting more particularly to our subject, we note that he received his education from the public schools and when eighteen he started for himself in life. He learned the butcher trade and followed it steadily for ten years. He operated shops in Farmington, Oakesdale, and Rosalia, Washington, and the last year he was there he shipped three thousand hogs. In 1889 Mr. Lemley sold out his entire business and went to California and Oregon. One year later, he came to Priest River and to Albany Falls. One year later, he sold out and went prospecting. He prospected for a number of years in Idaho and Montana, being the discoverer of the Silvernight, in Montana, in 1896, of which he has sold an interest, still retaining some. In 1899 he returned to Priest River and took up general merchandising and continues in that business until the present time.

On June 25, 1900, Mr. Lemley married Miss Annie Alberts, whose parents, natives of Sweden, came to this country in 1883, locating in Minneapolis, Minnesota. In 1895, they came to Priest River and are conducting a boarding house there now. Mr. Lemley is a member of the I. O. O. F., Banner Lodge, No. 67 at Priest River, also of the F. of A., Priest River Court, No. 18, being chief ranger of the latter order. He has held all the chairs of both lodges and in 1902, was deputy grand master. Mr. Lemley is a Democrat and active in politics. He was chosen justice of the peace in 1900 and was deputy sheriff of Whitman county in the 'eighties. He is a man of reliability and displays commendable zeal for the upbuilding of the country and in his business enterprises.

CHARLES JACKSON is one of the best known business men of the Priest River country, having come here among the earliest pioneers and continued his labors here since. He is a man of intelligence and good business ability as has been manifested in his achievements, now owning a large general merchandise establishment in Priest River, where his standing is of the best.

Charles Jackson was born in Wilkinsburg, Pennsylvania, on March 1, 1849, being the son of Andrew and Caroline Jackson, natives of Pennsylvania, where they remained until their death, the father passing away in 1870, and the mother in 1878. The father was a cabinet maker. He had the following named children: Mary, Charles, our subject, Caroline, Chris, Louise, Amelia, Christian, and Andrew. Charles received a common school education, being really a self educated man, as he had to strive for his training. At the age of seventeen, he went to Minneapolis, Minnesota, joined a surveying party for some years, then went to Bismarck, North Dakota, thence to the Black Hills, where he prospected until 1888, when he came to the lake Pend Oreille county and there prospected until 1891. This was the year of the entrance of the Great Northern to the Priest River country and he came thither with a large canoe and transported freight, doing well. The next spring Mr. Jackson married Kate Neilson. This lady enjoyed the distinction of being the first white woman that crossed the Chilkoot pass to the Yukon. She went to Forty Mile creek and remained one summer, taking a supply of trinkets for the Indians and articles for the miners. She did well in the trip and left Alaska in 1890, having been there seven years. She has one son, now twenty-five years old. Mr. Jackson married in 1892 and his wife died in 1899. In 1902 Mr. Jackson married Emma Griswold, widow of Charles Griswold, and daughter of George Knowlton. She has four children, Bessie, Hazel, Halley, and Rena, all at home. In 1892 Mr. Jackson started a saloon, but in a short time he saw the need of a general merchandise establishment and so opened the same. This has grown until he has one of the largest stores in the town. Mr. Jackson owns the town site and one of the streets is named for him. He has always shown a public spirit and labored assiduously for the improvement and upbuilding of the town and county. In politics Mr. Jackson is Republican, having formerly been Democratic, but changed at the time of Bryanism. He has been prominent in the county conventions and is an influential man. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., being an organizer of Banner Lodge, No. 67 and has passed all the chairs. Mrs. Jackson is a member of the Rebekahs, Banner Lodge, No. 52, she also has passed the chairs. Our subject and his wife are prominent people of Priest River and enjoy the regard and good will of all. They have one child.

THOMAS BENTON is one of the intrepid men who have taken the prospector's pick and pack and delved into the fastnesses of the remote regions, thus opening to less courageous ones the wealth of the mountains, and it is but right that to him should be granted great credit and praise for these worthy labors, which in reality are the opening of the country. Too little has been said in favor of such men, and much has been written of the great achievements of great companies. But let credit be where credit is due and we boldly say that no class of men have had the hardships to endure, the exceedingly arduous labors to perform, with more discouragements to meet and trying obstacles to overcome than the intrepid, courageous and noble men who go forth single handed to meet and overcome in nature's wilds.

Thomas Benton was born in the vicinity of Fort Wayne, Indiana, on February 22, 1844, being the son of John and Mary (Bools) Benton, natives of North Carolina and Kentucky, respectively. They were married in Ohio, moved thence to Illinois, then to Iowa and afterwards to Missouri, where the father died in 1880. The mother then returned to Montgomery county, Iowa and lived with our subject until her death in 1886. Thomas was educated in Illinois, and when nineteen, enlisted in Company K, Sixteenth Illinois Cavalry, under Colonel Smith and Captain Gudnow. After a short time at Camp Butte, near Cincinnati, his company was taken to the front and with three other companies his was detailed for scout duty. He participated in the battle of Jonesville, Virginia, when five hundred noble men were numbered among the dead. He was captured, taken to Richmond, thence to Andersonville, then to Savannah, from there to Miles, Georgia, returned to Savannah and there he was paroled on November 25, 1864. Returning to Nashville, he joined his company and remained with them until he was discharged on August 25, 1865, being paid off in Chicago. He farmed for one year in Illinois, then went to Iowa where he worked in a mill at the wage of two dollars and fifty cents per day for nine years. In 1890 he came to Colfax, Washington, thence to Colville and soon we see him with the prospector's outfit in the mountains. Mr. Benton has a fine claim with a thousand dollars of development work which show up in good shape. He reached Priest River in 1890, and since that time, this has been his headquarters. Mr. Benton is road master and has been for some time. He also does a great deal of road contracting and now has a fifteen mile road to build, called the West Branch County road.

In 1868 Mr. Benton married Miss Mary, daughter of Bailey and Jane Cozad, natives of Kentucky, whence they came to Iowa, where they died.

On October 15, 1890, at Colfax, Mr. Benton was called to mourn the death of his beloved wife, and her remains sleep there to this day. She left the following children: John, married and living in British Columbia; Court, living in central Idaho; Nettie, wife of John Prator, in Priest River; Effie, wife of James Frator, in Priest River. Mr. Benton is a Republican in politics and is active in the interests of the county and all questions of import. He is a man of uprightness and integrity and commands the respect of all.

MAHLON P. JONES is one of the intelligent and industrious citizens of Priest River, where he is well known and highly respected, being a man of integrity and sound principles, always manifesting a genial spirit, and maintaining the good will of all who may know him.

Mahlon P. Jones was born in Emporium, Pennsylvania, on January 1, 1852, being the son of L. B. and Emeline (McCoy) Jones, natives of Vermont. The mother came to Pennsylvania in the early days and married there in the 'thirties. Mr. Jones was a railroad contractor and lumber dealer and in 1846, he removed his family to Pennsylvania, where he did lumbering and farming until the time of his death, which occurred in 1878, the mother having passed away in 1872. They left ten children, named as follows: Martha, wife of Ambrose Fuller, in Pennsylvania; Loren Maud, living in Pennsylvania; Byrun, married and living in Pennsylvania; Don, killed in the Civil war; Warren, married and operating an engine on the Great Northern; Mahlon P., the subject of this article; Alma, wife of Silas Wheaton in Pennsylvania; Jenette, wife of Phinome Ames, in Pennsylvania; Louisa, deceased, wife of John Bell, also in Pennsylvania; Gusta, deceased, wife of Forest Garett, deceased.

Our subject received a common schooling in his native place and then on account of failing eyes he was obliged to be content with that. When fifteen, he went into the woods and for twenty years he wrought at that labor. Then he spent five years in railroading, after which he made his way to the west, settling in Priest River. Here he railroaded for a time and then took charge of the railroad pumping station in Priest River and there he is engaged at this time. Mr. Jones has taken a homestead and improved it in good shape and his wife and daughter are operating a fruit and confectionery store in the Priest River. They are meeting with good success and are popular with the trade.

On December 24, 1880 Mr. Jones married Miss Elna Kaufmann and to them have been born the following named children: Elsa M., Eva E., Stanley W. and Warren P.

Mr. Jones is a member of the K. O. T. M., Spokane Tent, No. 15. He and his family are adherents of the Congregational church and they are highly respected people of the town.

HENRY KEYSER is one of the oldest pioneers of Kootenai county as well as having the distinction of being the man to open various sections of that county and adjacent ones, while in all his career he has shown forth the real frontier spirit of progress and courage. An account of his life fittingly is placed in this volume and will be acceptable reading to all.

Henry Keyser was born in Hochstadt, Germany, on January 6, 1839, being the son of John and Elizabeth (Heider) Keyser, natives of Saxony, Germany. They were wealthy people of that country and the father died in 1892 and the mother in 1891. Our subject studied in the public schools until fourteen and in 1857, he came to America. He worked for three years in Chautauqua county, New York and then removed to Illinois in 1860, and the following year enlisted in the Fox River company which was later changed to the Thirty-sixth Illinois Volunteers. There being too many men, he was sent home and then got a pass from secretary Seward to go to Germany but was unable to get out of the country until 1866, when he went to help his mother in that country. Mr. Keyser still has the pass. Returning to the United States, he located in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and then went to Kendall county, Illinois. In 1871 he went to San Francisco, Portland, and then to Walla Walla, where he hired a team and drove to Rathdrum, finding Mr. Post the only settler there, Messrs. Still and Newman being respectively five miles west from Rathdrum and on Newman lake. After one year's work for Mr. Post, Mr. Keyser removed to Spokane and took a squatter's right on the land where Union Park is now located. J. Scranton and James Downing were the oldest settlers of that now populous city and Mr. Keyser came next. The former men sold to J. Glover. Mr. Keyser has the distinction of having the first white child born into his family that was born in Rathdrum and the Indians were especially proud of that child. In 1874 Mr. Keyser sold out and removed to Trent where he took land and remained for fifteen years. In 1889 he removed to Priest river and located a homestead and to this he has added betimes by purchase until his estate is now four hundred and forty-six acres of good land. He has fine buildings, as barns, outbuildings, residences, and so forth. He raises considerable hay and handles about one hundred head of cattle each year, turning off about thirty annually. Mr. Keyser has the distinction of starting the town of Priest River. In 1902 he built a business block in the town, also he has a residence there which he rents, and he is in the mercantile business in town, in addition to his farm and stock.

In 1869 Mr. Keyser married Miss Emma Eresch who died in 1883, at Spokane, Washington, leaving two children, Louisa, wife of Wenzel K. Koreis and living on Spokane Prairie, Washington; Malinda, the first white child born in Rathdrum, now married to M. Bonne, at Latah, Washington. In 1885 Mr. Keyser married Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Fuschs, natives of Germany, and now living on Spokane Prairie, Washington. To this union three children have been born, Henry J., Anna, and John. Mr. Keyser is liberal in politics. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 67, at Priest River. He and his wife are members of the Catholic church and they are highly respected people.

KRESZENZ KRAMER. This well known and enterprising business woman is deserving of especial mention in this volume of Kootenai county's history since she is one whose labors have accomplished much for the upbuilding of the country, and her integrity, sound principles and unswerving loyalty to right have given her the untrammeled admiration and esteem of all who may have the pleasure of her acquaintance.

Mrs. Kramer was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, on February 25, 1862, being the daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Kolb) Fusches, natives of Germany, coming to America in the fall of 1884, whither this daughter had come in the earlier part of the year. They now live on Spokane prairie and own nine hundred acres of land, handle much stock and are wealthy. Our subject received her education in the Sisters schools until fourteen years and then attended Sunday school for four years. After leaving the academy, she worked out until twenty-three, giving her wages to her parents. In 1886 she met Franz M. Kramer in Chicago and after their marriage they came to the Pend Orielle river, locating a farm, which she still owns. It was 1889 that they came here and soon after Mr. Kramer was taken sick and for ten years he was unable to work and the entire responsibility fell upon Mrs. Kramer and during this time she operated a wholesale butcher shop, supplying the north country and she did much of the slaughtering herself. Thus was her stability and courage manifested to meet the hardships and labors of life in this frontier country. Mr. Kramer died in 1902, leaving his widow and one child, Theresia, now going to school in Spokane at the Sisters academy. In 1902 Mrs. Kramer started a hotel in Priest River, which she is operating at the present time. The hotel is having a good patronage and is building up a fine business. In addition to this, Mrs. Kramer handles a nine hundred acre farm, which she owns three and one-half miles up the Priest river. This fine estate has one hundred acres under cultivation and Mrs. Kramer handles about fifty head of cattle annually. Mrs. Kramer is a member of the Catholic church and is a stanch supporter of the faith. Mrs. Kramer has the respect and esteem of all and she has manifested a truly noble and courageous spirit in the conduct of her business and in bearing up against the hardships and labors that have fallen to her lot. It manifests great skill and good business ability that in all of this she has won a success that would do credit to a first class financier and it is all due to her good management and fine practical judgment coupled with executive force and wisdom. On August 11, 1902, Mrs. Kramer married Mr. Samuel Rowsell and they now live on their farm.

WILLIAM E. REINHART, who in partnership with his brother is operating a sawmill on the Northern Pacific, is one of the industrious young men of the county and is accomplishing a good work in his enterprise, having always demonstrated himself to be capable, upright, and dominated by sagacity.

William E. Reinhart was born in Faribault, Minnesota, September 19, 1872, being the son of William D. and Emaline (Smith) Reinhart, who are mentioned in this work. William was educated in Minnesota and Dakota, having come to the latter state in 1880. In 1888 he came to Kootenai county, Idaho, and since that time has identified himself with the interests and development of the county in a very efficient and becoming manner. He and his brother were the owners and operators of a threshing outfit for many years and in 1900 they erected their present mill, which is a first-class plant of fifteen thousand feet capacity. They are occupied most of the time in sawing ties for the Northern Pacific and are doing a good business. Mr. Reinhart is a man of excellent standing and has friends from every quarter. He is active in the realm of politics and is an independent thinker.

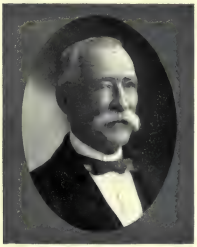
LOUIS CHAMBARD. In energy, sagacity, enterprise, courage and geniality, together with uprightness, the subject of this sketch stands exceptionally well among his fellows, being a man whose labors have been felt to the remotest parts of the county and one who has done much for its upbuilding.

Louis Chambard was born in Fayette, Fulton county, Ohio, on January 27, 1855, the son of Peter F. and Irene (Baker) Chambard, natives respectively of France and New York. The father came to America in 1835, locating in Wayne county, Ohio, and he still lives in Fayette, that state, at the age of eighty. The mother died in Fayette in 1878, being buried there. Our subject was educated in the common schools of his native place and then spent two years in Cornell University. He worked in a grocery and in other capacities about six years and then married and settled to farming. It was 1887 that he came to Kootenai county and took a homestead three miles east from Rathdrum, also purchasing a quarter of school land. This is the family home today and it is well improved with good buildings and residence, and grain and hay are the principal crops. Mr. Chambard has a good orchard, a number of cattle and various other property. In the Buffalo Hump excitement he took a leading part in the opening of the country, building the first house in the camp and now owns good property there. Mr. Chambard has the distinction of being the real originator of the Populist party in he county, being the first central committee chairman and doing much to get the movement started. He received the nomination for county treasurer against Frank O. Hill, but as the county is Republican he was defented by a small majority. Again, in 1896, he was nominated against John C. Callahan, who was a man of both the old parties, and Mr. Chambard was beaten by only sixty votes. Mr. Chamberd was also the moving spirit in the organization of district fifteen, of which he has for a long time been director.

It was in 1882 that Mr. Chambard and Miss Emma, daughter of Fred and Amanda (Herrick) Allen, natives of Ohio, the father deceased, but the mother still living in Kenton, Ohio, were united in marriage, and to them have been born two children: Fredrick B., going to school in Rathdrum; Kittie L., going to district school. Mr. Allen is buried at Swanton, Ohio, having been dead some time. Mr. Chambard is a member of the K. of P., Panhandle Lodge No. 13, and his wife is a member of the Rathbone Sisters, Syringa Temple No. 4. Mr. Chambard is one of the leading and prominent men of the county and is highly esteemed wherever he is known.

SAMUEL L. SMITH. Numbered among the leading citizens of Kootenai county is the subject of this aricle, and his family home is on a fine farm two miles south from Rathdrum, where he has made a commendable showing, having an excellent house, commodious barn and out buildings, with an orchard of sixteen hundred trees of all varieties of fruits that grow to perfection in this climate. Mr. Smith is one of the leading men of the county and popular in every way. This is evidenced, as in 1890 he was nominated on the Republican ticket for county commissioner and in every precinct he received a handsome majority, swelling his total majority to a fine showing. He has been justice of the peace, being the first incumbent of that office in Rathdrum. In his business career, Mr. Smith has been enterprising, dominated with sagacity and vigor and has gained a good success.

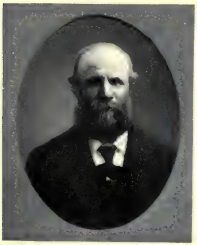
Reverting more particularly to his personal history, we note that he was born in Tioga county, New York, on June 15, 1832, being the son of Selah and Sally (Roggers) Smith, natives respectively of Connecticut and Maine. They married and lived in New York, where the father was known as Squire Smith, being a prominent man of his section. He was a farmer and lumberman and is buried in Tioga county, New York, while the mother rests in Dodge county, Wisconsin. Our subject studied in the public schools and then entered the New York Central College, at the age of seventeen. He studied a time there and then a maiden stole his heart and he dropped the dry books and got married. He then taught school and also writing school for four years and then went to railroading. He continued at this for thirty-



WILLIAM E. REINHART.

MRS. LOUIS CHAMBARD.

LOUIS CHAMBARD.



SAMUEL L. SMITH.

MRS. SAMUEL L. SMITH.

JOHN H. DANNER.

THOMAS N. FEELY.

MRS. THOMAS N. FEELY.

ERNEST E. REINHART.

five years, running on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St Paul, then took the first company train into Cheyenne, Wyoming, in 1867, and the next year the first train into Laramie. Then we find him on the railroads in Wisconsin, then on the Union Pacific, then on the Northern Pacific, and in 1884 he invested his hard earnings, which amounted to more than nine thousand dollars, and in September, of the same year, all was burned to the ground. Mr. Smith determined not to be thwarted in this line and so went to work and took a homestead where he now lives, the same having been the scene of his labors since. He made a good record on the road, being one of the most trustworthy men in the service, and now he is enjoying the second fortune that he has wrought out.

The marriage of Mr. Smith and Sarah L. Purdy was solemnized in 1851, and she died in 1858, and was buried in Dodge county, Wisconsin, leaving two children, Sarah F., married to S. M. Lehmer, of Cheyenne; Lottie, wife of Ames Halley, of Rapid City, South Dakota. In 1862 Mr. Smith married Jeanette Herrick, daughter of Job and Hannah (Cummings) Herrick, natives respectively of Connecticut and Vermont. The father is buried in Lawrenceville, Pennsylvania, and the mother in Dodge county, Wisconsin. To this happy union there have been born seven children, named as follows: Maud, wife of A. D. Robinson, living in Spokane; Carroll, married to Mary Woods, living in Hot Springs, South Dakota; S. Burton, married to Cora Watters, living in Ouray, Colorado; Lulu N., married to Monroe Kanouse, living in Madison, Wisconsin; Stella E., wife of C. L. Heitman, in Rathdrum; Addie, wife of F. B. Allbaugh, in Spokane; Halley R., at home. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are members of the Presbyterian church, and they are worthy citizens and have an enviable standing in the community. Mr. Smith is a stanch Republican and was one of the organizers of that party in his home town in Wisconsin, in 1858.

JOHN H. DANNER. This enterprising young gentleman is one of the substantial and influential citizens of Kootenai county, and is at present handling a farm two and one-half miles east from Postfalls, which is the family home at this time.

John H. Danner was born in Ionia, Michigan, on September 30, 1866, being the son of Simon and Christinia C. (Heydlauff) Danner, natives respectively of Pennsylvania and Michigan, their parents being natives of Germany. They came to this country in 1837 and settled in Michigan when it was a territory. Our subject's father was a farmer in Ionia county, and had one of the finest farms in the entire state. He died in 1897 and the mother is conducting the estate now. John H. gained his primary training from the common schools and then went to Poucher Business College, graduating therefrom in 1889. He then came west to Postfalls and worked at carpenter work for a time and in 1892, went to Chicago College of Pharmacy, but on account of failing health, he was obliged to forego the course that he had expected to take, and in 1895 he came back to Postfalls. He bought eighty acres from the railroad company and at once went to improving it. He moved on to the place in 1898, and he has it well improved now. He has a good house, fine barn, poultry house, a good orchard, one-half acre to berries, and the place well fenced and cross fenced. He also has ten head of cattle and horses sufficient for the operation of the farm. Mr. Danner also has some property in Postfalls.

On December 29, 1890, Mr. Danner married Miss Soviah H., daughter of George W. and Hattie (Dill) Knox, natives of Maine. They came west to Spokane, Washington, in 1887, and now live at Zillah, Washington. To Mr. and Mrs. Danner there has been born one child, Robert E. Mr. Danner is actively interested in political matters, being allied with the Democrats. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Imperial Lodge No. 134, of Spokane; and of the M. W. A., Camp 7228, at Postfalls.

THOMAS N. FEELY. This gentleman is a good example of industry, thrift, and perseverance, and to these qualities, dominated by keen sagacity gained through practical experience, he owes his success, which is gratifying and substantial. He owns three hundred and twenty acres of good land, three miles south from Rathdrum, which is a model farm, being improved with fine residence, good barns, outbuildings and fences and so forth, while he has a fine orchard and two cisterns holding two hundred barrels each. Altogether his estate is not only a good dividend producer but is a comfortable and enjoyable rural abode. He has forty-five head of stock, sells about one hundred tons of oats each year, besides much hay and considerable other grain and farm products. He is one of the well-to-do and prosperous farmers of the county and is deserving of the prosperity that he enjoys, being always alert to care for his business and look after details.

Noticing the personal points of detail in his life we note that Mr. Feely was born on July 11, 1846, but was left an orphan at nine months of age and he knew but the hand of strangers to guide and shape his life. Umphry May raised him until eleven and then he went to work for James H. Garner, in the vicinity of Chicago, where he was born, and to this last man much credit is due, for Mr. Feely says, "He raised me and made a man of me." Ten years were spent with this good man and then young Feely went to Iowa. He had received but little schooling and has had to gain his knowledge by careful personal observation and digging in the books alone. He worked eleven years in Iowa and married Miss Alice M. Kemp in 1875. She was raised by an uncle and knows but little of her parents, so when this worthy couple started out in life it was pretty well alone and they had learned to prize a good home. Mr. Feely rented land in Iowa and then bought eighty acres in Shelby county, and two years later sold it and came to Washington. He located at Rockford on a homestead, where he was for eight years. Then he sold and came to Kootenai county. He located first on the Pend Oreille river and for five years tried the stock business, but not being successful, he came to Rathdrum prairie and rented land. Later he bought his place described above and he has gained his present holding by his faithful labor and wise management. To Mr. and Mrs. Feely there have been born eleven children, named as follows: James J., Charles W., Clarence H., Effie L., Irvin E., Gracy G., Adda A., Corbon P., Austin L., Guy R. and Irma G. All are single and live at home or in the vicinity.

ERNEST E. REINHART is a promoter of substantial industries in Kootenai county, having been handling a steam thresher for some time, while also he has a fine sawmill six miles east from Rathdrum, and also gives considerable attention to lumbering in the woods. He is one of the first-class men of the vicinity, has done good work and is held in esteem and approval by all the people, having displayed both commendable characteristics in the business world, while his integrity and uprightness are manifest to all.

Ernest E. was born in Pine Island, Minnesota, on August 3, 1868, being the son of W. D. and Emeline (Smith) Reinhart, natives respectively of New York and Ohio. They came to Minnesota in 1860, remaining there until 1879. Then they removed to North Dakota and in 1888 they came to Kootenai county. They purchased two hundred acres of good land one and one-half miles east from Rathdrum, where they live now and where also are the headquarters of our subject. Ernest E. began his educational training in Pine Island and completed the same in Wilmot, South Dakota. He remained with his father until he was thirty years of age, then started threshing with his brother, which they have followed since that time. In 1900 they erected a mill known as the Reinhart sawmill, six miles east from Rathdrum. He employs eighteen men and cuts as high as forty thousand ties in one year, besides other lumber and timbers.

Mr. Reinhart is one of a large family of children, named as follows: Isabel, wife of H. E. Thompson, in Raleigh, North Carolina; William E.; Eva, wife of C. A. McDonaald, in Rathdrum; Cora, deceased; Myrtle, Ida, Delia, Gertie, Lila, Roy, Ethel, Vivian, and Ernest E., the subject of this sketch. Mr. Reinhart is a member of the I. O. O. F., Rathdrum Lodge No. 73. He is allied with the Democrats in political affairs and is keenly interested in the issues of that realm. He is a man of activity, good practical judgment, sound principles and has conducted himself in a becoming manner before his fellows.

CHANCEY EDWIN GUTHRIE. This young and enterprising farmer and stockman of the vicinity of Copeland is entitled to representation in the county history on account of his labors for upbuilding and improvement, because he is one of the substantial and reliable man of this section, and because he is possessed of integrity and sound principles.

Chancey Guthrie was born in Tama county, Iowa, on July 31, 1879, being the son of R. J. and Eliza J. (Poland) Guthrie, who are mentioned elsewhere in this volume. While our subject was still young he was taken with his family to Boulder, Montana, where he received a good high school education, graduating from that institution in 1897. Following that he was salesman in a store for two years and then he came to this county. He at once homesteaded the land where he is now located, one mile north from Copeland. He has a quarter section, half meadow and the balance upland. He has an orchard of two hundred and fifty trees and raises considerable stock.

In 1901 Mr. Guthrie married Miss Anna L., daughter of V. W. and Anna (Siverson) Washburn, mention of whom is made in this volume.

Mr. Guthrie is fraternally affiliated with the M. W. A. at Porthill and in this as among his fellows generally he stands well.

ARTHUR E. BUNTING. Among the earliest men to penetrate the wilds of the lower Kootenai valley, we must mention the esteemed gentleman whose name appears above. Mr. Bunting is one of the real pioneers of this country and has been one of the vigorous men whose labors have transformed it into the abode of civilization. He is of exceptionally good standing and is a man of sound principles and deserving of the encomiums of an appreciative people, which he enjoys in generous measure.

Arthur E. Bunting was born in Woodstock, New Brunswick, on December 29, 1855, being the son of Robert and Mary A. (Weatherbee) Bunting, natives of England and New Brunswick, respectively. They are mentioned in another portion of this volume. Our subject received a good common school education in his native place, remained on the farm with his father until twenty-one and then removed to Rat Portage, and thence, in 1884, to the Kootenai valley. He at once entered the employ of the well known pioneer, Richard Fry, as salesman in the latter's store. He soon occupied the position of general manager of the establishment, and remained thus employed for four years. Then he took a homestead where he now resides, one and one-fourth miles west from Bonners Ferry, it being the first homestead taken in this portion of the valley, and Mr. Bunting was the pioneer of the important industry of farming in the now wealthy and fertile valley of the Kootenai. He has a fine place, raises hay and handles stock and also raises considerable fruit.

In 1885 Mr. Bunting married Miss Christine, daughter of Richard and Jestine (Ira) Fry, especial mention of whom is made elsewhere in this volume. Mr. Fry was a thorough frontiersman in the true sense of the word and that means in addition to courage, physical powers of endurance, skill, wisdom and excellent practical judgment, a large heart and frankness, with a firm adherence to the principles of right. The mother of Mrs. Bunting is a descendant of the Colvilles and a beautiful romance attaches to her life in connection with her husband. His brother had been killed by the Indians and he was in great danger of being massacred, in fact, it was surely contemplated, and this faithful woman took a canoe and risking her own life, warned Mr. Fry of the impending danger and thus he fled and saved his life. He sought the noble woman who had thus befriended him and soon made her his wife. Mrs. Bunting is the oldest daughter of Mr. Fry and she accompanied her father on many trips in the wildness of the country and has seen all the hardships and dangers of real pioneer life. Mr. and Mrs. Bunting are among the leaders in this section and are prominent people, while their worth and integrity are well known to all. They are members of the Episcopal church.

GEORGE B. WHITNEY. One of the leading farmers and stockmen in the vicinity of Copeland, a man of intelligence and enterprise, this subject is accorded representation in the history of his county and we append an epitome of his career.

George B. Whitney was born in Marshall, Michigan to Kootenai valley in 1891. The father located and Ida (Ansley) Whitney, who came from Michigan, to Kootenai valley in 1891. The father located on a homestead in the valley and in 1898, he removed to Porthill and is now engaged in operating a hotel there. Our subject received his first educational training in his native place and then graduated in 1886, from the Detroit Business University. He came to this valley in 1891, located on unsurveyed land, which proved to belong to the railroad, and then he bought it and homesteaded another piece. In addition to this half section, he owns in company with his father another quarter, making him a fine estate of four hundred acres. This land is devoted to general farm products, hay and the pasture of stock. Mr. Whitney owns and handles from twenty-five to fifty head of stock. He is a man of enterprise and is counted one of the substantial men of the valley.

In 1896 Mr. Whitney married Miss Nellie T., daughter of Volney and Anna (Siverson) Washburn, natives of New York and Norway, respectively. Mrs. Washburn came from Norway with her father in 1852, aged twelve, and met her husband in Illinois. After marriage they came west in 1884 and after a decade in Wardner, they removed to Kootenai valley, where they now live. Mr. and Mrs. Whitney are the parents of two children, one of whom is living, Hazel L. Mr. Whitney enjoys the good will and confidence of his fellows and is to be credited with much done to improve and develop this country. He is a man of energy and has labored with assiduity and real perseverance since coming here.

GEORGE E. ANDREWS is one of the leading men of the vicinity of Copeland, being located about two miles north from the village and the proprietor of seven hundred and sixty acres of fine meadow and upland. This fine estate is the acquisition of his skillful and well bestowed labors, and is handled in a becoming manner. Mr. Andrews is personally a man possessed of a genial and affable spirit, dominated with a wisdom and keen perception which place him among the best financiers of the valley and he numbers his friends from every quarter.

George E. Andrews was born in Exeter, Maine, on April 2, 1867, being the son of Elkana and Subrina (Whitaker) Andrews, also natives of Maine. The mother died in 1880, and the father the following year. Our subject was thus early left to his own resources. He had received a good schooling at Levant, whither the family had removed after his birth, and thus fortified, he went forth to do for himself. He wrought in the saw mills and spool factories for five years and then spent two years in a pulp mill. It was in 1892 that he came to the west, locating first in Spokane, whence two years later he came to his present place. He purchased railroad land, and then added continually each year more by purchase, also taking a homestead, until he has the mammoth estate mentionel above. He cuts about three hundred tons of hay annually, raises one hundred head of cattle and does a general farming business. Mr. Anderson has manifested his skill and ability in the management of his interests here and is one of the leading spirits of the valley.

In 1901 Mr. Andrews married Miss Maggie J., daughter of Malcolm and Izabella (Roberts) Gillis, mention of whom is made in this volume, elsewhere, and to this happy union one child has been born, George W. Mr. Andrews is a member of the I. O. O. F. at Milo, Maine. He is a man whose life commands the respect of all and he has done very much for the advancement of the interests of this country.

JOHN CALDWELL is one of the men who has recently been attracted to the fertile valley of the Kootenai, where he is now located on a homestead, about two miles northeast from Copeland. Mr. Caldwell is one of the substantial men of the valley, has demonstrated his ability and shown marked integrity and real worth of character and is held in high esteem by his fellows.

John Caldwell was born in Rochester, New York, on February 16, 1867, being the son of Joseph and Sarah (McClain) Caldwell, natives of Ireland and Scotland, respectively. They came to America when young and lived in New York state for forty years. Then they went to Manitoba, in 1898, where the father died in 1899, the mother preceding him. Our subject was raised in Rochester, and there gained a good city schooling and at the age of sixteen went to do for himself. He went to Michigan and engaged on the railroad. He fired for two years then operated an engine for five years, holding positions on the Duluth and Lake Shore, and Northern Pacific. Later he went to North Dakota and acted as expert for the Doyle & Smith Threshing Machine Company. In 1898, we find him in Lewiston in a similar position for the W. Codd company. He then came to the Kootenai valley and freighted for the construction of the K. V. railroad after which he took his present farm as a homestead. He handles some stock, puts up hay, does a general farming business, and is making a good orchard. Mr. Caldwell has done well in improving his farm and is one of the enterprising men of the valley. He is a member of the M. W. A. at Port Hill, being banker and manager of the Camp, and he is also Camp lecturer. Mr. Caldwell is still in the thraldom of bachelordom, being content with its quieter joys rather than the uncertainty of the matrimonial sea. He is a man who is entitled to the respect of his fellows and it is but right to say that in a generous measure he enjoys it as well as the admiration and good will of all.

MALCOLM GILLIS. It is a pleasure for us to grant to the esteemed and capable gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph, a representation in the history of his county, since he has done much for the development of the same, has maintained an untarnished reputation and is one of the public minded and stable men of the Kootenia valley.

Malcolm Gillis was born in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, on February 15, 1854, being the son of Archie and Catherine (McKinnon) Gillis, natives of Cape Breton, where they still reside on a farm. Our subject has two uncles who are editors of literary journals in Scotland, one cousin who is a member of the parliament from North Territory and another cousin who is editor of the Scotch Echo, in Sidney, Cape Breton. Our subject received a common schooling in his native place and he remained with his parents until he was twenty-seven years old. Then he railroaded in Nova Scotia for three years, after which he followed the same business in Winnepeg for three years. Returning to Nova Scotia, he bought land and farmed for fourteen years. His next move was to Colorado, where he mined six years and then we find him in Kablo, British Columbia, acting on the police force. He was on the Crow's Nest Pass railroad for two years and in 1899, he came to the Kootenai valley and after one year on the railroad, he located his present place, two miles north from Copeland. To this land he added one hundred and twenty acres of meadow land and he handles stock, putting up the hay on this land for them. Mr. Gillis is active in political matters and in Cape Breton he was county commissioner for five years and in Kaslo was a member of the police force.

In 1882, Mr. Gillis married Miss Isabella, daughter of Duncan and Margaret (McDonald) Robertson, natives of Capt Breton, where they still live. To this happy union there have been born four children, John A., living in Coeur d' Alene; Maggie J., wife of George E. Andrews, in Kootenai valley; Annie and Collin H., both at home with their parents. Our subject and his estimable wife are members of the Presbyterian church and are reliable and highly respected citizens, being esteemed by all.

CHARLES B. WILLIAMSON was born in Bergen, Norway, on December 14, 1847. His father was a merchant near that place. The son was educated in Bergen and then went to sea, which he followed four years, commencing as a green hand and working up to the position of first mate. In this arduous undertaking, he manifested great skill and talent and worthily gained the prominent position on board ship which he held at the time he quit the sea. He has personally visited every port of any importance in the known world and has had great experience among all nations. In this long seafaring life, Mr. Williamson had many thrilling adventures and some exciting times. Dangers of all kinds have confronted him and hardships have been endured. Once on the coast of France, while sailing in a Norwegian vessel, he suffered shipwreck with total loss of the ship. Once on the coast of Oregon, he was wrecked. This last occurence was in 1884 and he was sailing in the steamer Victoria. At this juncture, Mr. Williamson determined to quit the dangerous life of the sea, and so came to Riparia, Washington, and there went to herding sheep. Thence he came to his present location, two miles above Emida, on Santa creek, where he took a homestead and commenced to raise stock. Mr. Williamson had never been favored with any experience in this enterprise and therefore he had much to contend with, but despite all that, he has gone forward with great wisdom and has been successful. He has a fine holding of stock, owns a quarter section of good land, mostly timothy land and has eighty acres of timber land. Mr. Williamson began his land career with but little of this world's goods, but has now increased until he is one of the substantial men of this community.

THOMAS F. WILLIAMSON, who is now numbered among the prosperous farmers of the Saint Mary's river valley, lives one mile southeast from Emida, where he has a quarter section, which he secured by homestead right and which is improved and made into a model farm, producing large quantities of timothy. Thomas F. Williamson was born near Bergen, Norway, on November 8, 1850, being a descendant of the fearless Vikings of historic fame. The father was a merchant and this son was reared and educated in his native place. When fifteen years of age he was apprenticed to a ship building company to learn the machinist's trade, completing the term when he was twenty-one. Then he took a position in the merchant marine as fireman and by his close attention to business and merit he won by steady degrees the responsible position of assistant chief engineer and in this capacity he served for six years, visiting nearly every known port of any importance in the world. Then he left the sea and came to New York, taking a position as machinist, resigning six months later to accept a position with the Northwestern line as expert in their engine shops. Sixteen months later we see him in Carthage, Missouri, in charge of the engine department of the Cartage woolen mills. After the mills burned down he went to the Indian Territory and was engineer on the M. K. & T. line, where he remained until he came west. Mr. Williamson visited Portland first then bought the ferry at Eureka, Washington, which he operated for a year. Selling at that time he came to his present place and took the homestead mentioned and since Mr. Williamson has devoted himself exclusively to improving and handling his farm. He has the place well stocked and receives annual returns in abundant crops, principally timothy. Mr. Williamson has manifested great wisdom and industry in his labors and in the good work of making his land a valuable farm and he is to be congratulated on his success. He is one of the substantial and popular men of the neighborhood and is in first-class standing.

CHARLES B. WILLIAMSON.

THOMAS F. WILLIAMSON.

JAMES H. GUTHRIE. This substantial and well to do agriculturist and stockman has a good estate one mile north from Copeland, where he is engaged in general farming and raising stock and also does dairying. He is a man of energy and good ability and has made worthy achievements since he settled in this county.

James H. Guthrie was born in Iowa City, Johnson county, Iowa, on February 6, 1863, being the son of R. J. and Eliza J. (Poland) Guthrie, natives of Ohio and West Virginia, respectively. They came to Iowa in 1852 and later lived in Montana for sixteen years and then came to this valley, where they now reside. They were the parents of thirteen children, six of whom are living. James H. received a good common school education in his native place and remained with his parents until he was seventeen years old and then went to work on the neighboring farms. He remained thus engaged for five years when he removed to Boulder, Montana, and there served one year as apprentice in a blacksmith shop. After that, he did contracting for ties, lumber and so forth with his brother. In 1891, they came to the Kootenai valley and engaged in the butcher business. Later he bought out his brother and took W. A. Nail as partner, conducting the shop until April, 1902. In May, 1892, Mr. Guthrie located the quarter section where he now resides, and since that time he has continually been adding improvements and now has a fine farm. Part is meadow and part is upland. He has a fine orchard and raises about thirty head of cattle.

In 1894, Mr. Guthrie married Miss Martha A., daughter of V. N. and Anna (Sievert) Washburn, natives of New York and Norway, respectively. The mother came from Norway with her father, her mother having died in that country. The father later came to Kootenai valley and died here in 1901. To Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie there have been born five children, Chaney E., Della R., James H., Eliza J., William R. Mr. Guthrie is a member of the M. W. A. of Porthhill. He is not connected with any church but practices the rule of doing to others as you would wish them to do by you.

MARION GUTHRIE. Among those who have opened the way into the wilderness of nature in the Kootenai valley portion of our county, we are constrained to mention the estimable and industrious young man whose name is at the head of this article. He dwells adjacent to the village of Copeland, where he is improving a piece of land which he has taken with his homestead right from the government.

Marion Guthrie was born in Tama county, Iowa, on February 17, 1870, being the son of R. J. and Eliza J. (Poland) Guthrie, natives of Ohio and Virginia, respectively. The mother came to Ohio when young, then she and her husband came to Iowa. Thence they went to Montana, where they dwelt for sixteen years and in 1899 they came to the Kootenai valley, where they now reside, being with their son, the subject of this article. Marion received the beginning of his education in Iowa and after the move to Montana, he was favored with four years of good training in the public schools. He has always remained with his parents, being thus far in his career content to quietly follow the celebatarian's life, rather than venture on the matrimonial sea. He does considerable traveling in the course of his labors, having been twice to Oregon in the last year. Upon coming to the valley, Mr. Guthrie took land which later proved to be an Indian allotment, and then he took the land where he now resides adjoining the town of Copeland. In addition to this, he and his brother have bargained for four hundred acres of railroad land. Mr. Guthrie has four brothers and one sister, M. J., living in Union, Oregon; John W., living in Montana; Emma B., wife of Perry Tefft, of Boulder, Montana; Henry, living in Copeland; Chaney E., in Copeland. Mr. Guthrie takes an active interest in the questions of the day and is allied with the Democrats in political matters.

HENRY R. EDWARDS is one of the younger men whose labors are developing the fine natural resources of Kootenai county and he is an industrious and upright citizen, his home being one and one half miles north from Bonners Ferry, where he has a fine piece of timber. He is devoting his energies to its improvement, also placing on the market ties, poles, and so forth.

Henry R. Edwards was born in Woodbury county, Iowa, on March 14, 1872, being the son of John J. and Harriet (Said) Edwards, who removed to South Dakota in 1901, where they reside now. They were the parents of twelve children, eleven of whom are still living, named as follows: Mary, wife of John Keegan, in South Dakota; Matlida, wife of James Richards, in Iowa; John M., single, living in South Dakota; Lizzie B., single and also living in South Dakota; Edgar, there also; Bessie; Raymond; Rosemond; Cyrus; Christian; Henry, the immediate subject of this article. Henry received a good common schooling in Iowa, utilizing the winters for that training while his summers were spent in vigorous exercise on the farm with his father. When he reached his majority, he rented a farm in Woodbury county for two years, but success did not crown his efforts as he desired, and so he went to work by the month, continuing in that line until 1899. In that year he determined to see the west for himself and accordingly set out. He landed in Kootenai county in due time and after proper exploration and investigation, he settled on his present farm. To the improvement and clearing of this, he has devoted himself since that time and is one of the respected and promising citizens of this wealthy county.

It is interesting as a reminiscence that Mr. Edwards' maternal grandfather was a prisoner in the Black Hawk war. His mother had two brothers in the Civil war and his father had many relatives in the same conflict.

JAMES A. GRAHAM. Two and one-half miles east from Porthill lives the subject of this article. Mr. Graham has shown the spirit and sturdy qualities of the real pioneer, has hewed his home out of the forests of nature and has made all the improvements of his place with his own hands. This land was taken as a homestead from the government. It was not his first choice, however, as he settled in 1891 on an unsurveyed quarter, but finding later that it was railroad land, he vacated it and took the present place. Mr. Graham does general farming, raises some stock and pays considerable attention to fruit. He is one of the intelligent and influential men of the community, is always active and takes an interest in the affairs of government and local matters. Mr. Graham finds the Democratic party to be more nearly allied with his views than any other and therefore he is numbered among them. He was a delegate to the county convention at Coeur d'Alene this past year and is always found in the ranks working with zeal and enthusiasm.

Reverting more to his early history we note that James A. Graham was born in Blanket Hill, Pennsylvania, on April 16, 1854, being the son of William and Catherine (Blaney) Graham, also natives of the same place, where they remained until the time of their death. The mother passed away in 1871 and the father followed in 1894. The grandfather of our subject was a veteran of the war of 1812. James received a good country schooling in the native place and remained with his parents until he was twenty-two. Then he migrated to Illinois and toiled on a farm for a couple of years, after which he traveled over the entire south. Not finding the country to his fancy, he came to Ogden, Utah, in 1878. Later he was in Helena, Montana, until 1883, and then found his way to Coeur d'Alene in the time of the gold excitement. There he prospected until 1886 and then came to Kootenai county. He labored there and in Washington until 1891 and then settled on the land as stated above.

In fraternal affiliations Mr. Graham is united with the I. O. O. F. Mr. Graham has four sisters and five brothers and the following ones are living: Nancy J., wife of W. A. Blose, in Blanket Hill; Margaret J., wife of W. J. McConal, in Minnesota; William A., married and residing in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; David A., also married and dwelling in the same place; Joseph B., in Kalispell, Montana; Harry A., in Kootenai valley.

HENRY WANDEL lives five miles east from Porthill on a farm that he took in 1898 as a homestead and which he has improved with his own labors until he has a fine orchard and a comfortable home. Mr. Wandel has always manifested industry, thrift and wise management that are characteristic of his race and the result is that he is one of the prosperous and substantial citizens of our county who has won and retains the good will and esteem of all who know him.

Henry Wandel was born in Beyran, Germany, on May 17, 1870, being the son of Joseph and Anna (Buckberger) Wandel, natives of the fatherland where they remained until the father died in 1883. The mother is now retired and lives in Beyran, aged seventy years. Our subject received his education from the schools of his home place and remained with his parents until he was twenty and then entered the army, serving two years. In 1893 he cut all restraints that bound him and made his way to America, locating in Chicago for four months. Then he went to northern Wisconsin and for seven years he was occupied there. It was in 1898 that he made his way to Kootenai county and the advantages offered here led him to take a homestead as stated above. During the years since that time, Mr. Wandel has devoted himself with assiduity and enterprise to make a good farm and a comfortable home from the wilds of the new country and he is to be credited with much worthy labor accomplished. He also handles some stock.

In 1895 Mr. Wandel married Miss Mary, daughter of Albert and Maggie Colbach, natives of Germany and Wisconsin, respectively. The father came to America in 1865 and located in Wisconsin and he and his wife remain there until this time. To Mr. and Mrs. Wandel there have been born three children, Henry, Joseph, Rudolph. The family adhere to the Catholic church.

ROBERT BUNTING resides one-half mile west from Bonners Ferry, where he owns a fine farm and devotes himself to gardening and general farming. He is a man of integrity and good habits and stands well with all who know him.

Robert Bunting was born in Ashover, England, February 2, 1826, being the son of John and Mary (Cook)

Bunting, natives also of England. The father was a tailor and conducted a business there until the time of his death, which was in 1887, the mother passing away in 1890. Our subject learned his trade and also attended school in his younger days. When twenty the father gave him the opportunity to go for himself, wishing him well in his labors. From that day forward Mr. Bunting has been actively engaged in business and has done well. He farmed for a time in England and in 1850 came to Canada, settling in New Brunswick, where he was an industrious citizen until 1880. In that year he came to Rat Portage, Ontario, continuing there for nineteen years. It was 1899 that he came to the Kootenai valley, locating on his present farm. He owns forty acres of fine garden land and is doing a good business.

In 1851 Mr. Bunting married Miss Mary A., daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Wright) Weatherbee, natives of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, respectively. They came to the United States in 1848, locating in Boston, Massachusetts, where both died. Mrs. Bunting has two brothers who were in the Civil war, one of them being lieutenant. Mr. and Mrs. Bunting have become the parents of ten children, named as follows: John S., married and living in New Brunswick; Arthur E., married and residing in this valley; Mary E., deceased; James R., married and living in Rat Portage; William H., living with parents; Alice, deceased; Annie E., wife of Nelson McCracken, in Seattle; Benjamin T., deceased; Evelin, deceased; Aubrey A., maried and living in this valley.

Mr. Bunting has always taken an active part in local politics. He and his estimable wife belong to the Episcopalian church and are devout supporters of the faith. Mr. Bunting has a good home place provided with good buildings and fitted in an excellent manner, everything displaying good taste and thrift. The golden years of his life are now beginning to run apace and he is secure in the esteem and confidence of all who know him.

RUDOLPH DRAVES is one of the agriculturists and stockmen of the county of Kootenai, his home and farm being three miles east from Porthill, where he has good improvements and is prospering. His birth occurred in Mishicot, Wisconsin, on May 11, 1858, his parents being Fred and Annie Draves, natives of Germany. They came to the United States in 1852, locating in Mishicot, and in 1861 the father enlisted in the Civil war, where he did brave and faithful service for three years. After the war he worked in the saw mills for fifteen years and then bought eighty acres of land which he has farmed since, both he and his wife living there now. There were the following children in the family: Henry, married and dwelling in Mishicot; Richard also married and living there; Josephine, married to August Stick, living in Cooperstown, Wisconsin; Rudolph, the immediate subject of this article; August, married and living in Mishicot; Otto, married and living in Cooperstown, Wisconsin; Annie, married and living in Mishicot. Our subject was educated in the common schools of Mishicot and remained with his parents until he was seventeen and then he learned the harness trade. Three years were spent in this and then he went to Medford, Wisconsin, and there wrought in a harness shop and a saw mill for four years. Selling out there he went to Eagle river, into the lumber woods. He also worked as cruiser for seven years for a company and then later kept a hotel. At Tomahawk lake he kept a hotel for four years and in 1897 came west. He located in Porthill and in the fall of the same year took up his present home place as a homestead. In addition to other industries he is raising many flocks of different varieties of poultry, wherein he is successful.

Mr. Draves married Miss Frances Buckbager, a native of Germany. He takes part in political matters and while in Wisconsin he served as road supervisor for three years, and also as assessor, when in Eagle river. Mr. Draves and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church.

JOSEPH SMITH. The list of early pioneers to the lower Kootenai valley would not be complete without mention of this esteemed gentleman, whose labors have been wisely bestowed in the development of this country and the advancing of his own business interests.

Joseph Smith was born in Canada in 1848, being the son of Prespere and Harriett (Jollie) Smith, natives of Canada, where they remained until their death. The father was an engineer on a steamboat from Montreal to Quebec. Our subject was educated in the schools of his native place and at the age of fourteen years he started from the parental home and made his way to the United States. He went to Massachusetts and worked in a shoe factory for ten years. In 1878 he came thence to California and there wrought at his trade and driving team until 1886, when he came to Spokane. Farming occupied him for a couple of years and then he took one hundred head of cattle from a stockman on shares. Each was to have half at the end of five years. The first winter was disastrous, as it was hard and scanty feed could be cut. Mr. Smith was forced to face the hardship of seeing many of his cattle die. However, he began to prosper after that but the stockman with whom he dealt came and took two hundred and fifty head of stock in three years from the beginning of their deal and two years later came and took the entire number, two hundred and fifty, remaining. Thus Mr. Smith was left with but one lame cow and all his work and hard labor was stolen by another. He did not lose courage, but went to work putting up hay and getting stock as he could and he prospered well, for last year he sold forty head. He has some stock left, owns nearly three hundred acres of land, raises hay and also does a general farming business and raises fruit. Mr. Smith is one of the substantial men of the community and has always manifested good industry and worthy qualities. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. at Porthill and also of the M. W. A. of the same place. In church relations he is an adherent of the Catholic church and is a constant communicant.

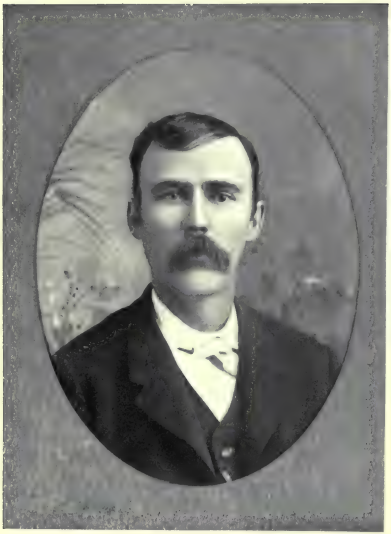
VOLNEY W. WASHBURN, deceased. It is quite fitting that a memorial of the distinguished citizen of our county whose name appears above should be granted space in this volume of history since he was one whose labors accomplished much in the development of the country and who was a leader among his fellows.

Volney W. Washburn was born in New York on June 15, 1849, being the son of Luman and Temperan (Horton) Washburn, natives of New York. They removed thence to Illinois and later to Iowa, where they died. Our subject received a common school education and at the age of fourteen enlisted in Company G, Twenty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was honorably discharged on October 10, 1865. Returning to Illinois after the war he worked out until twenty-one and then married. In 1879 he removed to Grant county, Dakota, and in 1881 to Ottertail county, Minnesota. It was 1886 that the family all came to Wardner, Idaho, and nine years were spent there. In 1894 he came to this valley and located on railroad land where the widow now resides, two miles north from Copeland. The estate consists of two hundred and eighty acres of good land, fine buildings, good orchards and stock sufficient for the place. On August 24, 1901, Mr. Washburn died, and he was sincerely mourned through the entire valley as he was a good man and had scores of friends.

The marriage of Mr. Washburn and Miss Anna Siverson, daughter of Sever and Martha (Olsen) Siverson, was solemnized in 1871. Mrs. Washburn's mother died in Norway, the native land, when this daughter was four years old. The father came to America and settled in Iowa, where he remained until the time of his death in 1902. Mrs. Washburn has one brother, Ole, in Iowa, and one sister, Anna, wife of William Girrard, near Fenan lake, in this county. To Mr. and Mrs. Washburn there have been born nine children, as follows: John L., with his moher; Noah H., married to Angeline Kerchival; Martha A., wife of H. Guthrie; Nellie T., wife of George B. Whitney; Annie L., wife of Chauncey Guthrie; Volney W., Bertha May, Harvey H. and Eva V., with their mother; the others are all living in the valley.

Mr. Washburn was a prominent member of the I. O. O. F., having been a noble grand and also organizer for the order. He was a Democrat in politics and active. In Dakota he was sheriff of Grant county and in Wardner he was constable, having also held this last office in Iowa. He was a man beloved by all and much credit is due him for the worthy labors he accomplished. Mrs. Washburn is nobly taking up the added burdens of life and has reared her children in the paths of good morals and she is highly respected by all.



JOSEPH ANDERSON. One of the younger men who are achieving success in raising stock and farming in the fertile Kootenai valley because of industry and thrift is named at the head of this article and it is right that to Mr. Anderson we should accord a special representation in the history of the county, for he has done much for the upbuilding and advancement of the county, being a substantial man and good citizen.

Joseph Anderson was born in Welland, Ontario, on February 10, 1872, being the son of James and Ellen (McGivney) Anderson, natives of Canada, where they are now living. Our subject has the following brothers and sisters: Fred, in Buffalo, New York; James, in Welland; Ada J., wife of Leonard Matthews, in Port Dove, Canada; Mary, single and living in Buffalo, New York; Nellie, single and living in Tilsimburg, Ontario; Sarah, in the same place; Minnie, also in the same town. Joseph received a good education in the excellent schools of Ontario and when sixteen years of age he went to work for the Michigan Central railroad, where he spent one year and six months. The next six months were spent in the employ of the New York Central Railroad Company, and then he returned to the Michigan Central and one year later migrated to the Northwest Territory. He worked for the Reclamation Company for six years and then came to Kootenai county in 1892. He fired on a steam shovel for the Reclamation Company for a time and then in 1897 came to his present location immediately south from the town of Porthill. He has one hundred acres of land, most of which is into hay. He handles about thirty head of stock and also does a general farming business.

In 1897 Mr. Anderson married Miss Daisy V., daughter of Jacob and Louise (Klein) Sloop. The parents are mentioned in another portion of this work. One child, Nellie, has been born to this happy union. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are devoted members of the Lutheran church.

BARBARA ERLENWEIN. It is with pleasure that we are enabled to grant to the estimable lady whose name initiates this paragraph a representation in this volume, since she is one of the capable and worthy residents of Kootenai valley and deserves mention in the history of her county, having wrought here with manifestation of wisdom, industry and ability for a number of years, achieving a good success in material things.

Barbara Erlenwein was born in St. Louis, Missouri, on March 24, 1857, being the daughter of Jacob and Christine (Fisher) Erlenwein, natives of Germany. They came to this country in 1857 and settled in Wisconsin. In Shelby, that state, she received a good schooling and grew to womanhood. At the age of nineteen she married Mr. Frank M. Lucas, a butcher by trade. They removed to North La Crosse and there he did business for a time. Mr. Lucas was a man of such terrible temper that it was dangerous to be around him, and so our subject was forced to secure a divorce after enduring life with him for nineteen years. In 1891 she came to Kootenai county and located a homestead and since that time she has taken care of all her interests in good shape herself, manifesting both great perseverance and courage, as well as excellent wisdom and skill in the management of her business affairs and the conduct of her estate. She has a good bunch of stock, milks five cows and raises a great deal of poultry. In addition to the homestead, she has one hundred and fifteen acres of railroad land which she purchased and which is fine hay land.

VOLNEY W. WASHBURN.

One child was born to our subject in her marriage, Isabella, now the wife of Donald H. Chisholm, mention of whom is made in this volume. Miss Erlenwein is a lady whose upright life and excellent ways have commended her to the good will and esteem of all her neighbors and acquaintances and she has hosts of friends.

CHARLES OLDS resides three miles south from Porthill on a half-section of land which forms the home estate and which he is handling to general farming and hay. He owns a score or more of cattle and is numbered with the intelligent and prosperous men of this portion of the valley, being also a man of good principles and so conducting himself that he is respected and commended by all.

Charles Olds was born in Des Moines, Iowa, on December 25, 1863, being the son of Luther and Caroline E. (Ransome) Olds, natives of New York. They came west to Oregon in 1864, crossing the plains with teams, and located in Humboldt, Oregon. Later they removed to California and then returned to Portland, thence they migrated to Whitman county, Washington. In that county the father lived until his death in 1890. The mother then sold out and came to dwell with the subject of this sketch, where she is at the present time. Our subject was but four months of age when the parents came across the plains and in all of their journeys he was one of the party. He gained his education from the schools of Portland before he was fourteen and then worked for his parents until he was twenty-four years of age. Then he bought a band of sheep and continued that industry for four years; he had the misfortune to lose his whole band during a bad winter. After that heavy loss Mr. Olds came to the Kootenai valley, in 1893. He prospected for six years, but did not find any properties that paid. He then turned his attention to farming and in 1898 bought a quarter-section from the railroad and then took a homestead, where he now lives. As stated above, he now devotes his attention to the farm and stock.

In 1898 Mr. Olds married Miss Iva V., daughter of J. A. and Louise (Kline) Sloop, natives of Missouri. They came to the Kootenai valley in 1893 and there the mother died in 1898, but the father still lives on his farm near Porthill. Mr. and Mrs. Olds have one child, Marjorie. Mrs. Olds has three sisters: Clara, wife of C. D. Black, living in the Kootenai valley; Daisy, wife of Joseph Anderson, near Porthill; Ruby, single and living with her sister, Mrs. Olds. Mr. Olds has one brother and two sisters: Augustus, married and living at Harrison Lake, British Columbia; Ella, wife of William Gilmore, in California; Mary, wife of N. P. Heim, in Coeur d'Alene. Mr. Olds is a good man and has the confidence of his neighbors and acquaintances and is one of the sturdy men who have built up the valley.

JAMES R. ECKERT. This well known agriculturist and stockman of the Kootenai valley has a fine estate of over three hundred acres one-half mile west from Copeland, where his family residence is located. He handles about three hundred acres to general farming and cuts annually two hundred tons of hay, raising one hundred head of cattle. He has good improvements and an estate that is very valuable.

James R. Eckert was born in Lancaster, Fairfield county, Ohio, on February 8, 1857, being the son of Henry S. and Mariah (Shafer) Eckert, natives of Ohio, where they farmed until their death, the father passing away in 1881 and the mother in 1885. Our subject received a good common schooling and remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-four and then came west to Idaho county, Idaho, in 1886. He remained there for three years and then removed to Porthill, where he and his brother lost nearly a thousand head of cattle. After this severe setback Mr. Eckert went to butchering for the Great Northern for one year and then he located his present place. He took a homestead and bought railroad land and settled down to raising stock and farming. He has made a fine success of it and has a comfortable home and is one of the leading and substantial men of this section.

In 1892 Mr. Eckert married Miss Kittie R. Kilbury, a daughter of Ruth A. Thompson, mention of whom is made in this volume. Mr. Eckert has had three brothers and six sisters, three of whom are living; they are: J. L., living in Idaho county, Idaho; George D., on the old homestead in Ohio; Henry S., in Ohio; Catherine E., married to E. Fields, in Lancaster, Ohio; Mary E., wife of E. C. Pierce, in Ohio; Clara, wife of John Rosenburg, in Clermont, Florida.

LOUIS W. ERLENWEIN is a prosperous and thrifty farmer and owner of stock who lives about three and one-half miles south from Porthill. He is one of the men whose faithful labors have improved the valley and made it one of the rich portions of the state, and he is now devoting his attention to the care of his stock, of which he has nearly fifty head, besides also doing a general farming business. He raises fruit, having about four hundred choice trees

Louis W. Erlenwein was born in La Crosse, Wisconsin, on November 30, 1867, being the son of Jacob and Christine (Fisher) Erlenwein, natives of Germany. They came to this country in the early 'fifties, locating in Wisconsin, where they farmed until the time of their death. The father died in 1874 and the mother in 1889. Our subject was educated in La Crosse and remained with his parents until their death, he then being twenty-three years of age. He worked in La Crosse some time after this and also went into business there for five years. In 1891 he sold his interests there and then came west, locating in the Kootenai valley, where he has resided since. Mr. Erlenwein took a homestead and in addition purchased railroad land until he has over one-half section. He also owns two hundred and seventy-five acres in partnership with his sister. He utilizes one hundred and fifty acres for hay and the rest of the land for pasture, for general farming and for fruit.

In 1896 Mr. Erlenwein married Miss Minnie Polzin, whose parents were natives of Germany. They came to America in early days and located in Wisconsin, where they tilled the soil many years and then removed to Minnesota, where they now live. Mr. Erlenwein and his estimable wife have three children, Erwin, Louis and Minnie. Mr. Erlenwein has demonstrated his industry and capabilities to handle the resources of the country in a successful manner and he is one of the substantial and respected citizens and is entitled to much credit for the part he has taken in the excellent efforts of development.

DONALD H. CHISHOLM is a representative stockman and farmer of the Kootenai valley. His estate of over one section of land lies two and one-half miles west from Copeland and he has it well improved. He handles from fifty to one hundred head of stock, puts up considerable hay, does a general farming business and is one of the reliable and progressive men of the valley.

Donald H. Chisholm was born in Cape Breton, Canada, on May 4, 1867, being the son of Colin and Anna (McKinnon) Chisholm, natives of Scotland, but immigrants to Cape Breton country when young. There they remained as tillers of the soil until the time of their death, the mother's occurring in 1884 and the father passing away in 1889. Donald H. was educated in the common schools and remained at home a dutiful son until he was twenty-two years of age. Then he came to Montana and located in Livingston. One year later he removed to Sun River, Montana, and there bought a team and went at public work. He increased his teams and took up freighting, at which he labored for four years and then sold out and came to the Kootenai valley. In 1891 Mr. Chisholm located a homestead, where he now lives, and since that time he has devoted his efforts to improving his estate and raising stock. He first bought twenty-two head and from that start he has sold many head and now has over fifty cattle besides his other stock.

In 1895 Mr. Chisholm married Isabella Lucas, a daughter of Frank and Barbara (Erlenwein) Lucas, natives of Wisconsin. They came west in 1891 and now reside in the Kootenai valley. Four children, named as follows, have come to bless the home of our subject: Annabell R., Donald H., Colin Ulysses and Vivian Veloid. In political matters Mr. Chisholm is allied with the Republicans and always evinces an active interest in the affairs of local import. He is a member of the M. W. A., at Bonner's Ferry, while Mrs. Chisholm is a member of the Methodist church. In the conduct of his business enterprises Mr. Chisholm has shown commendable wisdom and has accumulated a handsome holding, while in his personal walk he has always manifested integrity and is a man of reliability and uprightness.

BENJAMIN F. GRACE. This pioneer and worthy representative of the agricultural interests of Kootenai county has a fine estate of nearly three hundred acres four miles north from Bonners Ferry, where the family residence is at present. He has two hundred acres in hay, a fine ten-acre orchard, garden, and so forth, making him a valuable place, which in the present market ruling would be well worth five thousand dollars. It was in 1892 that Mr. Grace came to this section and took a quarter section as a homestead, purchasing one hundred and twenty acres later. He is one of the thrifty and prosperous farmers of the section and is well respected by all.

Benjamin F. Grace was born in Hinesburgh, Vermont, on March 4, 1852, being the son of Harrison and Hannah (Mosier) Grace. The father was a native of Bangor, Maine, and died in 1864 in the state of New York. The mother then lived in Clinton county, New York, where she raised her family of four children on a farm. In 1879 she came to Leadville, Colorado, later went to Basalt, in that state and there she remained with her son, L. F., until the time of her departure to the world beyond, in July, 1902. In Ellensburgh, New York, our subject received a common schooling and he worked and gave his earnings to his mother until he was twenty-four years of age. He spent two years in mining at Leadville and then bought a freighting outfit and freighted along ahead of the railroad until 1888, at which time he sold out and settled to farming for two years. Selling again, he came to Mullan, Idaho, and worked on railroad construction for two years. His next move was to Bonners Ferry, as stated above, this being in 1892.

In 1879 Mr. Grace married Miss Ida, daughter of James and Sophia (Wiggins) Hodgson, natives of New Brunswick. They came to Colorado in 1878, settling at Aspen, later going to New Castle, and now live in Marble, Colorado. To Mr. and Mrs. Grace there have been two children born, Eva M. and Sophia M. Mr. Grace is a member of the I. O. O. F. at Bonners Ferry and his wife is a member of the Rebekahs there also. They are both members of the Methodist church. Mr. Grace and his faithful wife have wrought well in the building up of this section and have gained not only a good property holding but also the good will and esteem of all who may have the pleasure of their acquaintance.

JOHN P. DUNN was born in Perry county, Tennessee, on May 5, 1857, being the son of Bolden and Catherine Dunn, natives of Tennessee. On the same day in 1865, the father and mother died of that dread disease, smallpox, and were buried the same day. Two boys and one girl were left orphans by this sad event and our subject was placed in a Catholic orphanage. One year later he was given to Mr. McAtee, and soon after that he went to Callaway county, Missouri, where he remained until he was twenty years old. He lived in Arkansas one year, then removed to Fayette county, Illinois, after which he went to Texas. Returning to Arkansas he later went to Missouri and in 1888 he came thence to Oregon. Soon he was in Spokane, later returned to Oregon and in 1890 he came to his present place, which lies five miles southwest from Bonners Ferry, near Moravia. He settled on unimproved land and had a family of wife and three children. Mr. Dunn commenced operations here without a dollar of capital and his energy, thrift and sagacity in handling his business affairs have conserved his interests so well that at the present time he is worth, upon a conservative estimate, at least ten thousand dollars. He does a great deal of gardening and operates in the lumber industry as well, while he handles considerable stock, too.

In 1883 Mr. Dunn married Miss Nanny Hicks, who died one year later. In 1885 he contracted a second marriage, Isabella Barr becoming his wife on this occasion. Her parents were Henry and Louisa Barr, natives of Indiana. They came to Missouri in an early day and the father died several years ago, but the mother still lives in White Oak, Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn are parents of nine children, seven of whom are living as follows: Nana Perl, Charles W., Cora C., May B., Harry P., Alice B., Effie D. Mr. Dunn is a Democrat in political matters and he has been a member of the school board since his advent into the country. Eight years steady he has served as clerk and he is a prominent figure in the promotion of good schools and is always on the side of advancement and progress.

MARTIN PETERSON. This substantial and upright citizen is a resident of Kootenai county, his home place being a farm two and one-half miles west from Bonners Ferry. He has a good house, barn, and other buildings which he erected with his own labor. His place is fenced and partially under cultivation. He handles about fifteen head of cattle and some horses and does a general farming business.

Martin Peterson was born in Wanjan, Sweden, on July 27, 1857, being the son of Peter and Annie (Peterson) Peterson, natives of Sweden, where they remained until the time of their death. Martin was reared on a farm, gained a common school education, and remained with his parents until he was eighteen and then he worked in the lumber woods until 1880, in which year he made the pilgrimage to the United States, locating first in Minneapolis, where he worked for the Standard Flour Mill Company for one year. Next we see him in Bismarck, North Dakota, where he took up a homestead and, in company with his two brothers, he farmed there for seven years. He sold out then and went to Great Falls, Montana, and wrought at the stone mason trade for eleven years, doing well. In 1897 he visited the home of his childhood, making a visit of six months. His family accompanied him on this trip, and upon his return he brought his wife's parents to America with him. Mr. Peterson then came to his present location, the year being 1898, purchasing a quarter section from the railroad company.

In 1885 Mr. Peterson married Miss May, daughter of Olof and Mary (Erickson) Olson, natives of Sweden. They now live with Mr. Peterson. To Mr. and Mrs. Peterson there have been born five children, August, Mary, Fred, Eddie and Harry, all at home with their parents. Mr. Peterson is a member of the I. O. O. F. at Bonners Ferry, and also of the M. W. A. He and his family affiliate with the Lutheran church. Mr. Peterson is one of the respected and thrifty citizens of the county and has gained by his uprightness the esteem of all, while his business capabilities have made his present good holding in property matters. In political matters Mr. Peterson is a Republican.

B. NELS PETERSON. This enterprising gentleman is one of the leading property owners and successful stockmen of the county of Kootenai, his fine estate of four hundred acres being located at Moravia station, five miles south from Bonners Ferry. Upon his land Mr. Peterson has an imposing residence costing nearly two thousand dollars, out buildings and barns that are needed, a fine orchard of three hundred trees of different varieties, and everything in tiptop shape. Nearly all of this land is under cultivation and Mr. Peterson reaps annually lucrative returns from his bounteous crops. In addition to the general farming that he does, he handles stock, having in the neighborhood of fifty head now, including all kinds. When one considers that Mr. Peterson came here but a few years since and took this land in the raw, his achievements are indication of excellent thrift and wisdom.

Turning more to the details of his career, we note that Mr. Peterson was born in Wanjan, Sweden, on June 8, 1851, being the son of Peter and Anna Peterson, also natives of Sweden. They were thrifty farmers there and remained until their death. B. Nels was educated in his native land and there remained with his parents until twenty-one. Then he worked out until twenty-eight and at that time built a fine home and got married. In 1881 he left this home and came to America. At first he located in Minneapolis and there remained over one year, and then he journeyed to Bismarck, North Dakota, and took a homestead. Seven years were spent there and finally the drouth drove him out. He took his stock and prepared wagons and drove to Great Falls, Montana. A short stop was made there and then he came to his present place, still making the journey with teams. He located on a piece of land and later bought a squatter's right, which was purchased later from the railroad, and also he purchased two hundred and forty acres in addition to this, making a total of four hundred acres of fertile soil. It is mostly under cultivation and produces great crops of hay and other products. The entire estate, with its valuable improvements, is conservatively estimated to be worth at least ten thousand dollars.

In Sweden, in the year 1879, Mr. Peterson married Miss Anna, daughter of Olof and Mary (Erickson) Olson, natives of Sweden. To this happy union there have been born seven children, Frank, Selma, attending school in Great Falls, Montana; Freda, Minnie, Albert, Edwin and Willie. All the children are at home. Mrs. Peterson's parents live with Mr. Peterson, and his brother, Martin, another son-in-law. Mr. Peterson is a Republican and is active in the local affairs. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. in Bonners Ferry, and his family with him are members of the Lutheran church. Mr. Peterson has made a fine record here in business matters and he stands well socially and his reputation is untarnished.

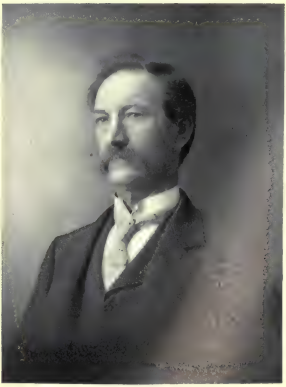
RICHARD W. BURKE. To the noble men who pushed into the fastnesses of the mountains, unlocking the vaults of nature's treasure house; who blazed the way through the wilderness to build homes in this wild country; who have steadily pursued this worthy course without murmur or flinching; to such, we say, let all honor be paid as true pioneers and worthy of the pioneers' tributes of praise. Such an one is the subject of this article and it is a pleasure to epitomize his career in the history of his county.

Richard W. Burke was born in Keeseville, New York, on February 25, 1850, being the son of John and Mary (Hayes) Burke, natives of Ireland. They came to America in 1851, locating in New York, where they remained sixteen years. Then they came to Oshkosh, Wisconsin, where they now live, the father being a retired merchant. When Richard was an infant the family went to Plattsburg, New York, and there he was educated. He remained with his father until he was twenty-nine years old and then came to Montana, and in the National Park country he prospected for ten years making some good locations and sales. In 1889 he came to the Cœur d'Alene country and there, and later in the Flathead country, he prospected and worked for three years. It was in 1891 that he came to Bonners Ferry. He took a squatters right and improved the place, but later sold his right and located where he now lives, one and one-half miles south of Bonners Ferry. He has a good place, well improved by his own labors and it is now productive of good returns in crops. He has house, barn, land all fenced, and a fine orchard which produces abundantly. Mr. Burke has done much prospecting in addition to his other arduous labors and he has three claims adjoining the Keystone mine, besides other properties. He spent one year prospecting in British Columbia. In addition to the other items mentioned, Mr. Burke cuts annually about forty tons of hay and handles some stock.

The brothers and sisters of our subject are named as follows: Kate, wife of Charles Cans, in Missoula, Montana; Annie, married and living in Oshkosh, Wisconsin; Maggie, living in Missoula, Montana; John, married and living in Oshkosh, Wisconsin; James, single, now in Alaska; Daniel, living in Iowa; William, at Sandpoint; also Mr. Burke has a nephew, Edward L. Burke, living in British Columbia, and operating as conductor on the C. P. railroad. A niece of our subject lives in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, named Mamie Burke. Mr. Burke is a member of the Catholic church. He is a man who receives the respect and esteem of his fellows and is a substantial citizen.

RUTH A. THOMPSON. There are few in the lower Kootenai valley that are not acquainted with Mrs. Ruth A. Thompson, the subject of this article. She is a woman of remarkable business ability, and has seen not only the hardships of the pioneer's life in the new sections of the west, but she has also been called upon to endure the trials and misfortunes that fate oftentimes places upon members of our race, seemingly selecting, as in this case, those who are filled with courage and determination to win despite the obstacles and barriers.

An account of Mrs. Thompson's life will be interesting to the readers of the history of our county and therefore we append an epitome. She was born in Senaca county, Ohio, on May 22, 1830, being the daughter of Lieutenant John and Mary M. (Curtis) Whiteside. The father was a native of Dublin, Ireland, and came to Americt in 1810, locating in southern Ohio. He had the distinction of being a lieutenant in the war of 1812. The mother was born in Virginia and went to Ohio in 1825, and there married Mr. Whiteside in 1828. Later they settled in Madison county, that state, and there in 1844 Mr. Whiteside was drowned. Then Mrs. Whiteside removed to Indiana and remained there until her death in 1882. Our subject had but little opportunity to gain an education, there being no schools in these new countries. At the age of seventeen, it being 1847, she married Mr. O. C. Kilbury, a farmer and blacksmith. Ten years they remained in Ohio



MRS. RUTH A. THOMPSON.

JACOB A. SLOOP.

HON. JOSEPH I. BARNES.

JOHN LeHUQUET.

and then removed to Iowa, later coming to Illinois. In 1872 Mrs. Kilbury was forced to take up dressmaking to support her three children. Six children had been taken away by death previous to this. She was crowded into this work by the shiftlessness of a husband who refused to support his family and in 1873 she secured a divorce and since that time she managed to support herself and children in a good manner, even accumulating some property besides. In 1876 she came to Deadwood, South Dakota, and there she sewed and later kept boarders. She manifested the true spirit of courage in this place in a gracious act that few would have done. A wife died who left four children, one only two weeks old, and as this lady had a mother in Pennsylvania, Mrs. Kilbury took upon herself the task of taking these helpless children across the continent to their grandmother's home. The trip from Deadwood to Cheyenne, Wyoming, had to be made in a freight wagon and it was in winter. Mrs. Kilbury was equal to the occasion and safely took her charges to Pennsylvania and then returned to Cheyenne and in the spring to Deadwood, where she married Jesse Thompson, on August 13, 1878, a miner. They operated a hotel and in 1883 came to Montana and farmed for four years. Then a move was made to Spokane and later they came to their present location, one-half mile west from Copeland, at Thompson's landing. Mr. Thompson bought an interest in a steamboat and Mrs. Thompson bought seventy head of cattle. They soon turned their attention to the cattle and during this time, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson gave their attention to herding them together and handling the hay for them. Mrs. Thompson remarks that those days of riding after the stock were among the happiest of her life, and the fifteen years spent with Mr. Thompson is the crowning portion of her career. But in 1892 Mr. Thompson was called away by death and since that time the entire management of affairs has devolved upon Mrs. Thompson. She has manifested excellent judgment and execution as always in her labors and she is now the owner of a section of land, about seventy-five head of cattle, plenty of buildings and improvements and does a dairying business. Almost all of this land she has bought since the death of her husband.

Mrs. Thompson is a member of the Methodist church and is well respected and highly esteemed for her worth and excellent qualities, being a woman of integrity and faithfulness and sound principles. She has done much hard work, has managed her business affairs with commendable wisdom and is to be credited with much accomplished for the upbuilding and improvement of the country.

JACOB A. SLOOP. The worthy and faithful labors, the upright and commendable life, the stanch and stable character, and the untarnished reputation and excellent standing of the gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph entitles him to an especial representation in the volume which chronicles the history of his county.

In giving an epitome of his career, we note first that he was born in Schuyler county, Missouri, on April 1, 1845, the son of Nicholas and Elizabeth (Stoter) Sloop, natives of Switzerland. They came to the United States in 1837, settling first in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Two years were spent there in honest labor at the wagonmaker's trade and then they came to Marion county, Missouri. In that place he wrought at his trade and also did farming. Four years later, the family went to Schuyler county, Missouri, and there our subject was born, as stated above. The father continued at his trade and farming until his death in 1861. After that the mother remained a time in Schuyler county and then removed to Kansas in 1876, and the year following passed to the world beyond. Jacob was educated in the country schools of his native county and labored with his parents until he had reached his majority. At that important age he and his brother built a combined flour and saw mill and operated the plant for twenty years. When that long period had elapsed, Mr. Sloop sold his mill and went to Queen City, Missouri, and took up general merchandising for two years. In 1892 he came west, and after due deliberation he located in Kootenai county, near where Porthill is now situated. He helped build a diking machine for a company diking the river on the Canadian side and for four years he wrought for that company. Then he took a squatter's right on unsurveyed land, which later proved to be railroad land. He bought it and has taken a homestead and bought since that time until he has a fine estate of four hundred acres and more. He handles considerable to hay and pasture, raising forty and more cattle each year, while also a portion of the land is devoted to general farming and fruit raising. Mr. Sloop has some fine trees and his place is one of value and is handled in a commendable manner.

In 1871 Mr. Sloop married Miss Louise, daughter of Peter and Louise (Piper) Klein, natives of Germany. They came to this country in 1826, located in Pennsylvania, where they were married, and then went to Schuyler county, Missouri, where the father is still living, aged ninety years. To Mr. and Mrs. Sloop there were four children born, Clara V., wife of C. D. Black, in Kootenai valley; Daisy V., wife of Joseph Anderson, living near Porthill; Iva V., wife of Charles Olds, in the valley; Ruby V., single and living with her father. Mr. Sloop is a member of the I. O. O. F., at Porthill. He is a member of the Lutheran church and is a man who stands well among his neighbors and is reliable and upright. Mrs. Sloop died at Porthill, April 20, 1898.

MAJOR JOSEPH I. BARNES, deceased.—The death of this honored and distinguished citizen of Kootenai county, at Rathdrum, in December, 1898, removed from life's busy turmoil one of the most highly respected, worthy and well known men in north Idaho. He came to Kootenai county during the early 'nineties and during his residence there, achieved for himself a reputation for sterling character, business ability and popularity such as falls to the lot of few.

Major Barnes was a native of Lewis county, New York state, having been born there in 1839, and when very young commenced his westward journey, going first to Ohio, then to St. Joseph county, Michigan, and from there to Neenah, Wisconsin, where he grew to manhood. When the call came for volunteers, in 1861, young Joseph immediately responded by enlisting in the Twenty-first Wisconsin Infantry, in which regiment he served until 1864 when he was transferred to the First U. S. V. V. engineers, with whom he remained until the close of the war. He participated in the battles of Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Chattanooga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain and in return for his services was rewarded with an officer's stripes. After the war Mr. Barnes settled in Brown county, South Dakota, remaining there until his appointment as immigration inspector in Kansas City, by President Harrison. Previous to this, however, he served with honor in the South Dakota legislature. From Kansas City he was transferred to Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, and later was stationed as an inspector of customs on the northern Kootenai boundary line. A change of administration in 1893 caused his retirement from office, as a result of which he engaged in mercantile pursuits at Ockonook, where he lived until his death. As a member of the Republican party he was very active and influential and was chosen chairman of the state league of Republican clubs at Boise in 1892. Subsequently he was prominently mentioned for the office of lieutenant governor, was one of the leading reorganizers of the party in 1896 and was a candidate for the legislature that year. He declined a like honor in 1898, owing to failing health.

In 1867, Major Barnes was united in marriage to Miss Mary C. Jaquith, who survives him.

JOHN LEHUQUET. This capable and genial gentleman, whose enterprise and industry have placed him in a good position in the county, is a man of great experience in the different walks of life and has a fund of practical wisdom that, coupled with his native executive ability, has enabled him to consummate some excellent achievements.

John LeHuquet was born at Gaspe Bay, Canada, on August 1, 1840, being the son of Philip and Mary (Galeshau) LeHuquet, natives of Jersey Island. The ancestors, as is noted in French history, were titled people, possessed of great estates and a castle in France, which were forfeited in the time of a rebellion. The parents of our subject came to Canada in 1830, locating at Gaspe Bay, where the father carried on a fishing and farming business. He died in 1870, and the mother passed away in 1881. They were the parents of three boys and five girls. John remained at home laboring with his father and going to school in the winter, until he was twenty and then started for himself. He fished and then bought a little farm, and in 1860 married and settled down. His wife died the following year and he sold his farm and began traveling from place to place and was in various employments. He was in Newfoundland, fired on a steamer, returned to Quebec and shipped on a steamer that was wrecked two hundred miles below Quebec, losing all the cargo. Then Mr. LeHuquet shipped at Kingston for Chicago, helped build the union stock yards, then logged in Michigan and in 1866 calked boats at Escanaba. Returning to Chicago he spent two years as foreman at the dock and canal works. Then he did bridge work, being expert as a framer and on construction. About 1870 he went to Alabama and contracted in railroad work and for two years did exceedingly well. In 1873 he started a general store in Cullman, that state and at this and handling a vineyard he spent seven years. In 1883 he made a trip to New Brunswick, then journeyed to Iowa, thence to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, then next season to Pierre, and in 1892 he came to Sandpoint. In 1893 he located his present place, two miles north from Sandpoint and he has made of it a beautiful and valuable farm. He has a good orchard, does general farming and timber work. Mr. LeHuquet has an acre of the finest strawberries that one could find, while his orchard is of the very choicest varieties.

In 1868 Mr. LeHuquet married Miss Mary, daughter of Joseph Fenn, a native of Switzerland. They came to America and located in Galena, Illinois, then went to California, returned to Galena, where the father died, and then the mother went again to California where she taught school until 1868, the time of her death. To Mr. and Mrs. LeHuquet there have been born six children: Josephine, wife of Mr. Martin, a preacher in the Methodist church and living in Helena, Montana; John A., with parents; Frank M., attending Normal school in Lewiston; Gertrude and Pearl, both having taught school in Kootenai county, but now attending Normal school at Lewiston; Carrie, attending high school at Sandpoint. Politically, Mr. LeHuquet is independent and active in the questions of the day. He has served as school trustee and is an advocate of good schools. Mr. LeHuquet is a member of the A. F. & A. M., in Cullman, Alabama; also he is a charter member of Lodge No. 33, of the K. of P. in the same town. Mr. LeHuquet was a member of the order of Haymakers in Cullman. Mr. LeHuquet is a member of the Episcopal church and his wife is a Methodist.

PETER A. FERBRACHE. It is with pleasure that we are permitted to speak of the life's career of the subject of this sketch, since he is a man of talent, energy and uprightness; since he has wrought in faithfulness in augmenting the wealth of this county; and since he has always conducted himself in a becoming manner to a professional man and a true gentleman.

Peter A. was born in Preble county, Ohio, on January 14, 1831, being the son of Peter and Elizabeth (Frum) Ferbrache, natives, respectively, of Guernsey Island and Virginia. Our subject received a good education and worked for his parents until he was of age. He taught school successfully from the age of nineteen to twenty-four. Then he took a course in dentistry and from 1855 to 1888 he practiced his profession with credit to himself in Elpaso, Illinois. Then he came to Granite, Kootenai county, and for two years, 1891-2, he practiced in Rathdrum and in Granite. He then, with his sons, operated a tie camp for a time and in 1898 he came to the vicinity of Bonners Ferry. He located a homestead about three miles northwest from the town and that is the family home at this time. He pays considerable attention to fruit and gardening, raising over five hundred boxes of tomatoes alone and other things in proportion.

In 1856 Dr. Ferbrache took the hand of Miss Hannah C. Ray in marriage and to them have been born eight children: Anna, married and living in Pullman, Washington; Lincoln, married and living in Vancouver; George, married and living in Nebraska; Thomas, married and living in Pullman, Washington; Henry, married and living in Kootenai county; Mary, deceased; Willie, James, both single. Mrs. Ferbrache's parents were Joseph and Gilberta Ray, natives, respectively, of Indiana and Ohio. Dr. Ferbrache is liberal in politics and fraternally is affiliated with the I. O. O. F.

THOMAS W. MILLS was born in Stratford, Ontario, Canada, on November 15, 1862, being the son of Robert and Mary (Armstrong) Mills, natives of Canada. They came to the United States in 1864, locating in the vicinity of Detroit, Michigan, where they remained on a farm until the time of their death. The mother died in 1874 and the father in 1883. Our subject received his education from the common schools near Detroit and remained with his parents until he was twelve years old. Then he spent two years in the blacksmith trade and later went to work on a farm. He came west to Lesueur Centre, Minnesota, and there remained on a farm for six years. Then he went to Canada and worked on the Canadian Pacific for two and one-half years, later returning to Bismarck, North Dakota. Three years were spent in the employ of the government at Fort Lincoln, and in 1886 he came west to Washington. He worked for Brickle for a couple of years in the lumber business, and five years later, in 1892, he came to Bonners Ferry. Later he went to the northwest territory and also mined on the Saskatchewan river, where he did very well. He returned to this section of the country and took eighty acres as a homestead, one mile northwest from Bonners Ferry, and bought as much more and there he is dwelling today. He has a fine hay farm and also does considerable general farming, while he also pays attention to raising stock.

In 1883 Mr. Mills married Miss Sarah, daughter of Allen and Christie Bruce, natives of Canada. They came to the United States and located in Minnesota, but returned to Manitoba, where the father was drowned in the Mud river. The mother is living in Bonners Ferry. To Mr. and Mrs. Mills there have been born seven children, named as follows: Nellie, wife of Thomas Hooker, in this county; Della, Maude, Robert, Lorney, Lillie, Vine. Mr. Mills is Republican in politics and is an active worker for the principles of his party. He has been elected road supervisor a couple of terms and is serving with credit in that capacity now. He is a member of the M. W. A. and of the I. O. O. F., both in Bonners Ferry. He and his estimable wife are members of the Presbyterian church and are valuable additions to the society and community. Mr. Mills has always preserved an untarnished reputation and has so conducted himself that he receives the good will and esteem of his fellows for his integrity, uprightness, morality and unswerving principles of rectitude and soundness which characterize him.

JAMES G. FERBRACHE. This young man is one of the enterprising citizens of Kootenai county in the vicinity of Bonners Ferry. He is an upright, capable and thriving farmer whose property is located two and one-half miles northwest from Bonners Ferry, and there he has bestowed his labors with a sagacity and industry that have given him the meed of a fine and productive property.

James G. was born in Elapso, Illinois, on November 17, 1872, being the son of Peter A. and Hannah (Ray) Ferbrache, natives, respectively, of Ohio and Indiana. They came to Illinois and remained there for thirty-five years. They they came to Granite, Idaho, in 1887 and in 1897 came to their present place in this county. Our subject was well educated in his native place, having the advantage of a high school training. He remained with his parents until he was twenty-one and then came to the west with them. He took a contract of furnishing ten thousand ties to the Northern Pacific and in 1893 he came to Bonners Ferry and took his present place as a homestead. He has improved it with good buildings, fences and so forth, and annually puts up about eighty tons of hay in addition to the other products of the field. Mr. Ferbrache also owns some mining property in the vicinity of Granite, known as the Galena mine. In political matters he is allied with the Democrats and is bright and active in local matters and in disseminating the principles he believes to be for the advantage of all. Mr. Ferbrache is a member of the M. W. A., North Star Lodge No. 6160, of Bonners Ferry, and has been one of its officers since it started. Mr. Ferbrache has brothers and sisters as follows: Lincoln R., in in Proebstel, Washington; Annie M., wife of John Brooks, of Pullman, Washington; George W., in Nebraska; Thomas J., in Pullman, Washington; Henry C. and William W., in Bonners Ferry.

LOUIS McLENNAN is a man of great experience in the ways of the different industries of the world and this acquired skill and knowledge, together with an active talent and an adaptability which enables him to enter intelligently into any labor, have given him great opportunities and fitted him to become eminently successful in any line. He has, however, chosen that of raising stock and farming, in which he has gained a fitting prominence and has placed him among the leading and prosperous men of Kootenai county.

Louis McLennan was born in Cape Breton, on November 20, 1844, being the son of Miles and Margaret (Urquhart) McLennan, natives of Scotland, but immigrants to Cape Breton in 1842. The father died in 1871, but the mother is still living in Richmond county, Cape Breton, aged ninety. Our subject received a common school education and worked for his parents until he was nineteen, when he came to the United States and enlisted to fight the battles of freedom. He was in the Thirty-third New Jersey Infantry, Company E, under Captain George M. Harris. They went to Chattanooga, being a little too late to join Sherman on his march to the sea. His company acted as guards that winter, then fought Hood and later went to West Virginia and North Carolina, chasing Johnson. Then came the surrender and they marched to Washington, where he participated in the grand review. Being honorably discharged his company went to Newark and disbanded. Then Mr. McLennan went to sea and sailed all over the world, finally leaving the ship in Bombay, India. He also operated as diver for bridge construction. Then he went to Australia and sailed for six years more. Later we see him in New Zealand contracting in bridge and road work. In 1888 he was in San Francisco and in 1891 came to Tacoma and the Sound country, doing work in the coal mines. In 1892 he was in British Kootenai country and in Idaho. It was in 1894 that he came to his present location, four miles west from Bonners Ferry. He came without money and now is one of the well-to-do men of the valley, having as fine stock as is to be found in the valley anywhere. He raises large amounts of hay and handles stock.

Mr. McLennan is one of nine children, six of whom are living: Philip, with our subject; Margaret, widow, living in Tacoma; Alexander, in Middleriver, Cape Breton; Ellen, married to John McKenzie, living in Nanaimo, British Columbia; Willina, wife of Dan McIntyre, in Richmond county, Cape Breton. Mr. McLennan is a member of the G. A. R., Garfield Post, San Francisco, California.

PAYTON W. OWEN. No more sturdy and worthy pioneer is in the precincts of Kootenai county than the subject of this article. He has labored in the development of the country here for many years and is now one of the substantial and prosperous men of the county.

Payton W. Owen was born in Caldwell county, Missouri, on June 1, 1850, being the son of Frederick M. and Susannah (Barron) Owen, natives of Indiana and Tennessee, respectively. They came to Missouri in 1842 and in 1882 to Clarkfork, where the father died in 1898, aged eighty-four, but the mother still lives there, aged seventy-five. Our subject was reared in his native place and there educated in the common schools. At his majority he bought a farm and settled to its culture for four years. Then he made a move to Boise City, Idaho, and kept a toll road for two years, after which he went to Texas and six months later came back to Boise and did gardening work for four years. His next move was to Ainsworth, Washington, where he wrought in the car shops one year and then came to Spokane, entering the dairy business in 1881. Next he did labor along the grades of the Northern Pacific, then settled on unsurveyed land near Clarkfork. He sold his improvements and came to his present location and settled on unsurveyed land. He found after the survey that he was on railroad land and so bought the land and another quarter. Later he homesteaded a quarter two miles distant from this home place. The half section first gained is a fine farm, nearly half being good hay land. He has a fine orchard of eight hundred trees and does a general farming business and raises stock. His hay crop alone is over one hundred tons annually.

In 1871 Mr. Owen married Miss Isabella Hatfield, a native of Iowa. She came west with her husband and accompanied him in many of his travels. She was the third white woman in the entire Kootenai valley. Many were the hardships that were placed in the path of this worthy pioneer couple and they have done in a commendable manner in overcoming them. Two children have been born to them: Elbert Wesley, who enlisted in Company A, First Washington Volunteers, to fight for the freedom of Cuba. Later he went to Manila and served until his company was mustered out. He then enlisted in the regular army, being commissioned sergeant. In 1899 he was taken sick and discharged, as his health forbade further military service. The second son is Ernest Walter, now aged twenty-one and he is at home. Mr. Owen is a member of the I. O. O. F. and the K. O. T. M., in Bonners Ferry, while his wife is a member of the Rebekahs and the L. O. T. M., of Bonners Ferry. They both are members of the Methodist church.

HENRY TANK. The industrious farmer of whom we now have the privilege to speak is one of the men whose labors have assisted materially to bring the wild of Kootenai county to productive fields and he has also made a name for himself among his fellows that places him in their esteem and makes him the recipient of their confidence.

Henry Tank was born in Mecklenburg, Germany, on April 4, 1866, his parents being George and Caroline (Jacobs) Tank, natives of the same country, where also they died, having been farmers. Henry was educated in the public schools, worked with his father until nine and then went to work for neighbors herding stock. When fourteen he worked on a large sheep ranch and finally, in 1885, he came thence to the United States. He worked six months in the vicinity of Chicago and then came to Iowa and spent a like time there on a ranch. When he had spent a like time in the western part of the state he came thence to Ritz-ville, Washington. A short time after, he made his way to Cocolalla, Idaho, and he contracted timbers for the railroad for four years. He made a visit to Bonners Ferry in 1890, returning again to Cocolalla and in 1891 he determined to again visit the Bonners Ferry country. He soon selected a quarter section, which he purchased from an Indian for a rifle and fifty rounds of ammunition. This land is four miles east from Bonners Ferry and the industry and skill of Mr. Tank have made it a fine farm. He has about thirty acres under cultivation and they produce in abundant measure of the fruits of the field. He does a general farming business and handles considerable garden stuff. Mr. Tank has bestowed much labor in a wise manner and the result is a good return each year in marketable stuff, which makes him a fine income.

In 1896 Mr. Tank married Miss Minnie, daughter of Fred and Mary (Dahnke) Jacobs, natives of Germany. They came to America in 1882, locating in Benton county, Iowo, and later removing to Nebraska, where the father died in 1898. The mother still lives in Telden, Nebraska. To Mr. and Mrs. Tank there have been born two children, Bertha and Emma. In political matters Mr. Tank is allied with the Democrats and he is active in putting forth the principles of his party. He is a member of the K. of P., in Bonners Ferry. The family affiliate with the Lutheran church.

GABE H. HOOKER. Five miles east from Bonners ferry is the home place of Mr. Hooker. It is an estate of two hundred acres of good soil, which has nearly one million feet of fine saw timber. From the wilds of the rugged country Mr. Hooker selected his homestead of one quarter section and later completed the two hundred acres by purchase. He has given his time to handling stock, clearing and improving his place, doing a general farming business and is one of the industrious, capable and thrifty men of the county.

Gabe H. Hooker was born in Patrick county, Virginia, on November 14, 1858, being the son of Samuel and Lucinda (State) Hooker, natives of Virginia. The family was one of four children. The father died in 1900 and the mother is still living in the home place. The father was a blacksmith and he wrought at the forge until four or five years before his death.

Our subject was educated in the public schools of his native place, worked for his parents until he arrived at the estate of a young man, then married and went to farming. He continued steadily at this occupation until 1893, when he sold his stock and land and came west to Klickitat county, Washington. Three years were spent on that section and then he crossed the Columbia river into Oregon and engaged himself for thirteen months with the sheepmen. The next move was to Kootenai county and the homestead spoken of above was selected and Mr. Hooker settled down.

In 1875 Mr. Hooker married Miss Miccry Anderson, daughter of Dave Anderson, a native of North Carolina, and to them have been born three children: Thomas, married and living in Kootenai county; Lue, wife of Harry Corbett, in Klickitat county, Washington; Mary, wife of Jim Morris, in this county. Mr. Hooker is a firm Republican and labors actively in local matters for the principles of his party.

JOHN McCUNE is one of the industrious and substantial farmers and stockmen of the county of Kootenai, living two miles east from Bonners Ferry, where he has a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which is practically all under cultivation and produces abundant crops of hay and grain. He handles considerable stock and is one of the leading wealth producers of his section.

John McCune was born in Monroe county, New York, on March 16, 1851, being the son of William and Mary (Taylor) McCune, natives of New York. The father farmed there until his death in 1878. The mother removed to Ohio and there died in 1883, aged sixty-eight. John was educated in his native county, attending schools in the winter and working on the farm in the summers until he was fourteen and then he came west. He located in Minnesota and drove logs on the river for ten years and then he went to Leadville, Colorado, in 1876, where he mined and worked in the smelters for two years. In 1886 he came west to Spokane, Washington. He at once took a contract to make ties and for five years he wrought at this industry. It was 1891 that he came to Kootenai county and he at once located his present land as a homestead. His father's family consisted of four children, as follows: James, married and living in Ohio; Mary, wife of William Everett, in New York; Sarah, wife of John Conklin, living in New York; John, the subject of this article.

In political matters Mr. McCune is allied with the Republicans and is very active in the affairs of the county and state. He is a member of the Methodist church. Mr. McCune is a real pioneer of this section and states that when he first came to this country that it was very wild, uninviting in many respects, but through the labors of the husbandmen and the stockmen, it has become to be a rich and attractive place.

It is of note that the father of our subject enlisted in the One Hundred and Fifty-second Ohio Infantry, under Colonel Putnam and Captain Fuller. He was in the battle of Lynchburg and was mustered out on September 20, 1864.

JOHN H. DOBSON. No compilation that has within its province to grant representation to the leading men of Kootenai county would be complete were there failure to accord special representation to the esteemed gentleman and capable business man whose name initiates this paragraph.

John H. Dobson was born on August 28, 1870, being the son of William and Mary (Garry) Dobson, natives, respectively, of New Jersey and New York.

They were married in 1869, Mrs. Dobson's parents being Richard and Mary (Odennelo) Garry, natives of Ireland. In 1868 William Dobson came west to Colorado across the plains. He had served in the Civil war as gunner on one of the men of war, participating in the battle of Fort Fisher. In Colorado he worked at his trade of carpentering in Denver, Central City and other places. It was 1879 that he came to the Coeur d'Alene country and with his partner, Tom Erwin, discovered the first gold in that section. He worked on and owned the Goldsmith, a property that sold later for fifty thousand dollars. Then he went to Anaconda, Montana, in 1884, remaining two years, when he returned to the Coeur d'Alene country. In 1892 he purchased a man's right to an eighty of unsurveyed land, which he improved in good shape and in 1902 he sold it to the subject of this article. In addition to this piece John Dobson owns land to the amount of two hundred and forty acres, which is one of the finest farms in the entire county, being improved in a very excellent manner and producing many tons of hay and other fruits of the field. Mr. Dobson has sixty head of cattle and he handles from one to two hundred tons of hay annually.

Returning to the personal history of our subject, we note that he was born in Central City, Colorado, and that he received his first education in Plume, Colorado. Later he went to Janesville, Wisconsin, and there was well educated. Returning to Colorado after this time of educational training was consummated he came with his parents to the west and three years were spent in the study of dentistry, under Dr. H. P. Wilcox, in Spokane. Then he came to Kootenai county and located where he now lives. He is one of the substantial and leading citizens of the county, being possessed of real worthy qualities and he is a man of influence and culture. He is a member of the Catholic church. It is of note that William Dobson was the first elected surveyor in Kootenai county, and instead of availing himself of the emoluments of the office he turned it to Judge Milder.

MRS. JAMES T. BALDWIN is one of the well known and highly respected citizens of Sandpoint, being in charge of a stock raising and farming business. Mrs. Baldwin is the daughter of Andrew and Mary (Wilson) Lucas, natives of England. They came when young to America, locating in Cincinnati, Ohio, where the father conducted a wholesale leather store until the time of his death in 1872. The mother died in 1895. Mrs. Baldwin was born in 1840, February 22, and in addition to a public school education, she spent three years in a girls' seminary at Cincinnati. In 1855 occurred her marriage with Davis Evans, a horseman from Philadelphia. The next year they came to California via Panama and spent two years in San Francisco, then a move was made to Jacksonville, Oregon. Here Mrs. Baldwin experienced the terrors of the fierce Rogue river Indian war. With about thirty families she was cooped up in a fort for fear of the savages and the times were trying indeed. Many were killed and in 1865 she returned to San Francisco and there remained until 1881.' In 1860 Mr. Evans was killed by the Indians and in 1865, Mrs. Evans married Mr. Baldwin. In 1881 they came to Sandpoint and Mr. Baldwin operated a stage and express line until 1890. Then he took a homestead and in 1895 he was called hence by death. Since that time, Mrs. Baldwin has conducted the farm and business and is now living in town. She owns the farm and about fifty head of stock, besides other property. By her former husband, Mrs. Baldwin has two children, Harry L., married and living in Sandpoint; Hattie M., deceased. Mrs. Baldwin is a member of the Episcopalian church and is a lady of excellent virtues and graces and is esteemed by all who know her.

FRANK A. DAVIS. Few men display more activity and stirring qualities than has the subject of this sketch, as he has wrought in all the important places of the west and has gained great experience in traveling and meeting persons engaged in the various industries in this western country and the middle states.

Frank A. Davis was born in Byron, Illinois, on February 6, 1866, being the son of J. C. and Julia (Hall) Davis, natives, respectively, of England and Canada. The father came to America when he was ten and the mother to the United States when she was thirteen. They were the parents of six children; the mother died in 1896, but the father is still living in Chicago, a retired farmer. Our subject received his elementary education from the schools of his native place and later completed his business training in a commercial college in Rockford, Illinois. Then he traveled to Minnesota and a short time later went to Michigan and in two years was back to his home. In 1890 he went to Oregon, returning from this trip to Illinois. Four months later he visited Oregon again, locating in the mining district adjacent to Baker City until the fall of 1891. Then six months were spent in southern Oregon on the coast. A visit to Seattle was made at this time and we next see Mr. Davis in eastern Oregon again, and then in Rathdrum. In the spring of 1894 he went to British Columbia for one summer and then returned to the mines of the Baker City region. Next he visited in Portland, later was at Sacramento, California, and in three months from then was at Bisbee, Arizona. Three months there and he was off for New Mexico; he then returned to Arizona, visited New Mexico again and came thence to Colorado. Four months after that he was in Salt Lake City, Utah, whence he came to Pendleton and from there to the Coeur d'Alene country. We next see this industrious traveler in Anaconda, Montana, at Butte, in the Elkhorn mountains, then in Helena and finally he came back to the Coeur d'Alene mining district. But his journeys were not ended yet and he repaired to Pendleton, returning to Coeur d'Alene, whence he went to Sandon, British Columbia. After a year's sojourn there we find him in the Sound country and later at Walla Walla. Portland was visited again and Baker City was then able to keep him one and one-half years. He gravitated to Spokane and in 1901 the fertile region three and one-half miles east from Bonners Ferry was able to capture this elusive explorer for a permanent citizen. He bought land and is dwelling in prosperity there now.

MRS. JAMES T. BALDWIN.

In 1899 Mr. Davis married Miss Lizzie, daughter of Thomas and Emma Huntington, both natives of England. No doubt this happy alliance led Mr. Davis to select his home place and settle down, and Kootenai county is to be congratulated in securing a good citizen and capable man.

WILLIAM H. BROWN. Among the sturdy men whose labors have opened up the rich sections of the west and especially portions of Kootenai county, the subject of this article is to be granted specific mention in the history of this county, and surely he is to be accredited with much worthy achievement. At the present time Mr. Brown is living on his farm, one mile west from Copeland, which is utilized as a hay ranch and also in addition to this he is giving attention to mining, having three claims that are considered good.

William H. Brown was born in Rochester, New York, on April 8, 1858, being the son of Edward and Sarah Brown. His mother died when he was born and he was raised by his grandmother. His father was a native of England and his mother of New York. Her grandfather Green was a captain in the Revolution, under General Stark, and one time, finding his barn filled with red coats, he fired it, being determined to fight for country rather than preserve private property. The grandfather Murdock of our subject was a soldier in the war of 1812 and lost one limb in the struggle. William H. was schooled at the Orphans' Home in Canandagua, New York, and when he became twelve years of age he preferred the freedom of the world to his grandmother's tuition and therefore started out alone. He drove on the Erie canal, worked on the adjacent farms and in this vigorous way spent the years until young manhood. In 1874 he went to Michigan and three years later went to Iowa. He mined in the Black Hills, Dakota, worked in the woods in Minnesota and in 1886 came to Spokane. He railroaded for McCoy as foreman, having previously worked for Signer, handling five yoke of oxen. He went to California for one year, then returned to Spokane and during the chloride excitement on Lake Pend Oreille he gave his attention to prospecting. Then he steamboated on the lake and in 1891 operated a boat for the Great Northern on the Kootenai. The next move was to the Cascades and later he was again in California, where he worked for the Arrow Lake Company and also operated at Prescott, Arizona. In 1893 he was at the World's Fair in Chicago and thence came to Bonners Ferry. He then settled on his homestead and to the improvement of that and to mining he has devoted his energies ever since.

Thus it will be seen that Mr. Brown has done a lion's share in the good work of developing this western country and is a man of courage, ability and has the true qualities of the pioneer, and in the life of the frontiersman he finds the sweet charm that always lures him to its enjoyment.

LOUIS AMERMAN. At the present time this gentleman is operating a dairy and doing general farming, being one of the substantial men of the county and a patriotic and good citizen. He was born in Bay City, Michigan, on July 8, 1868, being the son of Thomas and Rosetta (Janes) Amerman, natives of Canada. They came to this country in 1860, locating in Michigan. The father was a mill man. The mother died in New York in 1872 and the father came to Canada, west, in 1879, locating in Moosomin. In 1890 he came to Bonners Ferry, where he died in 1900. Louis received a common school education and at the age of seventeen stepped forth for himself in the realities of life. He worked on a farm for wages for two years in Canada and then rode the range for two years. He then returned to Canada and remained there for two years and in 1890 he came to Bonners Ferry. He was in the employ of his brother-in-law for one year here, in a butcher shop. Then he went to Manitoba and in 1891 he came again to Bonners Ferry. He took a homestead and went to logging. In 1902 he purchased eight cows and started a dairy. He is doing well in this last venture and is improving his place.

In 1893 Mr. Amerman married Miss Elizabeth, daughter of Isaiah and Elizabeth (Brentnall) Causton, natives of England, mention of whom is made in another portion of this work. To Mr. and Mrs. Amerman there have been born four children, named as follows: Everilda, deceased, Violet J., Thomas G. and Frederick, all natives of the United States. In political matters Mr. Amerman is allied with the Republican party and he always evinces a marked interest in the affairs of local moment. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Utopia Lodge, No. 36, and also of the M. W. A., North Star Lodge, No. 6. Mrs. Amerman is a member of the Rebekahs, Loyal Lodge, No. 43.

GEORGE FRY. If the accounts of the life of Daniel Boone were interesting to the people of this country, surely an epitome of the subject of this article in his pioneer life as also the labors and adventures of his father would be intensely interesting, and it is with regret that we are not favored more with the details of his career, that we might embody the same in the history of the county.

George Fry was born on March 2, 1862, in Marcus, Washington, being the son of Richard and Justina (Hang) Fry. There were twelve children in the family and eight of them are still living. The father was one of the most intrepid and sturdy pioneers and Indian traders that ever set foot in this western country. He wrought and traded and traveled all over the northwest of this country and he has done much for the cause of civilization in opening the way for others to follow. It was in 1876 that he came to the Kootenai valley and there traded with the Indians, buying furs and handling a pack train. He operated a pack train from Pend Oreille lake to Fort Steele from 1870 to 1880. He bought the ferry across the Kootenai when he first came to the country and operated it for sixteen years. He freighted from Pend Oreille to Bonners Ferry also, and handled furs out and brought supplies back, taking as high as five and six thousand pelts out at one time. Richard Fry married in 1858 and in 1888 he bought a quarter section, where the family now live, two miles west from Bonners Ferry. He died in 1897, full of days and having made a worthy record in pioneer achievements. The widow still lives on the home place with three of her children.

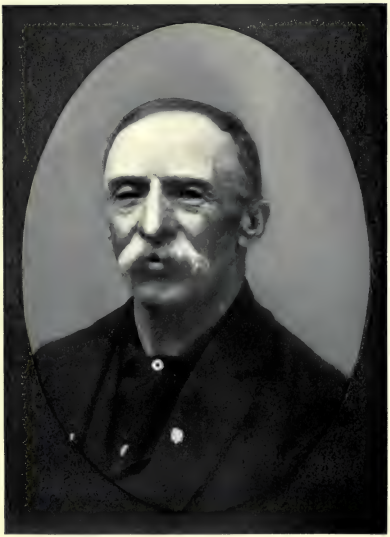
Reverting to the personal history of the immediate subject of this article, we note that he was brought up in Marcus and other frontier places and so was but little favored with opportunity to gain an education. He always accompanied his father on his long and arduous trips when he became old enough. He could tell of many thrilling escapes from wild animals, having been penned in trees and so forth by them. He has suffered the trying ordeals of many trips over the mountains in the dead of winter, often sleeping on the snow, which was thirty feet deep. All the hardships known to the pioneer and frontiersman have been experienced by our subject and now he is one of the capable, industrious and thrifty farmers of Kootenai county.

He was married in 1880 to Kate Burloin Dang, and one child, Robert, has been born to them.

DAVID K. SMITH. This gentleman is one of the early pioneers in Harrison and he has been a constant resident of the town since the date of his arrival, being now one of the respected and well known business men of the town. He was born in Fountain county, Indiana, on August 18, 1845. The father died when he was very young and the mother when he was fourteen years old. He gained his education by attending the common schools and working for his board, receiving three months schooling each year. He labored on the farms adjacent to his native place and in February, 1865, he enlisted in the One Hundred and Fiftieth Indiana, Company I. He was in the Shenandoah valley and served until the close of the war, being honorably discharged on August 17, 1865. He returned to his old home in Indiana and in the fall of 1866, he went to Fort Scott, Kansas and there followed various callings until the spring of 1874, when he went to Denver, Colorado, and there lived until 1888. Then he came to Latah, in Washington, purchased railroad land and gave his attention to its improvement until the spring of 1892, when he sold it and came to Harrison. He immediately took up draying, being the first one to do any dray work in the town and for four years he was without opposition. Mr. Smith has done a good business and has some fine business property that is a good dividend producer. Mr. Smith is still operating a good dray line and does a thriving business. He is one of the substantial men of the town, a good citizen and respected by all. Mr. Smith belongs to the Redmen and to the Union and is a charter member of the Maccabees, Harrison Tent No. 5, which is the banner tent of the state.



EDWIN DOUST is well known, highly respected and recognized as one of the capable business men and substantial agriculturists of Kootenai county, where he has wrought as a millwright and contractor in addition to his labors on his fine farm.

Edwin Doust was born in Onondaga county, New York, on January 12, 1850, being the son of Una and Elizabeth (Heath) Doust, natives of England. They came to this country in 1845, farmed eight years in New York, where our subject was born, then returned to England to look after an estate and there died in 1873. Edwin was educated in this country and in England and at the age of thirteen he shipped on the Paraguay as ship carpenter and did faithful duty for six years. On April 26, 1869, he landed in New York and went thence to Syracuse to visit a brother. Two years were spent there and he married during this time. In 1872 he went to St. Louis and for five years labored at his trade there. In 1877 he went to Leadville, Colorado, and mined and built mills until 1883. Then he came to the Coeur d'Alene country and soon returned to Leadville, whence he traveled in Mexico and in 1887 came to Washington. A year later he returned to Colorado and in the fall of 1889 he came to Idaho and since that time he has remained here.

Mr. Doust is a Republican and was appointed deputy sheriff of Kootenai county in 1891, under W. J. McClure, Democrat, and two years later he was reappointed by John J. Costelo, Democrat, serving two years each time. At the end of this service he was appointed by W. Ryan, Republican, and served two years. He then bought his present place, a farm of one hundred and sixty acres. This was raw land when he took it and he has built a fine house and other buildings and improved it so it is one of the handsomest places in this section. In 1900 Mr. Doust was nominated for sheriff of the county against Charles Dyer, Democrat and Fusionists, and he was defeated, and since that time he has given strict attention to his business. In September, 1901, he went to Oregon and built a twenty-five stamp mill, returning in February, 1902.

In 1871 Mr. Doust married Mrs. Martha Oger, widow of James Oger and daughter of Hezekiah and Mary McConnell, natives of Ireland. Mrs. Doust had two children by her former husband, James D. and D. W.

Mr. Doust had the distinction of boarding the Kearsarge three days before she sunk the Alabama. He was shipwrecked in 1868 in the German ocean and the same year he assisted to save the crew of a German ship which had foundered at sea and for this brave act he carries a silver medal presented by the German government.

DAVID K. SMITH.

RASMOS CHRISTENSEN. Among the progressive and industrious agriculturists of Kootenai county is to be mentioned the gentleman whose name appears above and who has wrought for a number of years in this good calling with a gratifying success. His estate of one quarter section lies four miles west from Bonners Ferry.

Rasmos was born in Denmark, on March 12, 1845, being the son of Christ Hansen and Sophia Rasmossen, natives of Denmark, where they remained until the time of their death. Our subject received a common school education and at the age of fourteen went to work for himself. He wrought on the farm for wages until he was twenty-six and then came to America in 1871. He located in Moline, Illinois, for one year and then went thence to Wisconsin, where he worked in the woods and at sawmilling for two and one-half years. He was in Minnesota a short time after this and then went to Nebraska, where he remained three years. In 1879 we see him in Salt Lake City, where he wrought in the smelter for five years. Another move was made, this time to San Francisco, where he remained one year and then came to Seattle. For five years he was occupied in the woods and sawmills adjacent to that place and then he went to Helena and Butte, where he labored in the mines for five years or so. It was in 1892 that he came to his present place, taking his land as a homestead. Mr. Christensen has remained here since that time and has devoted his efforts to improving his place and raising stock. He has gained a good success and has well earned the competence that he enjoys. In 1892 he had the distinction of riding on the first train from Bonners Ferry to Sandpoint, taking seven hours to make the trip. Mr. Christensen is active in political matters and especially so in the local affairs, being a Republican. He has six brothers and four sisters. He is a member of the Danish Lutheran church and is highly respected by all, being upright and possessed of integrity and sound principles.

THOMAS J. JONES. A representative business man of Bonners Ferry, a good and respected citizen, patriotic and public minded, a pioneer of this portion of Kootenai county, the subject of this article is eminently deserving of a representation in this volume, both because of the points mentioned and also because of his own intrinsic worth as a man. He is in charge of a good drug business, which he owns and wherein he has achieved a good success.

Thomas J. Jones was born in Marion county, Iowa, on November 22, 1864, being the son of A. J. and Mary E. (Starbuck) Jones, natives of Indiana, and who are mentioned elsewhere in this volume. Thomas J. was educated in the high school at Riverton, Fremont county, Iowa, and he remained with his father until eighteen years of age. Then he started the battle of life for himself and taught school for two years in the country and then one year in the graded schools at Riverton. Then he went to Kansas, acted as salesman and taught school and was bookkeeper in a lumber office. Later he was bookkeeper in the Alton City Bank and in 1888 he came with his people to Kootenai county. He was bookkeeper and manager for William Eaton for five years and then entered the employ of the Bonners Ferry Mercantile Company, where he did excellent service for six years. It was in 1899 that Mr. Jones opened a drug store in Bonners Ferry and since that time he steadily prosecuted this business with a gratifying success. He has, by his geniality, uniform treatment of customers and skill in his business gained a lucrative trade and he is one of the substantial business men of the town today. Mr. Jones also has eighty acres adjoining town, which is planted to different varieties of fruit and also he owns considerable town property.

In October, 1896, Mr. Jones married Miss Ambrosia, daughter of William and Amelia (Cox) Eaton, an account of whose lives appears elsewhere in this volume. To this happy marriage there have been born two children, Vera and Hazel. In political affairs Mr. Jones is a stanch Republican and is always active in local matters, as well as in state and national politics. He was elected clerk of the town board in 1892 and served until 1895, and again in 1896 he was chosen to the same position and served until 1898.

ANDREW J. JONES. This gentleman is one of the pioneers of the fertile region adjacent to Bonners Ferry; in 1889 he had a hotel there, which was built of logs and was about the first in that section. He has been identified with the progression and advancement of the county since his advent and is a highly respected citizen who has gained a becoming success in his labors.

Andrew J. Jones was born in Vigo county, Indiana, on October 27, 1830, being the son of Horatia and Rachel (Rust) Jones, natives of Indiana and Pennsylvania, respectively. The father died in Indiana in 1830. The mother died in Iowa. Our subject's paternal grandfather was employed in the Revolutionary service as a gunsmith. Andrew J. received the education to be had from the training given in the primitive school of his time and gave himself to assist his mother in the support of the family. They had removed to Fountain county, Indiana, and there he remained until twenty-four. Then he bought one hundred and forty acres of land, which he brought to a good state of cultivation and then sold. He purchased another piece in the same county and sold it in 1865. Then he came to Missouri and three years later went thence to Fremont county, Iowa. He freighted for two years, worked a farm one year and then went to Riverton and worked in a lumber yard for six years.

Next we see him in Kansas and for two and one-half years he worked for one man there in a lumber yard. It was thence that he came to Kootenai county and erected the hotel that we have mentioned above. He operated it for two and one-half years and then moved one-half mile out and took a homestead of forty-nine acres, which he has planted to fruit and vegetables.

In 1852 Mr. Jones married Miss Maryetta, daughter of Shubel and Mary (Yates) Starbuck, natives of Indiana. The mother died when Mrs. Jones was young and the father some time later. To our worthy subject and his estimable wife there have been born four children: Constante, married and living in Fremont county, Iowa; Volentis, married and living in Nebraska; Thomas, married to Ambrosia Eaton, living in Bonners Ferry; Annabell, wife of Dr. T. A. Bishop. Mr. Jones is a member of the A. F. & A. M.

ISAIAH CAUSTON. This respected citizen and well-to-do agriculturist of the vicinity of Bonners Ferry has had an interesting career and as he is one of the substantial and capable men of this section he is entitled to representation in his county history, inasmuch also as he has done much toward the development of the resources of the county and its material progress.

Isaiah Causton was born in England, at Fobham, near the Thames, on May 8, 1851, being the son of Isaiah and Louisa (Moore) Causton, natives also of that land. The father was a sworn officer in a large corporation, whose duties were to see that both the public and the corporation were properly dealt with. He died in 1892. The mother came to America in the following year, locating at Philadelphia, where she died in 1902. Our subject was educated in the common schools at his native place and at the early age of seven, he being the oldest of thirteen children, he went to peddling herrings to the soldiers in the barracks. He bought ten pence's worth of herrings and sold them so as to realize seven pence profit. This much he gained each day. This work continued uninterruptedly for five years and he had saved a goodly amount and he enlarged his business and the last year he did business there he cleared one thousand dollars. In 1890 he came to Canada, rented a farm and also did stone mason work. It was in 1894 that he came to Bonners Ferry and took a homestead, four miles out. He has done well in his labors and in 1901 he commenced the dairy business, in which he has also had a good success, owing to his care and skill in the prosecution of the business. In addition to his farm, his dairy and other property he has eighteen town lots.

September 1, 1873, Mr. Causton married Miss Elizabeth Brentnall, whose parents were natives of London, England. To this happy marriage there have been born ten children, seven of whom are living and named as follows: Elizabeth, wife of Louis Amerman, living in Bonners Ferry; Ada, wife of Louis Johnson, living at Bothwell, near Seattle; Mr. Johnson had the distinction of driving the outlaw, Harry Tracey, to the house of Mrs. Van Horne, in Woodland park; George, single, and a member of the K. O. T. M.; Harriett, Emma, Albert and Fred. Mr. Causton takes an active part in political matters and manifests intelligence and zeal in support of the government. He is a member of the K. O. T. M., in Bonners Ferry, and his wife is affiliated with the L. O. T. M. of the same place.

JOHN OHOGGE is one of the vigorous and stirring business men of Bonners Ferry who has made a brilliant success in his endeavors. He is proprietor of a first-class butcher shop in Bonners Ferry and one in Sandpoint. He also has a fine farm of about two hundred acres near Bonners Ferry, one hundred and sixty acres of which are producing hay. It is one of the best farms in the valley. Mr. Ohogge has also a couple of business buildings in Bonners Ferry, two stories high, besides his shop, residence and a dozen good lots. Mr. Ohogge is also the possessor of some fine mines, among which may be mentioned four claims on Round prairie. These have a ledge seventy-five feet wide and assays show gold to the value of over nine dollars per ton. He also has two claims in the Buckhorn district which show a valuation of thirty-eight dollars in gold.

Reverting to the initial history of our subject, we note that he was born in Scotland, on June 11, 1854, being the son of W. W. and Anna (Patterson) Ohogge, also natives of Scotland. They removed to Canada and in 1868 came to the United States, locating in Buffalo, New York. The father was one of the largest contractors of his time and among the many excellent works that he executed we note the following: He built the fortifications for the Canadian government at Point Libbie, and the Grand Trunk bridge across the Thames, Canada; then he built mason work for nine miles on the Intercolonial Railroad; the next was a large stone church in Guelph, Ontario; then he built the foundation for the Clark hotel in Chicago; and at Paisley, Ontario; he erected several large buildings, and in 1898 he died. John was educated in Scotland, but had very meagre opportunity for educational training, being obliged to gain most that he acquired by careful personal research. At the tender age of seven he went to sea with his brother and sailed with him for five years. Then he shipped on another vessel until he was twenty. He had been quartermaster for five years and for three years he was mate. At the time of his leaving the sea at twenty, he had first-class mate's papers. In 1875 he went to Manitoba and shipped cattle and horses to that country from Montana and spent fourteen years in this business. Then he came to Spokane and at Crossport furnished the Great Northern with meat for the period of their construction. It was in 1891 that he established a butcher shop in Bonners Ferry and since that date he has steadily devoted himself to this business, with the other interests mentioned above, and he is one of the respected and successful business men of the town. He has eighty head of cattle and a good many horses in addition to the other property mentioned.

In 1886 Mr. Ohogge married Miss Eva, daughter of Thomas and Rosetta (Janes) Ammermon, natives, respectively, of England and Canada. They came to the United States when young, locating in Bay City, Michigan, where the mother died and the father came west in 1891. Politically Mr. Ohogge is always active and is allied with the Democrats. He is a member of the K. of P. at Bonners Ferry and of the B. P. O. E. in Spokane. His wife is a member of the Presbyterian church.

JANET R. SINCLAIR. This well known and estimable lady lives three and one-half miles west from Bonners Ferry, where she has a fine stock farm and also handles a general farming business. She is a native of Nova Scotia and came to Washington in 1880, with her husband, Daniel G. Sinclair. They located in North Yakima and in 1888 came to their present location in Kootenai county. In 1893 Mr. Sinclair died and left the wife and three sons. Mrs. Sinclair has done nobly in managing affairs, and is very successful in her labors. When they first came they bought a quarter section, well improved, and to this she has added at different times until she now has six hundred and eighty acres of land. She has about fifty head of cattle and six horses. In 1901 she took a homestead adjoining her home place. Considerable of her land is good for hay and she has abundant crops of this. In the panic of 1893-4 she lost heavily, having on hand considerable land which she was purchasing from the railroad. After those grievous years, which cast a gloom over the entire land, our subject has done better. She is well respected in the community and beloved, while her premises manifest thrift and industry.

JAMES E. DOLAN is at the present time inspector of customs at Bonners Ferry, and is one of the substantial and leading citizens of Kootenai county, having been influential and prominent in all the years in which he has been in the county. He was a delegate to the first county convention that nominated a straight Republican ticket and he assisted in organizing the Republican party in the county. He has always taken a prominent place in active work in politics until of late: and now the duties of his office being quite absorbing, he has given himself to them.

James E. Dolan was born in Brooklyn, New York, on August 1, 1860, being the son of James and Bedelia (Clancy) Dolan, natives of Ireland. They came to America in 1855 and ten years later removed from New York, via Panama, to Oregon City, where they remained the balance of their lives. The father died in 1889 and ten years later the mother passed the dark river. They were the parents of eight children. Our subject was educated in Oregon City, Portland, and completed this important branch of his life's preparation in taking a college course at Vancouver. In 1881 he read law one year with E. L. Esthan, in Oregon City, and then entered commercial life for Jacob Brothers, owners of the Oregon woolen mills in Portland. Five years he remained there and then came to Idaho in the employ of the Kootenai Mining and Smelting Company, of New Haven, Connecticut, with whom he remained for five years. In 1890 he was appointed special inspector of customs for the United States for one year. In 1892 he was ordered to Bonners Ferry as deputy United States collector of customs, being the first custom official in Idaho. In 1893 he resigned this position and the following year he was appointed to his present position.

In 1891 Mr. Dolan married Miss Mary, daughter of Henry and Augusta Schirmir, natives of Germany. The father was a sea captain from Hamburg to Liverpool, and died in Hamburg in 1879, and the mother is still living in America. To Mr. and Mrs. Dolan the following children have been born: Harrison James, Ella Rose, Willis, deceased, Fred T. Debois. Mr. Dolan is a member of the I. O. O. F., Utopia Lodge No. 36, of Bonners Ferry; of the K. of P., Acme Lodge No. 15; of the M. W. A., both of the last also in Bonners Ferry. He and his wife are also members of the Rebekahs. They are highly respected people and are esteemed by all, being valued members of society.

LOUIS E. BOYKER. This gentleman is a typical frontiersman and has been a pioneer in various sections all of his life. At the present time he is handling a nursery, three miles west from Bonners Ferry, where he has a choice stock of all varieties of fruit trees, ornamental trees, shrubs and plants for sale. He is a thorough nurseryman and already is doing a good business, having been engaged in this place but a short time.

Louis E. Boyker was born in Maine on June 3, 1849, being the son of William R. and Elizabeth (Anderson) Boyker, natives of England and Scotland, respectively. They came to this country when young, locating in Maine, where the mother died. The father died in Kent, Washington, May 26, 1903, aged eighty-four. Our subject was educated in the common schools in Maine, and started for himself when fifteen years of age. He went to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and labored in a tin shop until 1869, then went to where Denver now stands. He mined on the Platte river in Colorado for one year and then went to the Black Hills, South Dakota, in 1875. He located claims that made good mines, and in 1878 came to Montana and mined in that state for ten years. It was 1892 that he came to Bonners Ferry, where he has followed mining mostly since. In 1902 he purchased the nursery mentioned above, and where he now lives.

In 1900 Mr. Boyker married Miss Julia E., daughter of Richard and Jestina Fry. In political matters Mr. Boyker is always active, both in the local affairs and in state politics as well. In 1898 he was elected constable for two years, and was also marshal of Bonners Ferry for two years. He has always given satisfaction in his public services, being faithful and efficient. Mr. Boyker is a member of the K. of P., Acme Lodge, No. 15, of Bonners Ferry.

RICHARD A. FRY, deceased. No compilation that has to do with the history of Kootenai county would be complete without an account of the worthy gentleman and renowned pioneer whose name is at the head of this memoir. No man was better known in all this northwest country than Richard A. Fry. He was a pioneer and frontiersman in the true sense of the word and was a fearless champion of the cause of right and an untiring friend to those in distress. We therefore append a brief recital of the salient points in his career.

Richard A. Fry was born in Knox county, Illinois, in March, 1838, and in 1849 he came with his parents to Linn county, Oregon, they having made the trip across the plains with wagons. He participated in the Cayuse Indian war of 1855-6 and assisted to capture the old Indian warrior, Pu-pu-mox-mox. He was in Company H, Oregon Volunteers, then, and the youngest member of the company. After the war spoken of he returned to his home in Oregon and soon left for the Colville country where he engaged in trapping and mining. With his brother, he engaged in the merchandising business at the mouth of the Pend Oreille river and in his absence the Indians killed his brother and ransacked the store, taking what they pleased. The British gave him a commission, aided by George Montour, to order the Indians to desist. He and his companion were captured and while the savages quarreled as to their execution, they escaped and returned to Colville.

Mr. Fry was familiar with every camp from Victoria to the Kootenai region and had prospected on nearly every tributary of the Columbia.

He came to Bonners Ferry in 1876, settled down and established a post for trading. He bought the ferry from Mr. Bonner and operated it for sixteen years. He conducted a stage line and pack train from Walla Walla to Wild Horse, a mining camp in British Columbia, and was one of the most prominent men in opening up the country. He was ever on the side of right and the Indians had implicit faith in him and in many cases his kindly assistance secured them right from persecutors.

In 1892 he retired to his ranch below Bonners Ferry and his extensive lands, all well handled, proclaimed his skill, thrift and industry.

On December 14, 1898, while attending court business in Rathdrum, the summons came suddenly and Mr. Fry passed away. His funeral, held in Bonners Ferry, was one of the greatest concourses of people ever assembled there on a like occasion. The Indians deeply mourned when he passed away. The old pioneers, every acquaintance, and all who knew of him joined in sincere expression of sorrow, for all knew that a good man had gone to his rest and we would see his familiar form dispensing charitable deeds on every hand no more. He was generous to a fault and no man can say that he ever left the door of Richard Fry without food and the comforts of life.

Mr. Fry left a widow and eight children, George, Clarence, Frank, Mrs. Arthur E. Bunting, Mrs. I. J. Brant, Mrs. Charles Ewing, Mrs. George T. Kane, and little Annie, the youngest.

The country is indebted to Mr. Fry for the intrepidity and courage he manifested in his career in opening the way for others to follow in the development of this country, in the worthy labors that he did for the welfare of all who lived here and in paving the way for a greater civilization.

JUDGE HENRY MELDER. This gentleman holds the position of deputy collector of customs at Bonners Ferry and is well known as a capable, thorough, upright business man and an honorable gentleman. Henry Melder was born in Calmar, Sweden, on January 10, 1830. He came to America when a child, and received a high school education. At thirteen he took a position as cabin boy on a vessel bound for a three years' cruise around the world. He spent two years in Peru and Chile and returned to New York in 1847. He next went to Vera Cruz and thence to Hamburg, Germany, taking there the examination in navigation which gave him first mate's papers. Returning to New Orleans, he made the leading ports of the world and later coasted out of New York. In 1850 he started, via Panama, to California, arriving in San Francisco in April, 1850. He sailed on the bay for a year, then bought a small schooner and operated it until 1854. Then, on account of sickness, he sold his property and went to Iowa. In the winter of 1854 he bought a hotel in Calmar, enlarged it, started a town site and did a big business until 1857. Then we see him in Freeborn county, Minnesota, where he bought a farm and was elected justice of the peace and tax collector. He had the first white child born in his family that was born in that county. In 1861 he was forced from that place by the Indians, and he went to Chicago and sailed on the lakes for three years. He enlisted in a company for the war, but was rejected on account of poor eyesight. In 1867 he went to Minnesota, sold his farm and the next year went to California. He was attorney and deputy county surveyor of Sonoma county for eight years, and in 1879 he came to Spokane. He practiced law there for a time, and in 1881 he came to Rathdrum and opened a law office. He practiced there with good success until 1898, when he received his present position and came to Bonners Ferry. He was the first probate judge of Kootenai county, was a member of the constitutional convention in 1889 and in 1892 he was nominated by his party, the Republican, for probate judge, but at that time the party was defeated. Judge Melder has the distinction of casting his first vote for Fremont and has staid with his party since that time.

RICHARD A. FRY

In 1856 Mr. Melder married Miss Sarah J., daughter of Harris and Ledia (Lunt) Bloggett, natives, respectively, of Vermont and Maine. To this happy union there have been born the following children: Oscar F., married and living in this county; Henry L., single and living in Rathdrum; Fredrick E., married and living in Spirit valley; Gustave E., single, living on Priest river; Minnie A., wife of Ed Rose, in Spokane; Clara H., wife of Robert Bragaw, at Priest river; Mary E., wife of A. J. Young, at Twin lake.

Judge Melder is a member of the Masons, Coeur d'Alene Lodge, No. 34; of the I. O. O. F., No. 36, and of the Rebekahs, No. 43, both at Bonners Ferry; of the A. O. U. W., Spokane Lodge, No. 16, of Spokane, being the organizer of this lodge in 1881; of the Rathbone Sisters. Mrs. Melder is a member of the Rathbone Sisters, at Rathdrum, Idaho, and of the Rebekahs, No. 43, in Bonners Ferry. She is also a member of the Presbyterian church.

WILLIAM R. ELSASSER. One mile north from Sandpoint is the farm of our subject. He pays especial attention to fruit raising and mining, and has done commendable labor in the upbuilding and substantial development of this portion of the county, being a man of deep resources and an adaptability that enables him to take advantage of the opportunities of the day.

William R. Elsasser was born in Chicago on March 11, 1864, being the son of Jacob and Catherine (Trimpy) Elsasser, natives, respectively, of Germany and Switzerland. They came to this country when young and located in Chicago, operating there a cigar factory and general store. In 1884 they removed to Sanger, Texas, where they live now, retired. They were the parents of five children,—Kate, with parents; Anna, wife of James Perry, at Valley View, Texas; J. Fred, married and living in Sanger, Texas; John T., married and living in Sandpoint; William R., the subject of this review. William R. was educated at Three Oaks and in 1884 went with his parents to Texas. At eight o'clock, P. M., on August 8, 1888, Mr. Elsasser and his brother, John, started for northern Idaho for the purpose of trapping and hunting. They were led to make the trip on account of poor health. Upon landing here they found that more money was to be made in timber work and contracting, and therefore went at it. They made from five to eighteen dollars apiece, each day all season, and the next year they did better. They contracted telephone and telegraph poles for the Rock Mountain Bell Telephone Company. In 1890 they made a trip to British Columbia, prospecting, and were among the very first to penetrate the Kootenai lake district. In 1891 they returned to Texas and purchased four hundred acres of land, expecting to farm it, but on account of poor health they were again forced to leave that country, and so came to the vicinity of Sandpoint. Our subject took his homestead, and to the improvement of it and in general timber work and mining he has been engaged since. He has thirteen and one-half acres of orchard, it being exceptionally fine. He has fine buildings, having built three houses,—the first in 1889, the next in 1893 and his present tasty residence in 1897. Mr. Elsasser is a man of enterprise and ability and has accomplished much in the development of the country, while his geniality and warmheartedness have won him hosts of friends.

JONAS P. PEARSON is one of the substantial and industrious men who has wrought in Kootenai county for its material progress and development and is entitled to a place in its annals as one of the real builders of the county. He is a man of integrity and good principles, stands well among his fellows and manifests integrity and reliability in his walks.

Jonas P. Pearson was born in Bracke, Sweden, on May 28, 1862, being the son of Per and Christine Matson, also natives of Sweden. They were thrifty farmers of their section, and the mother died in 1889, but the father is still living, aged eighty-four, and is hale and hearty. They were the parents of six children, five of whom are living, as follows: M. J., living in Australia; Ole, Leander, Stena B. and Jonas P., the immediate subject of this sketch. Jonas studied in the common schools until seventeen years and then went to work for himself. He worked for a farmer for one year and then rented his father's farm for three years, after which he went to work in a store. Three years were occupied in that employment and three more in a paper mill as foreman, when in 1891 Mr. Pearson came to America. He located first in Minneapolis for a short time and then came to Montana and later to Spokane, where he railroaded for a time. Then he went to the woods, and lumbering and railroading engaged his attention until 1897, when he purchased a man's right to the land where he now lives, two and one-half miles south from Sandpoint. He has nearly one quarter section and devotes his attention to general farming and also to logging. Mr. Pearson has some fine orchards and he is steadily improving and clearing the land for crops. He owns his own logging outfit and does considerable of this labor for others, on contract.

Mr. Pearson is a charter member of the M. W. A., Sandpoint Camp, No. 7191. He also belongs to the Lutheran church. He is a man of good habits and wisdom and has manifested his ability to transform the resources of this section into good property.

JOHN T. ELSASSER. In the fruit and farming industries of Kootenai county the subject of this article takes a good rank. He has a fine farm about one mile north from Sandpoint, where he is handling about fourteen acres of orchard and also doing a general farming business. In addition to this, Mr. Elsasser has a fine mine about two miles from the farm, which he and his brother own in partnership, while also in Buffalo Hump and Republic countries he owns mining interests.

John T. Elsasser was born in Chicago on November 18, 1862, being the son of Jacob F. and Catherine (Trimpy) Elsasser, natives of Germany and Switzerland, respectively. They came to America when about fifteen and located in Chicago, it being then a very small town. The father operated a cigar factory and store and remained there until 1869, about twenty years. Then a move was made to Three Oaks, Michigan, and in 1884 they went to Texas, where they purchased a farm of two thousand, one hundred and thirty acres. They now rent this and are retired from active life. In the great Chicago fire they lost three houses and then sold their real estate. John T. was educated in Chicago and in Michigan and when eighteen quit school and devoted his whole time to laboring with his father. When twenty-six, in company with his brother, William, he came to northern Idaho to trap and hunt, but finding an opening in the pole business, they went at it, and on one contract they realized eighteen hundred dollars' profit. In 1890 they went to British Columbia and prospected, being among the first ones in the Kootenai Lake district. In 1891 they returned to Texas and bought a large farm and settled down, but failing health drove them hence again, and they returned to their claims, which adjoin in the woods north from Sandpoint. The house where they had stored all their tools was burned and they rebuilt. Since that time they have given their time to mining and fruit culture.

In 1891 Mr. Elsasser married Miss Ollie Campbell, whose parents live in Texas, and to this happy union three children have been born,—May, James T. and Lora. Mr. Elsasser is a man of good principles, is a fine neighbor, a loyal friend, a true and upright man and a patriotic citizen, having gained the good will and esteem of all.

ROBERT S. BRAGAW. Few men are better known in Kootenai county than the subject of this sketch. Having come hither in its early days, he has so identified himself with its interests and development that he is rightly esteemed by all as a leading and substantial citizen.

Robert S. Bragaw was born in New London, Connecticut, on October 1, 1851. His parents, now both deceased, were born on Long Island. Our subject was educated in the public schools of his native place and when nineteen went to New York city and accepted a position in a wholesale grocery house. In the spring of 1874 he went to Colorado, and for a decade thereafter he was engaged in clerical work and mining. In the winter of 1883-4 Mr. Bragaw came with the wave to the mines in Shoshone county, near Murray. The following summer he came from that section to Rathdrum, Kootenai county. From October 16, 1884, to January 12, 1899, fourteen years and three months, Mr. Bragaw was clerk of the district court and recorder of Kootenai county, residing during this time in Rathdrum, the county seat. This extended service to the people of Kootenai county was wrought with excellent execution and entire satisfaction to all. On May 26, 1899, Mr. Bragaw was accorded a position in the Forest Reserve force of the United States, and was installed as supervisor of the Priest River Forest Reserve in Idaho and Washington, in which capacity he has continued since. His office and headquarters are at the town of Priest River.

On December 31, 1885, Mr. Bragaw married Miss Clara H. Medler, whose parents reside at Bonners Ferry, her father being deputy collector of customs there. Mrs. Bragaw was born in California on April 13, 1869, and came to Kootenai county with her parents when she was eleven years of age. On May 2, 1889, Robert S. Bragaw, Jr., was born to this marriage. He is now in the high school in Spokane.

MARCUS D. WRIGHT is truly one of the builders of Kootenai county. He was a prime mover in its organization in 1881 and was its first assessor and collector. In July of the same year he assisted to plat the town site of Rathdrum, being half owner. In the same year he established a general merchandise store there and has continued it until the present, being now one of the leading merchants of the northern part of the state. He has a branch establishment in Postfalls, and did own one at Saint Maries. Last year his business in the merchandise line footed one hundred and twenty thousand. In addition to this Mr. Wright has bought and sold much land and now has ten thousand acres in Kootenai county alone. Half of this vast estate is agricultural and the balance timber land. From 1886 until the present Mr. Wright has also been doing a large business in handling ties for the Northern Pacific. During these years that company has paid him over one million dollars for ties alone. At the present time Mr. Wright is handling, in addition to the mammoth enterprises mentioned, a large grading contract on the electric line from Spokane to Coeur d'Alene. These facts at once convey to the mind that the gentleman of whom we now have the pleasure to speak, is one of the heavy operators in various leading business lines in the northwest, and the unstinted success wrought out in every department of his large enterprises is due solely to the executive force, keen discrimination and sound methods of business possessed and used by Mr. Wright.

Reverting to the personal matter of his career we note that Marcus D. Wright was born in Kentucky on April 16, 1851, and is the son of John W. and Mary (Gipson) Wright, also natives of Kentucky. They were the parents of seven children, and six of them are still living. The father died in Illinois, aged sixty-four, but the mother is still living in Germantown, Kentucky. The first seventeen years of life were spent by our subject in his native state, and the educational training so useful in life was there obtained from the public schools. Then came a journey to St. Joseph, Missouri, where he made his home until his majority. In 1871 he went to Montana, and six years later went thence to Spokane, Washington. In 1881 he was found in what is now Kootenai county, and his career here has been one of leader all the time, wherein he has ever manifested both sterling worth and integrity, ever allying himself with those measures and movements which are for improvement.

In 1881 Mr. Wright married Miss Bertie Piper, a native of California, and to them were born eight children,—Florence A., wife of M. F. Darling, of Dayton, Washington; May W., Elida R., Zella Z., John J., Bertie D., Stella H. and M. Gordon. On February 9, 1900, Mr. Wright was called to mourn the death of his faithful wife, and her remains rest in Pine Grove cemetery at Rathdrum, Idaho.

On September 20, 1902, Mr. Wright married Mrs. Marie W. Bennett, stepdaughter of the late A. M. Cannon, of Spokane.

Politically Mr. Wright is allied with the Democratic party, and, while ever active in bringing good men to the front and in forwarding those measures which are for the general welfare, he has never accepted office since the county got well under way.

JOHN S. WOOLERY. This enterprising business man is one of the potent factors in the political life and development of Kootenai county, being at the present time managing a first-class livery and feed business in Rathdrum, while also he is devoting considerable attention to buying and selling horses. He was born in Matilda, Ontario, on June 3, 1856, being the son of J. M. and Margaret (Coons) Woolery, natives of Canada, where the mother died in 1862, being buried in the Matilda cemetery. The father brought his family to Faribault county, Minnesota, in 1864, and there he died in August, 1901. Our subject received his education from the common school in that county and at sixteen devoted his whole attention to assisting his father on the farm until his majority, when he went to the Red River valley and took a preemption, tilling the same until 1880. Then he took a timber claim, and three years later his health failed and he sold and removed to Rice county, Minnesota. Later he went to contracting on the Great Northern and did well for three years. He then gave his attention to buying and selling horses until 1892, when he came to Rathdrum and opened his present livery business. Mr. Woolery has always been successful in all of his business ventures, because of his energy and sagacity. In political matters he has ever been active and his first ballot was cast for R. B. Hayes.

On November 29, 1881, Mr. Woolery married Miss Katherine, daughter of John and Julie (Bowen) Cleland, natives of Canada, and to them have been born three children, Edna E., deceased; Alton L., going to school; and Faetta. Mr. Woolery has four brothers and two sisters, C. H., farming in Marshall county, Minnesota; Alpha, engaged in flour milling in Rice county, Minnesota; Gardner, farming in Faribault, Minnesota; Harris, there also; Mary, wife of John Palon, living in Dundas, Rice county, Minnesota; Mr. Woolery is a member of the K. of P., Panhandle Lodge, No. 13; also of the K. O. T. M. Mrs. Woolery is a member of the Ladies of the K. O. T. M. Mr. Woolery's father was a noted Methodist preacher, having joined that church when he was sixteen. He studied for the ministry, was ordained at the age of twenty-one, and preached continuously until his death. He was an exceptionally gifted extemporaneous speaker, never being known to read his sermons. His career was fraught with much faithful effort that resulted in accomplishment of untold good.

WARREN A. HART. This genial gentleman is proprietor of a large general merchandise establishment in Rathdrum, where he does a fine business, having by his close attention to his business and kind treatment of patrons established a fine trade from the surrounding country, being also a man of ability and uprightness, while he has made hosts of friends throughout the country.

Mr. Hart was born in Onondaga county, New York, on October 19, 1842, being the son of Orren and Clarissa (Cornwell) Hart, natives, respectively, of New York and Connecticut, the mother being descended from the Pilgrims of the Mayflower. They were married in New York, and in 1856 moved to Sauk county, Wisconsin, and farmed there for ten years, then came to Olmstead county, Minnesota, and tilled the soil there for twenty-four years. The father died in the winter of 1891, at Pleasant Valley, Minnesota, and was buried by the Masonic fraternity, having been a popular member of that order. The mother is still living, aged eighty-two, at Alden, Minnesota. Our subject was with the parents in these various moves and he gained his schooling in Wayne county, New York, and also in Wisconsin, and at the age of eighteen years he was stirred by the patriotism of his loyal spirit to enlist in the Eleventh Wisconsin under C. L. Harris, where he served his term of three years. Then, being honorably discharged, he immediately re-enlisted in the Ninth U. S. Veterans, First Army Corps, Company C, under General Hancock, where he served for one year, being discharged as sergeant, and having entered as private. He served in the siege of Vicksburg, fought at Sabine cross roads, was in many skirmishes, and assisted to build the Red river dam under General Banks. At Sabina cross roads the fight was severe. Out of twenty-four pieces of artillery they lost twenty-two, and from six thousand men four thousand were captured. His entire service was four years and six months, and he saved seven hundred dollars. Following the war, Mr. Hart went to work as a hod carrier for a year in Minnesota, then took a homestead in Freeborn county, that state, and farmed for ten years, then rented the land and came to Kootenai county in 1883. He wrought as a carpenter for a year, putting up his present fine store building. He went into mercantile pursuits and now his sagacity and industry have accumulated a fine fortune of many thousand dollars. In addition to the store, which is a large and well stocked one, Mr. Hart has a fine real estate holding of seven farms, and he has also started a bank, which his excellent business ability and financiering amply fit him to operate in a successful manner. He has recently builded a stone business block adjoing his store, with sixty foot frontage, and this is rented. In 1890 Mr. Hart lost two thousand dollars in a fire. He is now one of the leading men of the county and has well earned the place by display of sterling worth.

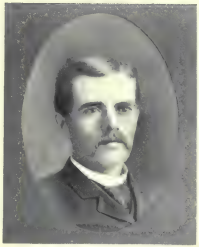
The marriage of Mr. Hart and Miss Arlitta M. Cross was solemnized in 1878, and they have two children, Helen A. and Clarissa, both married. Mrs. Hart is a native of New York; her father died when she was young and her mother in 1888. Mr. Hart is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 73, in Rathdrum, and is noble grand at the present time. He also affiliates with the Masonic fraternity. In political matters Mr. Hart is a stanch Republican, and has been a delegate to three state conventions, as well as serving in the county conventions. His daughter Helen was delegate to state convention in 1900. In addition to all of his arduous and manifold duties of business and the responsibility of managing his large concerns, Mr. Hart is also a man of aesthetic taste and finds time to enjoy a fine gasoline launch that he owns on Fish Lake. This is utilized for excursions, and he is a gracious and popular host. The boat is a beauty and gives great pleasure to him and his family.

SAMUEL VESSER. The excellent county of Kootenai contains many men of true qualities of worth who have labored here to make this a place of beauty and wealth, and a capable one among them is the subject of this article, who lives about seven and one-half miles northwest from Coeur d'Alene, where he has a fine farm of two hunderd and forty acres, which he operates together with eighty acres of rented land. He was born in Bath county, Kentucky, on February 18, 1862, being the son of John and Ann (Wilcox) Vesser, natives of Kentucky. They came to Missouri in 1880, where they now live farming. Samuel was educated in Clark county, Kentucky, whither his parents had gone after his birth, receiving most of the training at the hands of his parents, at home. At the age of twenty-five, he married and started to do for himself. He rented a farm in Saline county, Missouri, and then came west and located in Kootenai county. He worked for wages for eight months and then went to Whitman county, where he bought a quarter section of railroad land. Six months later he sold it and returned to Kootenai county, working again for the same man he did before. One year later, he rented two hundred and fifty acres of land, tilling it for three years. Then he took up his present place, or eighty acres of it, as a homestead and bought a quarter, which gives him the fine estate mentioned above. It requires twelve horses to handle his land and he lays it under tribute to produce annually bountiful crops.



In 1887 Mr. Vesser married Miss Marion B., daughter of Edwin and Jessie (Reid) Crockett, natives respectively of Maine and Scotland. They came west to Missouri in 1881, and in 1891 they came to Kootenai county where they are now farming. To Mr. and Mrs. Vesser have been born six children, named as follows: Edwin, Jessie, Mary, Samuel, Jean and John, all at home with the parents. In political affairs, Mr. Vesser is allied with the Republicans and does good work in the campaigns. He has given of his wisdom and time to the school work on the board for six years. Mr. Vesser is a thorough convert to the excellencies of the county of Kootenai, believing it to be one of the finest climates in the United States, and he intends to make this his home for the balance of his days.

JOHN LARSON, the popular and efficient postmaster at Hope, is a man of sterling worth and integrity and has demonstrated himself a man of good business ability, while in his social life he is genial, popular and possessed of hosts of warm friends. He was born in southern Sweden, on February 25, 1858, the son of Lars M. and Mary (Peterson) Johnson, natives of Sweden, where the father now lives. The mother died in 1872. Mr. Larson has one brother, Lars P., in Sweden. Our subject was well educated in his native land. After passing the public schools, he attended a normal and in 1882 came to America, landing in Minnesota, where he at once went to railroading. He followed this in various places and in all lines of it from the construction up, being in Minnesota, Canada, Wisconsin, Montana and other places for many years. 1887 marks the date of his entering Montana and there he was in charge of the boarding car for special gangs on the Northern Pacific and in 1892 he came to Hope. Here Mr. Larson gave his attention to railroading and also mining and prospecting and is one of the well known men who have been crowned with success in his efforts. On October 17, 1900, Mr. Larson received the appointment of postmaster at Hope, which demonstrates his popularity among the citizens. Since that time he has given his attention to the proper fulfilment of the duties devolving upon him in this incumbency and the result has been and is the general satisfaction of all the patrons of the office.

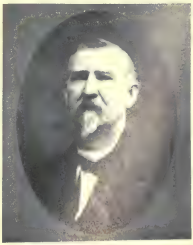
In 1892 Mr. Larson married Miss Matilda Anderburg, a native of Sweden and to them one child has been born, Ethel M., a bright girl. Mr. Larson is a member of the A. O. U. W., the I. O. O. F., the Degree of Honor and is a popular man in these relations. He is a Republican and his wife is an ardent supporter of that party. Mr. Larson was brought up in the Lutheran faith but is now an adherent of the Congregational church. Mr. Larson and his estimable wife are leading members of society and are well posted in the questions of the day and manifest an intelligent interest in the welfare and progress of the county and state.

SAMUEL VESSER.

JOHN LARSON.

MRS. JOHN LARSON.

BRANSON M. ROSS.



MRS. BRANSON M. ROSS.

MRS. PERCY J. BENNETT.

PERCY J. BENNETT.

JOHN FERNAN.

BRANSON M. ROSS. To such men as Branson Ross, Kootenai county owes its present good development. He has done a great amount toward placing the county in a progressive and prosperous state. Not only does his fine large farm show his industry and wisdom, but the example that he has placed before his fellows has stimulated them to extra effort and an untold amount of good has been the result. He does a general farming business, and doubtless has the finest orchard in the county today. He has been exceptionally successful in this line because of the care and wise effort bestowed.

Reverting more to the details of his life, we note that Mr. Ross was born in Mercer county, Ohio, on April 10, 1834, being the son of James and Elizabeth (Parrott) Ross, natives respectively of Tennessee and Ohio. The parents removed to Van Buren county, Iowa, in a very early day, and thence to Mahaska county, Iowa, where the father died in 1843, being aged fifty-five. He was operating a flour and saw mill and a large farm of several hundred acres at the time of his death. The mother conducted the business until the time of her death in 1853. Our subject and two sisters survived. Branson M. had received his education in the various places where they had lived and at the age of fourteen years, he started for himself. He worked for his board and attended school and also worked out for wages. At the age of twenty-two, he farmed for himself and when twenty-six he went to Colorado and worked in the mines two years. At the time of the Civil war, Mr. Ross attempted to enlist, but as his health was poor, he was rejected. After the trip to Colorado, he returned to Iowa, married and settled down to farming until 1864. Then he removed to Harrison county, Missouri, and followed farming there until 1887, at which time he came to Kootenai county, Idaho. He took a homestead, where he now resides, two and one-half miles east from Postfalls, and to use his own words, "I built a shack and tried to make a living, but the soil was too dry and I had to work out." He finally got some of the land into cultivation and began to raise vegetables and then turned his attention to raising fruit. He has eight hundred peach trees, one hundred prune and plum trees, some nectarines, some apricots, and enough apples to make a total of thirty-six hundred trees all told. His orchard is a model in every respect and Mr. Ross is to be greatly commended in working out the fruit problem and demonstrating for the benefit of others the advisability of prosecuting this great industry. His place is known as Peach Hill, and is a model farm. He has increased the acreage to nearly five hundred and has a fine modern residence, good barns, all out buildings and fences and other accoutrements needed on a first class farm and fruit ranch. Mr. Ross has two hundred acres especially adapted to the culture of fruit. He has also considerable town property in Postfalls, and it is very pleasant to note the transformation of the wild homestead with the little shack to the model farm, embellished with fine buildings and all comforts of a rural abode.

In politics, Mr. Ross is active and influential. He cast a vote for Fremont, his first ballot, and since that time he has been closely identified with the Republican party. He has frequently been offered official positions but constantly refuses, with the exception of school directors, where he labors for the advancement of educational facilities.

In 1862 Mr. Ross married Miss Susan A., daughter of Steven and Mary (Mann) Terhune. The father was a local Methodist preacher, but would never accept a circuit. He was a native of Kentucky and came to Iowa in 1851, to Missouri in 1863, and to Kansas in 1870, where both he and his wife died. To Mr. Ross and his estimable wife there have been twelve children born, ten of whom are now living, named as follows: Stanton D. L., married and living in this county; Emma, wife of Jacob Rego, in Kittitas county, Washington; Nora, wife of Benjamin Carder, in Union county, Oregon; Susa, wife of Benjamin Stockwell, in this county; Naomi, wife of Freeman Luddington, in this county; William, widower, in this county; Osee, wife of Stephen Steward, in Ellensburg, Washington; Effie, wife of William Royce, in Rathdrum; Robert, married to Rosania Newsom, in Spokane; Bessie, at home.

PERCY J. BENNETT is a well known and influential man in Kootenai county, having been active in political matters and ever on the side of improving the affairs of government and in upbuilding the county in general. He is at present and has been for twelve years in charge of the section running east from Athol on the Northern Pacific, while also he owns a farm, a part of which he has platted into town lots, at Athol. He is active in school matters and also is a regular delegate to the county conventions, where his wisdom and good counsel are approved.

Percy J. Bennett was born in Ashton, Illinois, on June 12, 1859, being the son of Samuel and Harriet (Cantelo) Bennett, natives of England and the Isle of Wight, respectively. They came to the United States in 1856 and settled in Ashton, Illinois, remaining there until 1871, and leaving on the night of the Chicago fire for Cedar Rapids, Iowa. In 1879 they moved to Colorado and in 1880 they came to Church Butte, Utah, and in 1889, they came to their present place in Athol. The father now has charge of the section west from Athol and is about seventy years of age. Our subject received his education in the various places where the family lived and when he was nineteen he went to breaking on the railroad. He operated out of Trinidad for three years, then out of Chicago for one year and then Denver, Colorado, was his headquarters for two years. The next move was to open a store in Orchard, where he did well for a period of three years. After that Mr. Bennett freighted in the Rockies until 1890, when he came to Athol and since that time he has been here, giving his attention to the management of the section and also to handling his farm.

In 1896 Mr. Bennett married Miss Mary E., daughter of S. T. and Mary (Ludwig) Wilburn, natives of Maryland and Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig were married in Maryland, then went to West Virginia, later were in Arkansas and then came to Colville, Washington, where they reside now. The father is aged sixty-nine and the mother fifty-eight. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, Frank C. and Louis J. Mr. Bennett is a Democrat and active in the support of his belief. He is a charter member of the M. W. A., Lodge No. 8388, at Athol; also of the I. O. O. F., Pine Lodge No. 75, at Athol; also of the K. of P., Panhandle Lodge No. 13, in Rathdrum, while his wife is a member of the Rebekahs, Evergreen Lodge No. 51. They are members of the Methodist church. Mr. Bennett is well respected, has displayed commendable wisdom in his affairs and is a man worthy to receive the confidence and esteem of all.

JOHN FERNAN. This venerable and worthy citizen and early pioneer to Kootenai county is now one of the respected citizens of Coeur d'Alene and a man in whom safely is reposed the confidence of the people and who justly receives approbation for his worthy and upright walk in this country, while he is at the present time entrusted by the government with the oversight of the buildings in the post at Coeur d'Alene.

Mr. Fernan was born in Elkton, Maryland, on May 15, 1846, being the son of John and Mary (Cruthers) Fernan, natives also of Maryland, where they remained until the time of their death. John was educated in the public schools, and at the tender age of fifteen, he was found enlisting in Company G, Sixth Maryland Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel J. C. Hill. His first battle was at Winchester, where he was captured and sent to languish in Libby prison. Later he was sent to Bell Island and after seven months was exchanged and sent to his regiment. The next engagement was the awful battle of the Wilderness, and there he was wounded and lay in the hospital seven months. After this, he again joined his regiment and fought in the final series of battles that closed the terrible struggle. Then he was mustered out at Washington, D. C. He straightway re-enlisted and served in the regular army for ten years. During this period he came west in 1878 with the Second Infantry, and in 1880 he was honorably discharged on account of disability, at Coeur d'Alene. He took a homestead on what was named from him Fernan lake, and set to make a delightful abode. This was done in a very successful manner, for he had one of the most charming residences in the entire county. He had a goodly portion under cultivation, planted a fine orchard and in January, 1902, he sold the entire property. Since that time, he has been living in Coeur d'Alene.

In 1872 Mr. Fernan married Miss Mary Presley. Her parents, William and Mary (Walker) Presley, were natives of Georgia, where they remained until death, the mother being buried at Atlanta and the father sleeps at Douglas. To our worthy subject and his estimable wife, there have been born seven children, named as follows: Minnie E., wife of George Ege, living near Fernan lake; John M., in Wardner; Arthur, Frank D., Kate, wife of F. B. Swafford, in this county; Jessie, and Amy. Mr. Fernan was appointed by the commissioners the first sheriff of this county but refused to serve. He was elected the following term. He is a member of the G. A. R., McReynolds Post, No. 19. Mrs. Fernan is a member of the Presbyterian church and assisted to organize the local body here. Mr. Fernan is one of the highly respected citizens of the county and is an influential and public minded man.

WILLIAM H. CLELAND. A man of stirring activity, with fine executive ability and practical insight into affairs of life, while he is dominated by a dauntless and upright spirit, the subject of this article is a man of worth and good standing and is eminently entitled to representation in his county's history. William H. was born in South Mountain, Ontario, Canada, on October 30, 1853, being the son of John and Julia C. (Bowen) Cleland, natives of Canada, but immigrants to the United States in 1871, where they located in Rice county, Minnesota, and bought a farm of four hundred and seventy-nine acres. He was one of the leading and prominent agriculturists of that stection. He died at the age of sixty-four and is buried in Northfield cemetery. The mother died at Dundas in 1901. Our subject was well educated, and at eighteen quit school and worked with his father until twenty-seven. Then he bought a quarter section in Lyon county and farmed until 1883, when he came to Spokane. He scored timbers for a bridge and then went to carpentering for F. Post, of Postfalls. He assisted to build the Postfalls mill, freighted from there to Spokane, built a saw mill for Mr. Post, operated the mill the next year, and in 1886 he went back to visit his parents. The next spring we find him west again driving a brewery wagon to Postfalls and Coeur d'Alene from Rathdrum. Three years later, in 1890, he went back to Minnesota and took charge of his father's farm, his health having failed. Two years were spent there and then he settled the estate and came west again, leaving the mother and two younger brothers in Dundas. He came to Rathdrum and in 1893 opened a livery stable in Rathdrum, also a horse market, as he buys and sells many head of stock. He has a well appointed stable and furnishes rigs of all kinds with safe and good horses, and his business ability has been manifest in his success.

On January 1, 1900, Mr. Cleland married Miss

Mary L. Gill, daughter of John and Malinda Gill, natives of Tennessee, but immigrants to Missouri and thence to Washington. The father has passed away but the mother still lives in Rathdrum. Mr. Cleland was one of seven brothers and five sisters, some of whom are mentioned: Elizabeth, deceased; John G., in Portland, Oregon; Kate, married to J. S. Woolery, in Rathdrum; Dave and Dan, twins, the former living in Coeur d'Alene, the latter in Tulare, California; Peter, having charge of the block system on the railroad; Charley, on a farm in Rice county; Andrean, on the old homestead in Minnesota. Mr. Cleland affiliates with the K. of P., Panhandle Lodge, No. 13, and with the Rathbone Sisters; also with the M. W. of A., No. 6843; and the F. O. A., No. 14; and the I. O. O. F., No. 73. He and his wife are members of the Episcopalian church, and Mrs. Cleland is a member of the R. N. of A.

JOSEPH POIRIER. The excellent ability and wisdom of this gentleman, manifested in various ways, which have given him an unbounded success in the financial world, also his industry and vigorous prosecution of business, will be manifested from the appended review of his career, and it reflects great credit upon him. He was born in Sant Jant Baptiste, Canada, on June 8, 1852, being the son of Edward and Dorothy (Wilcott) Poirier, natives of Canada, where the father now lives. The mother died in 1872, being buried in the Catholic cemetery of Sant Jant Baptiste. The following are members of the family: Edward, John, Dorothy, deceased; Madule, Arthur, Louise, Albene, Israel, Louis, Maderise, Ector and the subject of this sketch. Joseph grew to manhood in his native place, and his schooling was scant, as he always preferred the harness of manual labor to study. He put his time to good use in acquiring various mechanical knowledge, which has made him many a dollar since. It was 1876 that he came to Alden, Freeborn county, Minnesota, and settled to farming. In Fairbault county he started a blacksmith shop in connection with his farm, having picked this trade up in his youthful days. Three years later he shipped from St. Paul to Bozeman, Montana, the terminus of the road, then unloaded his goods and drove to Horse Plains, and shipped thence to Rathdrum. He has been here since that time with the exception of a period when he took a pre-emption in the Big Bend country, which property he sold later. In 1884 he built a blacksmith shop and has conducted it since, adding a plumbing shop and also doing a general contracting business. He has four hundred and eighty acres of timber and agricultural land, owns thirty lots and seven dwellings in Rathdrum, forty acres of land on Priest river, two business blocks in Rathdrum, and property in Postfalls, while he is erecting an elegant brick residence at a cost of three thousand dollars. Mr. Poirier is one of the wealthiest men of the city.

In 1893 he married Miss Eugenie, daughter of Meddaugh and Amelia Amom, natives of Canada, where the mother lives, the father having died many years since. To Mr. and Mrs. Poirier one child has been born, Romeo, now attending school. We also note that Mr. Poirier and his wife each own a share in the Rathdrum Water Power Company, valued at one thousand dollars per share. He is manager, collector and vice president of this company, and is one of the most thorough and capable business men of the city. Mr. Poirier is a member of the K. O. T. M., and carries three thousand dollars in the F. O. A. He and his wife are members of the Roman Catholic church.

JOHN CRENSHAW. Among the leading men of Rathdrum is the gentleman of whom we now speak, being a real estate dealer, in which line he has manifested great activity and skill, buying and selling for himself as well as on commission, while also he handles a large dairy farm and superintends a general farming business.

Mr. Crenshaw was born in Waldron, Arkansas, on October 23, 1857, being the son of Overton and Harriett (Boltenhouse) Crenshaw, natives of Illinois. The mother died in Lakeport, California, being buried there, and the father is still living in Arkansas, aged eighty years. Our subject went to California with his parents when six months of age, and there in the common schools he studied, finishing his education in the Healdsburg Academy. He was nine when his mother died, and he became self-supporting at that early age. At eighteen he bought an outfit and freighted. It was in 1879 when he came to Dayton, Washington, and one year later left on account of failure of crops. He took a timber claim in Washington, and in 1880 he took a homestead in the vicinity of Rathdrum. Seven years he lived on the homestead and then sold it. He went to Minnesota, bought a farm, but soon returned to Rathdrum. He bought a farm one-half mile from the town, which is his family home now. He improved with good buildings and added a half section more, which he sold, however, later. He bought a section near Hauser and sold it in 1902. He now owns four lots in Spokane, a number of lots in Postfalls, with some dwellings, and does a general real estate business. He has forty cattle and twenty-seven are milch cows. He owns twenty acres south from Rathdrum that is being put to fruit.

In 1890 Mr. Crenshaw married Miss Cora, daughter of Robert and Mary J. (Hicks) Borthwick, natives, respectively, of Prince Edward Island and Minnesota. To Mr. and Mrs. Creshaw have been born six children: Jesse H., Nellie H., Francis M., Robert O., Herbert R. and Mary A. Mr. Crenshaw takes an active part in politics, being allied with the Democratic party, and he has been delegate to many conventions. He was nominated for county commissioner in 1896, but as the county is Republican, he was beaten, yet only by sixty votes. He is a member of the A. H. T. A. He is also a member of the Christian church, and his wife is affiliated with the First Day Adventists. Mr. Crenshaw is interested in mining in Montana and has some excellent claims in the Saltese district, which show fine values.

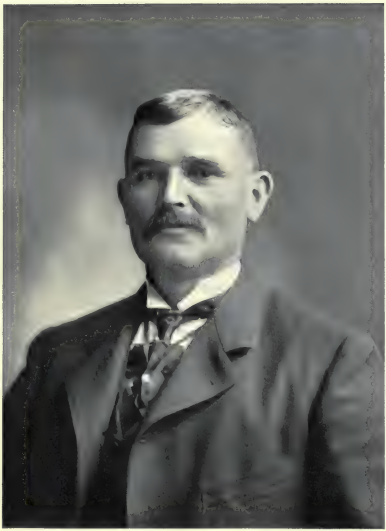
ARTHUR H. GRAHAM. About three miles southwest from Athol is situated the estate of the subject of this article, and he has the generous proportions of two hundred and forty acres of good land, which he is tilling, having sufficient stock for it and good improvements. Mr. Graham is a man of energy and industry, and one of the enterprising and substantial citizens of Kootenai county. He was born in Crawford county, Wisconsin, on April 23, 1858, being the son of John H. and Annie (Dibble) Graham, natives, respectively, of Scotland and Ohio. The mother died in Livingston county, Michigan, and is buried in Hartland, while the father is still living in Ashland, Wisconsin, aged seventy-two. Mr. Graham has two sisters: Ella, widow of Willie Brand, and living in Two Harbors, Minnesota; Jennie, wife of Charles Rorbach, living in South Lyons, Michigan. Our subject gained his schooling in the places where the parents lived, and at fourteen started for himself. He worked on the farm in summers and went to the pineries in the winters, continuing this for six years. In 1878 he came to Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, old Mexico, and mined, and then returned to the mines of Wisconsin on Lake Superior. It was 1888 when he came to Kootenai and wrought in the tie camp for a time and then took a homestead, where he now lives, having added more by purchase.

In 1890 Mr. Graham married Miss Laura, daughter of Milo Farnsworth, a native of Scotland. The mother died in Las Vegas, New Mexico, in 1875, but the father still lives here, having been an immigrant in 1855. To Mr. and Mrs. Graham have been born five children: Charles H., Laura G., Frank E., Arthur, and Florence M. Mr. Graham affiliates with the I. O. O. F., Pine Lodge, No. 75; with the Rebekahs, Evergreen Lodge, No. 51; and with the M. W. of A., Athol Camp, No. 8388. Mrs. Graham is a member of the Rebekahs.



LOUIS E. EILERT. The career of this well known citizen has been active, enterprising, and productive of a fine fortune, which he is enjoying and handling now in a becoming manner. He is proprietor of a retail liquor store and carries a good stock of choice wines and tobaccos, while he also devotes much attention to mining, having properties in Buffalo Hump and in the Saltese and Hayden lake districts, and then he finds time to attend to a large hay farm, besides other business.

Our subject was born in Hanover, Germany, on April 5, 1851, being the son of Ernest and Mary Eilert, both natives of Germany. They came to America on the ship Great Eastern in 1852, and settled in Waukasha county, Wisconsin. The mother died at sea, but the father died in 1886, and is buried in Waukesha cemetery, Wisconsin. Our subject had but three months' schooling in his life, half in the English and half in the German. He assisted his father on the farm until fifteen and then went to work for himself, going to San Francisco, via the Isthmus, and thence to Nevada, where he worked in a quartz mill for four years. Then he went to Virginia City, Nevada, and mined for two years, after which we find him making timbers in the redwood forests of California. It was 1880 that he came to Spokane and thence soon to Rathdrum, where he built a store and hotel, which he operated for two years, and then lost the entire property by the pressure of the hard times, but he had the satisfaction of paying every dollar that he owed in the world. Then he took a homestead, which he sold two years later. His next move was to build in Rathdrum, and start his present business, wherein he has continued with success since that time. His farm consists of one-quarter section and a half interest in two hundred acres. In 1889 Mr. Eilert took a trip to Nome and remained for four months prospecting, and as he did not discover anything that was valuable, he returned. The trip was attended with much hardship, but also it was enjoyable to so rugged and adventurous a person as our subject.

In 1882 Mr. Eilert married Miss Abby Bradberg, a native of Canada. Politically Mr. Eilert is allied with the Democratic party and is active. He is a member of the K. of P. and of the F. O. A., and a popular man of good standing.

LYMAN F. MARKHAM is one of the earliest settlers in Kootenai county and has constantly striven for its advancement and development since those early days, being a man of energy, enterprise, and executive force, while the keen wisdom, uprightness, and sound principles, which have dominated him in his career, are of the highest order, and he stands today one of the foremost men in that portion of the county where he is domiciled.

Lyman F. Markham was born in Knox county, Illinois, on August 9, 1845, being the son of Simon S. and Cynthia (Fry) Markham, natives of Ohio and New York respectively. They crossed the plains in 1848 to Albany, Oregon, and there remained for twenty years. A move was then made to Washington and later they repaired to Forest Grove, where the father died in 1899, aged eighty years. The mother, who is in her eightieth year, is still living there. Our subject remembers a birthday anniversary he had while crossing the plain, also remembers the herd of buffalo which they encountered and Joe Meek, who was on his way to Washington, as representative from Oregon. Lyman F. was educated in Albany, remained with his father until twenty-one, then farmed for a couple of years, after which he went to Gray's Harbor and taught school for a term. Next we see him in the stock business, which he successfully followed for a decade and in 1880 Mr. Markham came to Kootenai county. He settled on unsurveyed land and for two years traded with the Indians and then opened his present place, which lies about one mile east from Laclede. The place is provided with fine barn, house, orchard, and all other improvements that could be suggested for the benefit of the estate, and Mr. Markham cuts about one hundred and fifty tons of hay annually, handles about one hundred head of cattle and is one of the leading men in the stock industry in this section. For fourteen years he was postmaster and only resigned when Laclede started up. He has been committeeman in his precinct since its organization and has also served on the school board since the district opened up.

LYMAN F. MARKHAM.

On August 4, 1901, Mr. Markham married Lucy J., daughter of Elias B. and Nancy J. Edwards, who settled in Indiana in early days and died in 1891. Mr. Markham is a stanch Jeffersonian Democrat and a man with the courage of his convictions and the ability to propound the principles which he holds. Mr. Markham is a charter member of the F. A. at Priest River, Court No. 18. He and his wife are members of the Christian church and are highly respected people of real worth of character, while they have hosts of friends in every section.

SIMON BECK. To this skilled and expert mechanic and well known and popular citizen and successful business man, whose life is one of virtue and sound principles, we are constrained to grant consideration among the other pioneers of Kootenai county, since he has wrought for the advancement and upbuilding of the countnry with a firm hand and manifestation of wisdom that won for him the approbation of the people and a generous competence for himself. Mr. Beck was born in Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, on August 2, 1850, being the son of Wilson and Mary M. (Snyder) Beck, natives of Pennsylvania. The father died in 1897, and is buried in Centre county, Pennsylvania, but the mother is still living. Simon was educated in the common schools and at the age of fourteen took up the millwright trade, finishing the same in two years. At the age of nineteen he took up the blacksmith and wagon makers trades and learned them perfectly, thus accomplishing a fine showing in the mechanical line. He then started a shop for himself, continuing the same for one and one-half years, after which he rented for one year and he and his brother bought his uncle's shop. After two years we find him in northern Michigan, where he worked a short time carpentering, then did blacksmithing. The next move was to Grant county, Wisconsin, where he operated a blacksmith shop for one year, after which he worked in a repair shop and also started one of his own for a time. Then Mr. Beck came to Rathdrum opened a shop and two years later he built a large shop, where he is doing business at the present time. In addition to this, he does plumbing and also operates a first-class undertaking establishment. He has the only hearse in the county, one that he made with his own hands, and it is a fine piece of workmanship. Mr. Beck is doing a large business and he manifests commendable wisdom in overseeing it and carrying it on.

The marriage of Mr. Beck and Miss Mary E., daughter of Ephraim and Hanna Boger, was solemnized in 1874. Mr. Boger was killed thirty-five years since, but Mrs. Boger lives in Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Beck have become the parents of seven children, four of whom are still living, Arthur, married to Martha Marte, living at Priest River, Idaho; Rufus S.; Iva M., wife of John Sheffield, living in Rathdrum; Lola E., single, at home. Mr. Beck is affiliated with the M. W. A., K. O. T. M., and I. O. O. F. He and his wife are members of the Advent church. In 1898 Mr. Beck was elected mayor of Rathdrum on the Republican ticket against W. A. Hart, and in 1900 he was reelected against M. D. Wright, Democrat, by a large majority. He has given a good administration and is very popular with the people because of his faithfulness, his uprightness, his sound principles and impartiality.

CHARLES W. WOOD is among the very earliest pioneers of this country and surely one of the most worthy ones, having manifested in a long life of pioneer experiences, hardiness, energy, uprightness, courage and marked ability in all his relations, and displaying calmness, fortitude and true grit in all scenes of danger, not a few of which have beset his stirring career. In addition to this general outline, we wish to more particularly detail his interesting life and we note that Charles W. was born on May 14, 1843, in Ogdensburg, New York, being the son of Charles and Hanna Wood, both natives of Ireland, which accounts for the stirring spirit of our subject. The parents migrated to New York, met in that state and were married and in 1849 came to Illinois. The mother died shortly after this and the father in 1866, both buried at Lighthouse, Ogle county, Illinois. Charles W. received his education in Ogle county before he was thirteen years of age. Then he went to Omaha with V. W. Parker and at once was engaged on the stage route to Salt Lake City, called then the overland route. He worked three years and then drove for ten years, on all parts of the line, being an expert and vigorous yet careful hand in the business. In 1868 he drove stage in Montana, continuing the same until 1871. Then he came to Walla Walla and took a position on the pony express to Missoula, having, however, spent one winter in Spokane, where the C. and C. Mill now stands. He continued on the pony express until 1875 and then bought horses and sheep on the Touchet river in Washington. In 1876 Mr. Wood brought sheep to the Spokane valley and bought a farm where Rathdrum now stands. He had also horses. Mr. Wood platted the land and sold to the citizens and still has two hundred and forty acres adjoining the city. He handled stock on a large scale for a long time but is at present retired from this and gives his attention to the management of his estates. He has also a blacksmith shop in Rathdrum which he rents and also has considerable other property, and recently sold his livery barn to W. M. Cleland. He also does a draying business with the farming.

In 1873 Mr. Wood married Miss Mary K., daughter of Fredrick and Margret Post, natives of Germany. Mr. Post built the first mill in Spokane and is well known all through this country, being a man of prominence. To Mr. and Mrs. Wood were born three children, May, deceased; James M., now working in Postfalls; Eva, deceased. James M. was the first white child born in Kootenai county. Mrs. Wood died in February, 1881, and is buried in the Postfalls cemetery. Mr. Wood is a member of the F. O. A., Court No. 14, of Rathdrum. He still lives on the old home place where his son was born and he is to be congratulated on the brilliant success that he has achieved and the prestige won by his faithful endeavors and uprightness and no one can say that Mr. Wood ever dealt with him in anything but an honest and upright manner.

ROBERT C. BORTHWICK. This enterprising farmer and worthy citizen of Kootenai county lives two and one-half miles south from Rathdrum where he has a fine rural home and a valuable estate, while personally he is a man of good standing among his fellows and worthy of the confidence reposed in him. He was born in Prince Edward Island, on June 22, 1832, being the son of John and Catherine (Glover) Borthwick, natives of Scotland who came to Prince Edward Island when they were young and there lived until their death, being buried at Bedque. The father was a miller. Our subject was educated in his native place and his mother died when he was nine and his father when he was eleven. Then he went to live with a friend of the father. Two years later he started for himself, learning the wagon maker trade. After one year at it, he quit, not liking the business and went to work on a farm at eight dollars per month. Then he went to Minnesota and lumbered for five or six years then bought a farm in 1857, which he tilled for seven years. In 1862 he volunteered to fight the Indians in the Sioux war in Minnesota, and in 1864 he stepped forward and enlisted in Company G, Eleventh Minnesota, under General Thomas. He served until the close of the war, about one year or more, doing guard duty most of the time. Being honorably discharged, he returned to his home and sold the farm and bought another in Wright county, where he remained until 1888. Then he came to Kootenai, having one son here, and rented a place for one year. He returned to Minnesota and sold his farm and then moved to this county and purchased the farm where he now lives. He has fine buildings and one and one-half acres into orchard. In Minnesota, Mr. Borthwick held the office of town supervisor and town treasurer for a number of years. He is a Jeffersonian Democrat, and active in politics.

In 1862 Mr. Borthwick married Miss Mary J., daughter of Harvey and Salley J. (Ellenwood) Hicks, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. The mother died in Minnesota and the father in Rathdrum. His remains were taken to Otsega, Minnesota, where they were buried beside his wife. To Mr. and Mrs. Borthwick there have been born eight children, four of whom are living, as follows: Harvey J., married to Edith J. Green, in Rathdrum; Cora J., wife of John Crenshaw in Rathdrum; William R., with his parents; Annie, wife of Benjamin S. Wood, in Rathdrum. Mr. Borthwick is a member of the G. A. R., Lawton Post, No. 29, of Rathdrum, and also of the W. R. C. He and his wife are members of the A. C. church.

AMEL ULBRIGHT. The excellent qualities of this stirring business man have made themselves felt in all the lines in which he has operated and he has demonstrated that he is capable of manipulating the resources of the country in a successful manner and although the fiend of flames has destroyed at times much of his holdings, he immediately set to work with renewed vigor and has accomplished much in again placing himself in a leading position.

Mr. Ulbright is a native of Saxony, Germany, being born on February 13, 1858, the son of Ernest and Mary (Annstore) Ulbright, also natives of Saxony. In 1869 they came to America and in 1892 the father came to Spokane, and in 1895 the mother followed and they live now in Kootenai county. Amel was educated in the common schools of Germany and also in America and remained with his father until twenty-two years of age. Then he came west and after four years of labor took a homestead, built fine buildings, a barn, outbuildings, and a three thousand dollar house, bought another quarter adjoining and platted it into five and ten acre tracts and then sold. He had previously sold portions of the tracts. He then went to the vicinity of Hauser, seven miles west from Rathdrum and there bought two hundred and forty acres of land. He erected a saw mill, bought land at different times until he now owns the magnificent domain of twelve hundred acres of land, a good saw mill, fine buildings, and all the improvements that are needed both on an agricultural as well as timber tract. He has sawed over three hundred thousand feet of lumber and constantly employs a force of hands. Mr. Ulbright has a fine orchard with every variety of fruit represented that will successfully grow in this latitude. He has a band of stock in addition to all of his other interests.

In 1886 Mr. Ulbright married Miss Mary H., daughter of Joseph and Margaret Bauer, natives of the boundary between France and Germany. In 1874 they came to America, locating in Wisconsin, then made their way to Kansas and in 1882 came to Kootenai county, where they now live. To Mr. and Mrs. Ulbright four children have been born, Amelia, going to school in Spokane; Amel A., Anna A., and Elsie, at home. Politically, Mr. Ulbright is allied with the Populists and served in the county convention in 1896 and in 1900, while he has frequently been director in the school district. He is a member of the K. of P., Rathdrum Lodge, No. 13, and also of the F. O. A., Rathdrum Court, No. 14. Mr. Ulbright has made a commendable record as a business man and has successfully acquired property which renders him one of the prominent and substantial men of the county, being respected by all.

HENRY VIEBROCK. The industry, energy, tenacity of purpose and integrity of this well known young agriculturist of Kootenai county are very commendable and have given him an enviable standing among his fellows, being classed as one of the most reliable and substantial of our population. He was born in Hanover, Germany, on December 5, 1867, being the son of Thevies and Anna Viebrock, natives also of Germany, where they are now farming and keeping a hotel. Our subject was educated in his native place and then made some personal research on his own account and at the age of sixteen came to America. He settled in Polk county, Wisconsin, and worked for wages for three and one-half years, then went to Missouri and one year later came to Ritzville, Washington, then to Spokane, where he put in three years in making brick. Next we see him in Kootneai county, where he labored for four years and then bought one hundred and sixty acres of land. He has broken and cleared half of this and is handling five hundred acres of well cultivated land besides, which he rents from a neighbor. He raises as much as eight thousand bushels of grain and over one hundred tons of hay annually, making his farm a profitable venture. He is breaking fifty acres more of his own land and is improving his place is a good manner. Mr. Viebrock is one of the leading agriculturists of the county, having demonstrated his ability to handle very successfully the large bodies of land that annually return to him excellent dividends as reward for his skill and industry. He is a member of the K. of P., Panhandle Lodge, No. 13, and also of the F. O. A., No. 14. He also affiliates with the German Lutheran church and is a man of a high sense of honor and maintains an untarnished reputation.

WILLIAM D. RINEHART. Enterprising, industrious, possessed of the happy qualities that make a genial and successful business man, stanch and upright, the gentleman, whose name is at the head of this sketch deserves to be prominently represented in the history of his county. He was born in Steuben county, New York, on June 8, 1845, being the son of John and Liddie (Zemmer) Rinehart, natives of Pennsylvania. They came to Minnesota in 1854, settling in Goodhue county, where they remained until the time of their death, the mother passing away in 1861 and the father in 1863. They are buried in Pine Island, Minnesota. Our subject was educated in New York and in Minnesota and at the age of eighteen enlisted in Company H, Eighth Minnesota, under Captain George B. McCoy. He went on an expedition to quiet the Indians then returned to Fort Snelling and went south to Murfreesboro, where he fought in the battle of that place, also fought in the battle of Goldboro, then went to Raleigh, North Carolina, thence to City Point, then to Chesapeake bay and was honorably discharged on June 15, 1865, having made a very creditable military record. He returned to Minnesota and farmed there until 1880, then went to Wilmot, South Dakota, and farmed for eight years, then in 1888 he came to Kootenai county. He worked for one year and then bought forty acres of railroad land and in 1893 bought a quarter adjoining. He built a fine house in 1899 and a commodious barn in 1900 and he has his place well improved and excellently tilled. Mr. Rinehart has threshed for twenty-seven years and now his sons are taking up that business and also saw milling.

On April 18, 1865, Mr. Rinehart married Miss Emeline, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Anderson) Smith, natives of Ohio, who came to Dakota in 1880 and to Kootenai county in 1901 where they now live. To Mr. and Mrs. Rinehart there have been born fifteen children, the following named ones still living: Ernest; Isabel, wife of H. E. Thompson, living in Raleigh, North Carolina; M. E.; Eva, wife of Charles MacDonald, in Rathdrum; Myrtle, Ida, Gertrude, Lila, Roy, Ethel, Vivian. Mr. Rinehart is one of the substantial men of the county, is well and favorably known and his friends are numbered from among all classes and he enjoys the confidence of all.

JOSEPH W. HANDY. This gentleman is one who has done much work to promote the advancement and the development of Kootenai county, taking out of the primitive forests much of their wealth and preparing the virgin soil to produce abundant crops. He resides at the present time three miles east from Rathdrum where he has one hundred and sixty acres of land all fenced, with good buildings and productive of abundant crops. He owned a homestead at first, which he improved in good shape and then sold, purchasing a farm on rim rock, which he also sold after improving it in good shape and then bought his present home, in the meantime keeping up a constant labor in the forests, producing timbers, ties, wood and sawlogs.

Speaking more particularly of the domestic chapter in Mr. Handy's life, we note that he was born in Gentry county, Missouri, on January 11, 1850, being the son of John W. and Alzada A. (Redford) Handy, natives respectively of Illinois and Wisconsin. They removed to Missouri in an early day and in 1849 the father went to California and made a fine fortune and then lost the same on an investment. He tusseled with the fates there until 1871 then returned to his family and died five years later in Gentry county, Missouri, where the mother died in 1898. Our subject received but scant opportunity to gain an education; however he improved what he had until fourteen and then started the battle of life for himself. He did various kinds of work and contracted until 1889, when he came to Kootenai county and allied himself with its development as stated above. Mr. Handy has always been an industrious man and has done a lion's share in the hard labor incident to the development of the county.

In 1876 Mr. Handy married Miss Margaret F., daughter of John and Mary A. (Ross) Shaffer, natives of Vermont and Ohio, respectively, who removed to Gentry county, Missouri, where they both are buried in the same cemetery. To Mr. and Mrs. Handy there have been born eleven children, ten of whom are living, as follows: John M., married to Arena Vels, and living at Fish lake, Idaho; Joseph H., with parents; Cora D., wife of James Morris, living on the rim rock; Rosa A., Maud M., Zilla, Gertie A., Dora A., Richard, Arthur W., all at home. Mr. Handy is a member of the I. O. O. F., Rathdrum Lodge, No. 73, and is a good solid Republican.

WALTER R. TOWLE is a venerable and highly respected citizen of Kootenai county, living about one-half mile east from Kootenai, where he has a good home, a fine orchard and does a general gardening business. He is a man of substantial qualities and of a stanch character, possessing many virtues and displaying integrity, uprightness, and wisdom.

Walter R. Towle was born in Rochester, Vermont, on February 23, 1832, being the son of Samuel and Lucinda (Washburn) Towle, natives of New Hampshire and of Vermont, respectively. They came to Iowa in 1869, locating in Sac county, where they were farmers until their death, the father's being in 1890, and the mother departing this scene in 1896. They were the parents of seven children, Truman, Ezra, Walter R., our subject, Hannah, Harry, Percis and William W. Walter received a good schooling in his native place and remained with his father until he reached his majority. Then he worked out a year and the desire to see the west and try his fortune in the golden sands of California led him to take the trip, via the Isthmus to San Francisco, where he landed on February 4, 1854. He mined until 1862 and then enlisted in Company G, Fourth Regiment of Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel Foreman and Captain Grant. They went to southern California and thence to Arizona, in which place they fought the Indians. He served in the United States army fifty-two months, being discharged in 1862, when he made a visit to Vermont. Six months later he went to Iowa and farmed until 1878, then went to Stafford county, Kansas, where he was numbered with the industrious agriculturists until 1898. In that year he sold out and came to his present place. He built a fine house, as well as other buildings and has forty acres in garden stuff and farm products. He also has some stock. Mr. Towle is a well-to-do citizen of this county and a good substantial man.

In 1867 Mr. Towle married Frances E. Taylor, widow of Levi W. Taylor, and daughter of Joseph Stott, a native of England. Six children have been born to this happy union, named as follows: Edwin S., with parents; Harry, deceased; Nettie, wife of W. N. Shawver, living in Kansas; Minnie, wife of John Mawhirter, in Kansas; Chapin, with his parents, and a member of the I. O. O. F.; Lillian, wife of Arthur Shawver, in Kansas. Mr. Towle is a stanch Republican, having served a term in Stafford county, Kansas, as chairman of the Republican county central committee, and has held offices of justice of the peace, trusteeship on the school board, and road overseer. His wife is a member of the Latter Day Saint's church. Mr. Towle is one of the leading men of this section and is looked up to by all.

THOMAS J. LEMON. The subject of this review is a veritable pioneer of the pioneers and one whose worthy labors have done much for the development of Kootenai county, having been within its precincts for over twenty-two years. How much credit should be granted to such as blaze the way and endure the hardships and perform the labors so that their fellows may come and make homes and populate the country. It is with pleasure that we are permitted to give an epitome of the career of this estimable gentleman.

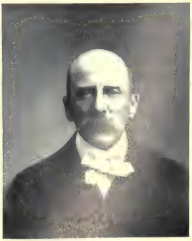
Thomas J. Lemon was born in Monroe county, Indiana, on June 25, 1850, being the son of W. W. and Mary E. (Pickel) Lemon, natives of Vermont, but immigrants to Indiana in a very early day. They came to Monroe county in 1843 and there lived until their death, the mother's occurring in 1855 and the father passing away in 1862. They were the parents of four daughters and three sons, named as follows: Elizabeth, wife of A. Smallwood, in Lawrence, Indiana; Laura J., wife of M. E. Driscol, in Bedford, Indiana; Catherine, wife of A. J. Jones, in Vermilion county, Illinois; Millie, deceased; Lucinda, deceased; John A., in Santa Cruz county, California; Jones, deceased. Our subject was educated in his native place and at the tender age of twelve years started in life for himself. He worked on a farm for twelve years and then went to railroading, which he followed three and one-half years. Then he came west to Clarke county, Washington, and thence to eastern Washington with Wheaton's army in 1877. He was at Spokane during the peace commission and then settled on a piece of unsurveyed land near Cheney, from which he afterwards removed, coming to Kootenai county in 1880. He took a contract for making ties for the Northern Pacific, then followed hunting and trapping for twelve years. Then came another tie contract from M. D. Wright this time and in 1899 he settled on his present place, about eight miles northeast from Granite. He has a good place with about eighty acres of natural meadow and he is now devoting his attention to doing farming and raising some stock. Mr. Lemon has the respect and confidence of all and stands exceptionally well among the residents of this vicinity.

WALTER R. TOWLE.

THOMAS J. LEMON.

WESTOL H. SLUYTER.

WILLIAM EHLERT.



MRS. WILLIAM EHLERT.

MRS. ALFRED BOYER.

ALFRED BOYER.

ALPHONZO A. GREEN

WESTOL H. SLUYTER. This venerable pioneer of Kootenai county is now living about one mile west from Granite, where he is engaged in the stock business. He is a man of sterling integrity and worth and has always manifested these qualities in his walk.

Westol H. Sluyter was born in Oakland county, Michigan, on March 29, 1830, being the son of Walter and Nancy Sluyter, natives of New York, but pioneers of Michigan, where they remained until the time of their death. Our subject grew up in his native land, received his education in the public schools and remained with his parents until he was twenty-five. Then he inaugarated independent action and wrought in the agricultural art in Michigan until he was forty years of age. Then he went to St. Croix, Wisconsin, and farmed for fourteen years. It was in 1888, when he pulled up stakes in that place and came with his family to his present location in Kootenai county. He operated in the timber business for three years or so and then took up raising stock. This has been his occupation, with general farming, since that time and he has a good herd of thirty head.

In 1855 Mr. Sluyter married Miss Welsy A., daughter of Nathaniel and Jane Bams, who settled in Michigan in early days and remained there until their death. Mrs. Sluyter is a native of New York. She died in Michigan December 16, 1868. She was the mother of four girls, all living in the country.

WILLIAM EHLERT. This esteemed citizen and well respected man, whose industry, integrity, and upright walk have given him the esteem and confidence of the people, is a man of great experience in the ways of the world and has traveled to all parts of the globe.

William Ehlert was born in the vicinity of Stralsund, Germany, on September 9, 1858, and before he was eighteen, had attended school seven years. At the age last mentioned, he embarked on the Prussis, a man of war, and for four years was steadily drilled in all the ways of a sailor, gunner, and other departments on such a vessel. He drilled with Prince Henry for two years, and went with him around the earth. They started from Kiehl, thence to Plymouth, South Africa, Madiera, Capetown, passed through the straits of Magellan and was also at St. Helena at the time Napoleon's remains were taken to France, visited Honolulu, Acapulco, St. Vincent, Valparaiso, also the capital of Brazil, Yokohoma, Siberia, thence again to Yokohoma, experiencing a cyclone on this last trip. Then to Nagasaki, various islands, Singapore, to south Africa again and so on to their native land. They started out in October, 1878, and returned in October, 1880. The trip was a hard one as is seen by the fact that when he started he weighed one hundred and seventy-five pounds and when he returned he weighed ninety-four pounds. He sailed some further and in the fall of 1881, returned to his native place. At that time preparation was being made for war and as he desired to escape further military service he came to New York. Thence he came to Lansing, Illinois, and later to Louisville, Kentucky, where he learned the plow making trade and assisted to make plows for one of the world expositions. He traveled to various sections of the east and then went to Chelsey, Wisconsin, where he was married to Miss Adelgunde Goltz, on December 6, 1887. After this they removed to North Dakota and in 1891 to Salem, Oregon. They traveled to California, thence to Salem again and in the spring of 1898 they went to Sitka and other parts of Alaska where Mr. Ehlert mined. Returning to Washington, he came to his present place, one and one-half miles east from Lane and took a homestead, eighty acres of which are good meadow land. Three children have been born to this marriage, Arthur, aged fourteen, Emma, aged twelve, Martha, aged nine. He is now prospecting for quartz gold in his own place and has fine prospects.

ALFRED BOYER is the present incumbent in the postoffice at Kootenai, where he has served with acceptability and faithfullness since the office was established. He is a man of intelligence and stability and has won many friends in all parts where he is acquainted.

Alfred Boyer was born in Scioto county, Ohio, on April 1, 1854, being the son of Wesley and Elizabeth (McNalley) Boyer, natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio, respectively. They were married in Scioto county, and there the father conducted a charcoal business until 1880, then followed farming until his death in 1899. The mother died in January, 1902. They were the parents of nine children: David, deceased; Alfred, the subject of this article; Calfernia, wife of John Dressler, in Ohio; Addie B., wife of Jeff Haney, in Portsmouth, Ohio; Ida, deceased; John, in Kootenai county; Frank, in Lawrence county, Ohio; Alex, living in Scioto county, Ohio. Our subject attended school in the winter and labored with his father until he was twenty-three years old. Then starting for himself he engaged with a farmer for three years, after which he spent eight years in railroading. It was 1889 that he made his way into the Sandpoint region, being a pioneer here. He worked a year at tie making and shingle manufacture and in 1892 took his present homestead. He has a good orchard and a portion of the farm under cultivation. In 1895 the postoffice was established and Mr. Boyer was selected as postmaster, which he has filled in a becoming manner since.

On November 25, 1881, Mr. Boyer married Miss Ella, daughter of David and Martha Haney, natives of Ohio. The father conducted a boiler shop there until his death in 1881. The mother still lives in Ironton, Ohio, being seventy years of age and healthy and hearty. Mr. Boyer and his estimable wife are the parents of eight children, six of whom are living, as follows: Grace V., Roberta, Charles A., George W., Charlotte I. and Lester. Mr. Boyer is a charter member of the Sandpoint Lodge, No. 59, of the I. O. O. F. His wife is a member of the Rebekahs. They both are devout members of the Baptist church and are exemplary and upright people, being held in high respect and esteem by all.

ALPHONZO A. GREEN. A worthy pioneer of Kootenai county, whose sturdy and arduous labors have done much to open the wilderness of this country, and now one of the prosperous and substantial citizens, we are pleased to grant him consideration in the volume of Kootenai's history.

Alphonzo A. Green was born in Allegany county, New York, on December 14, 1851, being the son of Harlen C. and Sarah A. (Barnes) Green, natives of New York. They located in Lucas county, Ohio, in 1857, and ten years later removed to Shiawassee county, Michigan, and thence to the northern part of the state, where the father died in 1885 and the mother in 1899. Five children were born to this worthy couple, Sylvia P., Mortimer, Harvey E., Marion N., and the subject of this article. Our subject received his education in Shiawassee county and when seventeen he started to do for himself. He followed the woods for seven years and then wrought in the lumber trade for E. B. Ward until 1886, the year in which he came thence to Wisconsin. Two years were spent in that state and then Mr. Green came to Kootenai county. A couple of years later he returned to Wisconsin and after four years in that section he returned to Kootenai county, and this has been his home since that time. Contract work in the timber has occupied Mr. Green much of the time since then. In 1898 he purchased a quarter section and then took a homestead, which gives him a half section in his home place, six miles north from Granite, where we find Mr. Green at this time. He does general farming, raises hay and stock and also does timber work.

On May 4, 1873, Mr. Green married Miss Nancy L., daughter of Jacob Clark, a native of Michigan, where he died in 1896. In 1883 Mr. Green was called on to mourn the death of his beloved wife. She left two children, James A., married and living in Granite; Alva N., living at home. Mr. Green is a Republican of the true blue stripe and is always found in the campaigns for the principles which he supports, active and intelligent in debate and setting forth the questions of the day with vigor and convincing weight.

CHRISTEN JENSEN lives about one mile northwest from Hauser, where he has a fine farm and does a general farming business in addition to gardening, while also he handles successfully a summer resort, having a fine supply of boats for that purpose. He is a man of excellent standing, capable and enterprising, and of a public spirit that has always led him to be in the front in any measures for the general welfare.

Our subject was born in Juland, Denmark, on June 27, 1852, being the son of Jens and Christina (Hansen) Christsen, natives also of Denmark where the mother died in 1864 and the father still lives. Our subject was educated in his native place and in 1877 he came to America, locating in Brown county, Wisconsin. He cut wood, made ties and then went to Neenah, thence to Stevens Point, and later to Chicago. He had served as coachman some previous to this last trip and there did that work for six years. In 1888 he came to Kootenai county, made ties, then took a homestead where he now lives. He has improved the place in a fine manner, does a large gardening business, disposing of his products in Rathdrum and Coeur d'Alene. He has also a band of fifteen cattle and other stock.

In 1882 Mr. Jensen married Miss Lina Hansen, daughter of Hans Jorgensen and Nellie Peterson, natives of Denmark. The father died several years since, but the mother still lives in Fyn, Denmark. Five children have been born to our subject and his estimable wife, James C., Harry A., Berty, Erving R., and Mita Christina, deceased. Mr. Jensen has been a member of the school board for many terms and is now clerk. He is a member of the F. O. A., Rathdrum Court, No. 14. He is a man of reliability and has demonstrated his faithfulness, his sagacity and his uprightness in all of his ways.

Mr. Jensen has recently built a commodious dwelling with rooms for the accommodation of tourists to the beautiful lake where he resides.

WILLIAM BASLINGTON is a pioneer of the region embraced in Kootenai county, and a man who has displayed the commendable qualities of worth and wisdom in all his ways, while the crowning of his labors by a good property holding is just as he has wrought with assiduity and thrift for many years. William was born in Whittlesey, England, on August 22, 1846, being the son of John and Ann (Hardy) Baslington, natives of England, but immigrants to the United States in 1865. They located in Goodhue county, Minnesota, where the father died in 1892, being seventy-seven years of age, and the mother passed away in 1901, aged seventy-eight, both being buried in Pine Island, Minnesota. William was educated in England and at the age of fifteen quit school and labored until eighteen and then enlisted in the English army. He went in as private and came out nine years later as sergeant. He was obliged to pay fourteen pounds to get his release to come to America. He came direct to Goodhue county, Minnesota, where his parents were, then worked a year and went to California. One year later he was in Waitsburg, Washington, in 1876, he next came to Rockford and in 1878 he entered the wilds of Kootnei county, or what is now Kootenai county. He worked at lumbering for a time, then squatted on his present fertile farm. He toiled to bring it from the wildness of nature and has an excellent estate. The amount of labor necessary to bring a wild tract to a fertile farm, well appointed, laid out in good shape and properly improved is far more than one will imagine, unless that one has had experience. Mr. Baslington has done a good work. He does a general farming business, handles stock, and is a leading citizen.

In 1896 Mr. Baslington married Miss Ann Beck. He is a member of the F. O. A., Rathdrum Court, No. 14, and also of the Episcopalian church. He is a man who commands the respect and has won the confidence of all with whom he has to do.

CHRIST NELSON is one of the younger men of industry in Kootenai county, living on a good farm three miles north from Hauser, where he has a comfortable family residence, commodious barns and all out buildings needed, while his land is productive of excellent returns. Mr. Nelson was born in Waupaca county, Wisconsin, on May 21, 1873, being the son of Lars Nelson, a native of Denmark who came to the United States in the 'fifties and fought the battles of the Union in the Civil war with distinction to himself. Christ was educated in his native place and at the age of sturdy boyhood started for himself and in 1889 we find him in Deep Creek, Washington. He labored there for two years, then came to Kootenai, locating his present farm. It was in 1898 that he erected a fine barn, house and all buildings needed and is numbered with the thrifty and substantial agriculturists of the county.

In 1898 occurred the marriage of Mr. Nelson and Miss Dora White, a daughter of Nicholas White. Politically, we note that Mr. Nelson is allied with the Republicans and he is active in that realm, ever exerting his influence for the right principles and the best men. Mr. Nelson has one brother, Peter, living in Wisconsin, and one sister, Fanny, married to George Huffcutt, also living in Wisconsin.

DANIEL W. PEARCE. If to the industrious and thrifty laborers of our land should come a due reward, then there should be granted by reason of right this boon to the subject of this article, for he has manifested in Kootenai county worthy labor and energy, and it is with pleasure that we accord him representation in this volume, as he is also a man of integrity and a substantial property owner.

Daniel W. was born in Sullivan county, Missouri, on September 9, 1848, being the son of John and Martha (King) Pearce, natives of Kentucky, but emigrants to Sonoma county, California, in 1856. The father's death occurred in Clarke county, Washington, in 1875 and is buried there. The mother died in 1889, in Dayton, Washington. Our subject was educated in the various places where the family lived. The parents came from California to Dayton, Oregon. In 1864 they removed to Linn county and in 1871 came thence to Dayton, Washington, also they lived in Whitman county some. They farmed most of their lives. At the age of twenty-two, Daniel W. went to Crook county and took up stock raising. Fourteen years were spent there and then he came to Whitman county, took a homestead and bought a half section of land from the railroad. He farmed there for about fourteen years and then came to Kootenai county and bought two hundred and seventy acres of land about two miles northwest from Hauser, which is the family home now. He devotes his attention to general farming, raising stock and lumbering, and is doing well, being a hard laboring citizen.

In 1887 Mr. Pearce married Miss Mary M. Cisco, and they have six children, all at home, and named as follows: John, Rena, Ina M., Hugh, May and Etta. Mr. W. W. Cisco, father of Mrs. Pearce, married Miss Mary J. Stevens, both natives of Missouri, and they came west in an early day and located in Oregon and lately came to Kootenai county, where they dwell now. Mr. Pearce is well esteemed by all who know him and stands well. He is allied with the Democratic party and takes an active part in politics. He has held the office of justice of the peace, road supervisor, deputy assessor, and is now on the school board, in all of which public service he has manifested faithfulness and efficiency.

JOSEPH A. BAUER. This gentleman has demonstrated that he is a capable American citizen, a good business man, a genial and accommodating neighbor, a loyal friend, and a worthy associate and promoter of the cause of advancement and the development of the country. He was born in Berlin, Germany, on January 17, 1845, being the son of Peter and Elenor (Lacock) Bauer, natives of Germany and France, respectively. The father died in Berlin, and the mother in the the province of Luckenberg, but both are buried in Belgium. Our subject received a good education in Sedan, France, where the parents lived for a time and at the age of seventeen, he quit school and went to learning the trades of wagonmaking and blacksmithing. Four years later he went to Belgium, became a citizen and labored from 1863 to 1872, then had sufficient money to come to America. He settled in Greenbay, Wisconsin, went into business in his trade and one year later went to Kansas. He bought a team and wagon and came across the plains, taking three years for the trip. He landed in Mission, Idaho, in 1878, and prospected for a year and six months, then went to work for F. Post in Postfalls. He labored for this man for six months and then labored for others for several years, or until March, 1883. He then located on a quarter section where he now lives, three miles north from Hauser. He began at once to raise hay and to clear his land from timber. He has steadily pursued his way, making a great success of his labors, because of his skill, thrift and industry, with wise management. He has one of the finest, if not the finest house in this section of the country, a good barn, all out buildings necessary, and in addition to handling one hundred and twenty acres in cultivation he raises considerable stock. Mr. Bauer sells about ten head of market stock each year, sixty tons of hay, and has a good orchard and in every respect maintains a valuable and good dividend producing place.

The marriage of Mr. Bauer and Miss Katherine, daughter of Joseph and Ernestey (Servey) Gofine, natives of Belgium, where they remained until the time of their death, was solemnized on May 6, 1867, and they have become the parents of four children, Louise, wife of Louis Helby, living in Spokane county, Washington; Mary A., wife of Amel Ulbright, of this county; Joseph, married to Katherine Eisenhauer, of this county; Francis, married to Mary Eisenhauer, in this county. Mr. Bauer was elected justice of the peace in 1885 by unanimous vote and served with acceptability. Being offered a second term, he refused. He served on the school board for many years. Politically he is a social Democrat. Mr. Bauer is affiliated with the leading labor organizations and with the F. O. A., Rathdrum Court, No. 14. Mr. Bauer is an active and capable man, ever striving for the good of the community, and has done a worthy part in the labor he has performed within its precincts.

ADAM HAWTHORNE. Among the very first to locate in the section of the country now known as Naples, Kootenai county, our subject has the distinction of being a true pioneer and his faithful labors have always been for the upbuilding and improvement of the country while he is one of the well-to-do and leading farmers and stockmen located in these regions.

Adam Hawthorne was born in Lockport, New York, on February 27, 1830, being the son of Adam and Elizabeth (McMollon) Hawthorne, natives of Scotland. The father of our subject had married a lady contrary to her parents' wishes and therefore he came to America in 1822, and his wife followed him the next year. Not knowing that she was coming so soon, Mr. Hawthorne had gone to Quebec to make arrangements to meet her when she did come and there they happily met by accident. They lived in Maryland, in New York, and finally died in Port Hope, Canada. The father was a blacksmith. Two uncles of our subject on his mother's side were owners of vessels that did a silk trade with the Indias. Adam was educated in the common schools and when fourteen went to riding with a circus. He rode for the noted Dan Rice, and also for Barnum, being seven years with the former and also some time with North & Orton, and in all these years he was known as one of the best bareback riders in the ring. In 1858 Mr. Hawthorne went to buying grain for a Chicago firm and in the time of the war he was purchasing agent for the government, handling mules mostly. One item we would mention in the circus career of Mr. Hawthorne was that in 1855, he had his skull fractured, but he held to the ring for three years after that. After the war he went to Michigan and remained until 1888, when he came to his present location about one mile west of Naples, where he has a fine farm, one hundred and twenty acres of which are devoted to hay.

In 1862 Mr. Hawthorne married Miss Jane, daughter of William and Sarah Bemrose, natives of Lincolnshire, England. Mrs. Hawthorne was brought to America when six years of age by her parents. The father died in England, having returned there, and the mother died in Michigan. To our subject and his wife there have been born two children, Wilber A., a timber inspector on the Northern Pacific; Sarah J., both living with their parents. Politically, Mr. Hawthorne is a Democrat and is active in local matters. His people were all adherents of the Presbyterian church.

JOHN DUNLAP. This gentleman is one of the early settlers in Kootenai county and he had previously been a pioneer to Colusa county, California, where he had experienced all the hardships and arduous labors incident to that life, in all of which he has demonstrated his ability and integrity.

Mr. Dunlap was born in Medina county, Ohio, on April 6, 1843, being the son of William and Nancy Dunlap, natives of Ireland and Scotland, respectively. The mother died in Medina county when John was nine years of age, and the father was killed in a runaway. Our subject attended school until 1860, then went via Panama to San Francisco and went at once to the mines. He was successful from the start and invested his money wisely and continued there for twelve years in Colusa county. He was elected county commissioner of that county when he was between twenty and twenty-one years of age. He mined most of the time and also worked at the carpenter trade. In 1880 he came to this county and labored at his trade for four years, then he took a preemption, which was his home for three years when he sold it and worked at his trade for four years more, then he squatted on a quarter and later sold his right and came where he now lives, four miles northeast from Hauser. He has eighty acres and raises hay and vegetables, producing from thirty to forty tons of the former and many of the latter annually.

In 1868 Mr. Dunlap married Miss Mary Woodruff, who died in 1879. Mr. Dunlap is allied with the Republicans in politics and takes the part of the intelligent citizen in the affairs of the county and state.

ERNEST P. ULBRIGHT. One of the neat and attractive homes in the vicinity of Hauser is owned by the gentleman whose name appears above, and he also has there, immediately north of the town, an estate of two hundred and forty acres of land. He does a general farming business, handles some stock, and sells many cars of wood each year. Ernest P. was born in Saxony, Germany, in December, 1861, being the son of Ernest G. and Mollie (Arnstorf) Ulbright, natives of that country, also. They came to America in 1869, locating in Missouri. The parents now live in Idaho. Our subject received but little opportunity to gain education and so sought it for himself personally by reading and careful observation. He worked for his father until twenty-two years of age and then went to work out for wages. It was 1888 that he came to Kootenai county and soon squatted on a piece of land. Later he abandoned that and settled on eighty acres of his present estate, then he purchased one hundred and sixty acres from the railroad company. He has a fine home, good barn, an orchard of one hundred bearing trees and some stock. In addition to his farm labor, he does considerable carpenter work, having mastered that trade. Mr. Ulbright has four brothers and three sisters, named as follows: Lena, wife of F. Enlers, living on Moran prairie, in Spokane county, Washington; Amel, married to Mary Bauer, in this county; Hugo, in Missouri; Otto, married to Miss Johnson, living in Spokane county; France, married to Lina Watson, living in Missouri; Selma, wife of Joe Coffman, living in New York; Lina, wife of Tom Watson, living in Missouri. Mr. Ulbright takes an active part in politics and is allied with the Republicans. He is a member of the Lutheran church.

ADAM HAWTHORNE.

GUSTAVE W. NICOLAI. The valuable estate of this worthy gentleman consists of a fine meadow farm, two and one-half miles west from Rathdrum, to which he gives his personal oversight, while he is also a practical brick mason, a contractor and a builder, giving his attention to this latter principally. He has a fine home, which cost him, in 1890, three thousand five hundred dollars, since which time he has added much improvement, having fine buildings, good orchards and having put in a ditch to drain the meadows.

Reverting to the personal history of our subject, we note that he was born in Holstein, Germany, on April 9, 1852, being the son of John and Margaret (Closence) Nicolai, also natives of Germany. They came to America in 1865, located in Ohio and followed farming. Later they went to Indiana and farmed there until their death. The father died at sixty-three and the mother at eighty-nine. Gustave received some schooling in Germany but finished his education in this country, in Cincinnati. At the age of seventeen he went to learn the bricklayer's trade and wrought steadily at it for six years, giving his entire earnings to his parents. Then he went to work for himself, being twenty-three years of age. At the age of twenty-five he married and in 1878 began to contract in building. He followed it steadily and came west in 1889, doing business in Spokane for one year. Then he came to Rathdrum and purchased his present home place, one of the finest of the kind in that vicinity.

The marriage of Mr. Nicolai and Miss Amelia, daughter of Henry and Adelide (Hunnica) Brinkman, natives of Germany, was solemnized in 1877 and they have been blessed by the advent of six shildren: Theodore, in Kootenai county; Arthur, Carl, Edith, and two that are dead. Mr. Nicolai is a Republican in politics and always takes an active part in that realm. He is a member of the Bricklayers' Association of Spokane. He is also a member of the Lutheran church. Mr. and Mrs. Brinkman were natives of Germany, and came to America in 1850. He served in the Civil war and died in Cincinnati, where he is buried. The mother came to Spokane in 1889 and there died, being buried in Greenwood cemetery. Mr. Nicolai is a man of capabilities and stands well in the community.

DANIEL ESCH. One of the heavy property owners of Kootenai county and also one of the leading agriculturists of the same, this gentleman is worthy of representation in the volume of history which has to do with the leading citizens of this section. He has gained his fine holding by hard work, wise management, and careful attention to business in all its details.

Daniel Esch was born in Harrison county, Ohio, on March 12, 1836, being the son of Christian and Dorothy Esch, natives of Germany. They came to America in early days and settled in Ohio. Later they removed to Indiana and there they died. Our subject is one of twenty-three children begotten by his father, who was married three times. Daniel has four full brothers and three sisters. Our subject attended a German school for a short time in Ohio and labored for his father until twenty-one years of age. Then he started for himself. In 1885, he came to Washington to visit a brother but soon returned to Indiana. He sold his farm there and traveled through portions of Washington and Idaho and then went to Lane county, Oregon, and purchased a farm of three hundred and eighty acres which he rents to his brother. In 1888 Mr. Esch bought a section of land in Kootenai county, where he now lives, about one mile southwest from Rathdrum. Later he bought four hundred acres more of land, which makes him the mammoth domain of over one thousand acres in this county, besides the fine farm of over one-half section in Lane county. Mr. Esch does a general farming business and utilizes about twenty head of horses in his work. He has never ventured on the uncertain sea of matrimony, preferring the celebatarian's quieter joys and comforts. He is a worthy citizen and is capable, industrious and thrifty, and is respected by all.

DAVID F. FINNEY. In augmenting the industrial force of Kootenai county, where he has demonstrated himself to be a capable man, as also in his entire walk in the ways of life, Mr. Finney is eminently fitted to be with the leading men of this section and is entitled to mention in the history that has to do with northern Idaho. He was born in Montgomery county, Illinois, May 24, 1862, being the son of Jackson and Sarah (Titsworth) Finney, natives of Illinois, where the father operated a flour mill and farmed until the time of his death in 1869. He rests in Kirkland cemetery, in Montgomery county. The mother came west, married in 1874 to James W. Sackett and died in Kootenai county, in May, 1902, being buried in Rathdrum cemetery. David F. received his education from the country schools and at fifteen went to work to assist in supporting the family. At the age of twenty-five he married and went to railroading. Three years later he rented a farm and followed tilling the soil for six years, then he came to Kootenai county, took a homestead three miles west from Rathdrum, where the family home is today. Mr. Finney has given his attention to general farming since, with the addition to handling much wood, many ties and also making a specialty of getting out and selling telegraph poles. He has a comfortable home and out buildings on the farm and handles some stock. He also owns a house and lot in Rathdrum and is planning to live there much of the time for school facilities for the children.

It was in 1887 that Mr. Finney married Miss Eliza J., daughter of John W. and Sarah (Williams) Dugan, natives of Illinois. The mother died in 1882 and the father then removed to Arkansas and died there in 1902. To Mr. and Mrs. Finney have been born four children: Elmer, deceased, Bertha, Elsie, deceased, and Bessie. Mr. Finney is a member of the M. W. A., Rathdrum Camp No. 6843. He is a successful business man and is well liked and is a man of integrity and good standing.

EZEKIEL M. FINNEY is one of the successful men of Kootenai county, and is a man, as President Roosevelt remarks, "who has done things." This execution and energy has been well directed and combined with practical sagacity have given him the meed due to the exercise of such talents. Mr. Finney is a native of Montgomery county Illinois, and was born on February 22, 1860, being the son of A. J. and Sarah (Titsworth) Finney, natives also of Illinois. The father died in 1869 and is buried in Kirkland cemetery in Montgomery county. The mother married James Sackette, moved west in 1898, and died in 1902, being buried in the Rathdrum cemetery. Ezekiel gained a country school education and at sixteen went to work for the farmers and collecting cattle for butchers. At the age of twenty-three he rented a farm for himself and did fairly well for three years, then went to railroading for a time. He came west in 1887 and located in Rathdrum. He railroaded a year, dug the deepest well in Kootenai county, for Henry Reiniger, which is three hundred and fourteen feet deep. In 1889 he took a homestead, fenced and improved it and in 1902 sold it. In 1897 he bought the place where he now lives, three miles west from Rathdrum. He has one hundred and ten acres, on which is a large amount of saw timber, telegraph poles and ties. He also owns considerable stock and intends to go into stock raising heavily.

Mr. Finney married Miss Rebecca Howell in 1884 and they have four children, named as follows: Leora, M., wife of J. C. Thomas, in this county; Charles E., and the other two, Jesse E., and Ida E., at home. Mr. Henry Howell married Nancy Smith, who are the parents of Mrs. Finney, and are natives of Illinois. The mother died when Mrs. Finney was young, but the father came to Kootenai county in 1887 and lives here still. Mr. Finney takes great interest in political matters, especially those of a local nature. He is a member of the M. W. A., Rathdrum Camp No. 6843, and is a man of sterling worth, being happily possessed of qualities which commend him to the esteem and confidence of his fellows.

GEORGE W. HOWELL is one of the sturdy and enterprising agriculturists and timber men who are doing so much for the development of Kootenai county and the upbuilding of her interests. His family residence is five and one-half miles west from Rathdrum, and there he owns a quarter section, which he is now improving with a good house and barn, and other substantial necessaries, has planted an orchard and is preparing ties and timber for the market in addition to doing a general farming business.

George W. was born in Fayette county, Illinois, on February 29, 1867, being the son of Henry and Nancy (Smith) Howell, also natives of Illinois. The mother died in Illinois and the father came west in 1887, locating in Kootenai county, where he is still farming. Our subject was educated in the public schools and at the age of twenty started in life for himself. He bought a farm of forty acres and one year later sold and came west. He took a homestead in this county, improved, gained title, then sold and later bought the estate where he now lives. In addition to the other property mentioned, Mr. Howell owns a bunch of stock and pays considerable attention to raising stock.

In 1886 Mr. Howell and Miss Margaret E., daughter of William Linton, a native of Illinois, were married in that state, and to them have been born eight children: William H., John A., Gilford A., Icen C., Lillie E., Freddie H., Ruth, and Clarence D. Mrs. Linton is dead, but Mr. Linton is still living in Illinois. In political matters Mr. Howell is associated with the Democratic party and is active in local politics. He is a member of the M. W. A., Rathdrum Camp No. 6843. He and his wife are members of the Baptist church, being devoted supporters of the faith.

ALBERT E. TRAVIS. Six miles west from Rathdrum, one may see the well kept estate of our subject, which is the family home. He is a competent man in business lines, being looked up to by his fellows, and is one of the substantial men of the section, being also a man of sound principles and worth and is deserving of representation in Kootenai county history. Mr. Travis was born in Lacrosse, Wisconsin, on April 12, 1858, being the son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Lower) Travis. The father was a native of New York, and the mother of Germany, and came to the United States when young, with her parents. She died in Lacrosse, in 1858 and the father died in Augusta, Wisconsin, in May, 1902. Our subject was taken to Fairchild, Wisconsin, when a child and received a common school education and at the age of fourteen years commenced to work in the saw mill. At first he received twenty dollars per month and then three dollars per day day. He labored thus for about twelve years, then came west to Reardan, Washington. He worked by the month for a couple of years and then rented a half section of school land and tilled it successfully for three years, then sold out and came to Kootenai county. He secured a homestead where he now lives and at once commenced to improve. He has it well improved and about thirty acres cleared. This was taken in 1893 and he had worked in the timber four years previous to taking the place. Mr. Travis has an orchard of four hundred and fifty trees, a good house, barn and outbuildings, and is one of the well-to-do men of his section. He handles some stock.

In 1881 occurred the marriage of Mr. Travis and Miss Theresa, daughter of John and Margaret (Belinger) Laundrash, natives of Canada, but immigrants to this country in an early day. Four children have been born to this worthy couple: Grace, wife of George Reaves, living in Reardan, Washington; Adelia R., Joseph E., and Ruby F. Mr. Travis is a free silver Republican. He is fraternally allied with the M. W. A., Rathdrum Camp No. 6843; with the I. O. O. F., Rathdrum Lodge No. 73; while Mrs. Travis is a member of the R. N. of A., Evergreen Camp. Mrs. Laundrash died in March, 1862, and is buried in Mankato, Minnesota, while Mr. Laundrash still lives, working at his trade of wagon maker. Mr. Travis is one of the men who have taken hold with a will to develop the country and its resources and is doing well, and holds an enviable prestige among his fellows.

WILLIAM H. ANDRUS. Although Mr. Andrus has spent considerable time in Kootenai county, being really one of the old-timers of this section, he is still a young man and has manifested real energy and enterprise in the labors which he has performed for the building of a home and the development of the country. He is a man of integrity and honor and is respected by all who know him, standing well among his fellows, and is deserving of representation in the history of his county.

William H. was born in Brighton county, Minnesota, on January 15, 1870, being the son of Ezra and Jane (Chamberland) Andrus, natives respectively of Vermont and Canada. They were married in Vermont and went to Minnesota in 1865. The father served in the Third Minnesota Infantry, in the Civil war. In 1884 he came west to Spokane and four years later settled in Kootenai county, where they died and are buried in Rathdrum cemetery. William H. was educated in the schools of the sections where he lived, and at the age of eighteen started out in life for himself. He went to the Hoodoo valley in Kootenai county, squatting on unsurveyed land and went to improving it. He sold this latter and moved to the vicinity of Rathdrum and purchased a quarter, partly improved. He labored there for three years and sold it, then bought a quarter of railroad land unimproved. He fitted it up as he could until he had sixty acres under the plow, then sold and bought two hundred and forty acres and later sold an eighty, which leaves him a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which is the family home now. It lies two miles west and one mile north from Rathdrum. He cuts and sells various kinds of timber supplies and is improving his place continually.

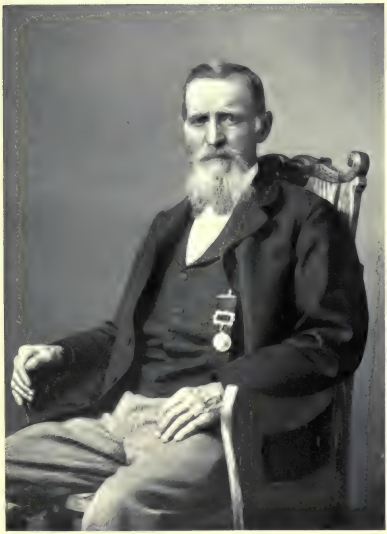
Mr. Andrus married Miss Mattie, daughter of G. W. and Eliza (Famm) Johnson, natives of Iowa, who came first to Minnesota and then, in 1890, to Spring Valley, Washington, where they reside now. To Mr. and Mrs. Andrus have been born three children: Walter H., Ethel P. and Florence A. Mr. Andrus is a member of the M. W. A., Rathdrum Camp No. 6843. His wife is a member of the R. N. of A., Evergreen Lodge.

NELS NELSON. Good strong hands directed by wisdom and practical judgment have wrought out the success that is now enjoyed by Mr. Nelson, a well known man of enterprise and integrity, who lives three and one-half miles north from Rathdrum, on his estate of one quarter section, which he has improved in a very becoming manner. He has one of the best residences of the entire section, with fine mountain spring water piped into it, a good barn and outbuildings, while an air of thrift pervades the premises, which indicates the spirit and nature of the proprietor. Mr. Nelson does a general farming business, sells timber products and also owns two hundred and eighty acres of grass land in Spokane county, Washington.

Speaking of the personal and domestic life of Mr. Nelson, we see that he was born in Littleful, Denmark, on October 20, 1864, being the son of Oren and Christine (Anderson) Nelson, natives of Denmark. They came to America in 1880, settling in Bear Lake county, Idaho. The father died there in 1884, but the mother still lives there. Nels was educated in Denmark and at eleven quit school. He came with his sister, Caroline M., to America in 1879, settling in Box Elder county, Utah. One year later they removed to Bear Lake county, Idaho, and sent for their parents. In 1883, Mr. Nels Nelson went to British Columbia and labored for two years, then went to Spokane, and later we find him in Montana, contracting in ties and timber. He then went to Kootenai county, and two years were spent in contracting in the same line. Then he married and bought a man's right to a homestead which he settled upon and made his home for ten years, after which he sold out and went to Spokane county, Washington, spending two years there. Then he came to Rathdrum and bought his present place, which has been the home of the family since that time.

It was in 1889 that Mr. Nelson married Miss Cindrila, daughter of W. M. and Sarah Holston, natives of Virginia and Indiana, respectively, but immigrants to Iowa and Missouri. The mother died in Missouri on April 12, 1898. The father lives near Neodesha, Kansas. To Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have been born four children, named as follows: Stacy, Bernard, Van E., and Joe L. Mr. Nelson is a Democrat in politics and is now serving on the school board and has been for three terms. He and his family are adherents of the Latter Day church. Mr. Nelson is a man who commands the respect of his fellows and stands well in the community and has manifested integrity, uprightness, and a public spirit.

WILLIAM S. LANCASTER. In all those experiences which are part and parcel of the pioneer's life, this gentleman has had a great share, having crossed the plains five times, once with two children, one eight and the other a babe, the mother having died; and his life is one of great activity and adventure, with all the attendant hardships and adventures, which but brought out his native endurance, courage and sagacity.



William S. was born in Liverpool, England, on July 25, 1833, being the son of John and Sarah (Slater) Lancaster, natives of England, the father being a great land holder there and the mother's people also being freeholders. They came to America in 1847, located in Keokuk, Iowa, and the father had a large share in a company that owned fifty thousand acres of land there. He died in 1850, and the mother was killed in 1858 in a railroad wreck on the Isthmus of Panama, and also was robbed of seven thousand dollars. After her husband's death she had been settling his estate and had been to California, also, in the gold mines. Four children were the fruit of this worthy couple: William S., the subject of this article; Anna, wife of Joseph Lupton, in Iowa; Sarah E., wife of Joseph Snow, in Lake county, California; John, who died in 1861, while crossing the plains. Our subject was educated in England, gaining a good college training. He worked on the farm with the father until the latter's death, and then helped his mother manage the estate, and upon her death, he was appointed administrator until the entire business was settled. After the mother's death, about 1860, Mr. Lancaster went to Pikes Peak, and in 1861 started across the plains with two sisters and one brother. They bought land near Chico, California, and then went to Walla Walla, horseback. Our subject bought mule teams and freighted to Boise. On one occasion, he paid a man forty cents per pound to pack sixteen thousand pounds to Blackfoot, Montana, and then he sold the tobacco as high as five and ten dollars per pound. He then made a contract with Moody of the O. R. & N. Co., to freight a steamboat machinery to lake Pend Oreille, the boiler alone weighing fourteen thousand pounds. This required thirteen wagons and over one hundred mules all told. Then in 1869 he returned to Iowa, sold out and went to Missouri and remained until 1889. On this journey he took his children, as mentioned above, and on the way he had great hardship, as they were short of provisions, and were obliged to live on wild berries. The late Judge Clagget was one of this party. He also crossed the plains with that gentleman in 1861. In 1889 he crossed the plains to Walla Walla and thence to Couer d'Alene, Idaho. In the spring of 1890, he went back to the Black Hills, Dakota, and brought out his family. He purchased a half section where he now lives about two miles southeast from Rathdrum. He has the estate well cultivated, and improved with good residence, barn, and other buildings, and is one of the prosperous men of this section.

In 1858 Mr. Lancaster married Miss Athaliah McCleary and three children were born to them: Wiliam H., married and living in Bellefourche, South Dakota, is a native of Iowa; John E., born in Walla Walla, now married and living in Curlew, Washington; the father packed this boy in a box on a horse from Walla Walla to Helena, Montana, in ten days; Athaliah, born in Walla Walla, married to Alex McDonald and living there now. Mrs. Lancaster died in 1867, and soon after that Mr. Lancaster took the trip across the plains with his children.

In 1869, Mr. Lancaster married Miss Mary McKee, a native of Sharon, Pennsylvania, and seven children have been born to them: Prince, born in Iowa; Josephine, also born in Iowa; Henry, born in Missouri, is now a graduate of the state university and deputy mineral surveyor in the employ of the United States government, and in school he was signally honored by the citizens of Moscow and his class mates by the receipt of a fine gold watch; Nellie, born in Missouri, now in Camp McKinney; Lenna, born in Missouri, now at Camp McKinney; Arthur G., at home; Grace, deceased.

BENJAMIN F. STOCKWELL. Four miles east from Rathdrum one will find the fine farm of Mr. Stockwell, which consists of one quarter section, and also one hundred and twenty acres of land that is rented. The place has not long been under cultivation, but the owner has made a good showing and has one of the fine producing farms in this section at the present time. He is a man of stirring spirit, handles his business with ability and execution, and is well thought of by his neighbors and by all who knew him.

Benjamin F. was born in Livingston county, Missouri, on April 19, 1858, his parents being James and Elizabeth (Gillispie) Stockwell. They came to Missouri in 1842. The father was a carpenter and died in Harrison county and is buried in Dale cemetery, near Bethany. This son received his first schooling in the village of his native county and completed the same in Harrison county. At sixteen years of age, he quit school and went to work, assisting his father on the farm until twenty, then he bought forty acres for himself and farmed three years. He sold and worked with his father until 1889, when he came to Rathdrum after tilling the land three years. Next we see him in Postfalls working in the saw mill and there and in Whitman county he continued for about ten years. His next move was to rent a farm, after which, in July, 1900, he bought his present farm. He has the place well under cultivation and will soon have it given entirely to the production of the fruits of the field. He bought eighty acres and in addition to his own land he rents one hundred and twenty acres of good grain land. He has a nice young orchard and some cattle and horses and plenty of machinery to handle his land successfully. Mr. Stockwell has produced some of the best crops on Rathdrum prairie and is a prosperous man.

WILLIAM S. LANCASTER.

On March 18, 1886, Mr. Stockwell married Miss Susan S., daughter of B. M. and Sarah A. (Terhune) Ross, and to them have been born three children: Roy O., born February 24, 1887; Montie F., born February 15, 1896; and Ernest W., born January 17, 1903. Mr. Stockwell is a Republican and takes interest in local politics. In 1899 he was elected justice of the peace but refused to qualify. He is a member of the school board. Mr. Stockwell is a member of the K. of P., Post Falls, No. 14. His wife is a member of the Methodist church; he is highly esteemed by all and looked up to as a leading member of the community.

The father of our subject, James S. Stockwell, was born in Ohio, on December 18, 1820, and came with his parents to Indiana, when a boy. He early learned carpentering and followed it all his life and was known in Missouri, whither he came, as "Uncle" James Stockwell. No man in the community was found as his enemy. He served through the war in the Thirty-third Missouri Volunteer Infantry. On Tuesday, March 11, 1890, he died in Harrison county, Missouri, of disease contracted during the war. His widow died on February 18, 1899, aged seventy-six. She was born in Indiana on October 3, 1822, and was married in 1840. She was the mother of nine children, five of whom preceded her to the grave.

LOUIS T. DITTEMORE. This gentleman is one of the old settlers of Kootenai county and has demonstrated in a number of years of faithful labor that he is a capable, upright and sagacious man.

Louis T. Dittemore was born in St. Joseph, Missouri, on October 29, 1848, to Theodore and Elizabeth (Cotter) Dittemore, natives of Indiana, who crossed the plains to California in 1853 and settled in Sonoma county. In 1891 they came to Postfalls, where they now live. Louis T. was educated in California and at the age of nineteen quit school and went to work on his father's farm. At twenty-two he bought a sheep ranch and followed it for three years. Then he sold out and bought a small farm which he tilled until 1876, at which time he went to Washington, near Dayton, and bought one hundred and sixty acres and also took a timber claim. He and his father put up a saw mill which they operated until 1884, then he rented the farm and took charge of the warehouse of Dusenberry & Stensel, in Dayton, until 1890, when he sold his farm and came to his present location, eight miles north from Coeur d'Alene, where he improved his farm with new house, barn, orchard and so forth, and it is a very fine place. Mr. Dittemore sold his farm this spring and has bought lots in Postfalls, where he is building a house, which will be the family home in the future.

The marriage of Mr. Dittemore and Miss Marilla Hall was solemnized in 1868 and to that union were born five children: Charles L., Hattie J., Perry L., married to Maud Morris, and living in Coeur d'Alene, Jessie E., Mary G. Mrs. Dittemore's parents were Edward and Eliza (Miller) Hall, natives of Illinois, but immigrants to California, where they died. Mrs. Dittemore died in 1887 and is buried in Coeur d'Alene cemetery.

In 1900 Mr. Dittemore married Addie Cox, daughtre of Robert and Luie (Lowney) Cox, natives of Illinois. They came west to Idaho in 1899, remained one year and then went to Kansas, where they now live. To this second marriage there has been born one child, Mildred B. Mr. Dittemore is a Democrat of the Jeffersonian type and in 1898 he was elected county commissioner against Robert Work, Republican, gaining the day by four hundred majority. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. Mr. Dittemore demonstrated in public service that he had the qualities which win and give satisfaction and he has always maintained an untarnished reputation and stands in an enviable position among the people.

JOSEPH G. BROPHY is one of the oldest pioneers of this section and was one of the leaders in developing the region and getting the tide of immigration turned toward the good country adjacent to Rathdrum, which time was before there was such a place as Rathdrum on the map. He wrought here then with good execution and has labored here ever since and he deserves a good rank with the leading pioneers of the entire county.

Joseph G. Brophy was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on September 6, 1848, and his parents were John and Elizabeth (Purcell) Brophy, natives of Queens county, Ireland. They came to the United States in 1847, located in Kentucky, and in 1857 moved to Iowa. There they died and are buried in Lansing. Joseph received his schooling in Kentucky and Iowa and at eighteen began to devote his entire time to the assistance of his father. After the father's death he remained at home and labored in the support of the family until he was twenty-seven. Then he went to Texas and joined his brother and labored at getting timbers for the railroad, and two years later returned to Iowa. Thence he went to Colorado and joined his brother Tom, and assisted to construct the railroad from Canyon City to Leadville during the excitement of those times. In 1878 Mr. Brophy drove overland to Walla Walla then came to Rathdrum in 1880. He immediately went to getting out timber for the N. P., which was built the next year. He took a homestead south from where Rathdrum now is, proved up on it and sold it, then bought the farm where he lives, five miles east and two miles south from Rathdrum. He immediately went to work at improving his place and building a home. He has a fine house and one of the best barns in the country, while his farm is well handled and Mr. Brophy stands a leader among the developers of the resources of the county. He has a good orchard and raises considerable stock.

In 1883 Mr. Brophy married Miss Violet, daughter of Jesse and Violet Mulkins, natives of Iowa. The father died in 1886 and is buried in Rathdrum, while the mother died at Pine City, Washington, in 1902, being buried there. To Mr. and Mrs. Brophy have been born four children: Elizabeth, teaching school, Thomas J., Belle, and Florence J. Mr. Brophy is a Democrat and was elected justice of the peace in 1898 and also in 1900. He takes an active part in politics and labors for good measures. He is a member of the Free Masons, Kootenai Lodge No. 24, and stands high in lodge relations. It is of note that Mr. Brophy was on the spot before any Rathdrum was there and when the question came up as to the name for the postoffice some suggested Woodville, some Westwood, some Mill Creek and finally M. M. Cowley said call it Rathdrum, the name of the place he came from, in Ireland, and Rathdrum was chosen.

MARY A. WRIGHT. It is out of the ordinary to find among the representatives of the people one so talented and sagacious and withal so successful, as has been and is Mary A. Wright. And especially is this precedented rarely among the ladies. Since her life is the proof, therefore, we will at once note some of the eminently successful doings of this prominent lady.

She was born in December, 1868, in Nodaway county, Missouri, being the daughter of Rev. J. C. and Mary (Best) Allen, natives respectively of Indiana and Missouri. The mother died in 1886 but the father still lives in Madison county, Missouri. He has been prominent in the United Brethren church for years. He is also a member of the A. F. & A. M. Mary A. was educated in the public schools and in the State Normal, and at the age of seventeen married and in 1889 came west, locating in Rathdrum the following year. In 1893 she began teaching school, continuing until 1899. In 1898 she was nominated by the Populist party for the legislature and gained the day by three hundred and fifty-six majority. Her colleagues, Edwin McBee and J. C. Glah, were also elected. The Republicans that year were George Levet, O. C. Smith, and Adams. She was appointed a member of the committee on education and was chairman of the committee on engrossment and also served in various other capacities. At one time she was appointed to preside over the house. Mrs. Wright is one of the three first ladies to represent her state. From the legislature she went to teaching school. She was at one time delegate to the state convention of her party and as there was a division in the party, two conventions were held and the matter went to the supreme court and her side was sustained. She was also a delegate to the national convention of her party at Sioux Falls, South Dakota. In January, 1901, she was chosen chief clerk in the house and served that session and it will be her duty to convene the next session of the legislature in Idaho. She was secretary of the Pan American exposition committee. Mrs. Wright acted as private secretary to Congressman Glenn in 1902, at the fifty-seventh congress.

Mrs. Wright has been the mother of three children, and one, Otis A., lives with his mother. She is a member of the Eastern Star, Queen Esther chapter No. 96. Mrs. Wright has gotten a firm hold on the hearts of her constituency and they stand by her nobly at all times. She is a woman of unusual ability and her talents are recognized by all who may have the pleasure of her acquaintance.

JAMES GLEESON. It is the lot of comparatively few men to have the large amount of traveling experience that has fallen to the enterprising and capable gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph and to whom we accord representation in this volume with pleasure, since he has done much to assist in the development of Kootenai county, has shown a public spirit and has ever conducted himself with sagacity and display of integrity and sound principles, being a man of sterling worth of character.

James Gleeson was born in the famous little isle that has sent her sons to the front of civilization around the globe and the stanch Irish blood that has done so much for the race is in his veins. He was born on December 24, 1839, in Wexford, Ireland, being the son of John and Mary (Walsh) Gleeson, natives of Wexford also. The father died there in 1861 and the mother in 1874, being buried at Poulfur. They were the parents of seven children, of whom our subject is the oldest: James, John, David, Patrick, Andrew, Mary and Matthew. James received his education in the common schools and labored for his father until he was twenty-four years of age. Then he bade farewell to the home land and sailed away to Australia, where he spent several years in different work. It was in 1867 that he landed in California and in 1869 he went to Chile and fired on an engine and later became engineer and remained there until 1874. He started back to California, but stopped in Mexico and operated an engine for a time, visited San Blas, the city of Mexico, Vera Cruz, and then came to New Orleans and later did engineer work in Coldwater, Mississippi. Next we see him in Indiana, then in Arakansas on a plantation, then in Chicago firing on a steamboat. He was soon in Texas and later in Dodge City, Kansas, then he returned to Texas and went thence to Los Angeles, California, and later was in the San Joaquin valley. In December, 1880, he started thence to Kootenai county and the following year he took a homestead and improved it in good shape and sold it. Then he took his present place as a preemption, eight miles north from Coeur d'Alene. He has improved it in a becoming manner, has a good portion cultivated and is prosperous. Mr. Gleeson was chairman of the Farmers' Alliance from 1889 to 1891 and he is popular among the residents of his section and has always put himself on record for the advancement of the interests of the county. Mr. Gleeson is a member of the Roman Catholic church and he is a man of reliability, carries the stirring spirit of his race and the good qualities imbibed in the far away Emerald Isle birthplace, being genial, affable, a man of sparkling wit and good practical judgment.

JESSE DENISON. To the industrious agriculturists of Kootenai county there is much credit for the opening up of this country and one among the number who deserves a goodly share of the encomium is named above. Mr. Denison is a native of Allamakee county, Iowa, being born on November 20, 1859, to Nathan and Mary J. (Lusk) Denison, natives of New York and Pennsylvania, respectively. They were early pioneers to Allamakee county and farmed there for thirty years, being buried in Mt. Hope cemetery there now. Jesse was educated in the schools of that place and at the age of eighteen took charge of his father's farm, continuing the same until twenty-two. Then he came west, Spokane being the objective point. Later we see him on the California ranch and soon thereafter he was in Cocolalla, then in Granite for five years. Then in Kootenai county he took a squatter's right and five years later sold it and moved to Rathdrum. He clerked for John Russell, then railroaded a time and contracted wood and then went to Montana and took charge of a section on the railroad, after which he returned to Rathdrum and took his present place, three miles south and four miles east from that town. He had bought a quarter in the hard times, but was not able to hold it. He now has a fine farm, all under cultivation and producing good returns, stock enough to operate it well, a good house and barn and is doing well.

In 1881 Mr. Denison married Miss Fannie Maher, whose parents were natives of Ireland and came to America when young, and to this happy union five children have been born: William, Mary, James, Frank, Rosa. Mr. Denison is one of the directors in his school district and has been road supervisor for a time. In politics he is allied with the Democratic party and takes an active hand in the affairs of the county and of politics in general. He is a member of the M. W. A., Rathdrum Camp, No. 6448. In church relations Mr. Denison is affiliated with the Roman Catholics.

SYLVESTER MILLER. About six miles northwest from Coeur d'Alene is the residence of the gentleman whose life's career is to be epitomized for the volume of his county's history. Mr. Miller is a man of good stanch character, is an enterprising farmer and has established himself in the esteem and good will of his fellows. He was born in Fayette, Ohio, on October 22, 1873, being the son of Matthias and Clara C. (Spencer) Miller, natives, respectively, of New Jersey and Ohio. They came west in 1881, locating in Dayton, Washington, and thence in the following year to Kootenai county, where the father did freighting from Rathdrum to Coeur d'Alene and in 1884 bought a man's right to a homestead and settled there until 1897, moving to Coeur d'Alene, where he died in 1899, March 31st. The mother had died in 1888 and both are buried in the Coeur d'Alene cemetery. Our subject received but little opportunity of gaining an education on account of the many moves that the family made. However, he improved his opportunities and fortified himself as best he could for the battle of life. At sixteen he quit school altogether and assisted his father, remaining with him all the time. In 1897, when the father removed to Coeur d'Alene, Sylvester remained on the farm and has continued there since in cultivation of the same.

In 1893 occurred the marriage of Mr. Miller and Miss Anna, daughter of John and Arreka Snyder, natives of Germany. They came to America and located in Kootenai county, later removing to Coeur d'Alene, where Mr. Snyder is now marshal of the town. Mr. Miller has one brother, Gilbert, living in Coeur d'Alene. He also has one sister, Alta, wife of George Childers, in Coeur d'Alene. In politics Mr. Miller is Republican and manifests an intelligent interest in the affairs of the county and state. He has shown himself faithful and capable and is in good standing among all who know him.

ALFORD W. HUDLOW. For a number of years this gentleman has labored in Kootenai county and is now located on a quarter ten miles east from Rathdrum, where he has a comfortable place. He is a man well esteemed by his fellows and has maintained a clean reputation. Alford W. was born in Dawson county, Georgia, in August, 1849, where he received his educational training from the common schools. His parents, W. B. and Margret (Williams) Hudlow, were natives of Georgia. In 1885 they came west and located in Rockford, Washington, and on December 31, 1894, the father died, being buried on January 2, 1895, while the mother still lives on Pleasant prairie, Washington. At the age of nineteen Alford W. started for himself. He took a claim and soon sold and removed to Missouri, where he homesteaded one hundred and forty-seven acres, and ten years after his advent there he sold and came to Rockford, Washington. One year there and he went back to Missouri, where two years were spent. Another move was made to Rockford and then he made his way to Rathdrum, where he has been since with the exception of one year spent in Oregon. He is located in the vicinity of Hayden lake, has a comfortable home and handles timber products in connection with general farming.

In 1869 Mr. Hudlow married Miss Rode C., daughter of Isaac Garoutte, a native of New Jersey. To this union there have been born the following children: Mark, married to Sada Burch, in Kootenai county; Laura, wife of Silas Evan, in Spokane county, Washington; Mat, married to George Grates, in Spokane; Benman, single; Rus, married to Ida Jestus, in this county; Rufus, Ruby and Pearl.

JAMES A. COLMAN. In the course of the compilation of the history of Kootenai county it becomes our pleasant duty to review the salient points in the career of the gentleman whose name appears above. He is a substantial citizen, public minded and of a progressive turn and has had considerable experience in various lines in the county.

James A. was born in Roane county, Tennessee, on October 14, 1869. His parents, Brice and Eliza (Johnson) Colman, were natives of the same state. The mother died in 1882. The father came west in 1886 to Kootenai county and now lives seven miles east from Rathdrum and is one of the leading farmers of the community. In Kansas our subject received his education and at the age of seventeen came west to join his father. He worked in a saw mill for a time, then bought a team and hauled ties for five years. He then took a homestead, where he is now located, ten miles east from Rathdrum. He has built a house and barn, fenced a portion and cultivates some but gives his attention to the timber products mostly. He has an admirable place for a fish hatching establishment and intends to start a trout farm.

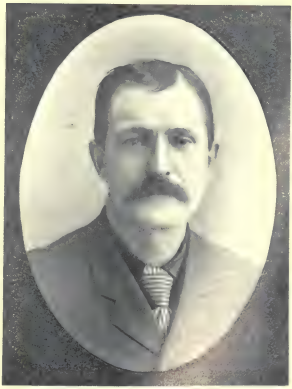
In 1895 Mr. Colman married Miss Nellie B., daughter of Albert H. and Ellen (Graham) Dingman, natives of Indiana, who crossed the plains and located in Latah county and later came to Kootenai county, but now live in Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Colman have been born three children, named as follows: Amos B., Clara A., Lottie. Mr. Colman is an enterprising, public spirited citizen and takes great interest in the welfare of the county and is a zealous worker in the Republican fold. He is ever allied with that which is for advancement and betterment.

CARL NILSON. Although Mr. Nilson has not been in Kootenai county so long as some of the pioneers, still he has made a good showing and is established here as one of the real builders of the county, having put forth the industry and thrift that characterize his race, being also a man to whom people readily give confidence and of which he is deserving. He was born in Varmlan, Sweden, on October 10, 1865, being the son of Nils and Johanna (Anderson) Nilson, natives also of Sweden. He received his educational training in his native land and at the age of sixteen went to work on a farm and then went to Norway and labored on the road. His father was taken sick and he returned to take his place on the farm, where he labored nine months and then went to Norway. One year later he was in America and located first in Calhoun county, Iowa. He worked two years and then came to Sioux City, Iowa. In 1889 we find him in Spokane, Washington, where he labored for five months, then he returned to Iowa, laboring there for seven years. Then he went to Sweden to bring his mother to this country. He returned to Iowa and one year later came to Kootenai county and at once bought two hundred acres of railroad land, mostly timber. He has a fine house, a good barn and has improved his place in good shape. This estate lies eight miles east from Rathdrum.

In 1899 Mr. Nilson married Miss Christine, daughter of Andrew and Kate Anderson, natives of Sweden, where also they died. Mrs. Nilson came to this country in 1889. To Mr. and Mrs. Nilson have been born three children: John V., Ellen S. and Lillie E. Mr. Nilson takes an active part in political matters, and he is of independent thought, reserving for himself the privilege of voting for whom he chooses regardless of party restrictions. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran church.

JOHN P. BRENGMAN. This well known gentleman is one of the esteemed men whose pioneer labors opened this country for settlement and since his advent here his hand has always been ready to build up and improve, while his walk of uprightness and faithfulness has won for him the encomiums and good will of all.

John P. Brengman was born in Corydon, Harrison county, Indiana, on February 27, 1865, being the son of Thomas and Alice (Kentner) Brengman, natives of Kentucky and Indiana, respectively. They were married in the native place of our subject and there the father enlisted on February 8, 1862, in Company B, Fifty-third Indiana Volunteers. He was in Sherman's army and participated in the sieges of Vicksburg, Atlanta, Corinth and also marched to the sea, being altogether three years and eight months in the active service. He received an honorable discharge and is now a member of the G. A. R. When John was eight, the family removed to Mason county, Illinois, thence they went to St. James, Missouri, where the father was superintendent of the live stock for the iron and steel works. In 1875 they migrated to Pawnee county, Kansas, and in 1879 went to Richards county, Nebraska. Later the father came to Kootenai county and dwells here now. Our subject is the eldest of ten children, all of whom are in this county. Our subject came to Whitman county in 1887 and thence in May of the same year he came to the St. Mary's valley. Only several scattering settlers were in the valley and Mr. Brengman worked in lumbering for some time. Then he bought one hundred and twenty acres of hay land a couple of miles above Saint Maries, which he devotes to hay. At present he is dwelling on a homestead twelve miles up the St. Mary's and he and his sister, Mrs. Emma Sanders, a widow, who is keeping house



JOHN P. BRENGMAN.

ARTHUR A. DARKNELL.

FLOYD V. WIKE.

WILLIAM LYONS.

for him, together own several hundred acres of land which is utilized for pasture of their herds and is also valuable for the timber. Mr. Brengman has just completed a contract of building six miles of road past his place and is to be credited in his excellent labors for improvement. Mr. Brengman is a member of the M. W. A. and the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 32, both of Saint Maries. His parents came here in 1898 and have a good ranch one mile above town.

ARTHUR A. DARKNELL is well known in Saint Maries and all points adjacent to Lake Coeur d'Alene, being one of the prominent steamboat men of the lake, as well as a property owner at Saint Maries and vicinity. He is a man of energy and enterprise, has good business ability, and is an upright, moral and stanch citizen.

Mr. Darknell was born in Watertown, Jefferson county, Wisconsin, on October 16, 1859, being the son of Henry Samuel and Jane (Alexander) Darknell, natives of England, but immigrants to the United States in an early day. The family went to Rochester, Minnesota, in 1862, and in 1868 they removed to Goodhue county, in the same state. He grew up on a farm and was educated in the common schools. On October 16, 1880, Mr. Darknell married Miss Alice C., daughter of George W. and Lavina Hayward. He farmed there for three years and then removed to Spokane county, Washington, taking a homestead near Fairfield. He improved it and made it his home until 1897, and then came to Saint Maries and engaged in the stock business. Three years were spent at this, and then he sold his stock and bought the steamer, Defender, which he ran one year and then sold. Then Mr. Darknell bought a half interest in the Schley, a fine steamer, which makes daily trips from Coeur d'Alene to Saint Maries. Mr. A. I. Loomis owns the other half of this steamer and he and Mr. Darknell do business in partnership, both being practical steamboat men. This steamer is fourteen feet by seventy-five and has a capacity of thirty tons. Mr. Darknell owns a tract of land adjacent to Saint Maries, part of the town being on his land, and also he has a farm of one hundred and sixty acres of good land on the Saint Joe river. He has a fine residence in Saint Maries, being a modern structure of eight rooms and located in a desirable portion of the town.

Mr. Darknell is a member of the M. W. A., Saint Maries Camp No. 8555, of the Saint Maries lodge of the I. O. O. F., No. 32, being a charter member of the last order and treasurer since its organization, April 8, 1901. Mr. Darknell and his wife are members of the Rebekahs. He has always taken an active part in the upbuilding of the town and the advancement of the educational facilities, and he has always served on the school board wherever he has been. He is active and interested in political matters, always attending the primaries and conventions.

To Mr. and Mrs. Darknell have been born two children, Mildred Lavina and Cora Alice.

FLOYD V. WIKE. This bright and intelligent young business man has manifested excellent capabilities to secure success in his mercantile establishment in Athol, as well as in handling his land that he owns near that town.

Floyd V. Wike was born in Griggsville, Pike county, Illinois, on September 4, 1879, being the son of William and Elizabeth Wike, natives of Pennsylvania and Illinois, respectively. Mrs. Wike is the daughter of George and Julia (Tyler) Wike, natives of Illinois, who came west in 1899 and located near Athol, where they now live. Mrs. Wike married Sherman Hosler in Glasgow, Montana, in 1894, and in 1896 they removed to Spokane, Washington, and in 1902 they came to Athol, where they now reside. Mr. Hosler was a railroad conductor and has run trains all over the United States. He was born in Ohio, on October 22, 1864, and he completed his education in Oberlin College, that state. He had an unpleasant experience in the south in undergoing a yellow fever and smallpox siege. Mr. Hosler is a member of the I. O. O. F. at Athol and the M. W. A. at Spokane. Our subject was educated in his native place and at Colchester and when twelve went to work in a pottery. Later he served in a printing office for one year, then went to live with his grandparents, and in 1894 he went to clerking in Chicago. It was January, 1895, that he came to Glasgow, Montana, worked in a pumping station for a few months and then made his way to Siskiyou county, California. Two years were spent in prospecting northern California and southern Oregon, and then he made his way to Spokane. He was at Buffalo Hump in the excitement there and afterwards came to Athol and located a timber claim. He has this well improved and it is a valuable piece of property. In 1902 Mr. Wike opened a general mechandise establishment in Athol and it has been a success from the very beginning. His patronage, because of his affability and careful and wise business methods, is constantly increasing and he has recently erected a large building and increased his business. Politically Mr. Wike is an active Republican. He is a member of the M. W. A., Athol Camp, 8388, and of this order he has been chief forester and is now banker. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., Pine Lodge, No. 75, in Athol; also of the Rebekahs, Evergreen Lodge, No. 51, at Athol; and of the K. of P.

WILLIAM LYONS. From the famous Emerald Isle, whence come so many of our best citizens, the subject of this article hails and he carries the stirring qualities of his race, being self reliant, capable, energetic and possessed of a goodly store of practical wisdom and keenness that have enabled him to make a good career. He is now one of the patriotic and public minded citizens of Kootenai county and lives on his farm of one-quarter section one and one-half miles east from Ramsey.

With this short introduction we will proceed to detail the personal items of the life of Mr. Lyons, noting first that he was born in Waterford county, Ireland, on January 1, 1857, being a son of Dave and Johanna (Foley) Lyons, natives also of the same land. When William was but three years of age he was called to mourn the sad loss of his mother, and she reposes in the cemetery of the native place. He was educated in the common schools and in 1868 came to America with his father. They located in Massachusetts, where the father died, and our subject began at the tender age of eleven years the battle of life for himself. He worked on a farm for five years and then railroaded for all the intervening years until 1892. Then he came west, locating on his present farm, which he took as a homestead. Mr. Lyons erected the buildings on his farm and has done all the improving. He has fifty acres under cultivation, the farm all fenced and raises some stock. Mr. Lyons has three sisters, Delia, Mary, Johanna, all married and living in Massachusetts. Mr. Lyons takes an interest in local politics and the affairs of the county and the state, and is an enterprising and progressive citizen. He is a member of the Catholic church and is upright and well liked by all.

JAMES T. LAGERS is one of the oldest settlers in this section of Kootenai county, which is six miles east from Rathdrum, where he has a fine estate of two hundred and eighty acres. He has wrought here and endured many hardships during and since the early days and he has won a fine success from the continued labors which he has bestowed with sagacity. He is of excellent standing in the community, has friends from every class and is well liked by all.

James T. was born in Albany, Missouri, on September 27, 1858, being the son of Bernard and Mary J. Lagers. The parents came to Missouri in 1857, and in 1880 removed to the southwestern part, where they died. The father was a miller by trade and he also handled a farm. In the native place James was educated, having only opportunity to attend the common schools. At the age of fourteen he was obliged to quit school and assist the father who was sickly. Being the oldest son, the management of the farm devolved upon him and he remained steadily at that until he was twenty-five years of age. Then he farmed for himself in McDonald county three years, after which he sold out and came to his present place. He took a homestead and began improvement. The country was very wild then and plenty of wild game abounded, he being able to shoot deer from his porch, while also bear and cougar were in abundance. Mr. Lagers labored faithfully in improving his farm, made ties and other timber products and now he has a fine house, good barn, and the place is in excellent shape, being increased by a purchase of one hundred and twenty acres. He raises abundant crops and his soil is of the very best.

It was in 1883 that Mr. Lagers sought a wife and married Miss Sarah, daughter of James and Louisa J. Cook, natives of Tennessee, who came west in 1887, locating in Kootenai county. They remained until 1901, then sold and returned to Missouri, where they now live. To Mr. and Mrs. Lagers three children have been born: Abbie K., James I. and William E. Mr. Lagers is one of the school board and has been for eleven years, being clerk now. He is one of the reliable and substantial men, and is deservedly classed as one of the leading builders of the county.

ROSS DINGMAN. Practically the entire life of Mr. Dingman has been spent in Kootenai county, although he looks to Nebraska as his native place. He is a citizen and product of the county, in whom pride may be taken for his careful and faithful industry and because of his real worth, having the confidence and good will of all. On October 31, 1872, Mr. Dingman was born in Phelps county, Nebraska, being the son of A. H. and Ellen (Graham) Dingman, natives of Kansas, who came west with their young son in 1877. The Palouse country was their dwelling place for three years and then a removal was made to Kootenai county, in which place Ross received his schooling. Later the parents removed to Glendale, Oregon, where they still live. At the age of eighteen our subject started in the labors of life on his own responsibility, working for wages until 1897, when he took a homestead where he now lives, seven miles east from Rathdrum. He has forty acres producing crops, considerable hay land, and has about seven hundred thousand feet of saw timber. Also, Mr. Dingman has fifteen head of cattle, some horses and devotes considerable time to raising stock. He also raises many vegetables and sells in the markets. He is one of the well-to-do young men of the community and has made a fine showing in his labors. He is an active worker in the political realm, being allied with the Republican party and he also is interested in those measures that are for general advancement and development.

Mr. Dingman has six brothers and three sisters, named as follows: Charley, George, William, Franklin, Harvy, Clifford, Nellie, wife of James Colman, living at Hayden lake, Minnie and Ruby. Mr. Dingman is a young man of great promise and his steady course, his industry, and his integrity have given him a fine prestige.

BRICE COLMAN. The subsequent paragraphs will suffice to show the real grit, courage, reliability, and intrinsic worth of the estimable gentleman of whom we now have the pleasure of speaking, and therefore we will at once enter upon the detail of his life, which has been an exemplification of priceless virtues. Mr. Colman is a native of Roane county, Tennessee, being the son of Daniel and Mary (Johnson) Colman, natives respectively of Tennessee and North Carolina. April 17, 1845, was the happy day when this son was born to the above named parents, being one of seven children, four boys and three girls. The parents located in Roane county, where the father gave attention to boating and there they remained until the time of their death, being buried in Point Rock cemetery there. Our subject was denied the privilege of attending school, but his perseverance led him to learn to read and write after he was married. At the age of sixteen his young blood was stirred up to join the army and fight for the stars and stripes, and he nobly did the part of a valiant soldier for the entire period of hostilities. He was in the Second Tennessee, under Captain Amos Marney. He fought in the battles of West Cross Roads, Pauls River, Rogersville and November, 1863, he was taken prisoner, when began the terrible suffering that has never been fully told out, which many of the Union soldiers endured. He was taken to Bell Island, Virginia, and there languished in the war prison from November 11 to March 12, following, then he was placed in Andersonville, Georgia, and in September he was taken thence to Florence, South Carolina, and there on February 27, 1865, he was turned over to the Federal authorities. As Mr. Colman says, when he stood a free man again and looked back over that horrible time of bondage, he was too happy to speak, in fact, it was the happiest moment of his life. He went to Knoxville, thence to Nashville and then, on May 22, 1865, he was mustered out with a very creditable military record. Mr. Colman is a member of the G. A. R., Lawton Post No. 29.

He farmed in Tennessee until 1870, then went to Anderson county, Kansas, remaining there until 1883. There, in 1882, Mrs. Colman died and she is buried in Springfield cemetery, Anderson county. In 1883 Mr. Colman came to Portland, and in October to Kootenai county. The winter was spent in hunting deer and the following summer in logging. He then returned to Kansas on a visit, remaining nine months, then came to Kootenai county and went to work in a saw mill, where his hand was cut off on July 12, 1887. This sad accident caused his retirment from work for one year. Returning then to the mill he was night watchman for seven years. In 1892, he took his present homestead, seven miles east from Rathdrum, and he has improved it in fine shape, having good house, barn and other buildings. He has some stock and a good orchard.

The marriage of Mr. Colman and Miss Eliza L., daughter of G. W. and Biddie (Galliam) Johnson, natives of Tennessee, who came to Kansas in 1870, where they died, was solemnized on November 11, 1866. To this happy union there were five children born: William F., single; James A., married to Nellie Dingman, in this county; M. E., married to Minnie Rhodes, in Rathdrum; Mary J., wife of Charles Dingman, in this county; Fred, single. Also Mr. Colman raised his niece, Josie Williams, whom he took upon the death of her mother, in 1891, and she is now keeping house for him and teaching school. Politically, Mr. Colman is an active Republican and he is highly esteemed by all. He has been school director for eight years in his district. Mr. Colman affiliates with the Baptist church and exemplifies the virtues of Christianity in his daily life.

SAMUEL F. RHODES. This well known man has been an active laborer for the development of Kootenai county for a good many years, and is considered one of its substantial and capable citizens. Samuel F. was born in Gentry county, Missouri, on September 14, 1848, being the son of William C. and Emily (Ball) Rhodes, natives, respectively, of North Carolina and Virginia. They settled in Gentry county, where the father died in 1859, being buried in Howel cemetery, while the mother still lives in that county. Samuel received a common schooling, and in 1865 drove a freight team of six yoke of oxen to Fort Union, Mexico, for the government, then returned to Kansas City and went home, where he labored for his father for three years. He operated a threshing machine, then went to Texas in 1868 and at Denton, burned a kiln of one hundred thousand bricks, which he sold for ten dollars per thousand. He went to San Antonio, sold his outfit, then hired to drive cattle, assisting to take eighteen hundred head to Kansas. He returned home, got married, and settled down to farming. Later Mr. Rhodes bought a third interest in a saw mill, which he operated for twelve years. It was in 1885 that he came west, contracted to cut nine hundred cords of wood for the Northern Pacific, and then removed to Fish Lake to get school opportunities for his children. He worked the next summer for O. A. Dodge in the saw mill, then cut ties, and in 1888 he took his present place, seven miles east from Rathdrum. He devotes his attention to general farming, raising stock and handling timber products.

In 1873 Mr. Rhodes married Miss Emma, daughter of John and Ellen (Compton) Steel, natives of Virginia, who came to Albany, Missouri, in the time of the war, and there remained until their death. To Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes there have been born six children: Minnie, wife of M. E. Colman, living in Rathdrum; Leonia, wife of Dave Masterson, in this county; Ethel, in Leter, Chester and Ruby. Mr. Rhodes is active in local politics, and he has been school director since the commencement of the school, and was elected again in the spring of 1902 for three years more. He and his wife are members of the Christian church and stand well in the community.

TELL HUGUENIN. It is only necessary to point to the farm buildings, the large herds of stock, the industrial plant, the general farming business of the gentleman whose name initiates this sketch, and note that they were all gotten by his thrifty labor in this section, to convince one of the stability and stanch character of Mr. Huguenin. He is one of the leading men of this portion of the county, and is highly respected, and is one of the real builders of the county. Mr. Huguenin was born in Neuchatel, Switzerland, on January 9, 1857, being the son of Sylvain and Hortianse (Barbazat) Huguenin, natives of Switzerland, where the father died in 1874, and the mother still lives, aged ninety-two. Our subject was educated in the public schools of his native land and then went to working in the watch factories. His father kept dairy cows and later he assisted in the work. At the age of twenty-two he rented land and farmed it for eleven years and then came to this country. He chopped wood in Coeur d'Alene for four years and then bought eighty acres, where he now lives, six miles east from Rathdrum. In 1902 he bought ninety-acres more. He has built a fine eight-room house, a large barn, thirty-five by one hundred feet, and has improved generally in a very becoming manner. Our subject owns eighty-five head of cattle, about fifty of which are milch cows. He manufactures about five tons of excellent cheese each year.

In 1878 Mr. Huguenin married Miss Elisa, daughter of Francis and Felicie (Allen) Jeannerett, natives of Switzerland. The mother died in 1899 and the father still lives in the native land. To our subject and his excellent wife there have been born the following named children: Therese; Herman, in the Colville valley, Washington; Ida, in Lewiston; Alice, attending school in Seattle; Edward, Alfred, Francois, William, Marc and Martha. Mr. Huguenin and his family are members of the Methodist church. We wish to add that when Mr. Huguenin came to his present place he was in debt and had one cow. His excellent holdings at the present time are the result of his faithful and wisely bestowed labors. He has the finest place anywhere in the vicinity, and he has reason to be proud of the worthy results that he has achieved.

WELLINGTON F. SHARAI. The plain facts of the career of the subject of this article will speak more emphatically than words of encomium and we regret that space forbids greater detail in their recounting.

Wellington F. Sharai was born in Berrien county, Michigan, on January 9, 1845, being the son of Peter and Eliza Sharai, natives of Michigan. They were the parents of five children: Dileo, deceased; Wellington, the subject of this sketch; Eliza, wife of John Crowder, in Spokane, Washington; Eugene, in Weiser, Idaho; Emma, wife of E. J. Hart, in Michigan. The mother of our subject was a distant relative of Robert Burns, the poet. Our subject received but little opportunity for education but improved well the amount he had. When seventeen he enlisted in the First Colorado Volunteer Infantry under Colonel Slough and Captain Sophies. He fought in New Mexico in Patchin Canyon and also in other fierce conflicts near. His command was ordered to meet General Canby and they encountered the Texans enroute but after a fierce battle all day the enemy retired in the night. In 1863 the Indians broke out and he was detailed to fight them. In1864 a great battle was fought with them, five hundred of the redskins being killed. This was at Fort Lyons, Colorado. Being honorably discharged, Mr. Sharai went to the mountains with Dave Brinson and hunted. He supplied the markets in Denver and other places for one year. Then he mined at Lead City and in 1867 journeyed to Green river, after which he went hunting again; such was the stirring life of those days. In 1870 the Indian war broke out and he and his brother discovered a number of Indians driving off a band of stock and they had a pitched battle; many shots were fired and one Indian was killed, but the balance departed. Mr. Sharai went to the Black Hills in 1871 but returned again to the Cheyenne country. Hunting and fighting thieving Indians occupied him for a time, then he went to the Black Hills again and there killed twenty-three elk in one day. Thence he went to the Union Pacific railroad and killed eleven hundred buffaloes, one car load netting him nine hundred dollars. One afternoon he fired two hundred and fifty shots and killed sixty-nine buffaloes, sixty of which fell on two acres of ground. He later killed eleven hundred moose in five months in Colorado, and slew sixty buffalo bulls and ten cows in one day. Then he returned to Michigan and farmed on the old homestead for about three years, the father going to Oregon. In 1878 he came west, having but twenty dollars, so was compelled to foot it across Nebraska. He fell in with a teamster going to the Black Hills and there worked in the mines. While in Michigan Mr. Sharai had begun preaching the gospel and when he went to the Black Hills this last time he soon settled on a farm and all the time there he preached the gospel. In 1888 he was in Spokane and preached for one winter. In the spring he went prospecting and discovered the Silver Mountain ledge mines. A company was formed and Mr. Sharai was chosen superintendent and work progressed until 1899. Then the company refused to spend more money, having laid out twenty-nine thousand dollars and Mr. Sharai located the ground in 1892, now owning the entire property. Mr. Sharai owns fifty-four acres near Hope and has some fine fruit. He divides his time between the fruit ranch, mining and preaching. His residence is in the town of Hope. He is a stanch Republican and active in the campaigns. A summing up of the trophies of the chase of this real nimrod is about as follows: Deer, antelope and mountain sheep, four thousand, two hundred; buffaloes, two thousand, six hundred; elk, seventy-two; bear, thirteen; Indians, one. These are what the trusty rifle of this famous hunter and intrepid figfiter has brought down. It is a forceful reminder of the mercy of the man that in as many hard places with the redskins as he has been, he has refrained from slaying them, but only once did he cause one of the savages to bite the dust. Mr. Sharai is a man of great executive force, keen business ability, sterling integrity and his friends are numbered from every walk and every quarter. He is the recipient of the good will of all and is one of the noted men of the county.

CLEMENT B. KING. Six miles north from Coeur d'Alene, on the banks of Hayden lake, lies the estate of Mr. King. It it without doubt one of the finest places in the entire county of Kootenai. He owns eighteen hundred acres of land, a beautiful house of nine rooms, which is of modern architectural design, heated with furnace, having two bath rooms, and is supplied with hot and cold water to all parts. He has stone buildings for out houses, and commodious barns, that cost a number of thousand dollars, and the establishment is an ideal home, having all the comforts of the city and the retirement of the rural abode. Mr. King has exemplified his taste, his sagacity and his ability here, and altogether he is one of the prominent men of the county, being a leader in the Republican party, and also one of the oldest pioneers to the section west of the Rockies.

WELLINGTON F. SHARAI.

It will be interesting to note in detail the life's history of this worthy man, who, as President Roosevelt remarks, "Has done things." He was born in Lee county, Iowa, on March 16, 1843, being the son of David and Mary (Hinkle) King, natives of Delaware and Ohio, respectively. They crossed the dreary and dangerous plains with their little flock in 1853, using ox teams. The father made settlement in Corvallis, Oregon, and there labored until the time of his death, in 1890. He had been one of the leading men of that section and had retired on his well earned competence for a number of years prior to his death. The mother still lives in Corvallis, aged seventy-nine.

Clement B. was educated in the district schools of his western home and in 1862, being nineteen, went to the gold strike in Florence. He secured some gold and went back to Oregon, then we find him at Yaquina Bay, then in Walla Walla, and later in Elk City. He operated a dairy in Elk City and did well, then brought his stock to Walla Walla. He went the next year to Bear Gulch near Missoula, across the Bitter Root mountains. After some time with his dairy he sold out and came via the Mullan road to Walla Walla. Then he got married and went to the old home in Corvallis. Returning to Union flat in Whitman county, he located in the stock business. He and T. J. Smith have the distinction of locating the land where Colfax stands, but later they gave it up. When Colfax started to be a town Mr. King opened a drug store and a livery stable. He secured the contract of carrying the mail to Colville, Coeur d'Alene and so forth, and then located a large livery in Spokane. Four years he continued in these stirring lines, then sold the entire properties and in company with James Monaghan bought the traders' stores at Forts Coeur d'Alene and Spokane. Four years were spent in this and then Mr. King put the first steamers on Lake Coeur d'Alene. He netted in this as high as three hundred dollars per day. In 1886 he sold out and removed to Spokane, and with James Monaghan he later took a contract to furnish all the ties on the San Francisco & Northern, from Spokane to Columbia river. From 1881 to 1886 Mr. King bought his present elegant estate, and in 1889 he built his lovely home. Mr. King is giving his attention to raising fine horses, having two excellent stallions, one a draught animal and the other a trotter. He has nearly fifty head of fine horses.

In 1867 Mr. King married Miss Mary Cox, and to them were born two children: Homer B., married and living in Coeur d'Alene; Jennie, living with her parents. In 1878 Mrs. King died. In 1880 Mr. King married Belle Wimpy, daughter of Major and Lidia Wimpy, natives of North Carolina, and they have one child.

Mr. King is a strong man in the Republican ranks and is active at all times for the interests of his party. He is a member of the Elks, Spokane Lodge, No. 228, being one of the oldest in this section.

NICHOLAS HITE. This veteran of many battles for his country, as well as the victorious champion in many struggles on the arena of life's conflicts, is a deserving man, upright and faithful in his labors and in his demeanor toward all has so displayed the rich virtues of a Christian life that he has won friends from all classes and parties and is admired universally by those who know him.

Nicholas Hite was born in Bedford, Pennsylvania, on July 5, 1837, being the son of David and Margret (Stevens) Hite, natives also of the Keystone state. They removed to Benton, Iowa, in 1848, where they engaged in farming until the time of their deaths. The father's time came in 1868, and the mother passed away in 1892, both being buried in Benton. The children of this worthy couple were six boys and six girls, all of whom are married and living. Our subject was educated in the common schools and remained with his father until twenty-one. Then he rented a farm for himself and when the war broke out he patriotically pressed into service, enlisting in the Twenty-eighth Iowa Infantry, under Captain S. P. Vennata. At Iowa City they went into camp, and after a time at Davenport went to Helena, Arkansas, to cut off Price's retreat from Holly Springs. They made different expeditions in Arkansas and Mr. Hite was taken severely with rheumatism. He was so sick that he was unconscious for two weeks, and his entire body was wrapped in cotton batting, and this was saturated with turpentine, which blistered him from head to foot. He suffered terrible agony. When better, he was transferred to Keokuk, Iowa, and when well enough was set as night watch, but being unable to sleep in the day time he was soon in the hospital again. Later he rejoined his regiment in Algeirs and Berwick City. Later under General Banks he fought on the Red river for two days, and they were obliged to retreat, covering themselves in rifle pits and damming the river to let their boats down. He fought in many engagements there and then was transferred to Washington. The ship was out of water on the gulf and much suffering was the result. They were soon in Shenandoah, however, and participated in the battle near Winchester, also in many skirmishes and contests in that region. He was later attacked with the rheumatism and was sent to Davenport, Iowa, and on May 3, 1865, he was honorably discharged. He returned home and settled there until 1886, when he came to the west. A short stay was made in Spokane, and then he was looking in Kootenai county until he found his present home place, which he took as a homestead. It lies one and one-half miles east from Hauser and consists of eighty acres, which is well improved. He has a good orchard and buildings and handles some stock.

It was in 1871 that Mr. Hite married Mrs. Nancy Simmons, widow of James Simmons and daughter of J. D. McLaughlin, a native of Indiana. To this union were born six children: Nettie M., wife of William Wylie, in British Columbia; Dora, wife of Austin Denney, in Davenport, Washington; Arthur P., William T., Elmer, Robert C. Mr. Hite is a Prohibitionist in politics and has been the nominee of his party for county commissioner and assessor in 1898 and 1900. He has been road commissioner for three years. Mr. Hite is a member of the I. O. O. F., the G. A. R., and the Methodist church. He is passing the golden years of his life in the quiet enjoyment of his portion with the assurance that in time of war he was among the first and foremost to fight for the banner of freedom and has always held the esteem and good will of all who have known him in the walks of life.

GEORGE E. COLEMAN. We now have the pleasure of recounting the salient points in the career of one of Kootenai county's substantial and leading young farmers and stock men. He lives one-fourth of a mile north from Hauser on a fine estate of two hundred and eighty acres of land, which his skill and husbandry have made well improved and productive of fine crops.

Mr. Coleman was born in Williams county, Ohio, on September 19, 1865, being the son of John and Lena (Cassle) Coleman, natives of Pennsylvania. After their marriage they came to Williams county, Ohio, and seventeen years later they removed to Richland county, in the Buckeye state, where the father died in 1900; but the mother still lives there. The move to Richland county occurred when George was six years of age. He therefore got his education in the latter county, going to school in the winter and working on the farm with his father in the summer. He also attended the Savannah Academy for a couple of terms. Subsequent to that Mr. Coleman married, and rented a farm for five years, then he sold out and came west to Hauser. He rented a farm, bought some cows and went to shipping milk. He sold in the Coeur d'Alene mines. He was very successful in his labor, and soon he bought his present place, a nice large farm. It is all fenced and in 1900 he built a new comfortable dwelling, and he has all necessary outbuildings for the use of the farm. Mr. Coleman has thirty head of cattle and some horses. He is one of the most thorough farmers of the community and does a dairying business in addition to his general farming and raising stock.

In 1885 Mr. Coleman married Miss Carrie, daughter of J. H. and Jennie (Fleming) Freeborn, natives of Pennsylvania. They removed to San Diego, California, and live there now. To Mr. and Mrs. Coleman there have been born five children: Trell H., Jennie M., Harry E., Florence B. and Clifford. Mrs. Coleman is a member of the Methodist church.

WILLIAM C. T. PRICE. There is no doubt in one's mind when he notes the hardships and deprivations sustained by the subject of this article, with the arduous labors and the determined effort put forth to develop the country, that he is a pioneer in true sense of the word and deserves a prominent place in the list of real builders of Kootenai as well as other counties in the Inland Empire. William was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, on November 3, 1846, being the son of Reuben and Sarah (Ousley) Price, natives of England and Indiana, respectively. The father came to America in his childhood days, being eight years old. In Indiana he met his wife and married, remaining there until 1849. Then came a move to Des Moines, Iowa, where the family home was until 1853, when they took up the weary and dangerous pilgrimage across the plains to Linn county, Oregon. One year later they went to Douglas county, and eight years afterward were in Marion county, whence in the spring of 1872 they came to the Palouse country, then in Nez Perces county. The mother died at Farmington, Washington, in 1886, being buried there. The father still lives in Tacoma, aged ninety. Our subject received eighteen months of schooling in Des Moines and three months in Oregon. The rest of his life has been filled with hard labors. His parents were poor and he was a right hand help to his father. He made the various moves with the parents until he was twenty-two, and then he took a homestead. He improved, gained title, put out orchard and so forth, and sold it and went to California. He returned to Oregon in 1871 and there married and moved to the Palouse country. He had a very hard time there for a number of years, having such close contact with the wolf that at times the potatoes were eaten without salt. All provisions had to be gotten from Walla Walla, and the trip was hard and dangerous over the swollen rivers. He went once when he had no wood to make a camp fire, but brought an old box to start the green willows. They failed, and for thirty miles they were without fire and water. It took them with a crippled horse two days and one night to make the distance to get wood, water and food, and this was in the winter. After four or five years of this starving, he went back to Oregon for two years, and then went to Whitman county, Washington. For twelve years he wrought at the carpenter's bench, and then came to Kootenai county. He rents nine hundred and sixty acres of land, five hundred being under cultivation, and has about forty head of cattle. Recently he has taken a homestead six miles south from Seneaguoteen, where his home will be in the future. He will operate the large farm for one year more, and then devote his entire time to the raising of stock.

In 1871 Mr. Price married Miss Harriet J., daughter of Thomas and Harriet (Downing) King, natives of Ohio and Iowa, respectively. The mother died in 1859, and the father still lives in Wenatchee, Washington. To Mr. and Mrs. Price there have been born ten children: Ethel M., wife of George Peach, in Island City, Oregon; Edith W., wife of Thomas Torpey, in this county; Elva L., deceased, September 30, 1888; George N.; Loney W.; Lester W., died November 20, 1883; Herbert T.; Mettie M.; Clara T.; and Bennie E. Mr. Price and his family adhere to the Seventh Day Adventist faith.

JOHN F. SCHROEDER. As the members of his race generally, the subject of this sketch has gained distinction as a soldier. And although America is his foster land, he has shown his love of country by an exceptionally long service in the ranks of the boys in blue, wherein he has evinced qualities of great worth, and has made an indellible record of great credit to himself.

John F. was born in Bremen, Germany, on February 10, 1852, being the son of Dedrick and Adaline (Myers) Schroeder, natives of Germany, who came to America in the sixties and settled for a time in Kentucky, and then returned to the "fatherland." John F. was educated in the common schools what time he was not hard at work for his father. At the age of sixteen he came to America and settled with an uncle in Louisville, Kentucky. In 1875 he enlisted in the regular army, and served sixteen years and three months, or until 1893. During his long period of service he was in many hard places and always showed himself made of the true stuff that wins in the soldier. He fought the Indians on the north fork of the Powder river, and continued to have skirmishes for several years. In 1878 he was in a battle with the Cheyennes in Kansas, being under General MacKenzie, Colonel Louis, and General Crooks. The Colonel was killed. Thence they went to Texas, his company having what is called a roving commission. They had several encounters with outlaws and horse thieves, went to Oklahoma and kept the boomers out of the territory. He then took his discharge and entered business in Louisville, Kentucky, for eight months, and in 1881 enlisted in the Second Cavalry. He was ordered to Montana and thence to Washington, where he was chief packer until 1887. He was then sent to Arizona for two years, then honorably discharged and returned to Coeur d'Alene, where he served one year and four months in the Fourth Cavalry. Then he took his final discharge and settled on his present place, nine miles south from Seneaguoteen. He has a homestead of one hundred and forty acres, well improved and mostly under cultivation, and forty head of cattle, besides hogs, poultry and so forth. He also owns three lots on Sixth avenue in Spokane, Washington, and some timber land near Newport, Washington.

In 1898 Mr. Schroeder married Mary, widow of James Kingen. Mr. Kingen died in 1882 in Indiana. In political matters Mr. Schroeder is Republican and he has been road overseer for three years. He is a member of the German Lutheran church.

WALLACE P. GREEN. Eight miles north from Coeur d'Alene is the residence of Mr. Green, which is one of the neat and attractive places of the country, manifesting the skill, taste, and industry of the owner. Wallace P. Green was born in Dayton, Minnesota, on February 9, 1865, being the son of John and Josephine M. (Evans) Green, natives of Virginia and New York, respectively. The father came to Illinois and then to Minnesota, where he met Miss Evans and married her. They lived a few years in Dayton and then went to Anoka county, seven miles from Elk River, where they lived for fourteen years. Another move was made, this time to Wright county, and four years later they came to Washington, and now live in Seattle. To them were born the following children, besides the subject of this sketch: Florence, wife of H. B. Stevens, in Kellogg; Edith, wife of H. J. Borthwick, in Rathdrum; Myrtle E., Charles S., John E., Edgar L., all in Seattle.

Wallace P. was educated in the common schools in the various places where his parents lived, and came west in 1883. He worked for his father until twenty-one years of age and then worked out for wages for nine years. He then purchasd forty acres of land and went to making a home. He immediately erected a good house, barn and other improvements, fencing the land and in every way making it valuable. He has twenty-five acres under cultivation, three acres of orchard of all varieties, and he raises hay and vegetables and is one of the prosperous farmers of the region. Mr. Green is well contented with the country and is determined to make this his home. In political matters Mr. Green is an adherent of the Populist party and takes an active interest in the politics of the county and state. Mr. Green has a nice and comfortable home and is prosperous, but he has never as yet taken to himself a wife, preferring the quiet of the celibatarian's life of secure comfort.

WILLIAM E. LIBBY. The subject of this sketch is a practical exemplification of what energy, wise management and industry can do in Kootenai county, the place of great resources. He now owns a half section of land, one and one-fourth miles north of Hauser, which is the family home, has a large portion cultivated, has thirty head of cattle, does a general farming and dairying business, and is well to do. A short time since he came here without capital except his hands and a good stout heart of courage. He has made all since that time, which speaks well of his abilites.

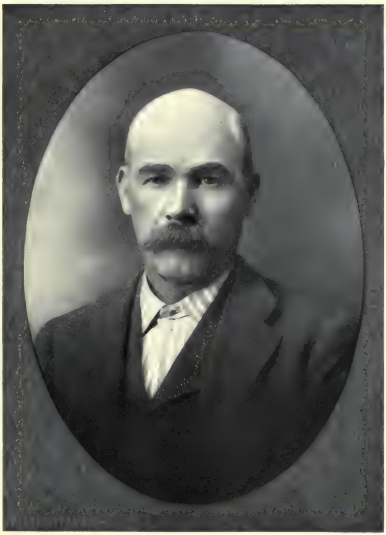
William E. was born in Evansville, Wisconsin, on August 30, 1866, being the son of William and Julia (Ricker) Libby, natives of Maine. They came to Evansville, Wisconsin, in 1851, where the father followed contracting and building. William E. received his education in the common schools and then spent a year in the Methodist Seminary. He then went to work for his father in the building business until twenty-nine, when he took up the butcher business for two years. After this he came to Montana and thence went to Cranbrook, British Columbia. It was in 1898 that he came to Spokane, where one year was spent in carpenter work. Then he bought the half section where he now lives and spent his energies to make a home and a place of value. He has succeeded admirably. Mr. Libby now has thirty-five head of cattle, operates a good dairy and also pays attention to general farming. He has found the place which he believes will always be his home, and he is fitting it up in a becoming manner. Mr. Libby is a stanch Republican, and advocates the principles of his party with wisdom and energy. He is a school director and at present is chairman.

In 1887 Mr. Libby married Miss Minnie M., daughter of Louis G. and Sabria (McCoy) Foote, natives of Evansville, Wisconsin. The father died when Mrs. Libby was young but her mother lives in our subject's home now. To this worthy couple one child has been born, Ernest G., at home. Mr. Libby is a member of the M. W. A., Rathdrum Camp, No. 6843, while Mrs. Libby is a member of the R. N. A., Evergreen Camp, No. 2317. Mr. Libby has always been a man of energy and has displayed becoming sagacity and integrity in his endeavors.



JAMES M. BRADLEY is well known in northern Kootenai county, being one of the substantial business men of Sandpoint at the present time, where he conducts a hotel and retail liquor store.

He was born in county Donegal, Ireland, on April 15, 1855, being the son of Rodger and Mary (Daugherty) Bradley, natives of the same county, and there the father died in 1880, but the mother still lives. They were the parents of five sons: Dennis, deceased, who was the father of two children; Barney, deceased; Charles, in Portland, Oregon; Patrick, in the United States somewhere; James M., the subject of this sketch. James received a common schooling in his native place and when fifteen commenced the battle of life for himself. He went to Scotland and worked in the iron works for five years and in 1877 he came to the United States. His first location was at Seabeck, Washingon, and there he fired a sawmill engine for two years. Later he harvested in Walla Walla county and then went to railroading in 1879. In 1883 Mr. Bradley went into the woods, contracting timbers and in 1885 we find him in Sandpoint in the saloon business. In 1887 he removed to Rathdrum but returned to his first choice in 1893 and in addition to his saloon he now operates a good hotel in Sandpoint.

On December 3, 1898, Mr. Bradley married Miss Louise Zenter, daughter of Samuel and Dora Schackender, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1887, locating in North Dakota, where they now live. Mrs. Bradley came to Idaho in 1895. She has two children by her former marriage, William and Bertha Zenter. To Mr. and Mrs. Bradley two children have been born, James and Edward. Mr. Bradley was elected justice of the peace in 1886, serving four years. Again he was chosen for the same position in 1898. He is one of the councilmen of the town and was one of the first trustees of the village. Mr. Bradley is a member of the K. of P., Panhandle Lodge, No. 13, at Rathdrum; also of the F. of A., Pend Oreille Court No. 12, at Sandpoint. He and his wife are members of the Catholic church. Mr. Bradley is highly respected by all and is in good standing in the community where his worth is recognized.

ANNIE McGUIRE is the widow of the late Frank P. McGuire, a man of excellent capabilities, and who accomplished much in the industries which followed; and the estimable lady mentioned above comes no whit behind in the manipulation of the affairs of business that have fallen to her lot.

Mrs. McGuire was born in county Cavan, Ireland, on May 14, 1850, being the daughter of Thomas and Rose (Riley) Morris, natives of Ireland also. They came to Grant county, Wisconsin, in 1856, and three years later moved to Fayette county, Iowa, where they died, being buried in Ossian, Iowa. Mrs. McGuire was four years old when her eyes first saw America, and she was educated here in the various places where the parents lived. At the age of eighteen she quit school and remained with her parents until she met Mr. McGuire. Mr. McGuire is the son of Philip and Bridget (McGovern) McGuire, was born in Middleton, Connecticut, and came with his parents to Iowa when he was young. At the age of fourteen he went to McGregor with his parents, and there finished his education in the high school. At the age of twenty-six he met Miss Annie Morris, and they were marrried. He was a farmer and engineer and they removed to Allamakee county, Iowa, and there remained three years and then came west in 1878. Settlement was first made in Pataha valley, Columbia county, Washington. Three or four years were spent there and then they came to Colfax, where Mr. McGuire was very successful in the dairy business until 1890, at which time he sold out and came to Spokane. From that time until 1898, he operated a dairy adjacent to that city, and his usual thrift, sagacity and industry were rewarded with good success there also. In 1898 they removed to their present location, five miles east from Rathdrum. On November 30, 1898, the angel of death summoned Mr. McGuire from the walks of life and he was mourned, being a good man and a kind and loving father and husband. He was buried in the Trent cemetery. To Mr. and Mrs. McGuire were born seven children, as follows: John, deceased; Frank; Louis; Jenny, deceased; William A.; Thomas P.; and Mary. They are adherents of the Catholic church. Since her husband's death Mrs. McGuire has conducted the farm upon which they then lived, it being rented. In March, 1901, Mrs. McGuire bought three hundred and twenty acres of land. They have ninety acres of this under cultivation in addition to the quarter that they rent. Mrs. McGuire has displayed excellent ability and courage in handling the affairs since her husband's death, and she is esteemed and respected by all, which is justly merited.

JAMES M. BRADLEY.

JAMES J. FEELY. This enterprising and industrious young farmer is one of the substantial men of Kootenai county, and his labors and management show him to be possessed of good wisdom and executive force, while his standing is of the best, and he is known as a man of integrity and sound principles. He was born in Shelby county, Iowa, on September 9, 1876, being the son of Thomas N. and Alice M. (Kemp) Feely, natives of Illinois. They came to Iowa when young and married there. In 1881 thy came west and settled in Rockford, Washington, where they lived for eight years. Then they went to the Hoodoo valley, purchased the right of J. Anderson, to a piece of land and settled on that for five years. That being sold, they came to Rathdrum prairie and rented two hundred and sixty acres of land near where the family home is now. This was tilled with other land for two years and then they bought their present home place of one-quarter section, to which they have added forty acres recently.

Reverting more particularly to the immediate subject of this sketch, we note that he was educated in the public schools, his opportunities being very limited, and the entire amount of his education was received in fifteen months' training in the schools of Spokane county, Washington. The parents being poor he was obliged to work from the time that he was large enough. This rugged treatment, however, developed a solidity and practical wisdom that have more than repaid. At the age of twenty-one James started for himself, and, in connection with his brother Charles, he labored and soon they purchased a quarter section. This was in 1896, and the father held it for the boys until 1898 when it was turned over to them. In 1900 they purchased another quarter and then they divided, our subject taking the first quarter bought and the brother the last one. James lives about four miles southeast from Rathdrum. He has a good farm, well improved and all under cultivation. He has a good house, barn and out buildings and has done a commendable work in the art of improving and developing. He has a good orchard of eighteen different varieties, has ten cattle and seven horses. Mr. Feely is still a single man, one of his sisters keeping the house. He has six brothers and four sisters, named as follows: Charles W., Clarence H., Effie L., Irvan E., Grace G., Ada A., Corbin T. P., Austin L., Guy R., Irma G. It is of note that all of these are single and all live in this vicinity, their farms adjoining. Mr. Feely is a young man of great promise and he has labored faithfully in the substantial progress of the county and in building for himself a good home and he is esteemed a good citizen, public minded and substantial.

JOHN W. SETTLE is one of the leading business men of Kootenai county, being located in Postfalls, where he does a thriving business in real estate and insurance, besides general conveyancing and notary business. He is a man of good standing, has the confidence of the people and is an influential man in the community.

John W. was born in Canton, Missouri, on July 9, 1867, being the son of John M. and Emily D. (Downing) Settle, natives respectively of Kentucky and Missouri. The father came to Missouri with his parents when he was fourteen years of age, where he met his wife and married. He is at present living in Canton, Missouri, and is one of the old and highly respected citizens, being a leader in politics, in business and social circles. He is at present holding the position of justice of the peace, which, with police judge, he has held for sixteen years and more. He is a Democrat, and his business is real estate and insurance. John W. was educated in the common schools and at the age of fifteen learned the printer's trade. When he was nineteen he went into the real esate busines with C. W. Munix, in Labelle, Missouri. Two years later we find him in Bearing, Missouri, in the same busines and one year there worked on a newspaper. Returning to Labelle, he spent one year there in real estate and insurance business. Then he dissolved partnership and came west to Spokane, where he worked on the Spokesman Review and on the Chronicle. This he continued until 1892. Then a move was made to Spangle, where he operated the Spangle Record for one year. Next we see Mr. Settle in Hope, Idaho, where he worked on the newspaper until 1897, at which time he removed to Postfalls and opened a real estate and insurance office as mentioned above. Mr. Settle is an only child and has never embarked on the matrimonial sea. He is a Democrat in politics and takes a lively interest in this realm.

FRANK RUSSETT. The labors of Mr. Russett have been long and hard and he is deserving of much credit for the faithful manner in which he has continued in the pathway of life, ever taking hold of the development work to be done and performing a lion's share of it, while he has also displayed good principles and integrity. He was born in St. Jock, thirty-six miles north from Montreal, Canada, on February 2, 1820, being the son of Charles and Esther (Lapoint) Russett, natives also of Canada, where they remained until the time of their death. The paternal grandfather was a native of France, and came to Canada when young. Frank was never allowed the privilege of schooling, being educated to the hard labor of the frontier from early childhood. He continued with his father until he was twenty-one and then came to New York state and chopped wood for fourteen years, receiving three shillings per cord for this hard labor. At the time of the Civil war he tried twice to enlist but on account of one crippled foot he was refused both times. In 1865 he went to Kansas, and two years later to Iowa, where he lived fourteen years. In 1884 he went to Otter Tail county, Minnesota, and worked for two years in the saw mill industry. He then came to Coeur d'Alene, worked two years, and then took a homestead, where he now lives, five miles north and one west from Coeur d'Alene. He has good buildings, which he erected himself, and his hands have improved the farm in good shape. He has a quarter section and does a general farming business.

Mr. Russett married when he was twenty-one and he has the following named children: Louise, wife of Fred Lamb, in Iowa; Lerose, wife of Nick Scully, in Minneapolis, Minnesota; Jennie, wife of Charles Henry, in Iowa; John, married and in Iowa; George, married and living in Iowa; and five that are deceased. Mrs. Russett died, and by the second wife Mr. Russett has these children: Carrie, wife of Earnest White, in Spokane; Edward, in this county; Cora, single and living at Spokane Bridge; Emery, single, in this county.

In 1893 Mr. Russett married Mrs. Eliza Lefler, widow of Joseph Lefler. He is one of the substantial men of the community, has made a good record and is respected by all.

HERMAN KNUDSON. To the enterprising and industrious man there is success, and such has come to the subject of this article in generous measure, while he is rated as one of the substantial men of his section and surely is a man who has gained a good standing in addition to his temporal prosperity.

Mr. Knudson was born on October 14, 1857, in Numedal, Norway, being the son of Knudt Olson and Ellen Mortinson, natives also of Norway, where they are buried now in the Nore cemetery. They had three children, Sarah, Ole and Herman, the subject of this article, all living in America. Herman received his education in the religious schools of his native place and at the age of fifteen left his books for work on his father's farm. At eighteen he acted as a traveling salesman through the country, handling clothing and domestic articles. When he arrived at nineteen he embarked for the United States and the centennial year saw him in Clayton county, Iowa. He worked for wages for one year and then went to Trail county, North Dakota, and took a homestead, which he commuted in two years. He tilled that for six or seven years and then came to Spokane county, where he lived one year and then came to Kootenai county and married Julia O. Vekan. She had a quarter section to which Mr. Knudson added as much more by purchase, in 1895. He now owns and farms this half section, which lies five miles south from Rathdrum. He has a fine house which he built in 1900, has a good orchard of two hundred and fifty trees, comfortable barns and outbuildings and his place shows the marks of thrift and painstaking care and skill in husbandry. Mr. Knudson also owns a half section in North Dakota. He has cattle and horses sufficient to handle his place in good shape.

On October 3, 1900, Mrs. Knudson died and is buried in Evergreen cemetery, in Postfalls, and four children and her husband survive her. The children are: Carrie, Albert, Oscar and Emery. Mr. Knudson is a Republican and takes an active and intelligent part in politics. He is a member of the Stockmen's Association. In religious persuasion Mr. Knudson is a Presbyterian and is stanch in his faith.

THOMAS E. HOLM is a native of Norway and is endued with all the vigor, progressiveness, skill and sagacity that are characteristic of the people that discovered this continent, and is one of the prosperous citizens of Kootenai county, and also has gained a prestige among his fellows that is enviable and worthy of his commendable efforts and upright life.

Mr. Holm was born on February 16, 1858, in Molde, Norway, being the son of Esek and Mary Johnson, also natives of Norway. The mother died there in 1902, being buried in the Molde cemetery, while the father still lives in the native place. Thomas received a common school education and at sixteen went to carrying mail, which occupied him for three years. Then he came to America, locating at Granite Falls, Minnesota. He teamed about the town for three years and in 1887 he had the distinction of receiving the appointment of deputy sheriff under Joe Fortier, which position he filled with credit to himself. Subsequent to this he came west and he was soon in the employ of F. Post where he continued for two years blasting rock and laying pipe. Then he bought a band of cows and operated a dairy for five years. It was in 1896, that he bought eighty acres of his present place, unimproved land, and at once erected good buildings; in 1898, he purchased one quarter more. He has one quarter under cultivation and in addition to the other improvements a fine orchard of three acres and all the varieties of fruit that are indigenous to this latitude are represented. He has seven horses and ten cows and is one of the thrifty farmers of his section. His estate is located about three miles northeast from Postfalls.

In 1885, Mr. Holm married Miss Caroline, daughter of Nels and Gurtie Johnson, natives of Norway. They came to United States in 1882 and located at Plymouth Rock, Iowa, where they are still living on a farm. To Mr. and Mrs. Holm six children have been born, named as follows, Edward N., Josephine, Mary, Martin, Fred, and Joseph, all at home. Mr. Holm was town marshal in Postfalls for three years. For three successive terms he was elected constable of his district and he has been a member of the school board for three years. In all this public service, Mr. Holm has shown marked faithfulness, and efficiency. He is a member of the A. H. T. A. In religious persuasion, Mr. Holm and his family are identified with the Norwegian Lutheran church.

CAPT. JAMES A. FISHER. A worthy veteran of the awful conflict of the Civil war, where he did a noble part for the flag of the free, serving throughout the entire struggle with a courage and display of ability and intrepidity that are characteristic of the man, a pioneer of this part of Kootenai county, and a man of good standing, it is fitting that Mr. Fisher be granted representation in the volume of his county's history.

James A. was born in Clinton county, Indiana, on April 4, 1837, being the son of John and Martha Fisher, natives of Ohio and Kentucky, respectively. The father and his father came to Cincinnati when it was but a fort. The father was a shoemaker and his people were farmers. The maternal grandfather of our subject was a millwright. James A. received his schooling in the log school house of his native place until he was twelve and then his mother died and the father removed back to Ohio, where James attended school and at the age of fifteen went to work for wages, getting twelve dollars on the farm and fifteen per month for clerking. He was on a produce boat that plied on the Mississippi and at the breaking out of the war they flew the one star flag to return to Cairo, Illinois. The call came for the seventy-five thousand troops and the places were filled before our subject's turn came and he answered to the name of one who was sick, and thus got to go. He was in Company i, Eleventh Ohio. He was reported hung in the south and when his time was out he came home and his people were frightened, supposing him a ghost. He had been on guard duty on the Baltimore & Ohio road most of this time. At the expiration of this time, he enlisted in Company G, for three years, under General Johnahan Craynor. In their first fight, at Middlecreek, Kentucky, they defeated the enemy and then were transferred by boats to Nashville, Tennessee. He participated in the last day's fight at Stone River, was at Chickamauga, there being promoted to second lieutenant. He fought at Chattanooga, at Lookout mountain and at Missionary Ridge. He also participated in the battle at Kenesaw mountain and fought the enemy over a breast work in the night. He fought at Atlanta and also at Jonesborough, where he was again reported killed. Then at Franklin and Nashville he fought and at Lynchburg he heard of Lincoln's death and Lee's surrender. Then he was ordered to New Orleans and thence to Texas, and there was mustered out with a record of which any one might be proud. He was courageous in battle, faithful in all his duties as soldier and displayed excellent metal throughout. He came to Iowa soon after the war, then to Nebraska, where he lived seven years, then in 1877 he came to Cowley Bridge. He took a homestead in this county and after proving up on it sold it and removed to Postfalls. He purchased a half block and erected a good residence and in 1901 he purchased two blocks adjoining. He has a fine orchard and a pleasant home.

In 1865 Mr. Fisher maried Miss Margaret Brown and four children have been born to them, William S., in Dickson county, Nebraska; Charles W., in Sioux City, Iowa; George, in Dickson county, Nebraska; Rosy, married and living in Dubuque, Iowa. Mr. Fisher is a prominent member of the G. A. R., while in politics he is Republican. For three years he has been chairman of the town board.

By way of reminiscence it is interesting that when he came to Portland they missed the boat which they should have taken and it had not gone one hundred yards from the mooring before it blew up, and for the third time Mr. Fisher was reported dead. He is still in good health and a respected and thrifty member of the community in Postfalls.

CHARLES S. GREEN. About four miles southeast from Rathdrum is the estate of this gentleman, and it bears the marks of thrift and industry, while personally he is a man above reproach, of excellent standing among his fellows and is one of the substantial men of the county, which he has helped on the road toward real prosperity and progress.

Charles S. Green was born in Dayton, Minnesota, on December 16, 1858, being the son of John and Josephine (Evans) Green, natives respectively of Vermont and Pennsylvania. On both sides his parents were descendants of the earliest settlers in America. The father came to the present site of Minneapolis in 1849 and located a homestead, which he lost on account of its then being a government reserve. He then farmed in Minnesota until 1883, when he came west, settling in Rathdrum until 1899, when he removed to Seattle, where they both now live. Charles S. received his education in the common schools of Dayton and in Anoka county, and at the age of seventeen quit study and gave himself to assist his father. Until twenty-four years of age he could be found faithfully laboring on the father's farm, and then he went to work for himself. He rented a farm and took contracts of getting out timbers in the winter. In 1884 he came west and engaged in lumbering in Kootenai county.

He also farmed and took a homestead, where he now lives. In 1886 he built the buildings and fenced the quarter. He lays eighty acres under tribute now to raise crops and has a fine orchard and his farm is one of the best in the vicinity. In political matters Mr. Green takes an active part and in religious persuasion he is an adherent of the Second Adventist church. Mr. Green has three brothers and three sisters, named as follows: Florence, widow of Clarence Stevens, living in Kellogg; Wallace P., in Kootenai county; Edith, wife of Harvey Borthwick, in Rathdrum; John E., in Seattle; Edgar L., also in Seattle, and Myrtle E., in the same city. Mr. Green has been blessed with generous prosperity on account of his wise management and industry and he is deserving of this enjoyment.

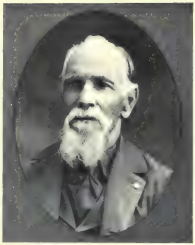
O. BOUTON MASTERSON. This young man is one of the well known business men of Postfalls and is at the present time operating a retail liquor store there, carrying a fine stock of goods. He was born in Sheridan, Oregon, on June 16, 1869, being the son of James H. and Margret J. (Copenbarger) Masterson, natives of Kentucky and Illinois respectively. The father was a practicing physician and continued at his profession until the time of his death in Rathdrum in 1894. The mother still lives in Seattle. Soon after the birth of our subject, the parents came to Spokane and there he received the beginning of his education. Later they went to Rathdrum where he completed his scholastic training. At the age of seventeen he started for himself and his first occupation was clerking in a hotel. In 1888 he started a restaurant in the Coeur d'Alene mining district and conducted it for four years. Then he returned to Rathdrum and clerked for two years, after which he went to Seattle and was manager of the Globe hotel for one year. Returning to Spokane he soon thereafter went to Medical lake and operated a cigar store for a time, then sold out and came to Postfalls and opened his present business, where he is doing well.

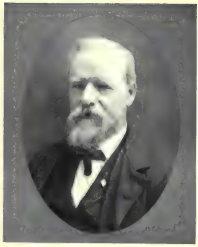
Mr. Masterson married Miss Clara A., daughter of W. A. and A. M. Hart, who live in Rathdrum, where Mr. Hart does a general banking and merchandising business, being one of the leading business men of the county. To Mr. and Mrs. Masterson one child has been born, Hawley B., going to school.

JOHN W. FREDERIC, one of the business men of Coeur d'Alene, has a record in the military service in the United States army which is seldom exceeded both for length of service as well as for faithfulness and courage in the discharge of his duties. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, on November 11, 1846, the son of Adam and Catherine (Humbach) Frederic, natives respectively of Germany and Pennsylvania, and now deceased. The father fought in the Mexican war and received a wound in the service. Our subject was educated in the schools of his native town and at the beginning of the Rebellion he laid aside the books and stepped from the school room into service for his country. He was in the Fifty-fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, of the Twentieth Corps and First Division. He fought in the battle of Shiloh and at the battle of Yazoo Pass. He was in the siege of Vicksburg where he was wounded on May 23, 1863, by a spent ball, then he was transferred to the gunboat Louisville, and was with Banks in the Red river expedition. On April 12, 1865, he was discharged at Cairo, Illinois, and arrived home on the night of Lincoln's assassination. Mr. Frederic re-entered the service on June 6, 1866, joining the Seventeenth United States Infantry. He was on the frontier of Texas and New Mexico fighting the Indians and June 6, 1869, re-enlisted until March, 1870. He was transferred to Dakota where he was discharged on April 14, 1871. He re-enlisted on August 18, 1871, in Company G, Seventh Infantry, and served ten years. He was in Montana against the Sioux Indians, fought the Blackfeet and also the Nez Perces. At Big Hole, Montana, he was shot through the shoulder. On August 18, 1881, he was discharged as sergeant of Company C. During the Spanish war, Mr. Frederic re-entered the service and went to Manila in Company B, First Idaho Volunteers. He was discharged at Manila on account of disability on February 11, 1899, and returned home.



While in Montana, in 1877, Mr. Frederic married Miss Annie Hahn, a native of Pennsylvania, and daughter of Joseph and Caroline Hahn, natives of Germany. To this marriage two sons have been born, John B. and William H., the latter having been with his father in Manila. Both are located in Coeur d'Alene now. Mr. Frederic is a member of the G. A. R., A. T. McReynolds Post, No. 19, and also of the Redmen.

JOHN HAGER. It is certainly very gratifying to have the pleasure to chronicle the events in the life of this worthy veteran and esteemed pioneer and resident of Coeur d'Alene where he has demonstrated as he did in many ways and times in the past his faithfulness, his ability, his courage and real worth.



John Hager was born in Baden, Germany, on April 11, 1830, receiving a good common schooling and in 1848 enlised in the volunteer force that resisted the German government. He was on the defeated side and to avoid the vigilance of the government he went to Switzerland for some months and then returned home and in 1850 came to America. He located in New York, later in Philadelphia and in 1853 he enlisted in the regular army, being in the First Dragoons. He was in Minnesota and went thence to New Mexico and was garrisoned on the Rio Grande, then went to Arizona in 1856, from that place to California and thence to Walla Walla, where he did service and in the surrounding country until the time of his discharge in 1858. He was with Colonel Steptoe in the memorable defeat of that officer and also fought under Wright in various places. In 1860 the military spirit of our subject would again lead him to

JOHN W. FREDERIC.

JOHN HAGER.

JAMES E. RUSSELL.

JAMES H. KENEDY.

MRS. JAMES H. KENEDY.

LEVI ESCH.

LEVI YOTHERS.

THOMAS BROPHY.

enlist and so he was enrolled with Company C, First Dragoons. He was stationed at Lapwai to watch the Indians. Sibley Johnson, a rebel at heart, was in command of the department of the west and ordered them all to Texas, but he being relieved about that time the order was countermanded and the Dragoons were ordered to Washington, D. C. Going on horseback to Vancouver, they took a steamer to Washington and soon were in the heart of the fight in the east. Words are futile to express the excellency of the career of this gentleman and the ardor, the valor and the courage displayed and we append the most eloquent tribute we know, which is a list of a portion of the battles where he fought with spirit. Many others were in the list but they are too numerous to mention. Skirmishes were continually going on and we could fill a volume were we to recount all the incidents that befell this veteran in his career. On May 4, 1862, he was in the battle of Williamsburg; on June 27, he fought in that sanguinary struggle known as Gaines' Mill; on June 30, 1862, he participated in the battle of White Oak Swamp; on July 1, at Malvern Hill, and on March 17, 1863, he fought at Kelly's Ford; on April 20, 1862, he was in Stoneman's Raid; on June 21, 1863, at Upperville, he did valiant service; on September 14, 1863, he fought at Antietam; and on May 9, 1864, he participated in Sheridan's raid. At Cold Harbor he was in the awful fight on May 20, 1864, and there lost his hearing; he participated in the battle of the Wilderness on May 7, 1864; fought at the battle of Winchester, also at Fisher's Gap and Cedar Creek, and many others. Where will we find a military record like this? Really, it seems the most brilliant and worthy of any that it has been our privilege to observe. As soon as the war was over, he enlisted again and was stationed at Atlanta, Georgia. At the expiration of his time, in 1870, he bought a farm and tilled it for a while and sold then and went into the drug business, then he worked for the street car company for three years and in 1877 came to Fort Custer, and in 1878 we find him in Couer d'Alene. He worked for the government six months and then took a squatter's right on land near Hayden lake, which was his home for twelve years, then he sold and came to Coeur d'Alene. He has a good farm which he rents, has a good residence in the town and also two other dwellings which he rents. He also has other property.

In 1863 Mr. Hager married Mrs. Christine Clark, of Washington, D. C., where the nuptials occurred. Mrs. Hager's former husband was killed at Brandy station, being a comrade of Mr. Hager at that time. To Mr. and Mrs. Hager there have been born five children: Frederica, wife of William Kipp, in Coeur d'Alene; William, in the employ of the government at Fort Wright, Washington, having been thus engaged for twenty years; Mary, wife of Isaac Busby, in Wardner, Idaho; Charles, married and living at Fort Wright, where he is employed by the government; Maggie, wife of George Joyce, in Belgrade, Montana. Mr. Hager is a member of the G. A. R., and he and his wife are members of the Episcopalian church. It is very pleasant to contemplate the worthy veteran residing quietly in the land he fought to defend and enjoying the fruits of his faithful labor, while all admire and esteem him.

JAMES E. RUSSELL. Henry Russell was born in New York and in Syracuse of that state, he met and married Miss Mariah Mann, a native of Pennsylvania, who died in 1844. In 1846 he married a second time and remained in New York city, whither he had removed from Rochester and whence he went in 1855 to Chicago. Three years later he removed to St. Louis, where he remained until his death, aged ninety-five years. During the Civil war Mr. Russell worked for contractor Eads, building gunboats for the government, and he made the remarkable record of working seven days in each week, Sunday counting one and one-half days, for every week in five years and in all this time he never lost one day, a most remarkable record.

Returning more particularly to the immediate subject of this sketch we note his birth occurred on January 16, 1839, in Rochester, New York. He went with his father to the various places where that gentleman lived and gained a good education from the various public schools. At Chicago he started for himself. He went to Waterford, Minnesota, and worked for wages and also attended school some, continuing the same until 1861. Then he enlisted in Company G, First Minnesota, under Colonel Gorman. His regiment was soon sent to Virginia, the only Minnesota troops sent east. His first engagement was the battle of Bull Run and there he was shot through the shoulder. He was taken to Libby and later to Tuscaloosa, Alabama, and eleven months was the time he languished in a horrible southern prison pen. He was later exchanged and reported to his regiment for duty at Falmouth, Virginia. He was in time to go in the battle of Fredericksburg. He was then discharged and went to Troy, Pennsylvania, and soon he re-enlisted in the First New York Veteran Cavalry, Company L. He served in this capacity until the close of the war, participating in numerous skirmishes and some engagements, being once shot from his horse. He was mustered out in West Virginia, in July, 1865, and went thence to Rochester, New York, where he was paid off. Next we see Mr. Russell, having completed a remarkable and brilliant military career, in Kansas on the plains. In 1869 he went as cow boy to South Dakota and later took a pre-emption and got married and settled down. In 1883 he sold his property and came to Kootenai county, Idaho. He operated as building contractor until 1890 when his ability was rewarded by being appointed register of the United States Land Office at Coeur d'Alene. Four years and three months of efficient and faithful service was rendered there. In 1897 Mr. Russell bought twenty acres adjoining the town and he has made it a beautiful residence place, well improved. In 1900 he took a timber claim, which he still owns, it being a valuable place. Mr. Russell states that in 1860 he voted for Abraham Lincoln and he has never had occasion to change his politics. He was elected justice of the peace in 1886 but resigned it in 1890 to accept the position in the land office. He was deputy sheriff under William Ryan and during the silver craze in politics he was nominated by his party for treasurer of the county but was defeated on account of that issue. Later he was placed in nomination for assessor but the same cause defeated the entire ticket.

In 1875 Mr. Russell married Miss Mary J., daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Pine) Henderson, natives of Wisconsin. Death took this lady in 1880. In 1882 Mr. Russell married Miss Margery M., daughter of James and Jane Pine, natives of Prince Edward island. To Mr. and Mrs. Russell and his estimable wife six children have been born: Minnie, M., wife of George H. Ritchey, in Coeur d'Alene; George; Ida M., who died February 6, 1898, aged eighteen years, eleven months and twenty-four days; William J., Henry P. and Cora J. Mr. Russell is a member of the A. F. & A. M. Kootenai Lodge, No. 24; also of the G. A. R., McReynolds Post No. 19. He is past master of the lodge and was the first commander of the post. He is also sachem of the I. O. R. M. Mr. Russell is a prominent and capable man as is evidenced by his military career and his excellent public service in positions of responsibility, while as a citizen he is influential, public spirited and stands with enviable prestige.

JAMES H. KENEDY. Among the early pioneers of Kootenai county is to be mentioned the gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph, who is one of the substantial men of Postfalls, being a blacksmith and doing a good business, while also he has considerable property and is an influential citizen, a good man and highly esteemed by all.

James H. was born in Adams county, Illinois, on September 7, 1846, being the son of William and Sarah (Richardson) Kenedy, natives respectively of North Carolina and Kentucky. They were married in Illinois and the father was a blacksmith, doing business for ten years in Liberty, of that state. Our subject's paternal grandfather was a shoemaker and that venerable gentleman's father was a soldier in the Revolution. Mr. Richardson moved to Illinois when our subject's mother was fourteen years old and her brother William was a captain in the Black Hawk war and also captain of the train when they crossed the plains. In 1852 Mr. Kenedy, the father of James, crossed the plains with ox teams and located one section of donation land in Polk county, Oregon. Later he removed to Palouse, Washington, where he died on April 20, 1900, but the mother still lives there, aged eighty-three. Our subject was with his parents in coming across the plains and in Polk county he gained a good education and at the age of twenty quit school and went to work for his father in the blacksmith shop. When twenty-four he went to Colfax, Washington, and operated a shop and thence went to Spokane county and farmed and did blacksmithing for a time and then sold out and came to Kootenai county in 1884. He took a soldier's right on a homestead on land now in the city limits of Postfalls and there he erected a blacksmith shop and did business continually until the present time. On November 16, 1864, Mr. Kenedy enlisted in the First Oregon Infantry, Company A, under Captain C. Layfollette and he served for one year, seven months and fourteen days, doing garrison duty most of the time. He was discharged on July 1, 1866. On January 7, 1876, Mr. Kenedy married Mrs. Eliza J., widow of Joseph Abernathy, and daughter of Rev. James I. and Elizabeth (Thompson) Cash, the mother being a daughter of Dr. Jesse Thompson. Mr. Cash was a noted business man and powerful preacher. To Mr. and Mrs. Kenedy there have been born eight children: Lorettie M., deceased; Ruth A., wife of T. P. Yager, in Walla Walla county, Washington; Alma A., wife of M. E. Swick, in Hoquiam, Washington; William R. C., in Seattle; Cora A., with parents; Henry B., at home; Evangeline, wife of C. F. Manning, in Postfalls; James C., in Wadsworth, Nevada. In political matters, Mr. Kenedy is a strong Republican and does good work in this line. He has been justice of the peace for four years and school director for a long time and road supervisor for two years. Mr. Kenedy is a member of the A. F. & A. M., Hiram Lodge No. 21, in Colfax, Washington. He is a charter member of the Post falls lodge of the K. of P.; is a charter member of the Good Templars, being especially active in prohibition movements. He is also a charter member of the K. O. T. M.

Mr. Kenedy is re-elected justice of the peace. He was a member of the George Wright Post of the G. A. R. until it disbanded and is now a member of the Lawton Post, No. 24, at Rathdrum.

LEVI ESCH. This well known business man is one of the prominent citizens of Rathdrum, where he has conducted a fine livery business for eighteen years, being also a buyer and seller of horses. At present he has a barn filled with fine driving and saddle horses, plenty of first-class vehicles, and he exercises an untiring care and vigilance to make everything comfortable and safe for his patrons, which has given him a first-class trade. In addition to this, Mr. Esch has some mining claims north from Rathdrum and also a timber claim one mile north from town.

Reverting to the early history of our subject, we note that he was born in Elkhart, Indiana, on April 4, 1859, being the son of Jacob and Katherine (Miller) Esch, natives respectively of Ohio and Indiana. The mother died when Levi was seven years of age but the father is still living in Otis, Washington. The parents came to Davis county, Iowa, when this son was six years of age, and he received a good schooling, attending in winter and working on the farm in summer. At seventeen he gave all of his time to assisting his father. They removed to Missouri at that time and our subject remained with his father until twenty-one and then on account of the ague of that country came west for his health. He travelled for two years and in 1882 came to Rathdrum and took a homestead and timber culture. He proved up on these in due time and improved them in good shape with buildings and fences, and so forth. In 1884 he built the livery barn in Rathdrum and started in business. From the first it was evident that Mr. Esch knew a horse and he bought and sold continually with his livery business and he has done well. During the year of 1893 he sold his real estate and put his whole attention to the business and this has enabled him to broaden and extend his trade.

Mr. Esch has a brother in Cape Nome who has mining properties of great value. His name is Peter Esch. Samuel Esch, another brother, lives in Otis with the father. Our subject has three sisters: Polina, wife of George Hostetter, in Cass county, Missouri; Lizzie Esch, living in Kootenai county and owning two hundred and forty acres of well improved land two and one-half miles from Rathdrum; Ella, wife of George Stout, living at Newman Lake, Washington. Mr. Esch is a devout member of the Presbyterian church and greatly interested in its welfare. He is esteemed by all. In politics Mr. Esch is a stanch Republican, but has never sought preferment at the hands of his party.

LEVI YOTHERS. This wide-awake, industrious and substantial citizen is one of the heavy property owners of our county and dwells on his estate of four hundred and forty acres of fine land six miles east from Rathdrum, where he does a general farming business, has a good band of stock and handles considerable fruit, having an orchard of seventeen varieties, while everything represents his thrift, sagacity and industry. Mr. Yothers is also a man of good principles and does much for the cause of education, as well as for the general progress.

Levi Yothers was born in Center county, Pennsylvania, on August 3, 1847, being the son of Benjamin and Katherine (Wells) Yothers, natives of Pennsylvania. They removed to Illinois, where the father died in 1882 and the mother came to Kootenai county where she passed to the world beyond in 1897. Levi had but little opportunity to attend school, being favored only with a few months in his thirteenth and fourteenth years. This was on account of his father being absent fighting the battles of the nation in the Civil war, and this son was obliged to support the family. When the father came home he was wounded and could not work for some time, so the burden remained on these young shoulders. Mr. Yothers has manifested considerable zeal, for in 1900 he went to the Moscow University, taking the shorter course which the state had wisely provided for just such cases. He came with his parents to Illinois at the age of eleven and before he was twenty he was doing for himself. He studied for the ministry under Elder Terrill for two years, but being without means to complete this he was obliged to abandon it. Then he married and came to Iowa, working in an elevator there for three years. Then he came to Custer county, Montana, and raised stock for sixteen years. His wife was taken sick and he went to Ellensburg, Washington, where she died on April 6, 1889. Then Mr. Yothers came to his present location, taking first a homestead, to which he has added by purchase until he has a fine estate. He has much timber to sell, and intends soon to erect a new house.

By his first wife Mr. Yothers has six children: Alfred, a capable young man, living in Oregon; William W., who has attended the State University for five years, with excellent results, and will graduate in 1903, and is now fruit inspector of Kootenai and Shoshone counties; May, living in Spokane; Merill, who has taken a four-years' course in the university, and will doubtless pursue his studies further; Maud, now attending the university and has been for three years; Oakland, deceased.

On June 27, 1890, Mr. Yothers married Mary L., daughter of Luther and Mary (Smith) Wood, natives of Vermont. To this union there have been born seven children mentioned as follows: Samantha, Mable, Lucy, Edna, Ruth, Florence and Emma. Mr. Yothers is allied with the Peoples party and is active, having attended three county conventions in succession. He was also active in this realm in Montana. He has given of his time and wisdom on the school board for nine years, ever laboring for good educational facilities. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Oakland Lodge, No. 242, in Iowa; also he belongs to the M. W. A., of Rathdrum. He and his wife are members of the Dunkard church and are devout in the support of their faith.

THOMAS BROPHY. Deservedly numbered among the worthy pioneers of this section and the builders of Kootenai county, it is fitting that the subject of this article should be granted space in the history of the county, being a man of energy, industry and intelligence. Thomas Brophy was born in Queens county, Ireland, on September 1, 1845, being the son of John and Elizabeth (Pursell) Brophy, natives also of the same county, but immigrants to America in 1847. They located in Kentucky, where our subject received his first education, then the family came to Iowa, the year being 1857, and there the father died in 1869 and the mother in 1889, being buried in the cemetery at Lansing, Iowa. At the age of eighteen young Brophy enlisted in the Union army, in Company B, Ninth Iowa Cavalry, under John Flick. He served two years and five months, being discharged at Little Rock, Arkansas, March 23, 1866. He was wounded in the right arm and right side. During all these months he was almost constantly on scout duty, being opposed to the army of Price. After a worthy military record he went home and worked on his father's farm until 1869 then went to Louisiana and wrought in the timber business. Two years there and then we find him in the same business in Texas. There he continued until 1878, when he took teams and came overland to Rathdrum, or where the town now stands. W. J. McClure was his traveling companion from Texas. Mr. Brophy took a homestead where he now resides, about two miles north from Rathdrum, and he engaged in its improvement and also in handling timber. He has been numbered with the agriculturists of the county since that time and has now a fine house, barn and other outbuildings, with good orchard and all improvements that make his place valuable and comfortable. He also handles many head of stock.

In 1882 Mr. Brophy married Miss Fanny, daughter of John and Malinda Gill, natives of Tennessee, who came west and located in 1884. The father died in 1897, and is buried in the Rathdrum cemetery, but the mother still lives in Rathdrum. To Mr. and Mrs. Brophy there have been born five children: Mary, Jesse, Elizabeth, William, Jr., and Joseph. Mr. Brophy has always demonstrated his interest in the affairs of government by taking an active part in the politics of the day, being allied with the Democrats. He is a member of the Roman Catholic church, and a citizen well respected and of excellent standing in the community.

WILLIAM H. CABLE. John W. Cable was born in the District of Columbia in 1819 and was a prominent and enterprising man all his days and did excellent service for his government in various capacities. At the age of twenty-two he went to Allegheny, Pennsylvania, and worked in the arsenal, then moved to Louisville, Kentucky, and he was a warm personal friend of Henry Clay. In 1845 he enlisted in the Mexican war and was assigned to General Taylor's army in the ordnance. He was all through the war and participated in the battle of Monterey, where the people were driven to the cathedral. General Taylor had tried two days to dislodge them and then ordered Cable to do so. He trained a gun on the spot and exploded his first shell in the building and it caused the immediate surrender of the hold. Subsequent to the war he returned to the arsenal in Allegheny and in 1856 removed his family to Kansas. At the breaking out of the Civil war he returned to Pennsylvania and was appointed by Governor Curtin as inspector general of Pennsylvania and in 1862 was transferred to the western department and had charge of the ordnance. At the close of the war he returned to Kansas and in 1870 the mother died and in 1876 he went to the Black Hills, in South Dakota, and in 1890 he came to Idaho where the subject of this sketch had preceded him. On June 7, 1902, this good man was called to his final rest, being at that time on a visit to his youngest son, N. Cable, in California.

Reverting more particularly to the immediate subject of this article we note that he was born on July 13, 1844, in Louisville, Kentucky, being the son of John W. and Mary (McConnell) Cable. The mother was a native of Pennsylvania. At the age of eighteen William had finished his schooling and he promptly enlisted in Company E, Twelfth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, under Captain Steele and Colonel Adams. He was most of the time guarding the border of Missouri. He did excellent service in that deadliest of all fighting in the Civil war, the putting down of the guerrillas. He fought against Quantrell and Bill Anderson, the latter being killed at Sedalia, Missouri. In 1863 he went south under General Blunt. The following year he was ordered to make a junction with Banks under Steele. They fought the doughty Price and did exceedingly hard work. For nine days they covered Banks retreat and at Jenkins Ferry they had the fiercest struggle in the entire war. For nine days they were without rations, except four hardtack. Three years and six months were consumed in the service, wherein a most commendable record was made, and then Mr. Cable was honorably discharged at Little Rock, Arkansas, and returned to Kansas. June 27, 1865, was the day of his discharge.

In 1876 Mr. Cable was one of those who pressed into the Black Hills and for twelve years he was mining there. In 1888 he came to Spokane Bridge and for a period of about two years he was on the old Liberty place at the lake of that name. He made the first location on the Couer d'Alene Indian reservation where he now lives, three miles south and one-fourth of a mile east from Spokane Bridge. He has a good home place, comfortable buildings and other improvements.

On August 12, 1875, Mr. Cable married Miss Martha Sharp, whose parents were natives of Tennessee and came to Kansas in 1860 where they died. To this happy union there have been born four children: Herbert A., in Colorado; William A., at home; Harry I., at home; Thomas M., attending college in Spokane. In political matters Mr. Cable is always active and is a member of the Republican party. In 1896 he was elected county commissioner for two years and did good service. Mr. Cable is a member of the G. A. R., Lawton Post, No. 29, and is past commander. He is also affiliated with the I. O. O. F., and is popular in all these relations.

Mrs. Cable's father, Mr. Sharp, was born on May 30, 1809, and his wife was five years younger. Mr. Cable's father, John Cable, received a medal for bravery in the Mexican war. This is now in the possession of our subject and is justly prized very highly by him.

JAMES TYSON. The town of Tyson is located on the land formerly owned by the subject of this article and it is he who, with his brother, discovered the famous diggings that brought the influx of gold seekers to the camp in 1900 and in 1901.

James Tyson was born in Lane county, Oregon, on November 12, 1867, being the son of James B. and Mary (Price) Tyson, natives respectively of Indiana and Iowa. They were married in Iowa and in 1855 came across the plains with ox teams, having a great deal of trouble with the Indians. They located at Council Bluffs, California, and several years later went to Lane county. In 1877 they came thence to Farmington, Washington, which was then only a hamlet of a couple of houses or so. The father participated in the Indian wars of 1878 and was a real pioneer of the country. Our subject grew up on a ranch and when he began to inaugurate independent action he came from Whitman county to his present home in 1895. His brother, John Tyson, was the only settler in the vicinity and they labored on as ranchers and did good work in improving their places. In 1897 our subject came to the conclusion that there was gold here and, in company with his brother and J. B. Renfro, he went to digging and soon they discovered the dust. In December, 1900, it got out that great discoveries of gold has been made and so the excitement commenced. In the spring of 1901 the town was platted and a store, postoffice and other business started. November, 1901, was the date of establishing the postoffice. Mr. Tyson is vice president of the Richmond Gold Mining & Milling Company, Limited, and one of the heavy stockholders. He and Henry C. Tyson and J. B. Renfro are owners of Gold Nugget, the Sixteen to One and other claims that made the country famous. Mr. Tyson is also interested in the War Eagle, Green Mountain and Bluebird quartz claims, which are valuable prospects. Mr. Tyson has the office of justice of the peace of his precinct and also holds the mail contract between Tyson and Santa. He has been for the last few years, a great prospector in various places on the Clearwater and also in the British Columbia country and is well known in these places. Mr. Tyson is married and has one child.

JAMES TYSON.

JASPER COOPER. This well known and representative business man of Couer d'Alene is operating a first class livery, feed and sale stable where he does a thriving business, having a dozen or more first-class rigs, with plenty of fine stock in adition to about fifty head on the range. Mr. Cooper was born in Marion county, Oregon, on June 4, 1859, being the son of James and Catherine (Moorley) Cooper, natives of Iowa and Illinois, respectively. They crossed the plains in 1852 and located in Marion county, where they operated a hotel and flour mill until 1871, when they came to Walla Walla. Soon after the came to Whitman county and located a pre-emption where Colfax now stands. This was sold in due time and they went thirty miles west and started in the stock business. This was a prosperous venture and continued to be the occupation of all until 1888, when Mr. Cooper came to Couer d'Alene and opened a livery stable. This was conducted in such a manner that he won good patronage and he continued the proprietor until 1899, when he sold to his son, the subject of this sketch, who has handled the business in a creditable manner since that time. Jasper was educated in the public schools in the various places where the family lived until seventeen, when he bought a team and started the battle of life for himself. He earned good wages and also worked for his father some and then in 1885 he took a pre-emption claim in the Palouse country, which later he sold and bought cattle and entered into stock raising with his brother, George. This continued until 1892, when he was engaged variously until 1898, when he made the purchase of the livery mentioned above.

On December 10, 1901, Mr. Cooper married Miss Maud, daughter of Edward and Mary Empy, natives of Canada, but immigrants to this country and they now live in North Dakota. Mr. Cooper is a member of the M. W. A., Couer d'Alene Camp, No. 8227. He is one of the enterprising, public minded men of the county and is ever allied on the side of progress and advancement.

V. W. SANDER. No man is better known in Coeur d'Alene than the subject of this sketch. He is an influential man, possessed of manifest business ability, a good citizen and is esteemed by all. He is at the head of the largest general merchandise establishment in the town, and as laconically expressed by him, they sell everything from a paper of pins to a threshing machine. His uniform treatment of customers, always being deferential, accommodating and reliable, has won for him a large trade and the confidence of the people in generous measure, which he justly deserves.

It will be interesting to note the details somewhat of this successful life and accordingly we append the following. V. W. Sander was born in Hanover, Germany, on February 4, 1857, being the son of Henry and Henrietta (Othmar) Sander, also natives of Germany. In 1860, they came to America and settled in Muscatine, Iowa, where his parents remained until the time of their death. Our subject was favored with a partial high school education and at the age of fourteen was employed by the large mercantile house of General Gordon, continuing there six years. At the age of twenty came west to California, where he lived for two years and then came to Whitman county, Washington, where he took a government claim and proved upon it, holding the same until this day, which is an index of the character that has gained such signal success amongst us. It was soon thereafter that we find him in Kootenai county and his sagacity soon observed an opportunity to make a good start. He was offered the major part of what is now the town site of Rathdrum for two thousand dollars. Not having the money he associated with himself a man of some means who furnished the required capital. Within two months they cleared about four thousand six hundred dollars. Mr. Sander came to Coeur d'Alene a little later and started a small store with G. B. Wonnacott, who died in 1896. They did a good business from the beginning and when the partner died, Mr. Sander organized the Idaho Mercantile Company, of which institution he is the president and manager. This, as said before, is the largest mercantile establishment of the kind in this portion of the county.

On May 18, 1886, Mr. Sander married Miss Lulu F., daughter of Carl and Dorothy Lohmann, natives of Germany. They came to America and located in Burlington, Iowa, where they still live. Mr. Lohman is editor and proprietor of the Volks Freund Tribune, a German paper of merit.

Mr. Sander built a commodious residence of twelve rooms, with all the modern conveniences, which is the family home, where his estimable wife presides with gracious dignity. To Mr. and Mrs. Sander there have been born five children, William E., Henrietta C., Dorothy L., Carlton A. and Gerald B. Mr. Sander is a member of the K. of P., Kootenai Lodge, No. 7. He and his worthy wife are also members of the Presbyterian church, being liberal supporters of their faith.

GEORGE COOPER. Notwithstanding the fact that the subject of this article lost a fortune in one blizzard in Washington, he has since that time manifested real grit and determination which have given him the reward that belongs to the industrious, and he is at the present time one of the prosperous business men of Couer d'Alene, owning a good livery, feed and sale stable in that city.

George Cooper was born on the Green river, while his parents James and Kate (Moorley) Cooper, were crossing the plains. The date of this birth was June 22, 1852. The parents were natives of Iowa, came to Silverton, Oregon, in 1852, with ox teams and took a section of donation land. In 1871 they came to Walla Walla and soon thereafter to Colfax, where they lived until 1897. Then they sold out and came to Couer d'Alene. The mother died February, 1900, having been married fifty years to a day. Our subject was educated in the public schools in Oregon and then spent two years in Sublimity Seminary. At the age of nineteen he started for himself, taking a squatter's right to land which he homesteaded later. In 1883 he rented it and moved to Colfax, Washington, taking up the livery business. He sold that and his homestead in 1887 and bought cattle. He had fine success until one blizzard killed four hundred head. Then he turned his attention to farming, after which he bought the livery business in Couer d'Alene, where he is doing a good business at the present time, having been prospered here.

In 1876 Mr. Cooper maried Miss Mary A., daughter of Nelson and Elizabeth (Bond) Davis, natives of Tennessee, who crossed the plains in 1853, locating in Linn county, Oregon. The mother died there in 1870, but the father lives in Colfax, aged seventy-six.

Mr. Cooper has the following brothers and sisters: Mary, William, Isaac, Walter, Jasper, James and Frank. He is a member of the K. P. and he and his wife affiliate with the Order of Washington. His wife is also a member of the Baptist church.

It is of note that when our subject's parents were crossing the plains, they were frequently attacked by the Indians, and many times the savages would shoot their wagon covers full of arrows. On one occasion a man was riding a pony a little in the rear and some Indians sprang out and lassooed the animal. The man succeeded in escaping, but the pony was never recovered.

HON. JAY RAND SANBURN. The life of this well known business man has been full of varied experiences and activities on the frontier, and in it all he has shown forth the real pioneer spirit, ever manifesting therewith integrity, capability, and faithfulness. Jay R. was born in Illinois, on May 12, 1833, being the son of early pioneers of that state, and at Knoxville he was educated. At the age of twelve he started in life for himself, and the first venture was to learn the harness maker's trade and saddlery. He followed this for five years and then took up the printing business in which he also became proficient. Four years after that, he came across the plains, driving five yoke of oxen all the way. He landed in Trinity county, California, and the same winter went into the butcher business. He mined and sold goods until 1858, then went to Frazer river in British Columbia, where he visited the Cariboo mines. In 1860, he went to Orofino, the next year to Florence and in 1862, he was in Boise basin. California was the destination again in 1864, and in 1870 we find him engaged on the locks at Oregon City. Returning again to California, he worked for six years in the Turkish baths there. Then he came to Shoshone county, and in 1890, he traveled to Coeur d'Alene. In 1890, he was appointed receiver to the United States land office in that city and for four years we find him in faithful discharge of the duties of that incumbency. Since that time until 1899, Mr. Sanburn has been engaged in various lines of business and in the year last mentioned he retired from the more active walks of life to enjoy the competence which his skill and labor have accumulated for him. However, he is still interested in mining and has some good properties.

Politically, Mr. Sanburn had always been an ardent Republican until 1896, when he voted for Bryan and since has been a Socialist. He voted for A. Lincoln and every Republican candidate until the one mentioned. In 1888, Mr. Sanburn was elected as representative to the state legislature from Kootenai and Shoshone counties. It has always been the lot of the subject of this sketch to sail his bark on the more placid waters of celibacy and he is now enjoying the golden years of his life in this line and is highly esteemed by all being one of the influential and substantial men of our county.

JOHN H. DUNCAN. This well known business man of Coeur d'Alene, where he operates a dray and express line, doing a good business, is one of the substantial residents of the city and is a man of the real bone and sinew of the community, never accepting public preferment, although frequently offered, but always striving for real advancement and upbuilding.

John H. was born in Trimble county, Kentucky, on October 28, 1840, being the son of Francis and Patience (Coleman) Duncan, natives of Kentucky, who came to Missouri and settled in Gentry county where the father died in 1872 and the mother in 1878, both being buried there. Our subject came with them to Missouri and there received a good common school education and also attended Albany college for one year. He farmed and raised stock until 1863, then taught school for one year then continued farming until 1888, at which time he came to Whitman county. One year was spent there when he removed thence to Coeur d'Alene, where he has resided since that time. He soon opened a dray and express business, which he has prosecuted with vigor since. He has good stock and equipage and also a comfortable residence and two lots.

In 1869, Mr. Duncan married Miss Cordelia, daughter of Isaac Wood, natives of Missouri, where the parents remained until their death. The father conducted a farm and was circuit judge from 1860, until his demise. To Mr. and Mrs. Duncan there have been born five children, named as follows, Katie, wife of F. F. Wilson, in Cœur d'Alene; Will W., married to Ora Koontz, in Bossburg, Washington; Frank C., who volunteered in Company B, First Idaho Infantry, which went to the Philippine war, where he did commendable service; Mary V., Ernest, fourteen in August, 1902, who has already earned two diplomas for literary work. Politically, Mr. Duncan is allied with the Democrats and is active in working in this realm. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Coeur d'Alene Lodge No. 34, also of the K. of P.; and of the Western Federation of Labor. Mrs. Duncan is a member of the Rebekahs, Naomi Lodge, and was a delegate to the grand lodge in Wardner. She is a member of the Presbyterian church.

GEORGE L. EGE. This young and enterprising agriculturist and orchardist has made a commendable success in his labors in Kootenai county. He has now, one mile east from Coeur d'Alene, a farm of forty acres, for which he refused recently four thousand dollars. This shows the quality of his land and the value of the improvements that his skill and industry have made upon it. He has eighteen acres planted to fruit and has every kind represented that grows in this latitude. The balance of the farm is utilized in raising vegetables, for which he finds a ready market. Mr. Ege is one of the substantial men of the county and his hands have wrought out all of his success and gained his fine holding.

On September 29, 1870, in Cerro Gordo county, Iowa, George L. Ege was born to Charles and Mary (Young) Ege, natives respectively of Ohio and New York. They came when young to Wisconsin, where the father did milling and lumbering. Next they removed to Minnesota, thence to Iowa, later to South Dakota, and finally to Spokane, where they now live. George L. was educated by a first class high school course and at the age of sixteen had completed this and was ready for life's battles. He learned the art of the typographer and continued at it for three years. In 1889, he came to Coeur d'Alene. He at first went to steamboating for the Northern Pacific and seven years were consumed in that labor. In the meantime, he bought the forty acres where he now resides, which he has made a very valuable estate and a pleasant rural abode.

In 1894, Mr. Ege married Miss Minnie, daughter of John and Mary J. (Presley) Ferman, natives respectively of Maryland and Georgia, now living in Coeur d'Alene. To Mr. and Mrs. Ege there have been born three children, two of whom live, named Charley and John. Mr. Ege is active in local politics and educational advancement. Mrs. Ege is a member of the Methodist church.

WILLIAM H. ROBACHER lives two miles north from Postfalls, where he rents a quarter section of land, and while he pays attention to general farming he also is greatly interested in stock, having about one dozen cattle and some extra fine blooded horses. Of the training and raising the latter, Mr. Robacher makes a specialty and he has been very successful in this line heretofore. He has nine fine horses, and nine colts, and six of the horses are full blood Hambletonian. Among the best ones may be mentioned Subtraction, a fine stallion sired by Attraction, and whose dam was Young Bashau. Also he has Pacer Octov, sired by Gov. Brown, who was the son of Onward, and the dam of Pacer was by Swygard. He has a fine brood mare by Gov Brown, four colts by Subtraction and an excellent stallion three years of age. These are some of the excellent animals owned by Mr. Robacher and he has gained a good reputation as a fine trainer and breeder of good blooded stock.

Reverting more particularly to the personal career of Mr. Robacher we note that he was born in Albany county, New York, November 30, 1851, being the son of Richard and Elizabeth (Goff) Robacher, natives of New York, who came to Wisconsin in 1852. The father farmed and raised stock there, in Waupaca county until the time of his death and he and his wife rest in Pleasant Valley cemetery. William H. was reared on a farm and until twenty-four he was found every summer assisting his father. He attended schools each winter until eighteen and then the winters were spent in the woods. At twenty-four he bought a farm and worked for himself until 1888, when he came to Dakota and farmed there for eight years. He then started a training stable in Devil's Lake, which he conducted three years. Next we see him in Minnesota, where he spent two years training horses and in all this labor he had good success. He collected some very fine horses and in 1900, he came to Spokane and one year later he came to his present place. Mr. Robacher is making a specialty of breeding and handling fine horses and is already achieving a good success in this new land.

In 1876 Mr. Robacher married Miss Frances King, who died in 1891, leaving one child, Della, who is now living with her grandmother in Wisconsin. In 1895 Mr. Robacher married a second time, Mayfred, daughter of Gard and Margaret (O'Brien) Towner, becoming his wife at that time. Mrs. Robacher's parents were natives of New York and came to Minnesota, where they now live. One child has been born to this happy union, Ralph A. Mr. Robacher is a member of the A. F. & A. M. and the Eastern Star. While in Dakota he was deputy sheriff for two years and he always takes an intelligent interest in politics and the welfare of the community.

WILLIAM GERRARD. One and one half miles east from Coeur d'Alene on the bank of Furnan lake is the pleasant rural home of the subject of this article. He has one hundred acres well improved with good house, barn, and orchard, while he has also a large ice house and keeps many boats and fishing tackle for the use of guests, who liberally patronize him.

Mr. Gerrard was born in Madison county, Ohio, on April 2, 1840, being the son of John and Lerah (Busic) Gerrard, natives respectively of Ohio and Maryland. They were farmers in Madison county and raised a family of eleven children. The mother died when sixty-five and the father was aged seventy when he passed away. William was educated in the public schools and when he had reached his majority he started for himself. He contracted in most of the southern and western states and prospected much of the time. He was where Denver now stands in 1865 and in the Black Hills in 1877. Then he came to Montana and then to Mission, Idaho. In this latter place, he rented a portion of the mission grounds and raised vegetables. He took a homestead right there and raised hay for twenty-three years. He handled from one hundred to three hundred tons each year. Lately the concentrates from the mine have destroyed much of the value of the land. He removed to his present place in 1902, and purchased one hundred acres. Mr. Gerrard has a large ice house that will hold five hundred tons of ice, and he supplies the city of Coeur d'Alene.

In September, 1889, Mr. Gerrard married Mrs. Anna Fetterley, widow of Homer P. Fetterley, and daughter of Severd and Martha (Olson) Severson, natives of Norway, who died when this daughter was young. By her first marriage, Mrs. Gerrard has two children, Fred L., who pays much attention to the boats and is also a boat builder; Adelia, wife of Howard Ely, at Wardner, Idaho. To Mr. and Mrs. Gerrard there have been born three children, two of whom live, as follows, Helen G., Francis M. Mr. Gerrard is a Democrat and active in politics. He was appointed county commissioner in 1888, and so faithfully did he fill the unexpired term that he was elected in 1890. In 1892, he was nominated for county assessor, but was defeated. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., while he and his wife are members of the Methodist church.

EMORY B. MARTIN. This well to do agriculturist and capable citizen of Kootenai county has a fruit and vegetable farm three miles northwest from Rathdrum. He is the son of Ezekiel and Nancy (Boughman) Martin, natives of Tennessee, and was born on March 10, 1848. The parents removed to Arkansas in an early day and the father served in the Mexican war, where he contracted a malady from which he died later. Emory B. was denied the privilege of schools in early life, as he was always on the frontier, but has gained a good business training from practical contact in active life. He enlisted in 1864 in Company I, Forty-sixth Missouri, under Captain Piland, this being in the volunteer infantry, and on May 12, 1865 he was mustered out. He went home and farmed and then later came to Missouri, where he tilled the soil for thirteen years. Again he went to Arkansas and for three years was numbered with the farmers there. In 1886 he located in Rathdrum and in 1888 he took his present place. He has a quarter section and in addition to general farming he raises stock and his orchard is finely selected and contains three hundred trees.

In 1873 Mr. Martin married Miss Margret M., daughter of John and Louisa (Watts) Adkins, natives respectively of North Carolina and West Virginia. The father was a volunteer in the Union army in 1863 and in October, 1865, he was honorably discharged, having spent much of the time on the plains in fighting Indians. After his discharge he went to Missouri, where he farmed until 1887, then came west to Kootenai county the same year. He died here in 1889 and is buried in Pine Grove cemetery at Rathdrum, having survived his wife about six years. Mrs. Martin was born on October 14, 1851, in Tennessee and came to Kansas, where she was educated, also gaining much of her training by careful study at home. To Mr. and Mrs. Martin there have been born seven children, five of whom are living, named as follows: Felix E., married to Mary J. Bateman, living in Coeur d'Alene; David E., with parents; Martha K., wife of A. W. Beck, at Priest River; Thomas E., Bertha H. Mr. Martin is a member of the G. A. R. and he and his wife are members of the Church of Christ. Mrs. Martin is a member of the school board, and has been for two years.

WILLIAM M. McCARTER is one of the best known and most successful hosts in the state of Idaho and is now operating a first-class and excellent hotel on the banks of the Saint Joseph river in the town of Saint Maries. An epitome of his career would be properly placed in the history of his county and therefore we append such.

William M. McCarter was born in county Kent, Canada, on July 27, 1872, being the son of Jeremiah and Catherine (Lints) McCarter. He grew up on a farm and attended the public schools and at the age of seventeen he started out for himself, going first to Humboldt county, California, where he labored in the woods for six years. In the fall of 1894 he came to the Coeur d'Alene country and there also took up lumbering until 1899. In the last year mentioned he came to Saint Maries and opened a hotel. He started in a small building having but five bed rooms. But it soon became evident that no ordinary hotel man had taken up his abode in Saint Maries. His genial and affable ways, his kind and painstaking efforts for the comfort and accommodation of guests, his excellent management, his wise methods of executing all things pertaining to the house in an orderly and comfortable manner, all combined to make Mr. McCarter one of the most popular hotel men in this western country and the result was as could be anticipated, his house was speedily too small to accommodate the immense patronage that began to set in. In the spring of 1901 he began the erection of a fine two-story building on the banks of the Saint Joseph river. This contained a large office, dining room, kitchen, and so forth, with sample rooms and seventeen commodious sleeping apartments. A year later he was forced to build again and this time he erected a three story structure, the lower floor containing a general merchandise establishment and the upper stories being divided into fifty-nine bedrooms. This gives him seventy-six sleeping apartments, while another two-story building which he has constructed is used for a bar and the upper part for lodge rooms. Thus Mr. McCarter has one of the largest and best equipped houses in the state. Every part is nicely and newly furnished and all is operated with the finest management for comfort and convenience. Mr. McCarter has also a nine room dwelling where his family resides.

WILLIAM M. McCARTER.

On June 1, 1902, Mr. McCarter married Miss Ella Sparks of Rathdrum. He is a member of the Elks in Spokane and of the Redmen and Foresters in Harrison. Mr. McCarter's father died in 1882, in Canada. On June 24, 1886, Mrs. McCarter married again, George Keeley becoming her husband. They removed to Vermillion, Ohio, that year and also lived in different states until 1899, when they came to Saint Maries and are connected with our subject in handling the hotel. Mr. McCarter has his own water works, operates his own electric light plant and in every respect his house is a first class hotel where comfortable and excellent accommodations are furnished the traveling public.

RICHARD TAUTENHAHN. The pluck, pertenacity, industry and real worth manifested by Mr. Tautenhahn are exceedingly commendable, and he is esteemed by all who know him, having made a bright success in this county, where he had previously suffered the loss of everything. Richard was born in Schneeberg, Saxony, Germany, on March 22, 1851, being the son of August and Augusta (Boomer) Tautenhahn, also natives of the fatherland, where they lived on a farm until the time of their death. Our subject received a good education and at the age of fifteen years apprenticed himself to learn the shoemaker's trade, which required three years. One year was then spent working for wages and then he learned to make lace and embroidery, at which he labored for twelve years. It was in 1879 that he came to the United States, locating in Pepin county, Wisconsin. He worked at his trade for one year and came to Minnesota, where he opened a shoe shop. Three years later he came west and for six months he traveled all over the coast and finally located in Rathdrum. He opened a shoe shop and did well but soon had the misfortune to lose all his earthly wealth by a disastrous fire. Then he came to his present place, four miles west from Rathdrum, and took a pre-emption. He was so closely burned in the fire that he did not have a dollar. He brought his victuals with him and labored almost day and night until he had a little cabin for his wife and five small children. To a less resolute man this would have been a discouraging proposition to support this household with no start. But Mr. Tautenhahn never knew what defeat meant and he put his shoulder to the work and is today one of the prosperous and well-to-do men of the county. He has two hundred and forty acres of good land, handles a brick kiln each summer, has a fine orchard, does general farming and also raises stock.

In 1874 Mr. Tautenhahn married Miss Anna, daughter of Antone Mockel, a native of Germany, where he remained until the time of his death. To this happy union there were eight children born: Martha, wife of Fred Reiniger, living in Silver Bow, Montana; Hattie, wife of William Miller, living in Butte, Montana; Oswald, living with parents; Flora, wife of Joe Alexander, in Spokane, Washington; Francis, Anna, Richard and Clara. Mr. Tautenhahn is a member of the A. O. F., Court 14, Rathdrum, and he and his wife belong to the German Lutheran church.

MICHAEL A. HICKEY. This well known and influential gentleman is one of the leading men of his community and has long been a stanch laborer in various sections for general advancement and upbuilding, while since his advent into Kootenai county he has been a potent factor in its progress and is a man of real worth and wearing qualities, being highly esteemed and respected.

Michael Hickey was born in the northwestern part of Oneida county, New York, on January 1, 1852, being the son of Patrick and Bridget (Noonan) Hickey, natives of Ireland, whence they came to Quebec, in 1846, and to Oneida county, New York, later, where they farmed until their death, the father passing away in 1862 and the mother in 1865. They are buried in Weston, New York. We see in the ancestry of our subject the secret of his stirring and influential career. He attended school in the winters and worked on the farm in summers until seventeen, when the summers were spent on the canal, then four years were spent in a grist mill and a grocery store. When twenty-one he came to Monroe county, Michigan and engaged in a bending factory, where all kinds of woodenware and so forth were bent for use. He worked two years in the woods in Montcalm county, then labored on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in Indiana, then returned to Michigan and in 1890 we see him headed west; he labored on the cut-off from Wallace to Mission, then went to Portland, where he operated on the Southern Pacific for a time. After going to Spokane he finally took the homestead where he now lives, about two miles southeast from Spokane Bridge. He has a good farm, well improved with good house, barn, orchard and fifty acres under cultivation. In 1898 he went to Republic, Washington, where he took three mining claims and still has a portion of them, being a member of the company that owns the Spokane Queen and Poorman, and is director.

In 1879 Mr. Hickey married Miss Sarah, daughter of William and Rebecca (Vanliew) Tubbs, natives of Ohio. The wife died one year after the marriage.

Mr. Hickey is a gold Democrat, but on account of the high feeling in the silver times he held to the principles mentioned and that placed him on the Republican side of the fence. He was nominated in 1898 as justice of the peace, and as his precinct was strongly Democratic and the fusionists were rampant there was not a ghost of a show for him to be elected, being nominated on the Republican ticket, but to his great surprise a count of votes revealed that he was justice of the peace. This was repeated at another time, when he and the county surveyor were the only officers elected on the Republican ticket in the entire county. This remarkable record demonstrates conclusively the popularity of Mr. Hickey among his fellows and it is cause for pardonable pride. He has been chairman of the school board for three years and road overseer for one year. He is a member of the A. O. F.

HIRAM HERRING. About three miles south of Spokane Bridge is located one of the best farms of the vicinity, being an attractive and valuable place, and the owner of it is the subject of this article. This land was acquired by Mr. Herring from the government by homestead right in 1892, and since that time it has been the family home and is now producing annually a fine return in fruits and vegetables, while also Mr. Herring does some general farming, handling some stock too. He is a man of uprightness and good ability and has made a clean record during his stay here as he has also heretofore. Hiram was born in Putnam county, Missouri, on January 25, 1859, being the son of John and Mary (Moore) Herring, natives of Missouri. The father gathered his substance together and started across the plains with his family in 1866, but fate decreed that he should never see the end of the journey and he sleeps by the old emigrant trail of many years ago. The mother took up the sad burdens of life in this hard place and came through to Linn county, Oregon, where she married John Garrett in 1869 and they now live in Brownsville. Our subject gained his education in Brownsville and started out in life for himself early. At twenty-one he married and settled on a farm, until 1885, when he removed to Spokane. For six years he was head sawyer for Carter Brothers, and then in 1892, as spoken above, he took his present place as a homestead and here he has bestowed his labors with wisdom and faithfulness since, as the entire premises testify.

In September, 1878, Mr. Herring married Miss Emma, daughter of Cal and Elizabeth (Blue) Hodges, who were among the very first emigrants that braved the dangers and hardships of the earliest trips across the plains in the early forties. They located in Linn county, Oregon, and now live at Canyonville, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Herring there have been born ten children, named as follows: Altie L., Lottie T., Gladys J., Grover C., Hugh F., Johnnie H. and Elvin. These are all at home with their parents. The three deceased are, Goldie, who died in infancy; Freddie, who died when eighteen months old; Marcellus who was killed by a falling tree, March 6, 1901, aged eighteen years. In political matters, Mr. Herring is a Democrat and takes an active part in this important work. He has a nice home and is one of the enterprising men of the county and it is with pleasure that we have been enabled to accord to him and his estimable family a representation in this volume.

JOHN THERLEEN has made a commendable record as an orchardist on his fine farm which is located four and one half miles south from Spokane Bridge, its altitude being one thousand feet above Spokane; he has an excellent orchard of six hundred trees, besides much small fruit. He has raised apples that weigh twenty-two ounces each and strawberries that measure six and one-half inches in circumference; the farm produces fruit in abundance. Mr. Therleen has labored with great industry and wisdom and his place bespeaks his thrift and care. In addition to this fine showing, he operates a blacksmith shop on the farm, and does a good business.

John Therleen was born in Yath, Sweden, on February 16, 1861, being the son of Peter and Catherine (Johnson) Therleen, also natives of that country, where the father did a tailor business. The son was educated there and learned the tailor trade with his father, then went to sea for two years, after which he worked for his uncle and in 1881 came to Stillwater, Minnesota. He farmed in the summers and went to the woods in the winters, continuing this for seven years. Then he went to Montana and handled stock for a time, after which he worked on the railroad, and in 1890, engaged in a shingle mill. Then he took charge of Kilpatrick's farm for one year, then rented it and in 1891, he worked for Kilpatrick at Hope, Idaho. In 1895, he took charge of Dr. Lieberg's farm, on Pend Oreille, then went to Rathdrum and took a position in E. Manor's store. From this he handled a peddling wagon in share with Manor until 1896, when he purchased a man's right to the place where he now lives. He has bestowed his labor here since that time and has made a good home of this place. He has it well improved and also raises some blooded stock.

In 1893, Mr. Therleen married Miss Barbara, daughter of Michael and Maria Barbara Dill, from Niederrimbach, natives of Germany, where they now live. Mrs. Therleen came to Spokane in 1891, and there met Mr. Therleen and their wedding occurred in Hope, Idaho. They have two children, George L. and Alice L. In 1898, Mr. Therleen was elected central committeeman for his precinct; he is an ardent supporter of the principles of the Republican party. He and his wife belong to the Swedish Lutheran church.

GEORGE S. TITUS is one of the industrious farmers whose skill and labors have given him a good competence in worldly property; his family home is on his farm two miles south from Spokane Bridge. He has one hundred and sixty acres, does a general farming business, raises stock, and has a good orchard.

Mr. Titus was born in Delaware county, New York, on December 12, 1861, being the son of Stevens and Mary (Bush) Titus, natives of the same county. In 1881, they came to Colorado and there farmed until their death. They had three sons and one daughter, named as follows, Clark, a farmer in Colorado; Willit, a graduate of Harvard college, and died in Colorado in 1878; Fanny, wife of Walter Freeman, in Chicago; George S., the subject of this article. He was educated in the country schools in his native county and came with his parents to Colorado, where he farmed for seven years. Two years were then spent in Los Animas, Colorado, and then he came to Spokane, about 1890. He worked some and purchased forty acres near Chester, Washington, which was the home for three years. Then he sold and took his present place as a homestead.

In 1883, Mr. Titus married Miss Marila Work, whose mother was a widow living at Longmont, Colorado. They were natives of Pennsylvania and came to Iowa where the father died and then they removed to Longmont. To Mr. and Mrs. Titus, there have been born four children, as follows, Raymond L., Ralph, deceased, Myrtle and Grace. In 1892 Mrs. Titus died and is buried at Saltese Lake. Mr. Titus is a member of the I. O. O. F., Eric Lodge, No. 46, in Colorado. He has been road overseer for two terms and also on the school board for two terms. Mr. Titus made a trip to Colorado since coming here, where he remained one and one half years. Upon his return, he was so well pleased with the climate and general resources of Kootenai county that he determined to remain here the rest of his life, believing this to be far ahead of even the famed Colorado.

WILLIS CARTER has had a career well filled with various and stirring business ventures, which display the talent and energy of which he is happily possessed. At present he has a fine home two and one-half miles south from Spokane Bridge, where he has an orchard that numbers sixteen hundred trees of all the leading varieties of apples and other fruits of this latitude. He also handles some stock and operates a saw mill. Mr. Carter was born on January 10, 1842, in Ontario, Canada, being the son of William and Sally (Tower) Carter, natives of Canada, where they farmed until their death some years since. Willis was educated in the common schools and at the age of nineteen, started for himself. He purchased a farm and sawmill from his father and operated them four years, then came to the United States, locating in Nevada. Two years later, he went to British Columbia, and thence to Spokane, Washington, where he and his brother started the first machine shop and foundry in that place. He purchased the plant from a man who had just erected it; it also contained a good blacksmith shop. Mr. Carter did the first casting ever done in Spokane, and operated this establishment for ten years. Then he sold and went to California, where he took up fourteen hundred acres of land, but sold his interest before he proved up. His renumeration for this was a house and lot in Jefferson City, Pennsylvania, which he had never seen. He returned to Spokane, bought saw mill machinery and traded some property he had on Main street in that city for one hundred and twenty acres where he now lives, two and one-half miles south from Spokane Bridge. He operated the sawmill steadily for three years and then turned his attention more to improving his farm. As stated above, he has an excellent orchard which is a source of good dividends annually. At one time, Mr. Carter had interests in mines in Rossland which he sold for fifteen thousand dollars. Mr. Carter is one of the leading men of his section and has done business in a commendable manner for the years in which he has operated.

His father's family consisted of seven boys and one girl, named as follows, David, married and living in Minnesota; John married and living in British Columbia; George, married and living in Toronto, Canada; Willis, the subject of this sketch; William, single and living in Spokane; Lyman, married and living in Spokane; Levi, a widower, living in Kootenai county; Mary, single, living in Spokane.

JOHN W. WILLIS. About two miles east from Spokane Bridge is located the home of the subject of this article. It is a good farm and Mr. Willis is one of the younger men of Kootenai county who has gained here a fine success both as a general farmer and especially as a breeder of fine stock. He has a thoroughbred Norman stallion weighing sixteen hundred pounds, Echo Eleven. He also has about twenty head of splendid horses, some cattle and fifty Berkshire hogs, one of which number is a fine male.

It will be interesting to trace the personal career of this man and we note that he was born in Oregon City, Oregon, on January 25, 1873, being the son of Andy and Mary (Beecham) Willis. The father came with his parents to Oregon when he was about two years of age. His father died there; the family has remained twenty years in that place. The father of our subject started a livery stable in Oregon City and also raised blooded horses. He was very skillful in this line, as his son is also. He raised Emegon Dick, Mark Hanna, Timbuck and others, all running horses of note. He also had some very excellent stallions. He now lives in Sherman county, where he is still engaged in raising stock. Our subject was educated in Oregon City, Portland and The Dalles and at the age of seventeen he started for himself. He freighted from The Dalles to Canyon City and raised stock for seven years, then sold out and bought a livery stable in Portland. Two years he devoted himself to handling that property and then sold it and came to Kootenai county. He bought the quarter where he now resides. He has a fine orchard, about one-third of the land under cultivation and does a good business in handling stock and general farming.

In 1898 Mr. Willis married Miss Helen E. Lewis, whose parents were natives of Germany. They came to Minnesota and there farmed until the death of the father in 1884. The mother still lives in Cold Springs, Minnesota. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Willis, namely: Leo A. and Norman E. In political matters Mr. Willis is inclined to liberal views, reversing his judgment for the man and his principles rather than tying to a party. He displays commendable activity in furthering the cause for which he stands. He fraternizes with the Redmen, Minnehaha Lodge, in Portland. Mr. Willis, as his father before him, has already made a good record in handling stock and we man look for further and excellent results from his skillful work.

AUGUST OAKLAND. Some of the most substantial of Kootenai county's citizens have made their worldly wealth since coming hither and among this number of successful men we are constrained to mention the subject of this article, who is located one mile southeast from Spokane Bridge and has a good farm, well improved with good buildings, as house, barn, chicken houses and outbuildings of all kinds needed, while he cultivates seventy-five acres and has an orchard of four acres of all the leading varieties of fruits. Mr. Oakland is one of the enterprising and influential men of his section and the success that he has wrought out does him great credit.

He was born in central Sweden, on February 7, 1855, being the son of John O. and Matilda (Lungreen) Oakland, natives of the same country. They came to America and located in Burnett county, Wisconsin, in 1868, and the father was three weeks in cutting the road from the bay to his place. He has now one of the finest farms in that county and raises considerable stock. August was educated in his native country and in America and at the age of fifteen went into the pineries and in that capacity and on the drive he worked for nineteen years. Then he bought a forty and as he was unable to make a living on that amount of land, he borrowed fifty dollars and came to Spokane, landing there on the last day of February, 1890. He worked on the foundation of the Traders National Bank and harvested in the Palouse and then returned to labor on the Rookery in Spokane. Then he sent for his family and they sold the forty and came to him. They bought a squatter's right to the place where he now lives, it being one hundred and forty acres of good land. He purchased a building from the Indians and moved it on the ground and then went to work to make a home and a valuable farm. He has accomplished this in a first class manner and his estate returns him good annual dividends. He has nine head of neat cattle and six horses.

In 1878 Mr. Oakland married Miss Grace, daughter of Olif and Engebore Nelson, natives of Sweden, who came to America, locating at Wood Lake, Burnett county, Wisconsin, in 1869, where they died. To Mr. and Mrs. Oakland there have been born seven children, Adelia, married to Jerome Manor, in Postfalls; Effie, George N., Maud, Walter, Sydney and Harold. Mr. Oakland has been school clerk for one year and road supervisor for the same length of time, and was elected justice of the peace in 1902. It is very creditable that coming to this country with no means and in debt, he has made him a comfortable home, gained a good competence and is now one of the worthy and leading men of his community. Mrs. Oakland was the first woman elected to office in Kootenai county. She was elected school director in 1890 and again in 1892 and is now serving as clerk of the board.

CHARLES HORN. To be a veteran who fought for the stars and stripes in the days of internecine strife and rebellion is to be pointed out as a man who deserves the praise and approbation of his fellows. To have been a pioneer in the various places of the west, striving against the many forces which were attempting to overwhelm the invader of nature's domain, is to be stamped as a man of nerve, stamina and ability. But to have been in both of these meritorious positions as has the estimable gentleman whose name is heading this paragraph, is to be a conspicuous figure in every line in which patriotism and enterprise can distinguish a man.

Charles Horn was born in Germersheim, on the Rhine, in Germany, on April 8, 1839, being the son of Francis and Mary (Koontz) Horn, both natives of Bavaria. They came to America in 1868, lived one year in New York and returned to Germany, where they died in 1878. Our subject was reared in his native place and there received his education. When fifteen he learned the stone mason trade and in 1859 he came to the United States, landing in New York in June. In April, 1861, he enlisted in the Forty-fifth New York Volunteers under General Sigel and served for four years and four months. Mr. Horn was a man of courage, which he displayed on many a hard contested field. At the battle of Gettysburg he was shot through the leg and also had one eye put out by a shell. He lay in this distressed condition on the field for two days before the rescuing parties

AUGUST OAKLAND.

CHARLES HORN.

JOHN D. CARROLL.

WILLIAM H. LYON.

WILLIAM EATON.

FRANCIS M. MARKHAM.

DAVID PHIFER.

found him. For five months he languished in the hospital before being able to again join his command. Then he served under Hooker at Lookout Mountain and also at Resaca as well as in many other conflicts. On October 15, 1865, he was honorably discharged and returned to his home in New York. Later he settled in Brooklyn and remained until 1871 when he came to Chicago and in 1873 to St. Paul and also to other places in Minnesota until 1879, following his trade in each place. Then he went to Otterail county and took a homestead. In 1883 he was in Richmond, Virginia, then two years in Baltimore, one year again in Ottertail county, a year in Texas, two years in St. Louis, again in Minnesota in 1889, and finally in 1893 Mr. Horn came to Kootenai county. His present home is two miles north from Valley and here he is handling a farm.

On November 5, 1865, in Brooklyn, Mr. Horn married Theodora, daughter of Charles and Hellina (Dick) Gertum, natives of Germany, mention of whom is made in another portion of this work. Mrs. Horn is one of a family of five children. To Mr. and Mrs. Horn there have been born children as follows: Mary, wife of Louis Wilson, in Kootenai county; Charles, married and living in this county; Frank, married; George, married, both being in Kootenai county; Lena, wife of James McClelland, in Asotin county, Washington; Josie, wife of George Tanner, in Asotin county, Washington; Edward, with his parents. Mr. Horn is a member of the G. A. R. and a charter member of the F. O. A., at Priest River. He and his family affiliate with the Catholic church and are well respected people and substantial citizens of this county.

JOHN D. CARROLL is one of the typical pioneers and frontiersmen of the northwest, having made his way into the fastnesses of every state and territory west of the Rockies and being in this section nearly forty years ago. He has experienced all the various ups and downs of the miner, making much money and investing in various undertakings, while in it all he has gone through the hardships that only the sturdy and unflinching pioneer knows about or can undergo. He is a man of the true metal and has shown his courage and spirit in hundreds of trying places.

A brief outline of this adventurous career will be interesting reading for the history of Kootenai county and therefore we append it. John D. Carroll is of pure Irish blood, and this speaks volumes in explanation of his stirring career on the frontier. He was born in Dublin on January 5, 1832, being the son of James and Sarah (Dolton) Carroll, both natives of that famous island also. The father was a tanner by trade and died in 1858, and the mother died in 1886, both being buried in Dublin. John D. went at the age of fourteen on a seafaring trip in the Mediterranean and in 1849 on the crest of the mining excitement in California we find him and as a presaging omen of his career, he made a success from the begining. In 1858 he was in the Fraser river country and one year later was mining in Plaza country, California. In 1860 he started for some of the promising fields in Oregon and a little later we see him in Orofino, Idaho. He also dug the shining metal in Florence and there paid two dollars and fifty cents for a pound of flour. He made a trip to San Francisco about this time and then returned to the pick and shovel in Silver City, Idaho, where he prospered for one and one-half years. In 1864 he came to the Bonners Ferry country and discovered the diggings on Wild Horse creek and in three weeks washed out nearly four thousand dollars of dust with a pan. He sold and went to San Francisco and then mined in Nevada and three or four years later was following his chosen occupation in the famous Bodie country. Two years there and he went to Sonora, Mexico, and spent twenty-seven months in that republic. Then he mined in San Bernardino county, California, then in Utah, then on Wood river, Idaho, and more or less he has kept it up until this date. Mr. Carroll has universally been blessed with success, has made plenty of money and has had a wide range of experience in all these lines of frontier work. In 1889 he operated a ferry for a year and a half in Montana at Thompson Falls. In 1891 he located on his present homestead, three miles south from Copeland. He cuts sixty or more tons of hay each year, raises cattle and does a general farming business.

In 1893 Mr. Carroll was appointed city marshal of Bonners Ferry and in defending the jail against a mob he was treated to a bullet in his head, which is still lodged there. In 1893 a widower brother of Mr. Carroll came to his place and soon died, leaving one son, whom Mr. Carroll has raised, he being now eighteen years of age. In political matters our subject has always evinced an active and intelligent interest and he is one of the progressive and capable citizens of the county.

WILLIAM H. LYON. A continuous residence of thirteen years at Lakeview entitles Mr. Lyon to be classed with the pioneers of Kootenai county. He has witnessed and assisted in its progress, especially in the development of the mineral resources.

The original head of the family, as far as ancestral records show, was James Lyon, an Englishman, who came to America in 1660, settling in Connecticut and engaging in shipbuilding. To him was born Nathaniel, who also followed shipbuilding. His son, James, became an expert shipbuilder, and in 1800 he located in Kingston, Canada, and eventually owned and operated a large line of lake vessels. He represented Northumberland county in the Canadian parliament in 1812, having defeated the popular Sir Allen McNabb, against whom it was said no other man could have won. On February 20, 1815, at Kingston was born William, son of James Lyon. He became a marked student and finished an extensive course of study in the fine institutions of Europe. At Brighton, Canada, in 1832, he married Miss Catherine Ellis Elrod, daughter of Dr. John E. Elrod, of Toronto. To this couple were born ten children, our subject being the third. Shortly after the marriage just mentioned William and his father James joined the Canadian rebellion against English authority and the result was they were exiled and their property confiscated. Later James petitioned his government from the United States whither he had fled and secured a reinstatement to his position and property. The son, William, went to Cincinnati and became prominent as a professor in the Curtis Medical College. Later he established himself in Warren, Trumbull county, Ohio, where our subject was born on September 24, 1837. He was educated and reared in his native place and in 1858 went west to seek his fortune. In 1859 at St. Louis he married Miss Sarah, daughter of John Cowdrey, of Booneville, Missouri, who was killed at the battle of Bull Run, being captain of a Confederate cavalry. Mr. Lyon went to New Orleans and engaged in commercial pursuits and when the war broke out came north but was unfortunately landed at Memphis where he was forced into the Confederate ranks. Obtaining a three days leave of absence he stole out of the city and came to Cairo and there enlisted with Major Warren Stewart's battalion, which was later joined to the Thirteenth Illinois Cavalry. He was wounded at Shiloh and mustered out, being partially paralyzed from the effects of the wound. Recovering his health, Mr. Lyon enlisted in the Sixteenth Kentucky Infantry, on January 1, 1864, and after being gathered to Atlanta was sent under Thomas to Nashville and participated in the battles of that year wherein his division was engaged and served with great credit to himself and profit to the cause. On August 26, 1865, Mr. Lyon was honorably discharged. His wife had died during the war at her father's home in Booneville, Missouri, and on April 5, 1871, Mr. Lyon took a second wife. Miss Cecelia De Ash became his bride on this occasion. Her father, a colonel of the Second Louisana Infantry, was killed at Bull Run. Mr. Lyon was plantation agent for a time after the war and in 1876 went to the Black Hills and in his own words "left his money there." In 1878 he operated in mining in Colorado and did well until 1882, when he removed to Arizona. In 1886 he went thence to California and there prospected and operated a hotel in different leading places in the state. Mrs. Lyon, the second wife, died in 1876, shortly after their trip west. In his stay in California Mr. Lyon had contracted rheumatism and travelled extensively to secure aid, going even to South America and Asia and leading points in other countries. In 1890 he returned to the United States and at once came to Kootenai county and located the Cape Horn ranch at Lakeview and although a lifelong Republican he received the appointment of postmaster from Cleveland. Mr. Lyon has a good ranch, handles the mail and does mining and prospecting. He has been engaged in general merchandising business since January 1, 1901. He has three valuable claims, the El Capitan, going over one hundred dollars in silver; the Trinity, which runs well in both silver and gold, and the Big Six, which also runs in both precious metals. Mills are needed to further develop these properties. Mr. Lyon is a prominent G. A. R. man, belonging to John Lawton Post, No. 29, at Rathdrum.

WILLIAM EATON. This venerable gentleman is one of the honored citizens of Bonners Ferry, having until recently been engaged in active mercantile life, wherein he achieved a good success, while also he has always stood well among the people and is highly respected and esteemed at this day.

William Eaton was born in Newark, New Jersey, on October 13, 1830, being the son of William and Eunice (Perce) Eaton, natives of Vermont and Massachusetts, respectively. They removed to Iowa in 1840, remaining until 1856, when they went to Missouri, where the father died the same year, aged fifty-six. The mother returned to Iowa and lived until 1862, dying then, aged seventy-three. They were the parents of eleven children five of whom still live. William was educated in Iowa, having but scanty opportunity for schooling. At twenty years of age he started for himself in life's course. He hired to an Indian trader and operated in southwestern Iowa for one year, then returned to his home and remained four years. Going again to southwestern Iowa, he took raw land, made a good farm, and in 1877 sold it and went to Kansas, where he bought one-half section, put two hundred acres under cultivation and then sold it. He purchased a nine-thousand dollars stock of goods and for one and one-half years did business in Kansas and then came to Bonner's Ferry in 1888, bringing his goods with him. He at once opened a store and since that time he has been numbered with the leading merchants of the county until he retired in 1902.

In 1851 Mr. Eaton married Miss Caroline Green, and to them were born eleven children, of whom the following are still living: Orson, married and living in Utah; Amanda, wife of Walter Sweet, living in this county; William, married and living in this county: Fannie, wife of William Halbrook, in Kansas: Harry, married and living in Kootenai county; Addie, wife of William Hopper, in southern Idaho. In 1877 Mr. Eaton married Miss Amelia Cox and by this marriage he has three children: Robert C.; Ambrosia, wife of Thomas Jones, in Bonners Ferry; Reta, living with parents and teaching school. Socially, Mr. Eaton is affiliated with the A. F. & A. M., and the I. O. O. F., at Bonners Ferry. In political matters he is liberal and in 1897 he was elected mayor of Bonners Ferry, and so well did he please the people in his administration that he succeeded himself three times.

In 1862 Mr. Eaton enlisted in Silver Creek Mounted Volunteers under Captain Darling, as second lieutenant, and he served until 1864. He was constantly fighting Quantrell, Price and Bealer. For this service he has never received a dollar from the government. He furnished his own clothes, horse and equipment and still holds his commission which shows he was never discharged.

In 1848 Mr. Eaton made a trip into Colorado and into the Smoky mountains and later into the Rio Grande valley, trading with the Indians.

FRANCIS M. MARKHAM. To such men as this estimable and capable gentleman there is great credit due for the intrepid courage, energy and progressiveness manifested in coming into these sections of wilderness in early days to open them for the settlement of men, and it is with pleasure that we have the privilege to chronicle a review of his career in the history that has to do with Kootenai county.

Francis M. Markham was born in Knox county, Illinois, on December 12, 1847. He is the son of Simon S. and Cynthia (Fry) Markham, who were teachers in New York, where they were married and then moved to Illinois. In 1848 the family crossed the plains to Albany, Oregon, and there the father was a general merchant. Our subject grew to manhood and was educated in Albany. When in young manhood he learned the carpenter trade from his father. Later he went to blacksmithing, which he had learned in his youth. He also followed farming for ten years and in 1883 he came to Kootenai, pushing out into this wild country. He bought the right to his present place, one-half mile south from Laclede, at what is known as the Seneaquoteen crossing. He secured it and the ferry from Richard Fry & Company, and since that day has operated the farm and ferry and raised stock. Mr. Markham is a well-to-do and substantial citizen and a leader in the industries which he follows. In the political world he has also been active and influential, has been delegate to the Populist conventions, is school director and has been since the organization of the district. His farm has a good house, fine barn sixty by sixty-five, orchard and other improvements and produces much hay each year. Recently Mr. Markham tore down a building erected by the Hudson Bay Company.

On May 16, 1869, Mr. Markham married Miss Elmina, daughter of Creed T. and Nancy (Lane) Biggers, natives of Virginia and Kentucky, respectively. The mother was a second cousin of Joe Lane, who ran for vice-president with Breckenridge. Mr. and Mrs. Biggers crossed the plains in 1853 and he died in Scio, Oregon, and the mother at Lebanon.

Nine children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Markham, six of whom are living: Melvin C., married and living at Seneaquoteen; Edith, wife of Thomas Campbell, in Laclede; Loren and Lester, twins, with parents; Lena, wife of Charles Horn, in this county; Grover C., with parents. Mr. and Mrs. Markham are people of excellent standing in the community and are deserving of much commendation for the worthy pioneer labors that they have done here and for the exemplary manner in which they have always conducted themselves.

DAVID PHIFER. With a very creditable military career which extends over many years, being also a man of capabilities and a stanch character, the subject of this article is one of the substantial and leading men of the county and is deserving of representation in its history.

David Phifer was born in Ripley county, Indiana, on July 4, 1853, being the son of Philip and Louise Phifer, natives of Germany. They came to America in early days and located in Indiana. The father enlisted in the Union army and was killed in the battle of Pea Ridge. The mother also died when he was small and he was raised by an uncle, John R. Heim, in Indianapolis, Indiana. He received a good schooling and at the age of twenty-one started for himself. One year was spent in railroading and in 1876 he enlisted in the regular army, Company H, Fourth Infantry. He was at various places, among which was Niobrara and Sanders, forts in Wyoming, and in 1886 he came to Coeur d'Alene with the army. The following year he was honorably discharged and at once went into business in Coeur d'Alene. He first commenced to cook and operated a restaurant and he has been in business for the entire time since that date. He owns a fine building on Sherman street and also a good residence. Mr. Phifer is considered one of the reliable and substantial men of the town and is one of the old settlers. He has always manifested a public spirit and is ever ready to take hold of any enterprise for the general good.

It is of note that the ancestors of Mr. Phifer were all very long lived. His maternal grandfather lived to be one hundred and twenty years of age and that venerable gentleman's wife was one hundred and ten when she died. Many of the other ancestors on both sides of the house lived to be over one hundred years of age.

In 1891 Mr. Phifer married Miss Maggie Williams, whose parents were natives of Wales. To this couple has been born one child, Elva. Mr. and Mrs. Phifer are members of the Lutheran church, and he also affiliates with Tribe No. 2, of Red Men, at Coeur d'Alene.

WILLIAM FREDERICK PLONSKE. The brain and brawn of Germany's sturdy men have wrought much for this nation and among the number of worthy immigrants who have made this their home and justly belong to the progressive and thrifty class of citizens, we mention William Plonske, of whom we essay to speak at this time. He was born in Germany, on November 5, 1869, being the son of August and Henrietta (Kollonowske) Plonske, who also were natives of Germany. The family came to America in 1875, locating in Waupaca county, Wisconsin, later going to St. Croix county. In 1895 they came to Kootenai county, where the father now lives, the mother dying in 1900. William was educated in the various places where the parents lived and at fifteen went to work for himself. In 1890 he came to Aberdeen, Washington, and worked in the lumber woods for two years and then came to his present place in 1893. His farm is located three miles west from Postfalls, and consists of one hundred and eleven acres. This is improved with comfortable buildings, a blacksmith shop and so forth, and is devoted to raising vegetables and stock.

In 1894 Mr. Plonske married Miss Virginia B., daughter of George and Mary Knowlton, natives respectively of Illinois and Oregon. They now live in Spokane. To Mr. and Mrs. Plonske two children have been born, Pearl E., Fred W., deceased. In 1897 Mrs. Plonske was called from her husband and family by death and her remains sleep in the Saltese cemetery, Washington. Mr. Plonske is a member of the German Lutheran church. He is a worthy, industrious man and stands well among the people of his community.

Mr. Plonske was elected justice of the peace on the Democratic ticket in 1902 and was one of the three Democrats elected in Kootenai county at that election.

LEVERITT V. LYON. This gentleman has spent considerable time in the various callings of the frontier, and especially in prospecting and mining, in which latter he has been successful, having at this time some claims of good value on the north half of the Colville reservation in Washington. He has put three thousand dollars in them and is pressing the development of them with vigor and skill at this time. He also has a fine home two and one-half miles from Postfalls. The estate at this point consists of a quarter section of good land. It is fenced and a good portion of it under cultivation, having eight acres to orchard and handling much small fruit and vegetables. He has a good, comfortable house and other buildings.

It will be of interest to add a detailed account of the career of Mr. Lyon. First we note that he was born in Petersburg, New Brunswick, Canada, on April 13, 1863, being the son of William and Matilda (Sleep) Lyon, natives of New Brunswick also. The father died in 1872, but the mother still lives in the old home. There were four children in the family, mentioned below, Bradford, married and residing in Eureka, California; Leveritt, the subject of this article; Ludlow, living in Bolster, Washington; George, living in Petersville, New Brunswick. Our subject's paternal grandfather was a native of New York, and his maternal grandparents were born in England. Leveritt was educated in his native place and at sixteen years of age went to Pennsylvania and worked in the coal mines. Two years later we find him in Nevada, laboring in the quartz mines, where one year was spent and then he went to the Black Hills, South Dakota. In 1883 he came to Spokane, Washington. Going to the Big Bend country he was one of thirty-two men who went in a body to prospect and two years were spent in the Okanogan district, exploring the country. Then he came to Kootenai county and took the land spoken of above. He has an excellent home and intends that it shall be his home the balance of his days. In political matters Mr. Lyon is liberal and reserves his judgment for the man and the principles rather than confining himself to the demagogues of party restriction. He stands well in his community and is one of the substantial men of the county.

AUGUST PLONSKE. This worthy farmer of Kootenai county was born in Germany, Soldin, on May 7, 1843, being the son of Fredrick and Christina (Dettner) Plonske, natives of Germany. The mother died in 1862 and the father in 1867, being buried in the native place. August received a common schooling and at fourteen began to work out. At twenty-one he served in the German war with Austria and with Denmark for three years, being mustered out in 1866. In 1870 he went to fight in the Franco-Prussian war and saw terrible warfare and great hardships for one year. After that war he worked at various occupations until 1875, when he came to Wisconsin and settled in Fond-du-Lac county, whence he removed in three years to Baldwin, in that state. Seven years were spent there and then he went to Hammond, Wisconsin, and lived eight years. Then he came to Kootenai county and took a homestead where he now lives, three miles south from Spokane Bridge. He built a good house, has seventy acres under cultivation, a good orchard and is one of the prosperous farmers of the section.

In 1868 Mr. Plonske married Miss Hennathe Kollmowske, a native of Germany, and to them have been born ten children, as follows: William, married to Jennie Knowlton, she being now deceased; Charles, a physician in St. Paul, Minnesota; Amelia, wife of Frank Conrad, in Hammond, Wisconsin; Otilda, wife of Julius Conrad, in Hammond, Wisconsin; Mary, wife of Robert L. Hudson, in Spokane, Washington; Albert, with parents; Anna, wife of Louis Stingle, in Postfalls; Emma, single, living with her sister in Hammond, Wisconsin; Edward, with father; Clara, with her sister in Hammond, Wisconsin. Mrs. Plonske died in 1900. Mr. Plonske is a devoted member of the German Lutheran church.

ZACHARIAH AND THOMAS E. MONTGOMERY. These stanch and successful business men and heavy real estate holders of the lower Kootenai valley are located adjoining the town of Porthill, where they have extensive interests as well as being heavily interested in mining properties in northern Idaho.

They are the sons of Samuel and Nancy J. (Parker) Montgomery, natives of Kentucky and North Carolina, respectively. The parents removed to Missouri and there were married and then located in Buchanan county, where they remained for forty years. In 1887 they went to Riley county, Kansas, where they are now retired farmers. Zachariah was born March 10, 1851, and Thomas was born December 19, 1853, both being natives of Buchanan county, Missouri, and there received a common schooling. Zachariah commenced a college course and his health failed and consequently he was forced to forego this pleasure. He remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-four and then went to Brown county, Kansas, and raised and bought cattle for twelve years. Then, on account of poor health, he came to the west in 1880 and traveled quite extensively in various portions. Returning to Kansas, he again undertook the stock business and for three years he was occupied in it. It was 1891 that he came to his present location and took a homestead. He cleared fifty acres of heavily timbered land and put it into fruit and he has the finest orchard in northern Idaho. He gathers as high as four thousand boxes of apples in one season, besides other fruit. Mr. Montgomery has fifteen hundred acres of land, all under cultivation but a few acres, much of it being utilized for hay. He also has nearly six hundred acres in company with his brother Thomas. He also has about twenty mining claims and part of them have been placed in the hands of the Kootenai Mining and Smelting Company and the stock of them is selling at twenty-five cents per share, thus signifying that these properties are very valuable. Mr. Montgomery is a member of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 292, of Milford, Kansas.

ZACHARIAH MONTGOMERY.

Thomas E. worked with his parents until he was twenty-one and then went to Kansas and one summer later returned to Missouri. In 1878 he went to Montana and for one year he did the vigorous labor of cutting cordwood. Then we find him driving a team and working in the mines until 1893, the time when he came to this valley. He had been here in 1891. In 1893 he located his present homestead and in addition has purchased land until he owns eight hundred acres, besides some in partnership with his brother. He handles stock and does general farming and owns mines, having been quite successful in his ventures.

In 1894 Mr. Thomas Montgomery married Miss Artimesa, daughter of George and Julia (Roll) Holmes, natives of Kentucky and Missouri, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes were married in St. Joseph, Missouri, and in 1890 came west to Spokane. Mrs. Holmes died in 1893, but the father still lives in Spokane. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery, Bertha, Fred A., Elsie and Mamie. Mrs. Montgomery is a member of the Baptist church.

These brothers are among the leading men of this portion of the valley and they are progressive and enterprising men whose labors have resulted in much good for the advancement of the country and they are highly respected and stand well, having hosts of friends.

MALCOLM BRUCE. This successful business man and public minded citizen of Bonners Ferry has done a good work in the development of Kootenai county and is at present engaged in operating a ferry across the Kootenai river at Bonners Ferry. He was born in the county of Bruce, Ontario, Canada, on August 15, 1855, being the son of Allen and Christian (McKenzie) Bruce, natives of Scotland. They came to Canada in an early day and settled on a farm, where the father died in 1884, but the mother still lives in Bonners Ferry. Malcolm received his education in the justly famous schools of Ontario and at fourteen quit studying and gave his time to assisting his father on the farm. This continued until he was twenty-two and at that time he inaugurated independent action. We see him next in Manitoba and there he assisted to run the boundary line between the United States and Canada in 1872. He worked at various callings there until 1886 and then he went to Bismarck, North Dakota. He remained three years and then came to Spokane Bridge, where he lived three years on a farm. It was in 1891 that he came to Bonners Ferry, bringing with him a fine dairy, which he operated altogether for ten years, making a first-rate success of it. He sold it in 1899 and bought the ferry across the Kootenai, which property he sold to a company in 1902 and hired to them to operate it. In that capacity, we find him at this time.

In 1882, Mr. Bruce married Miss Maggie, whose parents, Robert and Mary (Armstrong) Mills, came to Canada in an early day from their native country, Ireland. To Mr. and Mrs. Bruce there have been born five children, named as follows: John, Dollie, Robert B., Ellen F. and Verna M. Politically, Mr. Bruce is allied with the stanch Republican party and is active in local matters. He is a member of the M. W. A., North Star Lodge, No. 6160; of the K. of P., Acma Lodge, No. 15; Rathbone Sisters, of which latter his wife is also a member. They are both members of the Presbyterian church.

FRANCIS M. WAGGONER. Surely this enterprising agriculturist of Kootenai county has had a career in which has been crowded some great hardships, but his patience, his fortitude, his tenacity and courage have surmounted them all and have given him a good success in this land. He lives now about one mile south and one mile west from Postfalls, where he has two hundred acres of fine land, well improved and supplied with buildings, stock and necessary implements in a degree that shows both the prosperity of the owner as well as his skill in husbandry and in business enterprises.

Mr. Waggoner was born in Gilmer county, Virginia, on March 7, 1848, being the son of John and Jemima (Collins) Wagoner, natives also of Virginia, but immigrants to Wisconsin in 1855 and to Iowa in 1867, where they now live. The father is eighty-two and the mother seventy-five. Their farm is in Guthrie county, near Menlo. Francis was educated at the country schools in the various places where he lived until fifteen and and then assisted his father until twenty-four. He was then engaged as overseer of a sixteen-hundred-acre farm for Joseph Kenworthy, where he remained nine years with fine success. He then entered into partnership with the owner and in one year he lost four thousand dollars. Then he went to Kansas, bought a farm and had the burden of losing two crops in succession. Then he sold out and went to Iowa, and farmed there for five years. He returned to Kansas in 1885, bought eighty acres and remained there five years, when he came to Spokane county, Washington, settling near Chester. Four years later he removed to Kootenai county, securing his present place, making it larger in 1898, by the purchase of forty acres. He has the entire estate producing and all nicely fenced and improved as mentioned before. He has nine cows, ten head of smaller stock, plenty of horses for the farm and does a prosperous business.

In 1872 Mr. Waggoner married Miss Ida V., daughter of James and Sarah (Root) Dwiggins, natives of Ohio. Mrs. Waggoner had six brothers in the Civil war, all of them commanders, while her father had four brothers in the war. Some of these veterans live in Illinois and some in Iowa. To Mr. and Mrs. Waggoner there have been born four children, as follows: Charles F., married to Eva Fleming, in this county; Oscar J., married to Kittie Knoble, living in Kootenai county; Stella, wife of Henry Enders, in Postfalls; Florence J., with parents. Mr. Waggoner takes an intelligent and active part in politics, refraining from accepting office, although pressed by friends to do so. He has given his time to the handling of school affairs and has been an ardent supporter of educational facilities. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., and he and Mrs. Waggoner are members of the Christian church and are devout supporters of their faith.

EUGENE L. WHITNEY. It is quite in place that there should be incorporated in the history of Kootenai county an account of the career of this estimable gentleman and stirring business man, who is well known in the northern part of the county and is now located in Bonner's Ferry, where he does a general dray and transfer business.

Eugene L. was born in Canaseraga, Allegany county, New York, on September 12, 1854, being the son of Melvin and Eliza (Hooker) Whitney, also natives of New York. The father was a miller and a millwright and this he followed until the time of his death at a good ripe age. The mother died when aged. They had been the parents of six children, five boys and one girl. Our subject was educated in the district school and in 1879 completed a course in bookkeeping also. At the age of thirteen he met the responsibilities of the world on his own account, going first to Pennsylvania, where he followed lumbering for four years. At the age of nineteen, he went to Kansas and engaged in hunting buffalo and farming until 1876, then went to Fort Hayes and operated a livery for a time, and later did the same business at Bull City, Kansas. Then he sold and took up the hardware business. Next we see him in Osborne, buying stock and grain for the First National Bank of that place. He resigned in 1880, taking up the management of a lumber industry for Hall Brothers, where he continued for eleven years. It was in 1891 that he severed his connections with this business and came to Kootenai county. Bonners Ferry was fortunate enough to secure his esttlement and he took up sawmilling. His firm was known as Whitney, Braden & Company and under this style they did business for one year and then he went into partnership with W. W. Bush and they did business transferring ore and freight from boat to train at Bonners Ferry. They continued together for one year and Mr. Whitney had been in this business ever since. He has good equippage and also a good residence in Bonners Ferry and about twenty good town lots. His residence he built in 1894.

In political matters, Mr. Whitney is active and a thorough Republican. He was president of the McKinley club in 1896. He was marshal of Bonners Ferry and councilman in Eaton. He is also a member of the school board and labors for the furthering of educational facilities. In 1876 he was delegate to the Republican county convention in Osborne county and in 1902 he was delegate in Kootenai county and was nominated for sheriff of the county. He gained the day by a handsome majority.

In 1880 Mr. Whitney married Miss Bessie, daughter of William and Sarah J. (Taylor) Braden, natives of Iowa and Kentucky respectively. They came to Kansas in early days and remained there until their death. To Mr. and Mrs. Whitney there have been born three children as follows: Bertrice, wife of Bartlett Sinclair, now living in Passig, Philippines; Stella, Helen, both with parents. Mr. Whitney is a member of the K. of P., the I. O. O. F., and the K. O. T. M. Mrs. Whitney is a member of the Rebekahs. Both of them are members of the Presbyterian church.

ANDREW J. KENT. A real frontiersman and a pioneer who has wrought in different places in the west, Mr. Kent is now living in Bonners Ferry and is one of the substantial, influential and prominent citizens of Kootenai county. He was born in Osceola, Wisconsin, on December 8, 1860, being the son of Andrew and Esther (Hill) Kent, natives of Scotland and Pennsylvania, respectively. The father was born in 1819 and came to America in 1820. He remained in New Brunswick until 1833 then went to Maine where he remained until 1850. Then he went to Osceola, Wisconsin, and in 1853 to California. He returned by way of Cape Horn but when opposite southern California the boat sank, taking all the treasure with it, but all hands were saved. Mr. Kent lost forty-four thousand dollars. He returned and went to Pike's Peak, but not discovering gold there, he came to Osceola, Wisconsin, where he lived until 1901, when his time came to pass the river of death. He, with four brothers, put the first saw mill on the St. Croix river. The mother lives in Osceola now. Our subject received a common schooling in his native place and in 1876 he took a normal course at River Falls, Wisconsin. In 1879 he came to Missoula, Montana, and then went to Philipsburg and worked in the Granite mine for one year. It was 1883 when he came to Murray, that being the time of the gold excitement. Seven years he labored in the Coeur d'Alenes and he was among the leading mine discoverers there, for he located the Fifield group, the Evolution, and others in close proximity to the famous Bunker Hill mine. In 1891 Mr. Kent came to Bonners Ferry district as an expert for Loran and Clark. Since that time, he has made his home here. He owns three hundred and twenty acres of land, which he bought from the railroad, also twenty-eight lots in Bonners Ferry and other property. In 1901 Mr. Kent took a contract to build eight miles of road for wagons to the Buckhorn mines from Bonners Ferry.

In 1890 Mr. Kent married Miss Nellie E. Welch, in Coeur d'Alene, and to them have been born five children: Leslie, Zoe E., Fay I., Howard and Theodore Roosevelt. Mrs. Kent's parents, E. R. and Hattie E. (Sargent) Welch, are natives of New York and now live in The Dalles, Oregon, whither they came in the seventies. Mr. Kent is an active participant in the realm of politics, both county and state. In 1896 he was elected justice of the peace and succeeded himself in 1898. In 1900 he was chosen constable, which office he now holds. He has frequently been delegate to the county conventions and has served on the board of councilmen for Bonners Ferry. He has also given his time and wisdom on the school board frequently and is so serving now. He is a member of the K. of P., Acma Lodge, No. 15. Mr. Kent is the possessor of some valuable mining property in the Buckhorn district and is a promoter of these, while also he labors for progression and advancement in all lines.

JOSEPH C. PARENT. This gentleman has done much toward the upbuilding and development of Kootenai county, laboring with energy and zeal and accomplishing worthy results in many capacities, especially in handling the lumber products of the country. He was born on May 2, 1859, on Star Prairie, Wisconsin, being the son of Charles and Della (Picard) Parent, natives of Canada and Michigan, respectively. The father left Canada for the United States at the age of eleven years. He located in Detroit and remained there for twenty-two years and then went to St. Croix county, Wisconsin, in 1855, where he lives now, retired, being aged eighty. He is a worthy citizen and holds a goodly competence for the labors of his hands. His first wife was Della Picard and by her he had seven children. She died in 1869. His second wife was a widow with six children and by her he has two children. Our subject received his education on Star Prairie and in Somerset. He remained on the farm with his parents until twenty-one. He farmed until 1889, when he came west, locating in Montana, where he remained until 1891, and then came to Kootenai county. He freighted on the Kootenai river with canoes for one year, receiving as high as two dollars per pound for freight from Crossport to Kootenai falls. In 1893 he located a homestead of sixty-three acres and proved up. In 1901 he took the balance of his right, and his place is located four miles north from Bonners Ferry. This he is improving in good shape, and is devoting attention to raising blooded hogs, of which he has some fine specimens. In 1894 Mr. Parent took a contract of furnishing the Great Northern with ties. The next year he contracted to furnish five hundred thousand feet of logs to the Kaslo saw mill. In 1896 he took another similar contract and in 1897 he contracted for seven hundred thousand feet. In 1898 he contracted to furnish the Savward company one half million feet and this entire amount was lost by the boom breaking. In 1899 Mr. Parent freighted on the K. V. Railroad and the next year he began improvements in earnest on his ranch.

In 1881 Mr. Parent married Miss Adaline M., daughter of Dominick and Adaline (Pearson) Generous, natives of Canada, but immigrants to Osseo, Minnesota, where they live on a farm. To Mr. and Mrs. Parent there have been born four children, three of whom are living, named as follows: Abraham J., at home; Angeline M., wife of Edward V. Greenleaf, in Star Prairie, Wisconsin; Charles F., with father. Mr. Parent is always active in political matters and displays the interest of the intelligent citizen. He and his family affiliate with the Catholic church.

GILBERT F. OSLER. Although the subject of this sketch has recently come to this county, he has made himself one of the substantial citizens of it in this time and is actively interested in its upbuilding, while he has shown forth uprightness and sound principles in his walk, thus commending himself to all lovers of good and those who desire the advancement of our county.

Gilbert F. was born in Logan county, Illinois, on October 14, 1856, being the son of Basell and Dorcus (Norton) Osler, natives of Indiana. The father died in 1863. Having been a good business man, he left an estate of twenty thousand dollars. The mother removed to Pottawattamie county, Iowa, and by her excellent management has made a fine fortune of twice that amount. These worthy people were the parents of seventeen children, eight of whom are now living. Our subject went to Iowa with the rest of the family and there received his schooling. At the age of seventeen, he started out for himself, purchasing a farm, which he worked for fourteen years. This was in Iowa, then he went to Nebraska and purchased a farm, and for thirteen years he tilled that. Then he determined to see the west and accordingly came to Kootenai county. This was in 1901. He took a homestead and bought a half section more, one quarter of which was hay land. That he sold and now he is doing a saw mill business, one and one-half miles southeast from Bonners Ferry, where his land is located. In addition to this, Mr. Osler has some stock and devotes considerable attention to that.

In 1877 Mr. Osler married Miss Malissa, daughter of Cephas and Rachel Ellis, natives of Ohio, who came to Iowa in an early day and in 1887 removed to Nebraska, where they now live. To Mr. and Mrs. Osler there have been born three children, Myrtle L., teaching school; Earl C., and Ratie M., at home. Mr. Osler is active in local politics and also in all measures that have for their aim the betterment and advancement of the country and county. He is a member of the M. W. A., and of the K. O. T. M.

CHARLES O'CALLAGHAN. This prominent business man of Bonners Ferry is a man of good standing and manifest ability and has so conducted himself that he has the confidence and approbation of the people, in whose esteem he stands very high. He is a thorough gentleman, having a high sense of honor and integrity, is a loyal friend, holds a pleasant distinction in the social world and is a capable, upright, and efficient business man and loyal and patriotic citizen.

Charles O'Callaghan was born in Buckingham, near Ottawa, Canada, on December 12, 1852, being the son of P. J. and Mary (Cox) O'Callaghan, natives of Ireland and Canada, respectively. The mother died when Charles was four years of age. The father came to Norway, Michigan, in 1875, where he now lives, aged ninety.

Our subject was educated in the common schools until twenty and then went to Oshkosh, Wisconsin, where he entered and graduated from the business college, and then he entered the state normal school, from which he graduated also in 1878. Being thus well equipped in the line of education and business knowledge, young O'Callaghan started in the labors of the educator in Michigan. He taught for two years and was also interested in lumbering, being bookkeeper for a large lumber firm, and also buying and selling lumber at this time. This latter continued until 1887, when Mr. O'Callaghan had the misfortune to lose his health. He was filled with courage and spirit and was determined to conquer and so came to the west and took up stock raising in Kootenai county, Idaho. Four years he labored at this and then sold out and came to Bonners Ferry, taking up real estate business. He has done well in this line since that time, having acquired title to a considerable property both in the country and in Bonners Ferry. He is an active participant in politics, being a strong Jeffersonian Democrat. In 1899 he was appointed United States commissioner for Idaho and does a good business in this line now. In 1896 he was elected justice of the peace, and twice he has succeeded himself, so well are the people pleased with his impartiality and faithfulness. He holds the office now. He was chairman of the city council for two terms up to 1898. Mr. O'Callaghan is a good business man, faithful and efficient, and is admired by all.

In 1900 Mr. O'Callaghan married Miss Della E., daughter of P. and Mary (Mead) Sullivan, natives respectively of Ireland and Canada. They came to the United States when they were young. To Mr. and Mrs. O'Callaghan there have been born three children, Vina E., Claude V., and Lillian M., all of whom were born in Bonners Ferry. Mr. O'Callaghan and his wife are devoted members of the Catholic church and they are valued members of society.

WILLIAM ELDERTON. No citizen of Bonners Ferry is better known than the estimable gentleman whose name is at the head of this article. He is one of the leading business men of the town, having both a fine blacksmith shop and a livery and feed stable, in both of which lines he does a good business and during his residence in this section he has displayed a progressive and enterprising spirit and he is always found ready to assist in any measures that are for the general advancement and welfare of the town and its citizens.

William was born in Wayne county, Ohio, on January 29, 1849, being the son of James and Sarah (Smedley) Elderton, also natives of Ohio. The father died in the same year that this son was born and the mother handled the farm until her death in 1860. Being thus left an orphan, our subject went to live with his grandmother. He received a common schooling and soon learned the blacksmith trade. In the art of this leading trade he has been constantly active until the present time. He went to Illinois in 1879 and two years later we find him in Del Norte, Colorado, where two years were spent. In 1881 he removed to New Mexico and two years afterward went to old Mexico. In a year he was back to New Mexico, Socorro, and there remained until 1893. Then he came to Bonners Ferry. He immediately bought three lots, built a good house and improved his property. Also he purchased a quarter section of timber land. He now owns one-half interest in a business building in town, handles a livery and feed stable and also a blacksmith shop.

Mr. Elderton was one of four children as follows: Francis, deceased; Henry, married and living in Kansas; George, married and living in Illinois; William, the subject of this article.

In 1886 Mr. Elderton married Miss Margret A. Burton. In political matters, Mr. Elderton is an active Democrat and he has frequently been called to act as delegate to the county conventions, and in 1900 he served in that capacity at Coeur d'Alene. He joined the I. O. O. F. in 1879, at Ashland, Illinois, being associated with Lodge No. 341. In 1901 he left that to become a charter member of Utopia Lodge, No. 36, here in Bonners Ferry. He has passed through all of the chairs and at present is noble grand. He is also a member of the M. W. A. at Bonners Ferry, and of the Knights of Honor, at Ashland, Illinois.

WILLIAM E. CISCO. Four miles south from Ramsey is the farm of the subject of this sketch, which consists of one hundred and twenty acres, where he has resided for the years since 1897, and his parents also reside there. William E. was born in Corvallis, Oregon, on October 4, 1858, being the son of William W. and Jane (Stevens) Cisco, natives respectively of Ohio and Vermont. The mother crossed the plains in 1845. Her mother died, she being seven years of age, on the trip, and with her father she completed the tedious journey. The father of our subject came across the plains to Oregon in 1852, and in Corvallis met his future wife. There they were married and shortly afterward they removed to King county, Washington, where they have made their home for twenty years. Then they removed to Whitman county, the same state, where ten years were spent. Then they came to Kootenai county and in 1898 they came to their present home with their son. Our subject was educated in King county, being favored only with a common schooling, and he has since that time remained with his parents, doing faithfully the duties of life that have come to hand. In 1892 he came to Spirit valley and in 1898 bought his present place. The parents have come to live here and they have a good piece of land and twenty acres under cultivation. He has four head of horses, nine cattle and other property. Mr. Cisco has one brother, Eugene, married to Mattie Eaton, and living in this county; also he has one sister, Mary M., wife of Daniel W. Pierce, in this county. Mr. Cisco is a well liked man, upright and dominated with integrity and good principles, while he has the esteem of all who know him. He has never seen fit to embark on the matrimonial sea yet, preferring to enjoy the quieter satisfaction of his life of celibacy.

NORMAN McKINNON. The years in which Mr. McKinnon has been domiciled in Kootenai county have been years of industry and energetic labor for the improvement of his fine place, which is located about three miles southwest from Athol. He has shown himself in his career a true pioneer and is a public minded and loyal citizen.

Norman McKinnon was born in Park Hill, Canada, on January 22, 1859, being the son of Donald and Elizabeth (McLeod) McKinnon, natives respectively of Canada and Scotland. The mother came to Canada when seven years of age and they both came to the United States in 1872, locating in southern Michigan. Later they returned to Canada, and finally in that country the father died, but the mother is still living in Detroit, Michigan. Our subject was educated in the common schools and at the age of seventeen started in to work for himself. He took up bridge work and for fifteen years followed it in various parts of the country. In 1886 we find him in California at Madison and Santa Barbara, where he remained a time and in 1888 he came to Kootenai county. He cut ties for the Northern Pacific, then went to the Coeur d'Alene mines and took a contract of getting out mining timbers. In 1889 we find him on the Sound and in 1890 he went to Minnesota and operated a hotel. It was 1897 that Mr. McKinnon came to his present place and took a homestead, putting up buildings and taking up the commendable work of improvement. He has succeeded well, has forty acres under cultivation, considerable saw timber, a band of stock and various improvements that make the place attractive and valuable.

Norman McKinnon is one of ten children, five boys and five girls, named as follows: Mary A., in Detroit, Michigan; Sarah, also in Detroit; Mamy, deceased; Maggie, in Detroit; Malcolm, married and living in Toledo, Ohio; Norman, the subject of this article; Charles, married and living in Seattle; John, in Detroit, Michigan; Michael James, deceased. In political matters, Mr. McKinnon is allied with the Republican party, and always manifests an active interest in these affairs, being influential in his section. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Pine Lodge No. 75, of Athol. He is also a member of the Catholic church.

HIREM YATES. The excellent financiering that this gentleman has accomplished in his career stamps him as possessed of a high grade of ability in this line and he is surely one of the substantial men of the county of Kootenai. He owns a farm of one quarter section at Ramsey, and in addition to doing general farming, he raises stock and is also greatly interested in mining, having some very promising properties of his own.

Hirem Yates was born in Tioga, Illinois, on April 22, 1862, being the son of Henry and Sarah (Coon) Yates, natives of North Carolina and Germany, respectively. The mother came to America in 1850, and she was married in Indiana. They located in Lima, Illinois, and farmed for twenty-five years and then removed to Kansas. There the father died in 1901 and the mother died in 1892. They were the parents of the following children: Edwin, living in Illinois; Thomas, living in Kansas; Margaret, wife of James Ware, in this county; Hirem, the subject of the article; Lucy, wife of George McColough, in Kansas; Rachel, wife of Henry Reed, in Kansas; Spencer, in Illinois; Mattie, single and living in Illinois; Mary, wife of James McCoulough, in Kansas; James, deceased; Robert, in Kansas. Hirem received a common schooling and then began at the early age of ten to do for himself, being permitted in this course by his father. He rented a farm and from one-fourth of the crop he made three hundred dollars the first two years. Then he bought ten acres of land. He sold that and went to Missouri and bought forty acres of land. He farmed it one year and then sold for one thousand dollars. Then he went to Kansas and bought eighty acres which he sold after two years of farming and realized seventeen hundred dollars for this. Then he used this money to buy cattle in Missouri and shipped them to Butte, Montana, and sold, clearing fifteen hundred dollars by the transaction. Succeeding this for seven years he devoted himself to mining with the gratifying result that he cleared up twenty thousand dollars. He came to Washington and bought a half section of land for fifteen hundred dollars which he sold seven years later for five thousand dollars. Then he came to Kootenai county and bought a half section where he now lives. He sold half of this for an advance of two hundred dollars and has refused two thousand dollars for the other quarter.

In 1899 Mr. Yates married Dora Ayers, daughter of Isaac and Meranda Shipe, and widow of John Ayers. Mr. Shipe is a native of Pennsylvania and his wife of Illinois. Mrs. Yates has one child by her former husband, Nina C., living at home. Mr. Yates is a member of the M. W. A. at Rathdrum, and his wife is a member of the R. N. A., Evergreen Camp, No. 2317.

HARRY WILLIAMS. Many noble and true citizens of this country, who are noted for their thrift and industry, have come from England and among this worthy number we mention the gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph, to whom we are pleased to grant consideration in this volume of Kootenai county's history.

Harry Williams was born in Manchester, England, on April 6, 1868, being the son of William T. and Martha (Anderson) Williams, natives of England, also. They came to America in 1872, locating at Ogden, Utah, where the father opened a tailor shop. Four years later he removed to Dilon, Montana, and there wrought at his trade for seven years. Then he sold out and repaired to Ellensburg, Washington, where he wrought at the same occupation until 1898, and then a move was made to Spokane, and at 208 S. Howard street Mr. Williams conducts a first-class shop at the present time. He was born in 1838, and his wife in 1843. Harry was educated in the schools of the various places where the parents lived until he was of sufficient age to take up shop work and then he learned the trade of his father. He labored steadily with him until 1892, then formed partnership with his father in the business, which continued until 1901, when he bought a half section of land where he now lives, one mile north from Ramsey. He still owns an interest in the tailoring business with his father in Spokane. Mr. Williams also owns ten acres in Rexburg, Idaho, with two residences which give him a monthly income of fifty dollars.

In 1891 Mr. Williams married Miss Olive, daughter of Edwin W. and Sarah Craig, natives of Kansas. The father removed his family to Ellensburg, Washington, in 1887, and there followed building and contracting. To Mr. and Mrs. Williams, two children have been born, Coral M., and Deral H. Mr. Williams is a member of the W. of W. and of the Red Men. He and his wife are members of the Christian Science church.

JAMES L. WARE. About one mile north of Ramsey is located the homestead of Mr. Ware, which he took from the government in July, 1899. He has since that time done much by way of improvement, and now has thirty acres from which he rasies many potatoes, finding them a profitable crop. He also has some stock. Mr. Ware has a large family of children and is one of the substantial men who are making the county an improved and valuable portion of the state.

Reverting to the personal history of our subject, we note that he was born in Clermont county Ohio, on March 27, 1851, being the son of James and Harriet (Gilven) Ware, natives respectively of Kentucky and Ohio. The father's father died when his son was young and the boy was bound out to David Hedelsten until twenty-one but at the age of fourteen he ran away from this place and labored for himself. He died December, 1901, aged ninety, and his wife died in 1858. Our subject was educated in the primitive schools of his day, they being maintained by subscription, each scholar paying a fee of one dollar and twenty-five cents each month. He remained with his father until twenty-two and then married and went to farming for himself. Three years were spent at that and his wife died and he sold out and worked for wages in Illinois, and the year following was married again. Then he rented a farm for eight years, after which he removed to Kansas and worked in the town for one year. Then he returned to Illinois and bought a forty and farmed it until January, 1898, when he sold and came to Lincoln county. Shortly after he came to Kootenai county and took the homestead above referred to. He is doing a good work in opening up the place and also in advancing the cause of education, having been on the board for two successive terms since coming here.

Mr. Ware married Mary A. Carr in 1873 and she died in 1876. In 1877 he married Miss Margret, daughter of Henry and Nancy (Coon) Yates, natives of Indiana, and to this union the following children have been born: Alfred N., Noah, deceased, Richard H., deceased, James P., deceased, Mary C., John W., Sanford, Ida B., Bertie, Elsie May. All are at home with their parents. Mr. Ware is allied with the Democrat party and is active in this realm and labors in an intelligent and vigorous manner for the principles he belives to be right. He was elected road supervisor in 1901 and again the following year. His son Richard is a member of the M. W. A., and Mrs. Ware is a member of the Christian church.

ROBERT WILSON. While the subject of this article has not labored so long in Kootenai county as some, still he has displayed such commendable zeal and skill in his labors and is withal a man of integrity and uprightness, so that he deserves mention in the volume that chronicles the history of this section.

Robert Wilson was born in Dutchess county, New York, on June 20, 1851, being the son of Robert and Mary (Dobie) Wilson, natives of Scotland, but immigrants to the United States in 1840. They located in New York where they gardened for eight years and then came to Chickasaw county, Iowa, where the father now lives, aged ninety, but the mother died in 1888. Robert received his education in Iowa and at the age of nineteen started in life for himself. He repaired to Little Falls, Minnesota, where he labored in the woods and in saw mills for three years. Returning to Iowa he purchased a farm in Franklin county and tilled it for four years. Then he went to Chickasaw, remaining four years. The next move was back to Minnesota and in 1887 we find him in Almira, Washington. He farmed there until 1898, when he came to Kootenai county, purchased an improved farm, one mile northwest from Ramsey, to which he added a quarter section of railroad land in 1900. In 1902 he purchased eighty acres more, making him the fine estate of four hundred acres of fertile land. This he has improved in a good manner, and is steadily going on with continued work in this line. He has seventy acres under the plow and good buildings. In addition to his general farming, Mr. Wilson raises some horses. In his father's family, there were six children, three boys and three girls: James, living in Dakota, being married; Mary, wife of A. P. White, in Iowa; J. B., married and living in Franklin county, Iowa; Annie, wife of Robert Black, living in Black Hawk county, Iowa. There is also one more and then the subject of this article. Mr. Wilson is of good standing in his section and is a good, substantial citizen of the country.

THOMAS H. SCOTT. The far away state of Maine is the native place of our subject and his father was Moses Scott, who died there in 1862. The mother died when Thomas H. was five years of age. He was bound out to Alexander Read to remain until twenty-one, but at the age of sixteen, he ran away and went to Granman Island, on the Atlantic coast. He engaged with a fishing schooner for one year and the next year he operated the boat on shares. Then he returned to the lumber woods of Maine and there and in other occupations he remained until 1895 when he came to St. Paul, Minnesota. He worked in the woods and on the drive for six years and then took contracts for three years. Then by the Southern Pacific, he came to San Francisco, and in 1875 we see him in Rathdrum. He contracted with Dodge Brothers to furnish them one million feet of logs annually for three years, which he successfully completed. Then he worked in the Wardner mines for two seasons, then did some logging and in 1884 he took up a homestead, nine miles from Rathdrum on Fish lake. After improving and proving up, he went to Wardner and labored in the mines, then went to Montana and was taken sick and languished in the sisters hospital for seven months, at Deer Lodge, Montana. We next see him in Asotin, Washington, then in Oregon for a couple of years, and then he came back to his present location on Fish lake.

In 1859 Mr. Scott married Miss Emma E., daughter of A. L. and Lizzie (Lane) Bradbury, natives of Maine. They came west in 1885, locating in Spokane county, Washington. To Mr. and Mrs. Scott there have been born two children, Ansel L., married to Jessie Tobey, and living in Spokane; Maud, wife of Paul Voeth, living in Spokane. Mr. Scott has always manifested an intelligent interest in political matters and in Maine he cast his first ballot, it being for A. Lincoln, in 1860. He is now one of the venerable and respected men of this section, being a real pioneer and builder of Kootenai county, where he has conducted himself so that he has won the esteem and respect of all who may know him.

ANSEL L. SCOTT. This enterprising young gentleman is one of the property owners of Kootenai county, having a fine ranch on Fish or Twin lake, where his father resides at the present time. It is a fine property and also Mr. Scott has a good residence and other property in Spokane. He has mastered the machinist's trade and later in life he learned the art of cooking, which he follows considerably in Spokane.

We will mention an outline of his career and we first note that he was born in Minneapolis, Minnesta, on August 12, 1877, being the son of Thomas and Emma E. (Bradberg) Scott, natives of Minnesota. The father and his family now live in Kootenai county. Ansel L. received his education from the common schools and at the age of nineteen was a master mechanic. Then, as we have mentioned above, the art of cooking allured from his first occupation and so skillful has he become in this line that he is sought after by some of the leading hosts of this section, being now in the employ of a large house in Spokane. Mr. Scott has placed improvements from time to time on his land which he bought from the railroad in 1897, and is making it a comfortable and attractive home for his riper years.

In 1900 Mr. Scott married Miss Jessie O. Tobey. He is a member of the F. O. A., Court Royal, No. 19. Also he is a member of the Cooks' and Waiters' Union. Mr. Scott is possessed of ambition and spirit and is making a creditable showing in his labors.

GUSTAV MILLER is one of the enterprising farmers who live in the vicinity of Fish lake, Kootenai county. He has a farm of one hundred and forty acres which he is bringing under cultivation and he also devotes some time to raising stock. He is energetic, possessed of good practical judgment, dominated by keen sagacity and withal has excellent moral qualities.

Mr. Miller was born in Calso, Germany, on April 8, 1861, being the son of Phillip and Louise (Mayers) Miller, natives of Germany. The father died in 1876, and the mother in 1879, both being buried in the Calso cemetery. Gustav received common schooling until fourteen years of age and then clerked for his brother-in-law until 1880, when he was called by his country into the militia. One year spent there, and he was again with his brother-in-law and in 1883 he left Germany, the laws requiring that he remain there, and came to America and located in New York on a farm. On August 6, 1884, he enlisted in the regular army, Sixth Cavalry, served five years, re-enlisted in Fourth Infantry, served five years again, then re-enlisted in the Eleventh Infantry. He went in as private and was discharged as regiment sergeant major, being too old to go farther. He acted in this official position in the Spanish war, and participated in the Porto Rico campaign. From 1892 to 1895 he was stationed at Fort Sherman. In 1898 he was honorably discharged and immediately returned to Kootenai county. He first bought sixty acres of a resort on the lake and two years later bought his present ranch as mentioned above.

In October, 1898, Mr. Miller married Miss Josephine Eresch, whose parents, Joseph and Margret Eresch, were natives of Germany and came to America in 1865, settling in Aurora, Illinois. There they lived until 1888 and came to Sprague, Washington, and in 1890, removed thence to Kootenai county. In 1897 the mother died and in 1899 the father passed away, both being buried at Rathdrum. To Mr. and Mrs. Miller there have been born two girls, Margaret and Elizabeth, twins. Mr. Miller stands well among his fellows and is respected and a substantial citizen of his county.

WILLIAM W. FERRELL. In March, 1884, a sturdy pioneer, William W. Ferrell, on the shores of Coeur d'Alene lake, near Fort Sherman, built a row boat and, in company with two others, placed it on a hand sled and made the trip from that point to the head of navigation on the Saint Joe river, pulling their boat all the way by hand on the ice and consuming twelve days in the trip. One man, Alfred Ritchie, with his hired hand, George Stewart, was then in that country and was engaged in making shingles by hand. Mr. Ferrell landed with eight dollars in his pocket, but he was full of courage, and located a squatter's right on the unsurveyed land and in the spring seeded it to timothy. He has improved and grown in his possessions until at present he has fifteen hundred acres of land, a fine barn and outbuildings, and also has a commodious store and a good saw-mill. He has a fine large hotel of thirty-four rooms which is generously patronized in the summer by pleasure seekers in this beautiful country. Mr. Ferrell is a perfect representation of that brave and noble class of men who pierced into the wilds of nature and opened the country for the abode of man, and his wisdom is manifest in that he has made a brilliant success, being one of the heavy property owners of Kootenai county, all of which his industry and good business ability have gained for him in this location.

William W. Ferrell was born in Fort Madison, Iowa, on November 19, 1856, being the son of Joseph A. and Jane Ferrell. He was reared in town and was educated at the public schools. He followed steamboating, arising to the position of steward, and at the age of eighteen he was running on a boat from Chicago to Buffalo. In the fall of 1876 we went to Waco, Texas, and railroaded. The next spring he was in the thickest of the Black Hills gold excitement, and in the fall of 1877 he went to Leadville and remained until 1881, engaged in mining. Then he went to Hall county, Nebraska, and bought a farm. In June, 1883, we see him in San Francisco and soon after in Portland, Oregon. Thence he came to Spokane, Washington, and in December, 1883, he landed in Fort Sherman, now Coeur d'Alene. The next March he made the boat spoken of above. Since coming to his present place, now known as Ferrell's Landing, he supplied the post with hay for a number of years and now cuts about three hundred tons each year. Mr. Ferrell's place is finely fitted for the accommodation of summer boarders, having a spacious hall for their amusement and also boats and everything handy for comfort and enjoyment.

On May 8, 1881, he married Mattie M. DeSpain in Colorado and two children were born to them, both of whom died. In June, 1888, Mrs. Ferrell died also. On November 22, 1889, Mr. Ferrell married Miss Mary R., daughter of Oscar and Ann Canfield, natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio, respectively. The father's parents came west with their five children to Walla Walla in 1847. They were in the awful Whitman massacre, the father escaping, but the mother and five children were taken prisoners and detained for thirty days. The elder Canfield was the only man that escaped. After that experience they went to Oregon City. Mrs. Ferrell was born in California. The parents both live now in Canfield, Idaho county, this state.

ELBRIDGE W. THORP. This worthy pioneer is eminently fitted for consideration in the history of Kootenai county, since he has wrought with well bestowed labors in this section for its development and for the progress of the county as well as following the life of the pioneer for many years in adjacent states, in all of which worthy career he has done creditably, manifesting integrity, worth and stability.

Elbridge Thorp was born in Boone county, Illinois, on March 27, 1844, being the son of Edward and Martha (Raymond) Thorp, natives of England, but immigrants to this country in 1830. They settled in New York, thence went to Pennsylvania, and later to Illinois, and then to Indiana and afterward to Iowa and finally to Kansas, where he died in 1868. The mother died when our subject was young. Elbridge was educated in the various places where the father lived and at the age of seventeen he enlisted to fight for his country in Company F, Ninth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Miller. He was honorably discharged in 1862, and in 1863 he enlisted for three years or until the close of the war. He served until the conflict ceased, participating in many engagements and skirmishes among which we may mention, Mobile and the charge of Blakely. He was discharged at Houston, Texas, and the company disbanded at Dubuque, Iowa. In the spring of 1866, he engaged as cook on an expedition under Colonel Sawyer who was doing freighting for the government. He came in this capacity to Montana, and then he prospected and in 1871 went thence to Washington, locating where

WILLIAM W. FERRELL.

Sprague is now situated and there handled sheep for twenty-three years. Then he removed to his present place on Fish lake, where he has one hundred and twenty acres of good land, forty of which are into hay, and the balance is used for pasture. He has fifty or more cattle and is one of the prosperous men of the section.

On November 14, 1881, Mr. Thorp married Miss Emma M., daughter of David and Caroline (Vanvalkenburg) Downs, natives of New York. The father died in 1895 and the mother in 1896. Mr. Thorp is a member of the G. A. R. and he and his wife are members of the Baptist church and they stand well in the community, being excellent and upright people.

They have one adopted son, Gustavus. Since the above writing Mr. Thorp has sold his farm property and now owns residence property in Rathdrum, where he lives.

CARL BAECK. A sturdy son of the fatherland, whence come some of the best citizens that ever walked under the stars and stripes, the subject of this sketch is no whit behind in all these choice qualities which make the patriotic citizen, the typical man, the genial and affable neighbor, and the true and loyal friend. He was born in the province of Pahner, Germany, on July 5, 1860, and his parents died when he was very young and he never had the pleasure of knowing them. He was educated in his native land and at the age of fourteen years, he began to learn the brewer's trade. He followed it until 1881, then came to America. First he located in Chicago and soon went thence to St. Paul, Minnesota, working there for T. Ham, and then he went to Fergus Falls, where he engaged in brewery work and such was his skill that he was entrusted with the management of the entire plant in the absence of the foreman, and practically he had charge of the establishment. In 1888 he came to Spokane and at once engaged in the New York Brewery and here he also had charge of the entire part of the production of the choice beverages turned out by that institution. He continued there until the death of the proprietor in 1896 and then our subject and August Mauler were appointed administrators. Two years and nine months were required to settle the large and intricate estate and then our subject was tired out with city life and its ceasless activities and cares and so searched out his present place, on Fish lake, which he purchased, it being one hundred acres of the choicest location on the well known and popular place of resort. He has a gem of an estate, and with his native skill and taste, he plans to embellish and improve it so it will be all that could be desired. Mr. Baeck has a creek coursing through his land that is an ideal place for trout and those finny beauties abound in abundance. In all of his labors since 1890 Mr. Black has had a true helpmeet and an able assistant in his wife, who has brought to his help a wealth of keenness, taste, and practical judgment that have been prominent in their success, which has been bright and becoming.

It was in 1890 that Mr. Baeck married Miss Emma Comminske, a native of Germany, who came to this country in 1889. Two children have been born to this happy union, Henry and Freda, who make their home bright and pleasant.

Mr. Baeck is also interested in raising stock, having a goodly band now. He will soon erect an elegant residence and pipe the sparkling spring water from its native place in the mountains right into the house. He has an ideal home and is highly esteemed by all. He and his estimable wife are members of the German Lutheran church and are liberal supporters of their faith. Mr. Baeck is also a member of the K. of P., and a charter member of the Sons of Hermann, Lodge No. 9, in Spokane, in which he has held office.

JOHN SHAFER. On the banks of Fish lake, one of the most charming spots that nature has generously bestowed in Kootenai county, lies the estate of our subject. It consists of three hundred and thirty-seven acres of fine land, well improved and in this ideal place, Mr. Shafer is now erecting an elegant resort for the accommodation of the many visitors. In addition to this fine property, Mr. Shafer has some property in Rathdrum and also mining interests in Buffalo Hump district. He has one claim also in the St. Reges country for which he paid two thousand dollars and it is of very promising value.

Mr. Shafer was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, on November 8, 1852, being the son of Philip and Elizabeth (Knearman) Shafer, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1834. They located in Pennsylvania and the father bought horses and cattle for the government from 1832 to 1871. He died in 1884, aged eighty and his wife died in 1882, aged seventy-four. They had six children, all boys and our subject the youngest. John was educated in his native place and at the age of nineteen stepped from the parental home to do battle for himself in life. He bought and sold stock in Pennsylvania until 1876, then went into the livery business in St. Petersburg, Clarion county, Pennsylvania, and remained in that for three years. His next move was to buy a farm, which he tilled until 1883, then he sold that also and came to Rathdrum. He has lived in this vicinity since that time and is now located as stated above.

In 1873 Mr. Shafer married Miss Fannie L., daughter of William and Sarah A. (Custard) Porter, natives of Pennsylvania. The mother still lives there, being born in 1806. The father died there in the sixties. They had eleven children, seven boys and four girls, Mrs. Shafer being the youngest. To Mr. and Mrs. Shafer there have been born two children, William P., deceased: Sadie E., wife of Charles Lafavre, in Wardner, Idaho. In 1890 Mrs. Shafer was called from home and family by death and her remains repose in the cemetery at Rathdrum.

Mr. Shafer is an intelligent and active participant in the political realm, being a strong supporter of the principles of the Republican party. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and used to be of the K. of P. but dropped it when he came to this country. When Mr. Shafer completes the improvements planned for his summer resort he will have one of the most attractive places in this section of the country and will have all the comforts and entertainments provided that the most exacting guests could desire, which his geniality and affability and skill will doubly enhance.

GEORGE BATTERS is a man who has taken hold with his hands, directed by a native sagacity and vigor, and has wrought out a good success in the affairs of this life, being at the present time proprietor and owner of a good hotel in Athol, also a livery and feed barn, while he has a nice farm, one hundred acres of which are under cultivation. He does a good business in all lines and handles a hotel, where he gains the good will and approval of the traveling public on account of his affability and care for the comfort of guests.

George Batters was born in Joliet, Illinois, on December 22, 1854, being the son of Joseph and Catherine (Pilkey) Batters, natives of Canada, who came to Illinois in an early day and thence later to Little Falls, Minnesota, where the father handled a hotel until the time of his death, in 1873, having come there in 1854. The mother continued the business until she died in 1884, and they both repose in the cemetery in Little Falls. Our subject received his education from the public schools, and at the age of fourteen years, started in life for himself. He worked as assistant cook in a logging camp and then took charge of that department and on the drive until 1888, when he came to Spokane, and there operated a restaurant for six months. Selling out, he came to the old town of Athol, worked for a sawmill outfit and then for Prickett & Warner for three years on a farm. Then he took a homestead and proved up on it, embellished it with buildings, fences, orchard, and so forth, then purchased some property in Postfalls, and in 1902, he bought the hotel in Athol, as mentioned above.

In 1880 Mr. Batters married Miss Ellen, daughter of William G. and Sarah (Swatz) McEwen, natives of New York and Germany, respectively. They came to Wisconsin and there the mother died and the father went to Nebraska and there he passed away in 1899. To Mr. and Mrs. Batters one child has been born, George E., with his parents. Mr. Batters is a member of the I. O. O. F., Pine Lodge No. 75. His son belongs to the same lodge and also to the Rebekahs. Evergreen Lodge, No. 51, and to the M. W. A., Athol Camp, No. 8388. Mr. Batters is a man of sterling worth and has hosts of friends wherever he is known.

HARVEY J. SWOFFORD. This well known gentleman is one of the heavy property owners of Kootenai county, his estate of six hundred acres being located about four miles northwest from Coeur d'Alene, where he does a general farming business and raises stock. His land is about half under cultivation, and he has a fine orchard of all varieties, good buildings, and all about him testifies that he is a man of sagacity and industry.

Harvey J. Swofford was born in St. Clair county, Missouri, on April 13, 1843, being the son of Harvey J. and Nancy (Murphy) Swofford, natives of Illinois, but farmers of Missouri. In 1845 they removed to the vicinity of St. Louis, where they remained until the time of their death. Our subject received a good schooling and at a young age went to work for himself. The mother died when he was ten and his father married a second time. When he had worked out eight years, he came home and assisted his father for two years. Then he bought a farm and gave his attention to tilling it until 1888, when he came to the west. He purchased a portion of his present estate, it being unimproved, and in three years he had it all broken and good buildings erected. The rest of the land has been purchased later. He has considerable stock in addition to his other property.

In 1878 Mr. Swofford married Miss Sarah J., daughter of Thomas and Sendy (Davenport) Goodin, natives of Tennessee, and to this happy union seven children have been born: Frank, married and living in Coeur d'Alene; Leonard, Thomas, Mary L., Ellen, Wallace, and Lee A. Mr. Swofford is an enterprising business man and has achieved a good success and is counted one of the substantial and leading men of his community.

CHARLES WAGGONER is one of the younger men whose lot has been cast in the fertile regions of Kootenai county, and he has made a success here that does him real credit, while also he stands well among the people of his community. He lives two miles west and one mile south from Postfalls and owns two hundred acres of good land. He has nearly one hundred acres in cultivation, good improvements, as buildings, fences, orchard, and so forth. He does a general farming business and has some stock on the place.

With this brief outline, we will notice the details of his life. His birth occurred on January 14, 1874, in Dale, Iowa, and his parents were, Francis M. and Ida V. Waggoner, natives of Virginia and Ohio, respectively. They are mentioned in another portion of this volume. Charles was educated in Iowa and in Kansas and at the age of seventeen started out for himself. He came with his parents to Washington, and at Chester he served on the school board and then came to his present place. He took one quarter as a homestead and bought one forty afterwards.

In May, 1895 Mr. Waggoner married Miss Eva M., daughter of Isaac and Martha (Blackburn) Fleming, natives of Ireland and England, respectively. The mother died while Mrs. Waggoner was young. In 1890 Mr. Fleming came to Washington, but lives now at Stockbridge, Massachusetts. To Mr. and Mrs. Waggoner there have been born three children, Glenys I., Dora F., and Charles M. Mr. Waggoner is a member of the K. O. T. M., Tent No. 18, in Postfalls. He is with the Populist party in political matters and was appointed deputy assessor in this county for two years, in 1901 and 1902. He is active in this realm and takes a keen interest in the affairs of local and state politics. He is a young man of good standing and is one of the public minded and capable citizens of the county.

JOSEPH PROVOST is one of the sturdy pioneers of Kootenai county and his hands have wrought a good work in opening his present farm, three miles east from Coeur d'Alene, which worthy labors have augmented the wealth of the county and done much in the upbuilding and development of the new country.

Joseph Provost was born in St. Julienne county, province of Quebec, Canada, on June 2, 1863, being the son of Peter and Netellei (Brunelle) Provost, also natives of the same province. The mother died in 1865 in Saint Julienne county and the father died in 1869 and is buried in Rouville county, Canada. Our subject was educated in Saint Damase, in the public schools and when seventeen came to Rhode Island where he worked one year in the cotton factories. Then he returned to the Ottawa river in Canada, and eighteen months later came thence to Portland, Oregon. He soon came to Kootenai county and in 1887, he located his present place. He cultivates fifteen acres, has good improvements and owns one million feet of good saw timber.

On July 15, 1902, Mr. Provost married Miss Resser D. Graves, whose parents were natives of Wisconsin. Mr. Provost is a member of the Catholic church, and his wife is a member of the Methodist church. Politically Mr. Provost is allied with the Peoples party, and is active and influential in local politics.

FRANK RUSSELL is one of the early pioneers of Kootenai county and his worthy labors in the upbuilding of the county's interests and augmenting its wealth, his own intrinsic worth and unswerving integrity, are reasons sufficient to warrant a detailed account of him in the volume that chronicles the lives of the leading men of the county and its annals.

Frank Russell was born in the province of Quebec, Canada, on May 1, 1832, being the son of Frank and Mary A. (Wolrick) Russell, natives of Quebec, where they remained until their death. Our subject was not favored with the privilege of attending public schools and he was obliged to gather his education from the books he could obtain and by utilizing his odd moments in this good labor. The first time he entered a school house was when he was elected school trustee in 1872, in Michigan. Frank worked for his father and the neighbors until he was fourteen and then went into the lumber woods. He has followed this business more or less since that date and is a skillful and capable man in this line. He came to Maine with his parents, who returned to Canada, but he remained. He worked for one man a number of years and when he came to Michigan our subject came with him and remained in his employ for ten years. Then the employer departed from the country and our subject went to work for another company. In 1882 he went to logging for himself and in 1886 he came to Idaho and located on his present place, three miles northeast from Coeur d'Alene and has devoted himself to improving his ranch and to logging in the different sections adjacent. Mr. Russell has a good house, barns and other buildings and has some fruit trees and also cultivates sixty acres. He has also about fourteen head of stock. The first apple grown on the ranch was preserved by Mrs. Russell and they keep it as the first fruits of their endeavors in the west.

On July 30, 1870, Mr. Russell married Mrs. Barbara, widow of Absalom Turner and daughter of John and Mary (Hill) Noble. Her parents were natives of England and came to Canada in 1835, locating in Gosfield, Essex county, West Canada, where they remained until their death. Mr. Russell has served as school trustee for nine years and also as road overseer. They are members of the Methodist church and are stanch and upright people. Four children have been born to them, Frank E.; Isabell M., wife of John Rodjene; Sophia J., widow of Tom Lewis, now in Butte, Montana; Grace E., with parents. Mrs. Russell had three children by her first husband, Amelia T., wife of James Horner, in Coeur d'Alene; Mary E., wife of W. L. McKibben; William Turner, in this county.

JONAS G. PETERSON. About three miles east from Coeur d'Alene lies the estate of Mr. Peterson. It consists of two hundred and forty acres of good land, eighty of which he bought from the railroad and one hundred and sixty he gained by homestead right. He has over sixty-five acres under cultivation and raises considerable hay and handles some stock. He is one of the substantial men of this section and has labored for many years to develop and build up the country.

Jonas G. Peterson was born in Ylengerstorp, Sweden, in 1850, being the son of Peter and Christine (Eungren) Peterson, natives also of Sweden, where the mother died in 1855 and the father in 1887. Our subject was educated in the parish school until sixteen and then went to work on the railroad. He wrought at this in the summers and worked for his father in the winters until he was twenty-five. It was 1875 that he came to the United States, locating first in the state of Wisconsin. He came on to Washington in 1876, making the trip, via San Francisco and Portland. He wrought in the saw mills at Port Gamble, and then returned to San Francisco, thence going to British Columbia, where he prospected for some time. He returned to the Golden Gate and later we find him in Arizona, where he labored in the woods for eleven years, also spending part of the time in mining. In 1889 he came to his present place and settled on unsurveyed land, which was found to be railroad land. Then he bought an eighty of it and homesteaded. Mr.

Peterson spent two years logging and then went to work on his place and he has made some good improvements. He has a fine barn, good outbuildings and fence, with other evidences of thrift and industry.

In 1894 Mr. Peterson married Miss Telda, daughter of Arvedson Swenson and Caren (Nelson) Arvedson, natives of Sweden. They remained in their native country until their death. To Mr. and Mrs. Peterson there has been born one child, Harry R. E. They belong to the Swedish Lutheran church. Mr. Peterson is allied with the Republican party, and is active and influential in the campaigns. He s standing and is one of the substantial and capable citizens of the county.

HENRY REINIGER, deceased. On the eleventh day of January, 1903, there passed from the scenes of earth to the realms beyond one of the prominent and leading business men in Rathdrum, Henry Reiniger. He had suffered long from a painful illness and on the day mentioned, at his residence in Rathdrum, death came to end it all and he went hence. The funeral was taken in charge by the various fraternal orders of which Mr. Reiniger was a member and amid a concourse of friends, the like of which has not hitherto been seen in this town, he was laid to rest.

Mr. Reiniger was well known all over this section and he was as highly esteemed as he was well known. From all classes came friends to pay their respects to the deceased and it was known that an influential man, a patriotic citizen, and a reliable and faithful companion had gone from our midst. He had the distinction of being one of the earliest pioneers of this section and he was instrumental in opening many iterests here in those days. He passed through the country and camped on the site of Spokane before any town had been started. This was in 1876. Mr. Reiniger was then on his way from Germany to Colville and in that place he took charge of Hofsteder's brewery. Being an expert brewer he made a fine success of it, continuing the same until 1881. In that year he came to Rathdrum and built a brewery for himself. Two years later he had the sad experience of looking on his fine property reduced to ashes. This did not daunt his spirit and rising to the emergency he built a larger and better plant than he had before. This was put in successful operation and did a fine business until 1900, when it was again destroyed by fire. Mr. Reiniger had bought a section of land just east from Rathdrum and he superintended this in addition to handling his other business. This was continued until the spring of 1902, when he sold it. Also during a portion of the years of his residence in Rathdrum, Mr. Reiniger owned a saloon. While operating it he went to California for his health. This improved him some but did not entirely free him from his affliction by disease. After returning from California, he sold his business and in November, 1902, he opened a large and complete hardware store in Rathdrum. This was part of the estate left at his decease and is now operated by his son, who was foreman of it before Mr. Reiniger's death and is now managing the same.

Like many of our most substantial citizens, Mr. Reiniger was born in Germany. The native place was Wittenberg and the date July 12, 1851. His parents were Gottlop B. and Mary Reiniger, both natives of Germany, where also they remained until their death. The father died in 1898 and the mother in 1900. The elder Reiniger followed the brewing business and also operated a hotel. Henry was educated in the excellent schools of his native place and also completed a commercial course in a business college. He also learned the brewing business, commencing when he was fifteen years old. At the age of twenty, he entered the army and served for three years, after which he returned home. It then became his purpose to leave the Fatherland and seek his place and fortune in the New World. This he did in 1876 and came direct to Colville. Before leaving the homeland, Mr. Reiniger married the lady of his choice, Anna Foul, whose parents were also natives of Wittenberg, where they remained until death. Six children have been born to this happy union, named as follows: Anna, Henry, Laura, Ernest, Max, Paul. Laura is teaching school and the others are engaged variously.

Mr. Reiniger was well known in business circles and was a power in politics. He was allied with the Democratic party and capable of giving a reason for his views. Fraternally he was affiliated with the K. of P., Chancellor Lodge, No. 13, and with the Rathdrum Court, No. 14, F. O. A.

ROBERT C. THOMPSON. By a decided choice of the people, the subject of this article has been called to discharge the important duties of coun of Kootenai county and it is but right to remark that in these duties as in all of his life, he manifests the greatest of faithfulness and care with consideration for all, which has given him great popularity and a standing that is enviable indeed.

Robert C. Thompson was born in Wythe county, Virginia, on June 13, 1857, being the son of Jezreel and Ally (Lindamood) Thompson, natives of the same county, where also they died, the mother in 1875 and the father in 1897. They were the parents of ten children: Missouri F., Denison B., Robert C., Simon H., Virginia B., Johanna, Franklin K., Irene, Euretta, and Andrew M. Our subject received his education in his native place and remained with his parents until twenty-one. Then he learned the carpenter trade. In 1880 and 1881 he carried United States mail and in 1883 he purchased a saw mill, which he operated until 1885, and then sold. In that year he came to Washington and thence to Kootenai county in the same year. He built a home in Rathdrum and remained two years, after which he went to Los Angeles, California. Inside of a year he was in Spokane. He then went to Stone Switch, this county, and in 1890 filed a homestead, the title of which he has perfected, and in 1896 came back to Rathdrum. He established the first postoffice at Athol, Mrs. Lydia Irons being first postmistress and his wife assistant. While living on his ranch Mr. Thompson went to work for J. H. Stone as foreman in his camps and as tie inspector until 1892. In 1896 he came to Rathdrum and operated a boarding house for two years, then took the foremanship of Pricket & Warner's horse ranch for six months. Since then he has given most of his time to his trade. In 1900 Mr. Thompson was nominated for county commissioner from the second district, but although he ran ahead of his ticket, he was defeated. In 1902 he was placed in nomination by acclamation for county assessor and was elected by a majority of two hundred and forty-seven.

On November 27, 1884, Mr. Thompson married Miss Laura A., daughter of Augustus and Catherine (Tartar) Repass, natives of Virginia, as were their ancestors for generations back to the early settlement of the colony. They were the parents of eight children, seven of whom are living: Frank, Rhoda, Caroline and Alice, twins, John M., Laura A. Mrs. Thompson is a member of the Methodist church, and her father was a minister in that denomination until the time of his death, having served for thirty years in the pulpit.

ERNEST VAN CLEVE. The owner and operator of six hundred and forty acres of land about two miles north from Athol, an industrious and capable agriculturist and a public minded citizen, it is fitting that Mr. Van Cleve should be granted consideration in the history of northern Idaho, being also such an one as to be reckoned with the real builders of the county and capable in labor and counsel.

Ernest Van Cleve was born in Jackson county, Michigan, on October 7, 1862, being the son of Barney and Fidelia (Walworth) Van Cleve, natives, respectively, of New York and Michigan. From Jackson county they removed to Gratiot county, where the mother died in 1866 and the father in 1884. There Ernest received a common school education and at the tender age of seven he was cast upon his own resources and from that time to the present he has been active in labors and travels. He worked at whatever employment came to hand and when sixteen years of age he bought eighty acres of land. This was held four years, and then he sold it for thirteen hundred dollars. This was an excellent start for a young man of twenty, especially so when he had earned it all by his own labors. Next we see Mr. Van Cleve in Wisconsin lumbering and two years after that he returned to Michigan. In 1887 he came again to Wisconsin and the next year he made his way to the coast. He labored in various capacities until 1895, and then for two years he prospected in western Washington, British Columbia and Montana. In 1897 he came to Kootenai county and made ties for three years. The next venture in the way of investment was the purchase of the section of land where Mr. Van Cleve now lives. Since that time he has given himself to the improvement of his place and now has a valuable piece of land with some good improvements already made and many more laid out. He is a good, substantial citizen, respected by all and stands well. Mr. Van Cleve is a charter member of the I. O. O. F., Pine Lodge, No. 75. He has two brothers and one sister: William; Elizabeth, wife of Robert McGregor; Alpine, all in Michigan. Mr. Van Cleve's paternal grandfather was in the Civil war and an uncle on his father's side is a sea captain on the lakes.

EDWARD BJORNSON. Four miles southwest from Bonners Ferry is located the home of the subject of this article. The land was taken under the homestead right and Mr. Bjornson is giving his time and labor to making it a good home and a valuable property. He is a son of Norway, being born in Bergen, on August 31, 1854, and inheriting the excellent qualities of enterprise and push that made his ancestors the real discoverers of the new continent. His parents, Erick and Anna (LeDahl) Bjornson, were natives of the same country and migrated to America in 1857. They located in Dane county, Wisconsin, where they remained for eleven years and then removed to Webster county, Iowa. This was their home until death called them thence. Our subject received his educational training in these localities and remained with his parents until their death and then came the meeting of life's responsibilities on his own account. He farmed for three years and after that gave his attention to learning the tinsmith trade and more or less he has devoted himself to that since. In 1887 he came to California and soon thereafter went to Seattle, Washington, where one year was spent. He then visited Walla Walla and Pendleton and in 1889 was in Spokane. In 1889 Mr. Bjornson was in Sandpoint and then came to Bonners Ferry in 1891. He took a squatter's right and later, when the land was surveyed, he found it was railroad land instead of government and he bought it. In 1899 he sold the property and made a visit east, but returned soon to Kootenai county, settling this time on his present place. He is devoting himself to its improvement and development and is one of the substantial men of this section. Politically he is allied with the Democrats and is always active in the campaigns. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., being a charter member of Badger Lodge, No. 482, in Webster county, Iowa. Mr. Bjornson is also a member of the Lutheran church.

COLON SPENCER SMITH. This esteemed gentleman is one of the earliest pioneers of the Kootenai valley and he had the distinction of being one of the settlers here when there were but two houses in the entire valley. Since that time, Mr. Smith has given himself to the excellent work of developing and upbuilding and he is now one of the prominent and influential men of the valley.

Colon S. Smith was born in Henderson county,

Illinois, on October 15, 1855, being the son of Midleton W. and Jane (Foster) Smith, natives of Virginia. They emigrated to Illinois in 1852 and farmed there six years and then went to Missouri, where they remained until 1870. Then the father went to Colorado and mined for twelve years. He failed to make a success in this venture and so returned to farming. He is now living near Mount Rose, aged eighty-four, on November 4. Nine children were in the family, William K., Benjamin F., Granville R., Susan, deceased, Samuel W., Elizabeth Hampton, Mary A. Tapping, Colon S., our subject, Charley. Our subject received his education in the vicinity of St. Joseph, Missouri, and then went with the family to Colorado. At the age of seventeen, he went to mining and in 1881 he came to the Wood river region in Idaho. Thence he went to Montana and in May, 1883, he came to Kootenai valley. Thence he went to Mexico, then to South America, being in Panama and other points there. From that place he next went to the Sandwich Islands and later we see him in Arizona. He mined in all these places and in 1884 Mr. Smith returned to Missouri. Again we see him in the Kootenai country and he was also one of the foremost in the Coeur d'Alene excitement. He continued in the mines there two years and then settled on the Pend d'Oreille river and raised stock for five years. In 1892 Mr. Smith located his present homestead, three and one-half miles south from Port Hill. He has a good place and improved in a becoming manner. He has also bought other land and he owns over half a section. Mr. Smith pays much attention to raising stock and puts up about one hundred and fifty tons of hay each year. Mr. Smith grub staked William Houston and the latter located what is now known as the Continental group of mines. This valuable property is twenty miles west from Port Hill and consists of three claims, of which Mr. Smith owns a one-sixth interest. The property is bonded for a large sum and is considered one of the valuable properties in this country.

On October 29, 1884, Mr. Smith married Miss Susie, daughter of Peter and Margarett (Piper) Klein, natives of Germany and Pennsylvania, respectively. The father came to America when young and now lives in Schuyler county, Missouri. The mother died when Mrs. Smith was young. Three children have been born to this happy marriage, Ethel, Mary L., and Florence C. B., all at home. Mr. Smith is a Republican, but is also an independent thinker and is of liberal turn of mind. He is active and influential in the campaigns. In Montana, he was elected to the territorial convention and was also nominated for sheriff, but declined it. Mr. Smith is one of the prominent men of the valley and is the recipient of the esteem and good will of all who know him.

DELBERT H. BENTLEY. The young and active men who are stepping to the front in the noble work of developing the almost boundless resources of Kootenai county are deserving of great credit and among the number we desire to mention as one of the most thrifty and wide awake and enterprising, the subject of this article.

Delbert H. Bentley was born in Emerald, St. Croix county, Wisconsin, on November 17, 1878, being the son of Edmond J. and Theoda (Sluyter) Bentley, natives of Michigan. Later they removed to Wisconsin and about 1890 came to Kootenai county, where they are numbered among the prosperous farmers now. Our subject received his education in Wisconsin until eleven and then came with his parents to Kootenai county, where he also studied some in the district schools. He labored with his father until he was about of age, and then he inaugurated independent action and soon demonstrated his excellent business qualities and executive force, both in the achievements accomplished and also in selecting some fine railroad land which he bought, which together with a homestead taken, makes him a fine estate of about one-half section or a little more. This body of land lies about one mile south from Granite and is improved in a good manner. The tireless labors of Mr. Bentley are making it better each year and bestowed, as they are, with excellent wisdom, it is evident that he will soon have one of the finest farms of this section. Mr. Bentley is one of the intelligent and active Republicans of this section, always to the front in county affairs and manifesting a diligence in the investigation of principles and questions of moment that makes him one of the well posted men in his community. Mr. Bentley is a member of the M. W. A., Granite Camp, No. 10875 and is now holding the office of banker. He has not yet seen fit to desert the ranks of the jolly bachelors and rejoices in the quietness and comforts of celibacy. Mr. Bentley is among the highly esteemed men of this section and has the good will of all.

JAMES A. GREEN. A capable and enterprising man whose labors are manifesting a worth and industry that properly place him among the leading men of the section, it is fitting to grant especial mention to him in the history of Kootenai county.

James A. Green was born in Flint, Michigan, on November 30, 1871, being the son of Alphonso and Nancy L. (Clark) Green, natives of Michigan. The mother died in 1883 and the father then went to Wisconsin and in 1888 came to Kootenai county where he now lives. Our subject went with his parents to Ludington, Michigan, and there received his education. When fifteen, he went to do for himself and at once learned the lumber business. He operated in the woods in winter and drove in the spring. In 1898 he came to Kootenai county and took his present place as a homestead. It lies one-half mile south from Granite and there Mr. Green devotes himself to general farming and raising stock.

In 1893 Mr. Green married Miss Alta B., daughter of William and Levina (Bentley) Starr, natives of Emerald, Wisconsin, where they now reside and do farming. Two children have been born to this couple, Cora B. and Myrte Y. Mr. Green is a member of the I. O. O. F., Pine Lodge, at Athol, and of the M. W. A., at Granite, being manager.

ERNEST F. FISCHER. Among the enterprising farmers who are making Kootenai county one of the prosperous divisions of the state, we are constrained to mention the subject of this article, who resides three miles north from Granite.

Ernest F. Fischer was born in Bernick, Germany, on June 28, 1848, being the son of Ernest and Christina (Deitrick) Fischer, also natives of the Fatherland. The father died there in 1887 and the mother came to America in 1891 and died in 1902. Our subject was educated in his native place and when fourteen went to work for himself, farming. In 1868 he joined the army and went through the Franco-Prussian war. He received a wound in the eye which necessitated the taking out of that important member. In 1871 he was discharged and immediately went to railroading. 1890 was the year in which he came to America and for a year or so he worked in Oakesdale, Washington, whence he came to Kootenai county, 1893 being the year in which he landed here. He soon selected a homestead, and since that time he has given his attention to cultivation of the soil and raising stock. His place is situated well and is good land.

In 1872 Mr. Fischer married Miss Pauline, daughter of August and Elenora Hofler, natives of Germany. Four children have been born to this happy marriage, who are named as follows: Lonie, Amelia, Pauline and Eliza.

Mr. Fischer contracted a second marriage four years ago. The lady becoming his wife was Mrs. T. Kastner, who came all the way from the old country to enter this relation. Mrs. Fischer has one child by her former husband.

EDMOND JOHN BENTLEY. This sturdy pioneer is also one of the real builders of Kootenai county and during his stay here he has manifested the true nimrod qualities and his trusty rifle has gotten him many trophies of the chase.

Edmond J. Bentley was born in Jasper county, Pennsylvania, on March 21, 1854, being the son of Armis and Minerva (Sharp) Bentley, natives of Pennsylvania. Thence they went to New York state, later to Michigan, then to Hudson, Wisconsin, and finally to Emerald in the last state. There the father died in 1886, the mother having died six months previous. Our subject was educated in Hudson, Wisconsin, until sixteen and then he spent some time in Boardman, Wisconsin, where he finished a good education. When twenty-four, Mr. Bentley stepped forth to do, on the plain of life's activities, for himself and in the course of three years he purchased a farm, which later he sold and came west to Spokane. In 1886 he came to Granite and made ties for one year. Then he worked on the Northern Pacific and in 1888 he went to Wisconsin. The following year saw him in Kootenai county again and since that date his home has been here. He followed contracting in various timber work until 1898, when he bought his present place of one quarter section, seven miles north from Granite. The place is timber and meadow land and is quite valuable, yielding good returns of hay each year. He does general farming and also raises cattle. Mr. Bentley also raises vegetables for the markets and this year had a cabbage weighing over twenty pounds.

On August 1, 1877, Mr. Bentley married Miss Theoda N., daughter of Westol H. and Wealthy (Barnes) Sluyter, natives of Michigan. The mother died in Travis, Michigan, in 1866 and the father now lives in Kootenai county. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bentley, Delbert H., in Granite; Bertha, wife of O. L. Marrow, in Pennville, Indiana. Mr. Bentley is a stanch and active Republican and does good service in the campaigns. He is one of the trustees and gave money to start the first school in the district.

By way of reminiscence it is interesting to note a little fray Mr. Bentley recently had with some bears. He met a couple of cubs, and having only a small twenty-two rifle, succeeded in getting one of them when the dam made her appearance. Even the ammunition of this toy gun was exhausted and the savage dam was hurrying to the fray. Mr. Bentley remained calm as the seasoned hunter should and when the brute rushed upon him, he succeeded in jamming the rifle barrel down her throat. This was too much, even for her vigorous palate, and she retreated in disgrace and Mr. Bentley won the field and the fight.

ABNER CURTIS. The long time which Mr. Curtis has spent in this section entitles him to the worthy name of pioneer of Kootenai county and as such we grant him representation in the history of his county.

Abner Curtis was born in Shiawassee county, Michigan, on October 2, 1855, being the son of Isaac and Sarah (Smith) Curtis, natives respectively of Ohio and Canada. The mother came to the United States with her parents when seven years of age and in Michigan met and married Mr. Curtis. For fifteen years they lived in Shiawassee county and then moved to Travis county. The father died in 1870 and the mother nine years later. Our subject received his education in the places mentioned and when fifteen he went to do for himself. He wrought in the lumber region until 1880, then went to Emerald, Wisconsin, and lumbered for six years more and then came the journey to Kootenai county and since the day he first landed here he has remained. Mr. Curtis contracted ties for four years and in 1890 he took his present homestead, six miles northeast from Granite. He has comfortable buildings, the land all fenced, cuts from eighty to one hundred tons of hay and does a general farming business. Mr. Curtis has introduced some of the finest Red Pole cattle into the county that there are in the west and he has some excellent breeding animals including one male that is very valuable. Mr. Curtis has a dozen or more of these fine animals and also handles about thirty other cattle. He is one of the prosperous and well-to-do men of the community.

In 1882 Mr. Curtis married Miss Inez, daughter of Westol and Wealthy (Barnes) Sluyter, natives of Maryland. They came west to Kootenai county and the father now lives on a farm near Granite. The mother died in 1866. Mr. Curtis is a prominent and influential Democrat and takes an active part in the campaigns. He has been school trustee for a number of years. Mr. Curtis has the following brothers and sisters living: Adalade, wife of Oren Case, in Travis county; Milo, in Frankfort, Michigan; James A., in Ann Arbor, Michigan; Mary, wife of Charles Welch, in St. John, Michigan.

ALBERT D. EATON. About three miles east from Hope is the estate and business place of Mr. Eaton. He owns two hundred acres of good land and upon this he does both a general farming business and also operates a sawmill. He is a man of uprightness and good business ability and is doing much to assist in building up the country and to augment the wealth of the county.

Albert D. Eaton was born in Maquoketa, Iowa, on December 1, 1872, being the son of Theophilus and Angeline (Watrous) Eaton, natives of Indiana. They came to Iowa in pioneer days and there remained until 1900, when they pressed further into the west and now dwell in Kootenai county. They had one child, the subject of this article. Albert received his education in his native place and at the age of twenty he started in life for himself. He worked on a farm for five years and then worked with his father until 1900. In that year Mr. Eaton bought eighty acres of his present estate from the railroad. The next year he purchased one hundred and twenty acres more and now has a fine body of land.

In 1899 Mr. Eaton married Annie Gronn, daughter of F. D. and Amelie (Lucia) Ordway. In political matters Mr. Eaton is a Republican and is active in the campaigns.

ALBERT R. CASE. To this intelligent and experienced gentleman, whose travels and various occupations in the industries and callings of business and education have fitted him to be a leading citizen, we accord representation in the history of Kootenai county and feel assured that a detailed account of his career will be interesting reading.

Albert R. Case was born in Madison, Wisconsin, on May 17, 1863, being the son of H. W. and Hannah (Brink) Case, natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania, respectively. They settled in Madison, Wisconsin, and remained twenty years. Later they removed to Platteville, Grant county, the same state, and remained there until their death. The mother died in 1889 and the father passed beyond the next year. He had served as a blacksmith in the Civil war. Our subject received a liberal education in the state normal at Platteville and when twenty he took up the educator's calling. He taught in Lancaster and in 1886 came west to San Francisco, where he served a time in the freight office of the Mariposa Steamship Company, having a line of boats from Sidney, Australia, to San Francisco. Thence he came to Colville, Washington, where he taught school and then mined for six years. Returning to Wisconsin, he taught there and in Illinois and then he married and farmed for four years, after which he made the arduous journey to Alaska, where he spent two years in mining after which he returned once more to civilization, brought his family from Wisconsin and settled in Kootenai county on a homestead, where we find him at the present time, just south from Dufort. He built a house, barn, outbuildings, and other improvements and is devoting himself to general farming and raising stock.

In 1893 Mr. Case married Miss Mamie, daughter of George A. and Mary J. (Heard) Utt, natives of Illinois. They removed to Lancaster, Wisconsin, where the father died; the mother now lives in Coulee City, Washington. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Case, Ruth. Mr. Case is one of a family of six children: Asa, Hosea, Charley, Albert, Eliza and Rose.

CAPTAIN JOHN J. O'BRIEN. What better encomium can be given of our citizens than to say that he has served through the terrible war of the Rebellion with credit, and for thirty years thereafter he has in a meritorious manner served in the regular army? Such is the record of the estimable gentleman whose name is at the head of this article and it is with pleasure that we are enabled to grant space to outline his career in this history of the county of Kootenai.

To Christopher and Jane (Kelly) O'Brien, natives of Ireland, John J. was born in Kildare county. He came to America when he was young, and true to the blood that coursed through his veins, he at once took part to help uphold the government and wipe out the insult that had been offered the banner of the free. He enlisted as a private and so meritorious was his conduct and marked with such intrepidity and valor, that he was promoted to a captaincy before the close of the war. He participated in the battle of Winchester under Sheridan and fought through all the struggle until the surrender at Appomattox Court House. Being honorably discharged, he re-enlisted in the regular army as a private and soon was promoted to a second lieutenancy, and in due time had again the position of captain, which his worth and experience and courage demanded for him. In 1886 he came west from Omaha with his regiment, being located at Coeur d'Alene. Since that time he has constantly been in the west. It was in 1896 that the Captain was retired and since that time he has made his home at Coeur d'Alene. He has manifested great wisdom in the business world as also in his other lines of activity and is now possessed of a competence of this world's goods. He has one of the most valuable additions to Coeur d'Alene which is known as O'Brien's addition. The plat contained one hundred and fifty-nine acres and he has handled it in a commendable manner. The Captain is possessed of one gold medal which was bestowed by the membership of the McDowel Post and is a beautiful emblem, which is greatly valued by the owner not only for its beauty but for its association. Captain O'Brien is a member of the G. A. R., Lafayette Post, New York. The days have come when the golden time of his well spent life is beginning to dawn upon him and it is with pleasure that amid real friends, enjoying the meed of his financial sagacity, and with the memories of a well spent life in valued service for his country, we can state that Captain O'Brien is passing the days of his sojourn here in real happiness and as becomes a retired veteran.

CAPT. JOHN J. O'BRIEN.

MEAD VAUGHAN. This veteran on life's battle plain as well as a real veteran of the terrible strife that rent this fair land in the sixties, is now dwelling in Kootenai county and is one of the reliable and faithful men, upright, and possessed of integrity and worth.

Mead Vaughn was born in Manchester, Indiana, on September 17, 1828, where he was educated in the district schools. He started in life as a farmer and went to Iowa, remaining until 1859, in which year he removed to Illinois. There in 1862 he enlisted in the Tenth Illinois Cavalry, serving under Colonel Stewart and participating in arduous and faithful military duties until 1865, when he was mustered out in New Orleans. Then he went to southwest Missouri and mined until 1882, in which year he removed to Fremont county Colorado. In 1885 he went thence to Silver City, Idaho, and from there later to the coast. He was soon in Spokane and thence he came to Kootenai county, where he has remained since. Mr. Vaughan has been occupied in farming and is to be credited with much worthy labor in building up the county. He is the father of two children, Don F., and Eva, who died in 1879. Mr. Vaughan is a member of the G. A. R., is a stanch Republican and takes the keen interest of the intelligent and patriotic citizen. He is also a devout member of the Baptist church and a faithful supporter of the gospel.

FRANK SCHUSSMAN. Everything about the premises of the subject of this article manifests the thrift, thoroughness, and wise industry of the proprietor and it is with pleasure that we are enabled to grant him special mention in the history of Kootenai county, both because of his real worth and because of his excellent works.

Frank Schussman was born in Waupaca county, Wisconsin, on March 14, 1864, being the son of Carl and Caroline (Bublitz) Schussman, natives of Germany, but immigrants to America, where they settled in Waupaca county. They still live there and are the parents of ten children: William; Carl, deceased; Frank, our subject; Albert, deceased; Emma; Mary; Henry; Amelia, deceased; Edward; Carrie. Frank was educated in his native county and in Calumet, Fond du Lac county, until fourteen years old and then he went to work for his father exclusively until he was twenty. At that age he started out for himself, working for the neighbors at common labor. In 1886 he went to Dakota, thence to Wyoming in a year or so, where he was occupied in the woods. Next we see him in Montana, and in 1888 Mr. Schussman made his way to Kootenai county. Here he has remained since and has bestowed his labors on his homestead, which he took after he had spent three years in prospecting. His farm lies a mile and a half west from Clarkfork and has been well improved. Mr. Schussman was a leader in inaugurating the industry of raising fowls and built the first fine structure for raising them in this section of the country. As said before, everything about the farm is done on the motto of what is worth doing, is worth doing well, and this is of great importance in building up a country. Mr. Schussman has some fine fowls, a goodly holding of stock and also does a general farming business. Mr. J. Nosker, his brother-in-law, with his family lives with Mr. Schussman. Mr. Schussman is a member of the I. O. O. F., Myrtle Lodge No. 69, at Clarkfork.

VICTOR W. ROTH. In at least two distinct lines of activity has the subject of this article made a good success, being at the present time a minister of the gospel in Clarkfork and Hope, where he discourses words of truth and encouragement to all, while he also carries on a successful farming business.

Victor W. Roth was born in Baden, Germany, on December 23, 1853, being the son of Joseph and Anna (Hirsch) Roth, natives of Germany. The mother died there in 1858, but the father is still living, having been a school teacher for many years. Our subject received a liberal college education and at the age of seventeen years started out in life for himself. He journeyed to Switzerland and thence to the United States in 1872, locating in New York. He went thence to Kentucky and in 1875 to the Black Hills, where he followed mining and prospecting for many years. In 1891 Mr. Roth came to Clarkfork, and since that time has been in this section. He was a real missionary in this place and did the first gospel preaching, and organized the first Sunday school there. Mr. Roth is preaching both at Hope and Clarkfork, and is a popular and highly esteemed man. In 1895 he bought a piece of hay land and moved to Hope, but being burned out there the following year he returned to Clarkfork, and this has been the family home since that time.

In April, 1881, Mr. Roth married Florence S., daughter of Marion and Mary Fraker, natives of Illinois. They came west to Colorado in 1873, where they reside at the present time. Seven children, six of whom are living, have been born to this happy union: Charles, Henry, Ruth, Victor, Frederick, and Marie, all living at home. Mr. Roth is an active Republican and takes an interest in the welfare and advancement of the country. He is a member of the A. O. U. W., Hope Lodge No. 23. In 1901 Mrs. Roth was appointed postmistress in Clarkford and is holding the position with satisfaction to all at the present time.

FREDRICK M. OWEN, deceased. It is eminently proper that in the volume which records the history of Kootenai county there should be found a memorial of the esteemed gentleman whose name appears above.

Fredrick M. Owen was born in Greene county, Indiana, and thence came with his parents to Missouri when he was eighteen years of age. He served about four years in the Civil war in the Missouri militia. His home was in Missouri until 1883, when he came to Kootenai county. This continued to be his dwelling place until his death, which occurred in 1897. Mr. Owen has always been an industrious and upright man and has made a career which is viewed with pride by his loved ones left behind. His grandfather, Thomas Owen, was a soldier under Cornwallis, and at Gifford courthouse he was wounded by the Puritans. His kneecap was shot away. Our subject married Miss Susanna Barron, who survives her husband and is now dwelling on the old homestead west from Clarkfork. Her parents were Thomas and Nancy Barron and she came to Missouri with them when she was small. There she met and married Mr. Owen. Ten children, six of whom are living, were born to them: Josiah, a geologist for the Southern Pacific, now being engaged in their coal fields; T. J., P. W., Calvin, Samuel, and Fred W., all in Kootenai. T. J. belongs to the Phi Kappa Psi college order.

CALVIN OWEN is one of the earliest pioneers to pierce the wilds around Clarkfork, and since the time when he blazed the way into this region he has been constantly in active labor for its development and improvement and today is residing on his mother's farm, about two miles west from Clarkfork.

Calvin Owen was born in Caldwell county, Missouri, on April 1, 1863, being the son of F. M. and Susanna (Barron) Owen, natives of Indiana and Kentucky respectively. They settled in Missouri in an early day, remaining there for fifty years and in 1882, they all came to Kootenai county. Especial mention of them further is made in this volume. Our subject was allowed but a meager privilege of securing an education, but what opportunity was offered was improved in a proper manner. He came with his parents to Kootenai county, having lived with them previous to that time. He took a homestead adjoining that of his father and has improved it in good shape. At present Mr. Owen is dwelling with his mother and is handling her farm. He also pays considerable attention to raising stock and has now twenty head besides much other property in the way of improvements of the ranches. Mr. Owen is a man who receives the respect and esteem of all and is a substantial citizen.

ISAAC N. DEITRICK. Although the subject of this article has not been so long settled on his present place as some in the vicinity of Hope, he is still one of the pioneers of the county for he settled first on unsurveyed land and his labors have materially added to the wealth of the county and have assisted in building up this section.

Isaac N. Deitrick was born in Hamilton county, Iowa, on March 23, 1855, being the son of Philip and Martha (Strom) Deitrick, natives respectively of Pennsylvania and Indiana. They were married in the latter state and moved to Iowa, where they lived thirteen years. The mother died there in 1855 and in 1858 the balance of the family went back to Indiana, where they remained until 1880, in which year the father went to California, dying in this latter state in 1895. He was a commercial salesman. Our subject received his education in Greencastle, Indiana, and at the age of seventeen went to work on the farm for himself. When nineteen, he went to railroading and that life occupied him for many years. He was on the Union Pacific for sixteen years, then spent a short time in California, whence he came to Hope and entered the employ of the Northern Pacific. In 1900 Mr. Deitrick located some unsurveyed land and later bought one hundred and twenty acres of land where he resides at present, three miles west from Clarkfork. He has an excellent place for a home and handles considerable stock, raising about fifty tons of hay each year and doing general farming.

On December 31, 1883, Mr. Deitrick married Miss Minnie, daughter of L. E. and Mary (Millis) Spoor, who now live in Cheyenne, Wyoming. The father is foreman in the Union Pacific shops and has been for twenty years. One child, Rex E., has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Deitrick. Our subject is an active and intelligent Republican and always manifests an interest in local affairs. He has been school trustee of the Hope district for six years. He is a member of the M. W. A., Clarkfork Camp No. 7617, and also of the O. R. C., Missoula, Montana. Mrs. Deitrick is a member of the Congregational church.

STEPHEN B. HOWES. Without doubt the subject of this article was one of the first ones to come to the country in the vicinity of Clarkfork, and since the early days of his advent here, he has devoted himself to worthy labors of improvement and development and is now one of the substantial men, whose standing among his fellows is of the best and who has the good will and confidence of all.

Stephen B. Howes was born in Bourbon county, Kentucky, on October 6, 1833, being the son of Reuben and Catherine (McNerg) Howes, natives respectively of Maryland and Kentucky. The father served as a despatch boy in the war of 1812. Then he moved to Kentucky, where he married and dwelt for many years. The mother died when our subject was young and the father moved to Illinois in 1844, where he lived until 1868, the time of his death. He was the father of twenty-four children. Our subject received no schooling only that which his studious and industrious nature picked out for himself. At the age of twenty-one he went to New York, thence to Cuba and Central America and in 1855 he landed in the golden California. He crossed the plains east in 1857 and in a short time returned to California and in 1860 he went to Colorado, where he mined for three years. During the Civil war he was east, but soon went to Montana, locating in Galatin valley, where he built the first house in the valley. This was in 1864 and his residence in that section covers a period of twenty-one years. In 1876 Mr. Howes went to the Black Hills via Bismarck, and fought Indians all the way. In 1885 he went to Thompson Falls and resided there for three years. He had visited Clarkfork before this and in 1889 he came thither and settled, securing by purchase, title to three hundred acres of land. He sold that property and now lives on one hundred acres of land on which he has four mining claims, three miles west from Clarkfork, where he does a general farming and gardening business. Mr. Howes has mined more or less all his life and is one of the most skulful men in all branches of this industry to be found in the county. He has some fine properties now which he is developing and which are showing excellent values in gold and copper.

In Montana, in 1878, Mr. Howes married Mrs. Johan Lutton, who died in Thompson Falls in 1889. She had one son by her former marriage, Walter Lutton, now living in Hope. Mr. Howes is liberal in political matters. He is a member of the Methodist church and is one of the upright and exemplary men of this vicinity.

ROBERT MURRAY. This industrious and substantial agriculturist and stock man, whose home is four miles east from Hope, on a quarter section that he secured under homestead right, has labored faithfully and well in this section and is deserving of especial mention in the volume that gives his county's history.

Robert Murray was born in Castle Douglas, Scotland, on April 19, 1851, being the son of Robert and Mary (Cowan) Murray, natives of Scotland, where they remained until their death. The father was a school teacher and civil engineer. He taught school for forty years of his life, thirty being spent in one school. Our subject received his education in his native place and in 1869 came to Canada, whence four years later he went to Texas, where he lived nine years. In 1882 he came to California and eight years were spent in that state. The next move was to Washington, one year being spent in Seattle, whence he came to Spokane and shortly to Kootenai county, where he has labored since. He soon took the homestead mentioned and there he has made his home. Part of his land is excellent timber and a portion is meadow. Mr. Murray handles about thirty head of stock. In political matters he is allied with the Democrats and always takes an interest in county affairs. He has been elected justice of the peace, but refused to qualify, preferring not to take part in public office. Mr. Murray has seven brothers and three sisters: James, in Canada; Adam C., killed in the Civil war while serving under General Sigel, who wrote the father the sad news when the son fell at Fort McGilvery; Mary B., living with our subject; John B., in Scotland; Robert, the subject of this sketch; George C., William B., Marion J., deceased; and Richard, in Scotland; Agnes C., and Mary with our subject.

ELISHA A. CRANDALL is one of the solid, industrious, intelligent, prosperous, and prominent farmers and stockmen in the vicinity of Hope, his estate being three miles east from that place, where he handles a number of fine Shorthorn and Durham cattle, having also some Jersey and Ayrshire stock, doing a dairying business in addition to his farming.

Elisha A. Crandall was born in Baraboo, Sauk county, Wisconsin, on March 15, 1847, being the son of Dr. Samuel M. and Elizabeth (East) Crandall, natives of New York and Louisiana, respectively. They located in Baraboo in 1843 and in 1850 went to Mississippi, where the father died, and in 1855 the mother returned to Baraboo, where she died in 1857. They were both descended from Revolution veterans. Our subject attended the common schools and finished his educational training in a collegiate institute. At the age of sixteen he enlisted in Company F, Twenty-third Volunteer Infantry of Wisconsin, as a drummer, under Captain J. Schlick and Colonel J. J. Guppy. He served thirty months and was mustered out on March 25, 1866, and received his final discharge on April 9th, following. He served much of the time as scout under the noted Kit Carson and participated in the following battles: Sabine Cross Roads, Pleasant Hill, Cain River, Marksville Prairie, Alexandria, Bayou Teche, Jackson Louisiana, advance on Spanish Fort, Fort Blakely, besides fifteen or more skirmishes. He made a fine record and one of which any veteran might be proud. Following the war Mr. Crandall farmed for a time and then railroaded, first on the Chicago and Northwestern for fifteen years, then with the Chicago Great Western nearly three years, resigning the latter to take a position with the Northern Pacific, locating at Hope, Kootenai county. On August 25, 1888, he landed here and his family came the next year. In 1890 Mr. Crandall took his present home place and has labored here with manifestation of wisdom and industry since and has accumulated a fine holding. He has a fine eleven-room residence, barns and outbuildings and other improvements to match and is one of the prominent men of the section.

On November 8, 1868, Mr. Crandall married Miss Emma J., eldest daughter of George and Harriet Capener, of Baraboo, Wisconsin, where the father now lives, the mother having died in 1865. Three children have been born to this union: Walter M., Mabel G., and Robert E., all at home. Mr. and Mrs. Crandall adopted a son, Daniel H., now living in Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin. Mr. Crandall is a solid Republican and has served both as justice of the peace and as school trustee for a number of years. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and has been district deputy for six years and also has been delegate to the grand lodge for the years 1896, 1897, and 1902. He is also a member of the G. A. R. Mrs. Crandall and her eldest son are members of the Adventist church. She is also a member of the Rebekahs. Mr. Crandall is one of the leading men of the community and has always been on the side of progress and advancement.

HARRY L. BALDWIN. In every sense of the word a true pioneer of northern Idaho, a man possessing the stanch qualities of character and worth to qualify him for the arduous and trying labors on the frontier, the subject of this article is eminently fitted for representation in the history that has to do with the county of Kootenai, and accordingly we grant an epitome of his life.

Harry L. Baldwin was born in the Rogue river country, Oregon, on November 7, 1866, being the son of James T. and Mary W. Baldwin, natives of Maine and Ohio, respectively. They came across the Isthmus to Oregon in early days and located in the Rogue river country. Mr. Baldwin stocked the first stage in operation for Isch & Haley from Umatilla Landing to Walla Walla and then went to California, where he remained until 1881. In that year they came overland to Sandpoint and the father started a stage line from that place to Maher's Camp, Camp Two, Cabinet Landing, and Rock Island. He died in 1896. The mother still lives in Sandpoint, being sixty-two years of age. Harry was educated in San Francisco, in Sonoma county, Cloverdale, and in San Mateo county, completing his training in this line in the latter place. He came with his father to Sandpoint in 1881. He worked for J. Wicks, Dubois & King and then freighted for a time. Later he worked for Quirk & McLaughlin, handling a store for them at Clarkfork and at Cabinet Landing. In 1885 he bought a restaurant and after two years in that he built a hotel, conducting it until 1893, when he secured another, and after fitting it up it was destroyed by fire. After this Mr. Baldwin contracted timbers and that has occupied him more or less until the present. In addition, he has a fine farm and handles stock and does a general farming business. Mr. Baldwin had the first mail contract into Bonners Ferry, this being in 1890.

On July 1, 1889, Mr. Baldwin married Miss Josie, daughter of L. M. and Hannah (Galloway) Sallee, natives of Kentucky. They came to Oregon across the plains in early days. Later they removed to California, thence to Washington, and then to Rathdrum, taking up there the saw mill business. In 1892 Mr. Sallee removed again to Vancouver, Washington, where he is now. Mrs. Sallee died there in 1901. Our subject and his wife are the parents of one child, Hattie M.

Mr. Baldwin is a Republican, helped to organize the first Republican convention in this county, was nominated assessor when twenty and has been active in politics ever since and he is an influential figure at the conventions. He has been road overseer and warden of the county and in 1894 he was deputy United States Marshall under Charles Sweeney. Mr. Baldwin is a charter member of the Evening Star Lodge No. 36, of the I. O. O. F., at Postfalls.

It is very interesting by way of reminiscence to note a hunting and fishing trip that Mr. Baldwin conducted for some of the leading men of the country. This was in 1887. Among the number were General Rodney C. Ward, Brooklyn, New York; Judge Gilderslee, also of New York; Lieutenant Abercrombie, United States Engineering Corps; Colonel Hester, one of the owners of the New York Eagle; Dr. Hoglan, one of the proprietors of the Royal Baking Powder; Dr. Merriman, past physician of Spokane Post and others, making the total number twenty-two. They wrote to Mr. Baldwin to prepare for them to go hunting and fishing and they made up a purse of ten thousand dollars for the expenses of the trip. He wisely laid out the route, selected the best places, and skillfully conducted them for more than two months and they had a delightful time, killed many deer, cariboo, and other large game besides taking great quantities of fish.

Mr. Baldwin is proprietor of the largest and best hotel in Sandpoint, which is the only hotel in the county heated by hot air.

IRVEN J. BRANT. An esteemed and sturdy pioneer of Kootenai county, a man whose labors have materially assisted to bring to the front various sections of the northwest and who is at this time one of the substantial residents of Hope, it is fitting that the subject of this article be accorded space in the annals of his county history.

Irven J. Brant was born in Mason county, Illinois, on March 12, 1861, being the son of John L. and Harriett (Winchell) Brant, natives of Illinois. They came to Iowa in 1867 and there the mother died in 1869. The father remained there until 1889, then went to Kansas, thence to Kootenai county in 1891, where he now lives. By his first marriage he has four children and the same number by his second marriage. Our subject received his education in his native place and at the early age of twelve began life's activities for himself. He worked for the neighboring farmers for the intervening time until he was seventeen and served an apprenticeship as a carpenter. In 1882 he came west to California, thence to Yaquinna bay, where he prospected a year and then he came to Washington. His first settlement was in the Methow country and in 1887 was in Kootenai county and since that early day he has been one of the developers and builders of this region. In 1888 Mr. Brant went to Ainsworth, British Columbia, and located the Galliger group of mines. He took the first pack train into that country, made the first trails, did the first mining, shipped the first ore in car load lots and was one of the real promoters of the country. He is a man whose skill and energy gave much to this section and great credit is due him for his stirring and worthy efforts. Mr. Brandt sold these properties and in 1897 bought two hundred and sixty-four acres of land. Later he sold a quarter section and now rents the balance. In 1901 Mr. Brant moved to Hope, bought a residence and since that date has made his home here. He is engaged in mining and farming and also handles some stock.

In April, 1890, Mr. Brant married Lucy B., daughter of Richard and Jestina Fry, especial mention of whom is made elsewhere in this volume. Three children have been born to this union, two of whom are living: Jestenia, Fitzhugh Lee, both with parents. Mr. Brant is allied with the Democratic party in political matters and has been delegate to the county conventions many times. He is an active advocate of good schools and gave of his time to serve on the board for many years, when he was at Bonners Ferry. Mr. Brant is a member of the K. of P. and the K. O. T. M. in Bonners Ferry and of the F. of A. in Hope, while his wife is a member of the Order of Pendo.

In 1890 Mr. Brant located the townsite of Bonners Ferry and had it surveyed into lots before there was a government survey in that section, and built the first frame house in the town.

HARLAN P. MANNING, one of the prominent men of the Hope county, was born on October 22, 1848, in Manchester, New Hampshire, being the son of Isaac and Ann E. (Dodge) Manning, natives of New Hampshire. The mother died in 1849 and the father in 1893. He was a prominent man in his state, and in addition to being member of the legislature for several terms, he held nearly every office in his town, Johnson, New Hampshire. He was beloved by all who knew him and honored as a man of integrity, uprightness and probity. Soon after his birth the parents of our subject took him to Lamoille county, Vermont, where he received his primary education. When thirteen he went to North Boston, there taking a literary course and later finished his education in Lamoille county. When seventeen he enlisted in the Eleventh Vermont Artillery under Captain Woodberry, being in the Second Brigade and Second division and the Sixth corps. He participated in the battles of Winchester, Cedar Creek, Fisher's Hill, Petersburg, Richmond, Muddy Creek and many others. He served three years and four months, being mustered out at Burlington, Vermont, in June, 1865. In the battle of Winchester he was knocked down by a shell, and at Petersburg he received a bayonet wound in the neck. After the war he went to St. Louis, thence to McHenry county, Illinois, for two years in the hotel business and later we see him in Wisconsin for three years. A visit to Vermont then followed and the next occupation was in Iowa, where he entered the civil engineer corps of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad. He was with this company for eight years, and then spent four years in the same capacity with the Northern Pacific. He dealt in machinery in Minnesota for three years, and in 1876 he was in the Black Hills mining. In 1882 he left that country and contracted ties in Montana. He next participated in the Coeur d'Alene excitement, and in 1885 he came to his present place and has been engaged by Small & Ellis in mill overseeing. He has prospered considerable and located the North Star and the Queen, noted properties. In 1897 he bought one hundred and thirty-four acres of land, and now has this leased, as he devotes most of his time to mining, having some fine properties.

On October 8, 1891, Mr. Manning married Mrs. Mary Jackson, widow of Ben Jackson, of Plymouth, England. Mrs. Manning has one son, Harry, by her former husband, and he is in England. Mr. Manning is a Republican and is always interested and active in the affairs of the country. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and a popular and influential man.

ALEXANDER WICKS. It is with pleasure that we are enabled to grant to the estimable gentleman whose name initiates this paragraph consideration in the abiding chronicles of Kootenai county. He is eminently fitted for this place, since he is one of the earliest pioneers of the section where he lives, six miles north from Hope, since he has done a lion's share in the development of the county, and since he has ever maintained an unsullied reputation, demonstrating himself to be possessed of excellent executive force in the accomplishment of his business enterprises and of sagacity in all his ways, being also a man of integrity and sound principles.

Alexander Wicks was born in Nora, Sweden, where he received a good education from the common schools. His parents, Alexander and Annie (Anderson) Wicks, were natives of Sweden, and the mother still lives there, the father dying in 1884. The ancestors of our subject were prominent people in the great thirty years' war and they have in Sweden many relics, as cups, swords, saddles, and other munitions of war, which they gained in that struggle. At the early age of seventeen our subject stepped from the parental nest into the world on his own responsibilities, and after some labor in his native place in 1876 he came to America. He worked one year in a saw mill in Minneapolis, then in the woods for a time and in 1878 went to work on the Canadian Pacific. In 1880 he came to Fargo and the following year he was in Idaho. He assisted to clear the right-of-way for the Northern Pacific through Kootenai county, and then went back to Missoula, Montana, where he operated in the woods. On July 6, 1884, he settled on his present place, the land then being unsurveyed. Upon survey he was found to be on railroad land, and he bought fifty acres, but later bought one hundred and twenty more. He has one hundred acres of fine hay land and handles fifty head of cattle. He has a fine place and his thrift and wisdom have improved it in a first class manner. Mr. Wicks has the following brothers and sisters: Charles, in this county, and mentioned in this volume; William, living in Walton, Wisconsin; John; Helen; Annie, married and living in Sweden. Mr. Wicks is a stanch Republican, and always labors for the success of his party, being intelligent in the questions of the day. Mr. Wicks is a member of the Swedish Brethren in Minneapolis. He is a man who has the good will and approbation of all who know him and stands well in the community.

GEORGE HOLTON. Among the pioneers of the Sandpoint region the subject of this article is to be mentioned as one of the first, being a man of those excellent qualities which make the first class frontiersman. And since the time when he first came here he has steadily engaged in those worthy labors of improvement and development of the new country which have resulted in much good, both in what they have accomplished and in which they have stimulated others to action also.

George Holton was born in Canada, on July 18, 1850, being the son of George and Elizabeth (Buchanan) Holton, natives, respectively, of England and Pennsylvania. The mother was third cousin to President Buchanan. In 1841 they went to Essex county, Canada, and in 1854 they came to Michigan, where the mother died in 1898. The father was drowned during a water-spout in Texas in 1888. Our subject came with his parents to Michigan in 1854, and there he received his education in the public schools, and when thirteen went out in the battle of life for himself. He gave his attention to farming, and in 1886 came to California, thence to Oregon, and on May 3, 1886, he came to Kootenai county, and since that early day he has been a constant resident here. In 1888 he took his present homestead, three miles west from Sandpoint on the Pend Oreille river. For a time he dwelt in Sandpoint, having a residence there, but in 1891 he came to the homestead permanently. He raised the first peaches in this entire section, demonstrating their adaptability to the latitude, and in many other lines he has taken the lead. He has comfortable improvements on the homestead, handles some stock, and does a general farming business.

In 1877 Mr. Holton married Miss Delia A., daughter of C. L. and Sarah Horning, natives of New York, but pioneers to Michigan in an early day, where the father was killed in 1873, but the mother still lives there. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Holton, named as follows: Jay, in Sandpoint; Minnie, wife of Fred Foster, in Sandpoint; Mable, Georgia, Nellie, Edna and Katie, all with parents. Mr. Holton is a true blue Democrat, and active in the political campaigns. He has been delegate to the county conventions almost each electoral year, and was constable in 1888. He is fraternally affiliated with the I. O. O. F.

CHARLES G. WICKS. A capable and well-to-do man, an upright and public-minded citizen and a farmer whose labors have demonstrated him to be both industrious and sagacious, and who has done a good part in developing the county and augmenting its wealth, it is fitting that the subject of this article should be accorded space in the volume that chronicles the history of Kootenai county.

Charles Wicks was born in Oskevek, Sweden, on December 21, 1869, being the son of Erik and Anna (Anderson) Larson, natives of Sweden, where also the father died in 1884, but the mother lives, being wealthy. Our subject was educated in his native land, remained with his parents until he was seventeen and then stepped out from the parental roof to meet the burdens and responsibilities of life for himself. He worked on the neighboring farms for two years, and in 1888 came to America, locating in Butte, Montana, where he chopped cordwood for one year. In 1889 he came to Oden, Kootenai county, and made ties for one summer, doing the same work in Trout creek country, Montana, for one year after that. His next work was on the construction of the Northern Pacific between Missoula and Wallace one year, after which he returned to Oden and cut poles for one winter and then worked on the Great Northern construction for nearly two years. In 1892 he took his present place as a homestead, which has been improved with good buildings and has eighty acres of fine meadow land. He devotes much attention to raising stock and does some farming.

In 1898 Mr. Wicks married Miss Sarah, daughter of Richard and Susannah (Jackson) Palmer, natives of England, who came to the United States in 1870, and now live in Kootenai county. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wicks: Cicel W., Maud and Ethel, twins. Mr. Wicks is a stanch Republican and takes a lively interest in the affairs of the country and community. He is a member of the M. W. A., of Sandpoint, Lodge No. 7191.

ROBERT M. GOOBY. About one mile east from Kootenai we find the home of Mr. Gooby, which land he purchased from the railroad company and has improved in a comfortable manner. He has a good house, barn, out buildings, orchard and other improvements, and does general farming. Mr. Gooby is a man of popularity in his community, and has been for three successive terms elected road supervisor, being at the present writing in that capacity. He is a liberal Democrat, reserving for his own judgment the decision of men and principles rather than tying himself under the lash of any party. He is also committeeman from his precinct.

Robert M. Gooby was born in Littleport, Cambridgeshire, England, on August 17, 1861, being the son of Robert and Mary (Walker) Gooby, natives of England, where the mother still lives, the father having died there in 1891. He was the owner of several canal boats on the Ouse river. Our subject was educated and remained with his parents until 1881, when he came to America, locating first in Illinois, whence six months later he went to Colorado. We see him next in Iowa, then in Dakota, and in 1885 he came west to Washington, thence to Oregon, remaining in the last named place until 1891. In that year Mr. Gooby went to Waterville, Washington, remaining until 1897, in which year he came to Kootenai county, where for a time he contracted timber work and then purchased his present home place, and here he has devoted his labors since that date.

On January 7, 1888, Mr. Gooby married Miss Ellen, daughter of William and Susannah Smith, natives of Southshield, England, and pioneers to America in the early seventies. The father is dead, but the mother still lives. Four children have been born to this household: Mary S., Robert W., Clifford and Bassil. Mr. Gooby is a member of the M. W. A., Sandpoint, No. 7191. He is a popular and highly esteemed man and is one of the real builders of this section of Kootenai county.

PETER LINDSTROM. This industrious and thrifty citizen is now following the calling which occupied his ancestors for many generations back, that of tilling the soil. He has added the industry of logging and is now handling a fine contract of three million feet of timber and three thousand poles.

Peter Lindstrom was born in Gustrickland, Sweden, on June 11, 1861, being the son of John Pearson and Bretta (Olson) Lindstrom, natives also af Sweden, where the father is still farming, but the mother has passed to the world beyond. Our subject received his education in the schools of his native land and remained working with his father until he was twenty-five, when he rented land for himself, and in 1891 bade farewell to home scenes and loving relatives and friends and set his face to the land of the west. He came direct to Spokane, and spent some time in viewing eastern Washington to find a home place for himself. In 1892 he decided to settle on his present place, four and one-half miles west from Sandpoint, and there he has bestowed his labors with wisdom ever since. He is a man of energy, skill and good business judgment, and the result is that he has been prospered, and is one of the men whose labors have resulted in developing the country in a becoming manner. His farm is well improved, and shows the marks of care and thrift. He has a fine large house built in 1900 and some fifteen or twenty head of cattle besides other stock.

While still in Sweden, in 1886, Mr. Lindstrom married Miss Anna, daughter of Peter Anderson and Anna (Pearson) Pearson, natives of Sweden, where they remained until their death. Six children have blessed this happy union, namely: Volfred, Oscar, Mark, August, Angus, Iruns. Mr. Lindstrom was elected on the school board when the district was organized, and has constantly served since, being an ardent supporter of good schools.

ORSON WARNER, a man of stability and self-reliance, who has made the way of life in a successful manner in the western country, is now one of the established and thrifty farmers one-half mile west from Wrencoe. He was born in Fillmore, Millard county, Utah, on May 15, 1858, being the son of Orange and Mary L. Tyler, natives of New York. The family came to Utah in 1852 and settled in Millard. The father died there in 1881 but the mother is still living there. Our subject received a common schooling and when sixteen went to mining. He has in almost all of his labors so contracted that he has always been working for himself. In 1876 he went to work at Fort Hallick, Nevada. Then he took a contract of cutting wood at Tibo, and later went to Fillmore again. He did timber work, bought a farm, later sold and logged, then contracted freighting and grading on the railroad, after which he went to Bullionville, Nevada, and did timber work on contract. After another visit to Fillmore he came to Wood river, in Idaho, in 1885, and thence on to Boise, then to Mineral and for a year he prospected in the Seven Devils country. It was in April, 1892, that Mr. Warner came to Wrencoe, building the first cabin in the town and taking a homestead. He has some land under cultivation, and does a great deal of timber work. He is making a fine farm, and is one of the prosperous men of the section. He had been two years in Kootenai county previous to this time and had taken tie and timber contracts. Mr. Warner has three brothers and three sisters: Cyrus A., Emily M., Rhoda F., Jeddiah G., Levi M., and Eliza A. Mr. Warner is a Democrat in political views, and is active in the campaigns. He was elected to the office of justice of the peace but refused to qualify.

ANDREW LEAF. A pleasant and genial gentleman with a decided turn for business, who has won and retains the esteem and confidence of his fellows, and who is faithfully following the noble work of developing the country, being now a resident on his estate of two hundred acres, four miles west from Sandpoint, the subject of this article is one of the men whose career should be published in the county history.

Andrew Leaf was born in Gustuckland, Sweden, on December 27, 1855, being the son of Andrew and Christena (Anderson) Leaf, natives also of Sweden, where the father died, but the mother still lives, aged eighty-seven. The father of our subject was a ship carpenter in his young days, and his father was an officer in the Swedish army for twenty-five years. Our subject was liberally educated in his native land, being a graduate of one of the leading colleges. His commencement day was in 1877, and then he took a position as bookkeeper in a commercial establishment. He also acted as salesman and later farmed his father's estate for five years. Then he did carpenter work for five years, and the last employment in the old country was piloting on a steamboat. In July, 1891, he came direct to Spokane, and soon thereafter came to the vicinity of his present home. He settled on unsurveyed land, and when the survey came it proved to be railroad land, and Mr. Leaf removed to the next section, where he resides now. He purchased forty acres from the railroad company, and devotes himself to general farming and raising stock. He has a comfortable home and is one of the leading men of his section.

On April 28, 1880, in Sweden, Mr. Leaf married Miss Catherina, daughter of Lars and Annie (Olson) Larson, natives of Sweden, where the father died in 1874, but the mother still lives. Four children were born to the happy union, namely: Andrew R., Jennie C., Conrad L. and Annie C. Mr. Leaf is a stanch Republican, and is able to put forth intelligently the tenets of his party. He is active in county matters and is frequently on the school board.

CAREY CARR. The subject of this review is descended from one of the oldest families in the United States, his ancestors coming hither nearly three hundred years ago. They settled on what was known as the Vanransler tract of land, securing a lease which said they were to have possession of the land as long as water runs and grass grows and they paid a certain rental of grain. The parents of Mr. Carr, Peleg and Jane E. (Genung) Carr, met in Ohio and there were married, later moving to Wisconsin, which was still a territory. In 1846 they located in Jefferson county, whence ten years later they went to Sauk county, and there remained until their death. Our subject was born on November 15, 1857, in Ironton, Sauk county, Wisconsin. There he received an education from the public schools and remained with his parents until he was twenty-one. His next venture was to work on a farm and make cheese for eight years, then he went to Chicago and entered the works of an electric company. Six months later he started in the coal, wood and feed business, continuing for one year. In 1888 Mr. Carr came to Douglas county, Washington, and after four and one-half years in that locality made his way to his present abode, seven miles west from Sandpoint. He settled on unsurveyed land, and is making a good farm and improving it in a becoming manner. He does a general farming business and raises some stock.

In 1887 Mr. Carr married Miss Adaline A., daughter of Roswell and Anna (Bennett) Nett, natives, respectively, of Pennsylvania and France. Two children have been born to this union, Ada E. and Benjamin C. Mr. Carr always takes an active interest in the affairs of the county, and in educational matters has given of his time on the board of trustees, being an advocate of good schools.

CHARLES SMITH. In promoting large enterprises in the west and successfully carrying them out, Mr. Smith has certainly shown remarkable talent and enterprise. As a substantial man, a thrifty farmer, a public-minded citizen and a stanch, upright man, he stands well in the community.

Charles Smith was born in Brunswick, Chariton county, Missouri, on June 10, 1856, being the son of John and Mary Smith. The father was an officer in Company H, First Missouri Cavalry, in the Federal army, and among the many battles in which he participated we may mention Shiloh, Pittsburg Landing, Bull Run, Gettysburg, Spottsylvania, and the siege of Vicksburg, besides many skirmishes. Being so crippled with rheumatism after a terribly trying and hard service, he was discharged on account of disability and came home only to find the bushwhackers destroying everything. One night they surrounded the house and as he arose to get his gun a shot crashed throught the door and seriously wounded his brother, who was sleeping with our subject. Those were trying times and hard to endure. The family suffered terribly and lost nearly all they had. The father never recovered from his sickness and finally died a few years later. Our subject took a trip when a young man to Arkansas and Texas and then back to Missouri. In 1879 he went to Leadville and there freighted and mined, being very successful. In 1880 he fitted up eighteen wagons with eight mules to each one and went to the Black Hills to freight and did exceptionally well, being skilled in handling heavy mining machinery. In 1881 he built an irrigating canal, five miles north of Fort Collins, Colorado, known as the Pooder Valley High Land Canal. It was forty-five miles in length and opens up a vast agricultural territory. In 1882 he transported his outfit to southern Idaho and contracted on the Oregon Short Line. In 1884 he came to Rathdrum and fitted up his mules to pack and operated the largest train into the Coeur d'Alene country, having eighty-three head of stock. He handled all the freight of the Eckard & Wardner Company and did general packing to Eagle City and Murray. In the spring of 1885 he went to Spokane and contracted to move six hundred tons of freight from Spokane to the Little Dalles, on the Columbia river a distance of one hundred and fifty-six miles. Then he took a contract of cutting and baling several hundred tons of hay for the government at Old Mission. Afterwards he took another contract of cutting and baling hay for the government. In 1887 he went to farming and opened a livery stable and in 1890 Mr. Smith came to the reservation and prospected. He located a valuable claim which, however, he did not develop much until 1899; it is known as the Hidden Treasure, and Mr. Smith owns the controlling interest of stock. In 1891 Mr. Smith located his present place, one mile below Lane, on the south side of the river. He does general farming and handles cattle, being prospered in all his labors.

CHARLES SMITH.

FRANK DAHLGREN.

JAMES P. CASEY.

FRANK DAHLGREN. This enterprising and industrious young man has wrought faithfully and skillfully in an active and stirring career, wherein he has gained a suitable success to the excellent vigor and sagacity displayed. He was born in Erbrue Lane, Sweden, on November 15, 1860, being the son of Charles and Greta (Carlson) Dahlgren, natives of Sweden, where the mother resides now, but the father died in 1895. Frank was educated in the schools of his native place and at the age of fourteen quit school and went to learn the art of the puddler in the iron works, confining his efforts to the puddling mill. He labored at this until he was twenty and then came to America, landing here in 1881. He at once went to work at his trade in Trenton, New Jersey, and one and one-half years later came to Pittsburg, then to McKeesport, in each of which places he wrought in the iron works. Next we see him in Des Moines, Iowa, where he spent one year in the coal mines. Then he visited Boulder and Denver, Colorado; Salt Lake City, Utah; Anaconda and Butte, Montana, then in 1890 he came to Spokane. He labored there and also prospected on the Colville reservation, then went to the Palouse country, later to Kalispell, Montana, and finally came in 1893 to his present location one mile northeast from Ramsey in Kootenai county. He took a homestead and bought another quarter from the railroad and built a house and barn and did other improving. He has about fifty acres under cultivation at this time, and has made many improvements so that his place has enhanced much in value.

In political matters Mr. Dalhgren takes an active and intelligent part, supporting the principles of the Republican party. He is a member of the F. O. A., Court No. 14, Rathdrum. He is also a member of the Swedish Lutheran church, and in every way is an exemplary citizen and an upright man.

JAMES P. CASEY. Few men have the skill to handle successfully as many industries as the subject of this sketch carries on, achieving a good success in them, while also he is a man of good standing and is one of the leading citizens of the county of Kootenai.

James P. Casey was born in Waukesha, Wisconsin, on March 19, 1862, being the son of Daniel and Johanna (Carroll) Casey, natives of Ireland, who came to America in 1840. They settled in Waukesha and there the mother died in 1872, but the father still lives on the home place. Our subject was educated in the public schools of his native place and was reared on the farm. At the age of seventeen he went to work for wages and in 1884 he came to Fairfield, Washington. He worked there for wages some and then rented a farm for four years. Next we see him in Kootenai county, and he took a homestead where he now lives, nine miles north from Coeur d'Alene. He has improved it in good shape and made it a fine place. In addition to general farming and raising stock, Mr. Casey handles a fine steam threshing outfit. Also he has a steam hay bailer. In 1899 he bought a steam sawmill which he operates at Heyden lake. All of these enterprises he carries on in a successful and becoming manner and has manifested great skill and ability as well as energy and industry in his career.

The marriage of Mr. Casey occurred in 1897 and the lady becoming his wife was Mary, daughter of Edwin and Jessie (Reid) Crockett. The father was a native of Maine and the mother of Scotland. She came to America when young and they were married in Ohio, where they lived for twenty years and then removed to Missouri. Ten years in that state and we find them in 1890 locating at Heyden lake in this county. Recently they removed to Hoodoo valley and there they reside at this time. To Mr. and Mrs. Casey there have been born three children, James C., Hilda A. and Mary. Mr. Casey was called by the franchises of his fellows to the position of justice of the peace in 1898 which office he filled acceptably for one term, two years. He is a member of the Catholic church and is a consistent supporter of the faith.

JOHN W. RILEY is one of the early pioneers of the northern Kootenai country, and is at the present time operating his farm, one mile west from Laclede, being one of the substantial and highly respected men of this section.

John W. Riley was born in the Willamette valley on January 4, 1857, being the son of Joseph B. and Caroline (Brewer) Riley, natives of Georgia, but immigrants across the plains to western Oregon in 1856. Shortly afterward they went to Thurston county, Washington, where the mother died in 1863. The father moved to Colton, Whitman county, where he died in 1890. Our subject received a common schooling and at the age of fifteen started out in life for himself. He had been raised by his uncle after his sixth year, the time when his mother died. His first venture on the sea of business was work in a saw mill for a year. Then he farmed for the summer and went to the woods for the winter, where he contracted typhoid fever and spent his earnings in recovery. In 1876 he went to Portland to celebrate the fourth of July, and thence he came to Lewiston to see his father, whom he had not visited for ten years. He went to work on a fruit farm for a year and then with his father he bought horses and for twelve years he rode the range. Selling out he went with a partner to Kootenai valley but stopped in Colville. This was in 1886, and being taken with the ague he went to Medical lake to recruit. Thence to Seneaquoteen for one winter, and in the spring he went with the first pack train to Priest Lake, but as one man died they brought him back to Sandpoint. He prospected another season and then took his present homestead, which has been his home since. In addition to doing general farming he operates the mail from Laclede to Valley, having a four-year contract.

In 1889 Mr. Riley married Mrs. Mary Schneider, whose parents were natives of Switzerland, and came to Wisconsin in 1860. By her former husband, Mrs. Riley had one child, Della B. By the second marriage there has been one son born, Joseph H. Mr. Riley is a solid Democrat, and takes an active part in politics, as each citizen should. He was elected justice of the peace in 1898, but refused to qualify. He has frequently been school trustee. At the time of the Nez Perces war Mr. Riley was a bridge builder with General Howard, and for the entire service he received three dollars per day. Mr. Riley is a man of reliability and has the confidence and good will of all.

RUFUS H. GRAVES. This venerable and highly respected gentleman has been a pioneer in various sections and has labored faithfully here for a long time for the substantial development and material progress of the country. At present he is living in Laclede and owns a farm of forty acres near by, which he handles, while also he has various other property.

Rufus H. Graves was born in Hartford, Licking county, Ohio, on March 8, 1821, being the son of Claudias and Electia (Rose) Graves, natives of Massachusetts, but immigrants to Ohio, in 1790, where they lived for forty-seven years. The father was born in 1788 and served in the war of 1812. His father served in the Revolution as a teamster. Our subject received his educational training in the public schools and at the age of twenty-seven went to traveling to various sections of the country; he also did considerable rafting. Then he farmed, and in 1851 he moved to Wisconsin, where he bought a sugar maple farm and did well on that for all the intervening years until 1885, when he sold and came to Kootenai county. He used to make many hundreds of pounds of maple sugar and much syrup. In Kootenai county he turned his attention to raising stock and hay and did well until 1901, when he sold his place and returned to Wisconsin, where he visited for one year and then came back to the west and bought his present place, which he handles now, dwelling in town.

In September, 1850, Mr. Graves married Miss Hester A., daughter of Henry and Jane Knoll, natives of New York and Canada, respectively. Seven children have been born to this happy union, four of whom are living, named as follows: Henry, married and living in Laclede; Effie, wife of John Campfield: Hattie and Nettie, twins, the former married to Lawrence Lutz, and the latter to Edward Lutz, both living in Appleton, Wisconsin. Mr. Graves is an active Republican, and always is influential in the campaigns. He is a man who has won, in his long residence here, the unbounded esteem and good will of all who may have the pleasure of his acquaintance, and he and his gracious life partner are now passing the golden years of their well spent life in the quiet enjoyment of the good things which their faithful labors have provided.

ANDREW CHRISTENSON. The town of Laclede owes its existence to the indefatigable and intelligent labors of the subject of this article, and he is eminently fitted for representation in this volume.

Andrew Christenson was born on the Island of Lolland, Denmark, on March 1, 1862, being the son of Hans and Johanna (Erikson) Christenson, natives of Denmark, where they remained until the time of their death. They were the parents of five children: Andrew, our subject; Martin, in Kansas; Hilda Jorgensen, in Denmark; Christian, in Denmark; Thorvald, on the old homestead in Denmark. Andrew was educated in the public schools until fourteen and then worked for his parents until he was eighteen, and then, it being 1880, he came to the United States. He railroaded for two years, then worked in a store for six years and in 1888 came west, and after a visit to the Sound came to Kootenai county and located where Seneaquoteen was afterward established. He started a store in 1891 and was postmaster. For eleven years he continued there and then sold out and bought his present place, one-half mile south from Laclede. Through the efforts of Mr. Christenson the station was at last established, and he started a saw mill, which was sold two years later to J. M. Bunker, and a year or so afterward a stock company was formed, and Mr. Christenson took a large interest in it. During 1902 he was manager of the mill, and also the large store which the company handles in connection with the plant. They also have a large shingle mill and are capitalized for one hundred thousand dollars. They are doing a good business and are known as the Laclede Lumber Company. Mr. Christenson has a fine residence on his land, which numbers nearly two hundred acres, and sixty acres are handled to meadow. In addition to their lumber, shingle, and mercantile business they deal in poles, piling and all cedar products, owning their own switch and all conveniences for the carrying on of their extensive business.

In 1885 Mr. Christenson married Miss Mary, daughter of Peter and Anna Elizabeth Peterson, natives of Denmark, who came to America in 1866. They located at Alden, Minnesota, and farmed until 1882, when the father died; the mother still lives on the old homestead with her youngest son. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Christenson: Hilda, Peter, Andrew, Anna, Olga, Robert A., and Victor. Mr. Christenson is a Republican and a strong supporter of those salutary principles. In 1896 he was nominated against the fusionist, A. N. Tucker, for county commissioner, but was defeated as were the other candidates for office on his ticket. He is a member of the Masonic and the K. O. T. M. orders. He and his wife belong to the Danish Lutheran church.

REUBEN J. SAGE. The occupations of farming, stockraising and logging, have busied the subject of this article for the years in which he has resided in Kootenai county and he is considered one of the leading and successful men of the community.

Reuben J. Sage was born in Grand Haven, Michigan, on September 5, 1863, being the son of James and Lydia (Budd) Sage, natives of Michigan. The father was a lumberman and did business there until 1877, when he came to Conconully, Washington, and he died in 1899, July 14. Our subject was educated in his native place and at the age of ten started out in life for himself. He learned the bakery business, continuing in it for three years in Marinette, Wisconsin. At thirteen he went to Matinique, Michigan, and there learned the blacksmith trade. After eighteen months at it he quit and went to the woods. He ran a camp for a Minneapolis house for four years out of Ashland, Wisconsin, and in 1892 he came to Kootenai county. After due search, he settled his present homestead, about two miles east from Laclede. He settled to improving and culturing the same and has a fine orchard, good buildings and handles considerable stock. During the winter months Mr. Sage does much logging, having a fine outfit and being a skillful hand in this capacity. He puts up about sixty tons of hay each year and also raises considerable general farm produce.

In Michigan, on March 12, 1883, Mr. Sage married Miss Minnie, daughter of Cuthbert and Catherine (Monroe) Cournyer, natives of Canada. They came to Michigan in 1865, where Mrs. Sage was born August 26, 1867, and there the father died in 1901 and the mother in 1892. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sage: Nora C., Cuthbert J., Ruby M., James H., Lony J., and Grace. Mr. Sage is liberal in politics, is an independent thinker and always takes an active part in the campaigns in the county. He and his wife are members of the Catholic church and are devout in their faith.

THOMAS S. CAMPBELL. While the subject of this article is one of the prosperous farmers of northern Kootenai county, his land is so situated that he has the privilege of living in the town of Laclede, where the family residence is at present. He was born in Poysippi, Wisconsin, on January 6, 1866, being the son of Thomas and Kate (Wilson) Campbell, natives of Ireland and England. They came to America in 1852, locating in Wisconsin where they lived for thirty-four years, then removed to Sprague, Washington, where they now reside, the father eighty and the mother seventy. They raised twelve children: Ellen, wife of O. P. Shepherd, in Hartline, Washington; Kate S. Hess, in Laclede; Mary Graves, also in Laclede; Luke, in Sprague; Jim, married and living at Wrencoe; Jane Summers, in Poysippi; Thomas S., our subject; William, in Sprague; Frank, in Laclede; Robert, in Sprague and two that died in infancy. Our subject was educated in the public schools and when sixteen started for himself. In 1886 he came to Sprague and soon bought a dairy, where he did business for fifteen months. Then he worked in the railroad shops in Sprague and in August, 1890, he came to Kootenai county. He took a homestead and bought thirty-four acres of railroad land. In 1900 Mr. Campbell sold twenty-five acres to Andrew Christenson for a mill site. Mr. Campbell has fifty acres cultivated, puts up considerable hay and handles some stock.

In 1892 Mr. Campbell married Miss Edith, daughter of Francis and Elmina (Biggers) Markham, natives of Illinois and Missouri, whence they came to Oregon when young and there met and married. After many years of residence there they came to Kootenai county, where they still live. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell: Mina K., Henry, died May 16, 1898; Francis A.; James J.; Oscar, died September 16, 1902. In political matters Mr. Campbell is an active Democrat and was the starter of the petition that gave them their present school district, in which he has been trustee since. He is a member of the K. of P., Red Cross Lodge, Spokane. Mr. Campbell is one of the substantial and respected men of this section and stands well with all.

ADOLPH MILLER. Because of the labors of such men as the subject of this sketch, Kootenai county is becoming one of the well settled and thriving counties of the state and it is with pleasure that we are able to record these faithful labors.

Adolph Miller was born in Baden, Germany, on February 29, 1868, being the son of Rudolph and Elizabeth (Shoepflen) Miller, natives of Switzerland and Baden, respectively. The father migrated to Baden and there married and settled down to farming until 1877, when he died. The mother came to America and died in 1887, in New York. Our subject was educated in the public schools in his native place and in 1883 came to Erie county, New York, with his mother. He worked on farms until he was of age and then, in 1887, came to Sprague, Washington. He wrought on a dairy farm for one year and then drove a herd of cattle to Kootenai county. Then he repaired to Portland and for three years he wrought at bridge work. Two years following this he worked in a brick yard, at this time he bought fifty acres of land near New Era, Oregon, but later sold it. In 1897 he came to his present place, about one mile east from Wrencoe, across the river. He took a quarter section of government land, improved it with buildings, as cabin, barn, and so forth and settled down to farming and raising stock. He now has a good frame house, barn, sixty acres under fence and cultivation and a bunch of stock. He has also a million feet of good saw timber. Mr. Miller is one of the substantial men of the community and has been prospered because of his thrift and industry. He has two brothers and one sister: Fred, Ernest, Mary, wife of C. E. Barger, in Kootenai county. Mr. Miller was married in Spokane, Washington, on December 27, 1902, to Miss Effie M. Barger, formerly of St. Joseph, Missouri, but lately employed by the telephone company of Spokane.

CYRUS B. SHEAR. A prosperous young farmer and stockman, whose labors have demonstrated him to be possessed both of skill and integrity, while he has a wealth of executive force, it is quite fitting that he should be accorded representation in the history of his county.

Cyrus B. Shear was born in Salt Lake City, on September 21, 1869, being the son of Edward A. and Annie (Stewart) Shear, especial mention of whom occurs in another portion of the work. The family went to Provo City, Utah, when our subject was small and there he was educated in the common schools and in the Brigham Young Academy. He remained with his parents in the various places where they lived until the time of his majority, when he took up work in the Park City mines until 1891, then journeyed as far as Kootenai county, settling in his present place, two miles south from Wrencoe. He has one hundred and twenty acres, well cultivated and improved with good buildings, which supports a goodly number of stock. He raises a hundred tons of hay annually and keeps sufficient stock to consume it all.

On November 20, 1890, Mr. Shear married Miss Louise, daughter of Charles and Mary A. (Essicks) Cook, natives of England. They came to America in 1873 and after a three years' residence in Chicago removed to Denver, Colorado, where Mr. Cook died. Later they all came to Salt Lake City, where the mother still lives. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Shear: William H., Edward C., Joseph E., Ralph M., and Mable L. In political matters Mr. Shear is a liberal and independent thinker. In June, 1899, Mr. Shear was elected school trustee and called the first meeting to set off a new district. He is a supporter of good schools and is a laborer in the line of general progress. Mrs. Shear is a member of the Latter Day Saint church.

JAMES NELSON. Mr. Nelson has done a lion's share in the development of the west, laboring with an energy and skill that have brought their own success. At the present he is handling his estate on one quarter section, one mile south from Valley, where he does a general farming business, raises stock, and is doing a first-class job in improvement.

James Nelson was born in TornbeSogen, Denmark, on September 22, 1851, being the son of Neils Jensen and Johanna Marie (Micheals) Dater, natives also of Denmark, where they remained until the time of their death. James received a common schooling, and worked out from the time he was ten, until he was fourteen, going to school, however, in the winters. When fourteen he went to do for himself, herding cattle and farming. Mr. Nelson desired to get in the marine service, but not being tall enough was detailed for the land force. That not being to his taste, he left Denmark and came to Pennsylvania, thence to California, then to Fraser river country and at the time of constructing the Northern Pacific he came to Idaho and wrought here between Spokane and Rathdrum for a period. He then took a squatter's right on surveyed land on Eight-mile Prairie, later sold it and built a schooner for the Pend Oreille lake and did freighting for a couple of years. Selling this, he came to his present place and took a squatter's right and homesteaded as soon as surveyed. This was in 1887, thus making Mr. Nelson one of the early pioneers of this section. He has over one hundred acres under cultivation and raises stock in addition to doing general farming. Good buildings, orchard, fencing and other substantial improvements are in evidence on the farm and testify to the faithful and wise labor of our subject.

On June 6, 1888, Mr. Nelson married Miss Emma B. Long, of Nashville, Tennessee. She came, in 1886, to Sandpoint, Idaho, where she met and married Mr. Nelson. Mrs. Nelson has been in the work of the educator for a number of years, teaching four terms before she left Tennessee. She also taught two years in Idaho, and is now school clerk. One child has been born to this happy union, Grace J., now in school. Mr. Nelson is independent in politics. He resigned the office of road supervisor. Mr. Nelson is a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 67, at Priest River. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are widely known and highly respected, being capable, upright and enterprising people of excellent standing.

EDWARD A. SHEAR. As one is known by his work, so it is right that one's work should praise him. Surely in this case before us, it is but right to state that the subject of this article has been one of the most active and successful mechanical engineers in this portion of the west and it is with pleasure that we accord him representation in this volume.

Edward A. Shear was born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, on January 5, 1850, being the son of John B. and Ann Robinson, natives of Vermont and New York, respectively. They came to Grand Rapids and later moved to Lowell, where they died. The father had been a successful operator in the lumber and general merchandise business. Edward was educated in Grand Rapids and went with his parents to Lowell, where he learned well the business of his father and also was well trained in the line of mechanical engineer, being apt at this calling from the start. While still a young man he came to Sedalia, Missouri, and took charge of a large mercantile establishment, which he closed out in 1870, for the owners. Next he went to Texas and shortly was in Salt Lake City with a bunch of cattle. He soon went to the mines and in that capacity he has wrought more or less since. He soon gained the name of the Nevada mill builder. He built the largest cyanide mill in the world and a thirty stamp mill in the Custer City district in Idaho. He also superintended the Raymond, which was twelve hundred feet deep, and Eli mines in Nevada. He built two mills in the Wood river country and put up the first mill in the Okanogan country, for ex-governor Lawton. Mr. Shear also erected the Last Chance mill in Bingham, Utah, and the Crescent and the Glencoe mills at Park City, Utah. He did other work at Park City and also put up the hoisting works of the Lady of the Lake Anchor mines and the Cactus concentrator at Copper Gulch, near Frisco, Utah. In 1901 he put up the works on the Wabash, in Park City and also the large saw mill at Sandpoint. He erected the cyanide mill in the Seven Devils country and many others in the last thirty years. In 1891 Mr. Shear came to Kootenai county and bought a relinquishment of his present place in Wrencoe, which he has improved until it is one of the finest places in the entire county; he handles many tons of hay and lots of stock each year. Mr. Shear is also interested personally in different mines and is a man of commanding ability and force in his profession, having demonstrated this in many excellent works.

In 1874, Mr. Shear married Miss Annie Stewart, whose parents were natives of Utah. The wedding occurred in Silver City, Utah. Two children have been born to this union: Cyrus B., married and living in this county; William, with his parents. Mr. Shear is a man whose labors are well known all over the west and is in demand by the best mining companies, having made a very enviable record. He is esteemed by all who know him and is counted in his home place as one of the best of neighbors and a genuine gentleman, genial and affable. He is now engaged in a general merchandise business at Wrencoe, Idaho.

DONALD O. MERRITT, a stirring young gentleman of whom we now speak, is one of the later settlers in Kootenai county, having a farm one and one-half miles south from Wrencoe. He is a man of energy and patriotism and is doing a first class work in the improvement of his place.

Donald O. Merritt was born in Streator, Illinois, on December 19, 1875, being the son of Jay K. and Ella (Morris) Merritt, natives respectively of Michigan and Canada. The mother came to the United States when ten years of age, settling in Streator. The family remained there until later years when Mr. Merritt brought them all to the Hoodoo valley in Idaho, where the parents now reside. Our subject received his education in Streator mostly, and when he came west he took hold with a trusty pioneer spirit and is the proud possessor of a record equal to any. In 1898 he enlisted in Company B, of the Idaho Volunteers, and went to war in the Philippines. He fought in the battles of Manila, Santa Ana, and Calookan and was then taken sick and languished in the hospital in that tropical climate until July, when his regiment was ordered home and he was able to join them before they sailed for San Francisco. He was mustered out in San Francisco after a continual service of sixteen months and came home via Boise. He was taken sick in May, 1899, left Manila July 31, and was mustered out on September 29. He wrought in the woods the following winter and in 1901 bought his present place, which he has begun to develop in good shape. He has twenty-five acres under tribute to crops, comfortable buildings and is handling some stock.

On December 25, 1901, Mr. Merritt married Miss Maggie L., daughter of Harry and Ellen White, natives of Kansas. They came to Spokane Prairie, Washington, in 1891 and reside there now. Mrs. Merritt has one sister, Jennie, with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Merritt are members of the Seven Day Advent church. They are young people of good standing and are a valuable acquisition to the society of the community.

HANS L. JORGENSEN is an enterprising agriculturist and stockman and also one of the leading citizens of his home community, where he is highly respected and known as a substantial and upright man.

Hans L. Jorgensen was born in Hoithorthrup county, Denmark, on November 20, 1850, being the son of Peter and Esther (Larsen) Jorgensen, also natives of the same place, where the father died in 1887, aged sixty-four, and the mother in 1898. The father was a teacher in the public schools and after forty years of this commendable labor he received a pension from the government. The paternal grandfather of our subject, Jens Jorgensen, was also a teacher and pensioned for his services. King Christian, the Ninth, gave him a medal of decoration for his long service. He celebrated his silver, golden, and diamond wedding in the same district where he had taught for so long. He died aged ninety-four and his wife preceded him one month, being ninty-three. Our subject received a first-class education and at the age of twenty graduated from the Royal High Agricultural School in Copenhagen. Then came six months' service in the army and after that he was the favored one whose lot was drawn to be allowed to spend his time at home. He remained for some years on his uncle's farm, drilling one month each year in the army and then operated two years each on two different farms as foreman. He also conducted a dairy farm for some time. In 1880, Mr. Jorgensen came to America, locating in Muskegon, Michigan, where he wrought in a saw mill. Then we see him in Racine, Wisconsin, the next spring he went to Duluth, then to Dakota, where he rented a farm near Valley City for one year. Next he migrated to Spokane, where two and one-half years were spent, and in 1890 Mr. Jorgensen came to his present place, in Valley, where he has dwelt since. He bought a squatter's right for sixty dollars, has done fine improving on his land, has a goodly herd of cattle and raises general produce.

On February 10, 1895, Mr. Jorgensen married Mrs. Catherine A., widow of Karl J. Agergaard, of Lemrig, in Jutland, Denmark. He died in Minnesota in 1886. Mrs. Jorgensen was born in Denmark in 1851, March 14, and there was educated. Her parents, Frederick M. and Frederica (Knebus) Becher, were natives of Denmark, where they now live aged eighty-five and eighty-four, respectively. After her first husband's death, Mrs. Jorgensen went to Oshkosh, Wisconsin, thence to Laramie, Wyoming, later to Walla Walla, thence to Portland, and finally to Kootenai county, where she met and married Mr. Jorgensen, as stated. She has one child by her former marriage, Dana B., going to school. Mrs. Jorgensen is a member of Danish Sisterhood Lodge No. 8, at Oshkosh, Wisconsin. She and her husband are members of the Lutheran church. Mr. Jorgensen is an independent thinker in political matters and has been active in the realm of good government and progression. He was at the Populist convention in 1894 and in 1902 was elected justice of the peace by the Republicans. He has also served on the school board, being a supporter of good schools.

WILLIAM R. HOAR. This enterprising and capable gentleman is possessed of more than the ordinary pluck and determination since he has, in spite of the severest obstacles, wrought his way to success and showed his ability to overcome.

William R. Hoar was born in Pointe De Bute, Westmoreland county, New Brunswick, Canada, on April 4, 1848, being the son of Archibald and Miranda (Wells) Hoar, natives of the same place. The mother died many years since, but the father lived until 1888. He was a harness maker and owned a shop of his own. William received a common schooling, spent one year in Amherst college and then learned the harness makers trade from his father, which he followed for three years. Subsequent to that, he went to sea for six years and then learned the tanner's art, operating a plant of his own for three years and in 1879 came to British Columbia and opened a tannery on the Fraser river. In 1884 he sold out and came to Auburn, King county, Washington, where he opened a store, also was postmaster and had a telephone office. This occupied him until 1890, when he sold out and came to Ellensburg, Washington, from which point he prospected and worked on the railroad until 1896. During this time, he had the great misfortune to lose one of his arms, which laid him up for one year. Arising from this bed of suffering and hardship, Mr. Hoar again confronted the battles of life and although thus hampered, he bravely set his face for success. In 1898 he came to his present place, in Valley, where he bought land and went to farming and raising stock. He has made an excellent showing here and is on the road to a fitting success.

On January 24, 1876, Mr. Hoar married Miss Mary J., daughter of Burton and Caroline (King) Chappell, natives of Nova Scotia, where they remained until the time of their death. Three children have been born to this union: Herbert C., living in Spokane; William G., also in Spokane; Virgil, attending school in Spokane. Mr. Hoar is a stanch Republican and takes an active part. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M., Lodge No. 60, at Auburn. Mrs. Hoar is a member of the F. U. of America.

ANDREW A. MERRITT. In the financial realm Mr. Merritt is a prosperous farmer and stockman. Politically he is influential and a stanch Republican. In 1902 he was nominated by his party for county commissioner from the second district against S. H. Watkins, Democrat. He has been influential since his residence here, in all the conventions and caucuses and is now one of the substantial and capable men of this section.

Andrew A. Merritt was born in Lansing, Tompkins county, New York, in 1860, being the son of Thomas and Eliza (King) Merritt, natives of New York. In 1862 they removed to Michigan, where the father died in 1868, the mother residing there a decade longer and then removing to Streator, Illinois. In 1889 she came to Kootenai county, where she died in 1895. Andrew received his education in the various places where the family lived, remaining with his mother until 1878, when he started in life for himself: He married soon and moved to Illinois where he wrought at the carpenter's trade. Then he went to Colorado and there wrought for two years. In 1883 he was in Colfax and there did carpentering, also handled a farm and in 1887 he came to his present place, about two and one-half miles southwest from Valley. Here he has resided since and in addition to the homestead, he bought a forty acre tract of timber land. He has improved his place in fine shape; has considerable stock and raises much poultry.

In Eaton county, Michigan, in 1879, Mr. Merritt married Miss Cora E., daughter of Cyrus and Emma Cowan. In 1883 he got a divorce and has not married since. Mr. Merritt has always conducted himself so as to win the esteem and approbation of all who knew him and is a popular and upright man. He has been elected road overseer for a number of terms. He is a member of the K. O. T. M.

CHARLES GERTUM. Adjoining the hamlet of Valley lies the estate of our subject, to which he acquired title by the homestead right and he now devotes himself to the improvement and cultivation of the farm, having demonstrated himself to be a progressive, capable and upright man, which has given him the confidence and esteem of the people.

Charles Gertum was born on June 21, 1851, in Brooklyn, New York, being the son of Charles and Helen (Dick) Gertum, natives of Mayence, Germany, that place being on the Rhine. On account of taking part in the rebellion in Germany in 1848, the father was forced with Carl Schurz, General Sigel and others to flee that country. He located in New York and followed merchandising and in 1851 went to Brazil where he did an importing and exporting business until 1860, in which year he returned to the United States. In 1861 he bought a truck farm near Brooklyn and operated that for two years and then sold out and moved to Brooklyn where he was elected justice of the peace and continued in the office for twenty-seven years. He died in 1894; his wife had died in 1871. Charles received his elementary training in the common schools, then spent three years under private instruction and in 1867 graduated from Tuner College. Then he took up the art of the carpenter and builder and mastered it in due time. In 1884 he came to Minnesota, settling in Ottertail county, and farmed there for five years. In 1889 he returned to New York to take charge of building a block and in 1890 he came back to Hubbard county and wrought at his trade for four years, when he came to his present location. He has thirty acres cultivated and his farm improved with buildings, orchard, fence, and so forth. He handles stock and puts up some hay. In political matters Mr. Gertum is a Democrat and has done good work in promoting the schools of his vicinity. He is now justice of the peace and has served six years as clerk of the school board. Mr. Gertum is a charter member of the F. O. A., Court No. 18, at Priest River.

JAY K. MERRITT. The men who open the country for settlement are the ones who do the hard work and are called upon to stand all kinds of hardships and endure various deprivations, more than can be enumerated, and surely are deserving of especial mention when the history of their county is written. Our subject was one of this worthy band who opened Kootenai county and is now living three miles south from Valley on land that he has cleared and improved by his own labor.

Jay K. Merritt is the son of Thomas O. and Eliza M. (King) Merritt, natives of Cayuga county, New York. In 1861 they removed to Eaton county, Michigan, where the father died about 1870, and the family came on to Streator, Illinois. In 1888 the mother came to the home of our subject in this county and here she died aged eighty-two years. She had raised ten children, nine boys and one girl, five of whom are still living, Carrie, wife of E. B. Smith, in Coldwater, Michigan; Jay K., our subject; Otis and Andrew, both in this county; Frank, married and living in Streator, Illinois. Jay K. was born in Tompkins county, New York, on April 6, 1845, and there he received a common schooling. He remained with his mother until he was twenty-seven. In 1861 he began to learn the carpenter's trade and in 1868 came to Streator, where Mr. Merritt followed his trade for many years. In 1889 he came to Kootenai county and selected his present place. It was wild country with no neighbors near. He was obliged to erect his house and buildings without the aid of a team, later he bought a pair of bullocks which he broke to harness and afterwards traded for a span of horses; the joy of getting his first span of horses to replace the stub-born and slow oxen impressed itself firmly on Mr. Merritt. He has good buildings, fine well, good orchard, and all other improvements needed. Mr. Merritt devoted much attention to raising stock until 1896, when an under current broke out on his meadow and since he has been unable to get on it. He contemplates draining it as it is a very valuable piece of land.

On October 7, 1873, Mr. Merritt married Miss Ella A., daughter of Prince W. and Elizabeth (Carey) Morris, natives of England. They came to Canada when young and to the United States in 1851, locating in LaSalle, Illinois, where the father died in 1858, having reared seven children. The mother is now the wife of 'Squire Blakely. Mr. Merritt is an active Republican, especially in school matters. He was the first to agitate the question of getting a school and has since served as director with wisdom. Mrs. Merritt is a member of the Presbyterian church.

ALBERT H. NOBLE. In the person of the subject of this article we have one who has weathered the adversity and panicky times that strewed the country with so many financial wrecks, and has now come to be one of the prosperous farmers of northern Kootenai county, while he started here in the very midst of these times with no capital except a good stock of courage and determination that he would win. A detailed account of his career will be interesting to all.

Albert H. Noble was born in Monroe county, West Virginia, on January 26, 1852, being the son of Sepher and Emeline (Bocok) Noble, natives of Virginia. They moved to West Virginia and there farmed until their death. They raised two children. The father died when our subject was an infant and the mother married Joshua Morris in 1854. They raised five children. Albert received a good common schooling and remained with his mother in the work of the farm until he was nineteen and then in 1871, he went to Ohio and packed salt in the works there for one year. After this he returned to his native place in West Virginia and there farmed until 1887. In that year he came with his family to Sprague, Washington, thence to Wilbur and then operated a restaurant in Tyler. It was 1891 when he came to Kootenai county and for two years he chopped cord wood. In 1894 he filed on his present place, one-half mile north from Athol. With his own hands he built a house, a barn and out buildings and when they came to count their assets they found that one dollar and twenty-five cents was the sum total of cash, and they had a small stock of provisions. The times had been hard and the wages low for wood cutting in the two years previous and Mr. Noble had only succeeded in supporting the family. Now, a bunch of thieving tramps stole all the provisions and the cash, when all chanced to be absent from the cabin and it was evident that a crisis was on hand. This was the awful time of panic in this country and Mr. Noble sought in every direction to provide for his needs. Soon he secured a part of a contract from a man to cut wood for the railroad, and with his son, twelve years of age, he succeeded in getting enough cut and hauled to weather them through, and little by little he began to improve his place. He has a good farm, is all out of debt, has some stock and is on the road to a gratifying competence.

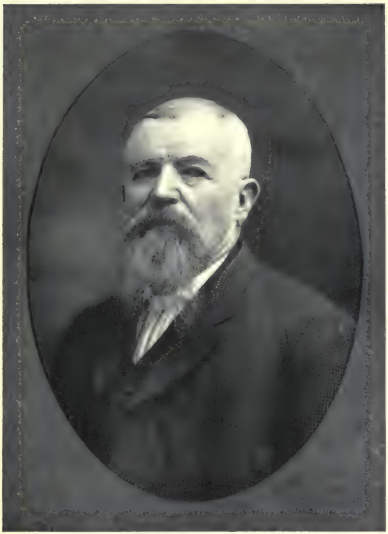
On November 9, 1875, Mr. Noble married Miss Harriet, daughter of Juble and Lucinda Paine, natives of Virginia, who removed to West Virginia and there remained until their death. They were parents of four girls. Mr. and Mrs. Noble have three children: Louise, deceased; Albert, married and living in Granite; Mary, wife of Albert Sniders in Spokane. Mr. Noble is a Republican and serves on the school board. He and his wife are devout members of the Baptist church. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. Pine Lodge, No. 75, in Athol.



ULYSSIS G. SMITH. About one mile south from Granite one finds the home of Mr. Smith, which is a valuable place, and which he is improving in a thrifty way, devoting himself both to general farming and to raising stock, of which he has about thirty head at the present time.

Ulyssis G. Smith was born in Huntington, Indiana, on July 16, 1865, being the son of John and Elizabeth (McClure) Smith, natives of Indiana, and later they moved to Michigan, where they now live. Our subject went with the family to the vicinity of Lansing and there received his education in the common schools and finished it in a business college. When eighteen he began labor for himself and for a time wrought on the neighboring farms and in Lansing. Later he was in Richmond, Indiana, working for the Adams Express Company. In 1889 he came to Seattle and there wrought at contracting for a time. Then he visited Yakima and spent one year on a farm and also one season on the Yakima reservation farming. After this he sold his stock and came to Colfax and conducted a wood yard for a time. Next he took a contract of cutting three hundred cords of wood near Rockford and after completing that he came to his present place, having also spent some time in Rathdrum. He is one of the enterprising farmers of the community and is doing well, while he maintains an untarnished reputation among all.

In June, 1900, Mr. Smith married Miss Addie Shyter, whose parents are natives of Michigan. They came to Wisconsin and in 1888 made the journey to Kootenai county, where they now live. One child has been born to this union, Ivadell T. In political matters Mr. Smith is a firm Republican but is an independent thinker. He is a member of the M. W. A. at Athol.

CAPTAIN PETER C. SORENSEN. Among the very first who settled in the vicinity of Coeur d'Alene and having maintained a steady residence since those early days, a man who has done a lion's share in the development of the resources of the county, while also he has made rapid strides in the business world, where he has accumulated a fine property, the gentleman whose name appears above is one to be represented in the history of his county, since also he is a man of stanch integrity, and is a substantial and capable citizen, intelligent and upright.

It will be interesting to note the details of his successful life so we append the following. Peter C. Sorensen was born in Krogro, Norway, on December 25, 1833, being the son of Samuel and Margaret (Christensen) Sorensen, natives of Norway, where they remained on a farm until the time of their death. Six boys and six girls were the children of this family. Peter C. was privileged to attend school six weeks of each year until he was sixteen, when he took up the stone cutter's trade. He came to America in 1866, locating in Depere, Wisconsin. There he built two smelting furnaces and worked for the Fox River Iron Company for eleven years. Then he came to the Sound and soon returned to Coeur d'Alene. He built a steamboat for the government, known as Amelia Wheaten, the first boat on the lake, of which he was captain for three years. He named all the points about the lake, such as Cougar bay, Collin bay, East point, West point, and many others. He also explored the Coeur d'Alene river and dug through the bar that hindered navigation. Then Captain Sorensen gave his attention to building ships and more or less since that time he has labored at this intricate craft, in which he has done some excellent work. He built the Spokane a passenger boat, and has just completed a ship to be known as the Colfax, which was launched on July 24, 1902. Captain Sorensen has also constructed for himself a fine hotel of twenty-one rooms, in the heart of the town, while he has a fine residence two miles across the lake, which place is known as Northcape. He has two good cottages, also six hundred fruit trees. And as an ornament the Captain has constructed a prohibition church eight feet square and the same height, entirely made of bottles of all kinds. He has also constructed a sun dial, known as the Coeur d'Alene. He has also a Marconi wireless telegraphic paraphernalia complete. These things demonstrate the genius and excellent taste of the Captain and make his home place one of the most attractive and pleasant on the lake.

CAPT. PETER C. SORENSEN

In 1854 Captain Sorensen married Miss Marie, daughter of Ole and Hilga Olesen, natives of Norway, where they remained until their death. This estimable lady died in 1861, leaving one child, Christine, now Mrs. Amanuel Hosle, who is landlady of the Sorensen hotel. Captain Sorensen is an active and ardent Republican and for three years, from 1888 to 1891, he was a member of the town board. He is a member of the A. F. & A. M. and is one of the most affable and genial men of the county.

SAMUEL H. WATKINS. This well known merchant of Athol and dealer in lumber products is one of the real pioneers of northern Kootenai county and has the distinction of opening the first mercantile establishment in Athol, where he has continued since, now doing a fine business.

Samuel H. Watkins was born in Detroit, Michigan, on March 4, 1850, being the son of Washington and Mary A. (Hendricks) Watkins, natives of New York. The mother died in Cleveland, Ohio, in December, 1875, and the father died the following year. The father had served in the Mexican war and they were the parents of five children: Steven E., deceased; Benjamin, deceased; Mary H., living in Detroit; Sarah B., married to Mr. Stevens, an attorney in Detroit; Samuel H., our subject. He was educated in Detroit and Ypsilanti and then completed a course in the state normal in 1868. When eighteen he went to Cleveland and learned the harness trade, following it until 1872. Then he enlisted in the Fourth Regular Cavalry and served through the Indian wars in New Mexico and Texas under General McKenzie. He re-enlisted in the First Regular Cavalry under General Grover, uncle of Grover Cleveland. Serving his five years, he came to the coast and then to Colfax, Washington. From there he went to the Coeur d'Alenes at the time of the gold excitement in 1883. Later he went to work on the Northern Pacific. In 1888 he opened a general merchandise establishment in Ritzville, Washington, under the firm name of Bellamy & Watkins, which he continued until 1895, the time he came to Athol, erected a store and brought his stock hither. During his stay at Ritzville Mr. Watkins made a trip to New Hampshire.

On January 16, 1879, Mr. Watkins married Miss Mattie E., daughter of Jeremiah and Sarah A. (Brown) Freeman, natives of New Hampshire, where they still reside, being in the shoe manufacturing business. They were the parents of ten children: Charles W., married and living in New Hampshire; Lizzie A., wife of George Adam, living in New Brunswick; Albert, deceased; Frank, married and living in New Hampshire; Orrin G., married in Massachusetts; Hattie, wife of Samuel E. Noyse, in New Hampshire; Bert, deceased; Harry O., single and living with parents; Lucius R., married and living in New Hampshire. Our subject has three children: Earl F., Mark O. and Glen E. Politically Mr. Watkins is a Democrat and on September 12, 1901, he was appointed by Governor Hunt to the position of county commissioner. He was nominated for county commissioner in 1902. Mr. Watkins has taken great interest in organizing districts forty-nine and sixty-four in Kootenai county, and is a champion for good schools. Mr. Watkins is affiliated with the I. O. O. F., Pine Lodge, No. 75, of Athol; and is also a member of the K. P. of Rathdrum. He and his wife are also members of the Rebekahs, Evergreen Lodge, No. 51. They attend the Methodist church and are good people and have done very much for the upbuilding of the place and this portion of the county.

IRA L. YOUNG. Deeds speak louder than words and the best introduction to the life of this enterprising and successful man is to recount, as fully as space will allow, his deeds of labor and his achievements.

Ira L. Young was born in Davenport, Iowa, on May 10, 1863, being the son of Jethro J. and Margaret E. (Ferguson) Young, natives of Pennsylvania. The family settled in that colony long before the Revolution and both the great-grandfathers of our subject fought in that conflict. His mother's grandfather lost two children by Indian massacre and all his property, while the ones suffering in the terrible Gilbert massacre in early days were his relatives. The parents came to Illinois, thence to Iowa, and later to North Dakota, where the mother died and then the father returned to Jasper county, Iowa, and is living there now. Ira gained his education from the schools where the family lived in his minority and when seventeen commenced working out on adjacent farms but made his home with his parents until twenty. Then he went to North Dakota, herded cattle, farmed and dug wells until 1895, when he went with a good outfit to thresh and the Great Northern engines set fire to his property through prairie fires and destroyed it all. He experienced great inconvenience in the blizzards in that country also, living one week on potatoes, as the weather precluded a trip for supplies. He took a timber claim there and still owns it. The losses of nearly six thousand dollars worth of property in the fire spoken of occurred in 1895, and he went to work by the day for a time and in 1897 he left Turtle mountains with a pack train of six horses for Washington. He left the horses for the winter in Horse Plaines, Montana, and the next spring went back from Spokane for them and found they had all been eaten by grizzly bears and mountain lions. He then came to Athol, bought a quarter of railroad land and settled down, but he had not a dollar and so went to work to get supplies and then he improved his place in good shape. In 1901 Mr. Young went to the Palouse country and there lost his wife. He then went to Yakima and there labored and took a desert claim, which he still owns. In 1902 Mr. Young came back to his present place, one-half mile west from Athol and resides there now. He has over two thousand acres of land, which he has accumulated in the last five years.

On February 9, 1900, Mr. Young married Mrs. Malissa E. Coursor, of Buffalo, Missouri, and on September 8, 1901, she died. Mr. Young is a charter member of the M. W. A., Athol Camp, No. 8388. In politics he is a Republican and active especially in local matters. Mr. Young was in the government service freighting when the Sioux broke out from the Pine Ridge agency in Dakota, and he heard the shot that killed Sitting Bull, the famous chieftain of that tribe.

On December 29, 1902, Mr. Young married Sally A. Dula, of Lenoir, North Carolina, who came all the way from her home to get married. For pastime Mr. Young has recently taken up photography, and has taken some very fine views of the country and logging in his neighborhood.

ROBERT C. EGBERS. Prominent in the educational circles of northern Idaho, as also he has been in other places, a man of culture and talent, while also he has taken hold with a willing hand to do the pioneer's noble work, it is proper to place a review of the life of our subject in the history of Kootenai county.

Robert C. Egbers was born in Hancock county, Illinois, on March 26, 1866, being the son of Francis M. and Elizabeth (Wilcox) Egbers, natives of Louisiana and London, England. The mother came to America in 1847 and located in Illinois, where she was married, and for twenty years they lived in Hancock county, and in 1885 came to Ritzville, Washington. In 1901 they came to Kootenai county and now reside here. Robert received a common school education and at seventeen started out for himself, teaching vocal music to pay the expenses of a more extended course to fit him for his profession. He taught his first school in Stillwell, Illlinois, in 1885 and since that time he has been more or less steadily in this line of endeavor. He removed to Ritzville in 1886 and was soon one of the board of examiners for Adams county. In 1888 he was nominated by the Republican party against J. C. Hoffman, Democrat, for county superintendent of schools and won the day by ninety-nine votes. In 1890 he won against W. R. Cunningham by the same majority, and in 1892 he won against B. J. Neare by thirty-six votes. In 1894 he was nominated for clerk of the court and was beaten by Louis Walton, fusionist, by a small majority. His wife's health was failing and he was forced to make another move, and accordingly he came to Athol, Idaho. He at once went to teaching and for five years he has taught steadily in one school, giving perfect satisfaction and doing a thorough and commendable work. Mr. Egbers has taken a homestead where he now lives, four miles southeast from Athol, and he has bestowed much labor in improving it in good shape. In 1900 Mr. Egbers was nominated by his party for county superintendent of schools against Daniel Van Duzer and was beaten by a small majority. Again in 1902 he was nominated on the same ticket, Mr. Van Duzer being his opponent, and was elected by three hundred and eighty-one majority.

In December, 1888, Mr. Egbers married Miss Rhoda M., daughter of C. R. and Mary Bardwell, natives of Pennsylvania and Minnesota, respectively, but now residents of Ritzville, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Egbers are the parents of six children, four of whom are living, as follows: Miles F., Mark W., Ruth L., Dwight S. Our subject and his faithful wife are members of the Methodist church and are leading and highly esteemed people. In the five conventions that nominated Mr. Egbers he has never had an opposing vote.

ANTHONY A. SAGE. Six and one-half miles southeast from Athol is the estate of Anthony A. Sage, and it consists of one section of good land, while his son and daughter own enough adjoining to make it fourteen hundred acres. Mr. Sage is one of the leading farmers and stockmen of Kootenai county, and he is an upright and reliable man of good standing.

Anthony A. Sage was born in Saratoga county, New York, on January 24, 1850, being the son of Nester and Susan (Gray) Sage, natives of New York, but emigrants to Iowa in 1848. They located at Anamosa and there the father wrought at the carpenter trade until 1862, when he enlisted in the Thirty-first Iowa and fought for two years and then died at Memphis from a disease contracted in his service. In 1866 the mother married again, I. N. Potter becoming her husband and in 1877 he died. She now lives in Wyoming and last year made a visit to this son. Anthony received his education in the places where the family lived and after his father's death much of the burden fell on him as he was the eldest son. After his mother's second marriage he again took up school until eighteen, when he started for himself. He rented land until twenty-one, and then married and soon after he was taken sick. By mistake he was given a teaspoonful of morphine and the result, while not fatal, was such as to aggravate the disease so that he did not recover for several years. In 1874 Mr. Sage bought cattle in Minnesota and opened a butcher shop in St. Paul, in which his partner cheated him out of his capital. Then he wrought on the railroads in different capacities, especially in the shops, both in St. Paul and in Iowa for a number of years and then came to Ritzville, Adams county, Washington. He bought a half section of land and at once started a nursery, seed farm and experiment station. This was operated until 1896, when he sold out and bought his present place. During the stay in Adams county Mr. Sage also operated a butcher shop in Ritzville and very much credit is due him for the excellent manner in which he assisted to develop Adams county, both in general labors and in his experiment station, where untold benefit was done to the farmers. He now raises hay, does general farming and handles stock.

In 1872 Mr. Sage married Miss Minerva A., daughter of Lemuel and Caroline (Braybender) Streeter, natives of Pennsylvania. To this happy union there have been born five children: Nester J., George L., married and living at Ritzville; Pearl, wife of R. E. Butler, in Lincoln county, Washington; Josie and Paul. Mr. Sage is an active Republican and always takes a prominent part in the labors of the campaign and is an influential figure in the conventions. Mr. Sage is a member of the K. P., Ritzville Lodge, No. 36, and is also a member of the K. O. T. M., also at Ritzville. His people are members of the Catholic church. Mr. Sage has manifested great wisdom and energy in his labors in the county, and he is one of the substantial men who form the bone and sinew of the worth of the county.

ALFRED MARTIN. This industrious and energetic young man is one of the potent factors in the development of northern Idaho and he has done a good part in this work while also he has carefully conserved his business interests in using his homestead right and securing a fine piece of land only three-fourths of a mile south from Elmira.

Alfred Martin was born in the vicinity of Ottawa, Canada, on April 22, 1873, being the son of Joseph and Catherine (Duncan) Martin, natives of Canada. They all came to Chattaroy, Washington, in 1886, and toiled there for nine years, when they removed to Spokane. In 1897 the parents came to Kootenai county and reside here now. They are the parents of nine children: John, in Spokane; Alfred, the subject of this article; Robert, in Spokane; Maggie, wife of Charles Glover, in Spokane; Nettie, wife of James Fahey, in Spokane; Minnie, wife of Walter Geer, in Spokane; Lizzie, single, living with her brother Alfred; Harry, living in Elmira; Nellie, living with her brother Alfred. Our subject received the educational training to be had from the public schools and labored with his parents until twenty-three and then went to work in the woods, getting out poles, shingle bolts, and so forth. In 1897 he located the homestead where now he resides and he has devoted himself to improving it and tilling it since that time. He made his final proof in 1902. He has some hay land, a small orchard, and other improvements. Mr. Martin is a member of the Baptist church and is an exemplary and upright young man, who has the respect and esteem of all the community.

JAMES McDONALD. In many sections of the west has the worthy gentleman, of whom we now speak, done pioneer work both in opening the farm lands and in locating valuable mining properties.

James McDonald was born in Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, on January 31, 1858, being the son of James and Cordelia (Beebe) McDonald, natives of Vermont. The family came to Chippewa Falls in an early day and the father operated a large hardware store there. He died in September, 1871, his wife having died in March, 1870. They were the parents of six children, Albert, Charles, Clarence, Mayannie, Julius and James. All are deceased except Albert, who is in Alaska, and the subject of this sketch. James received a high school education and when his parents died, he being about thirteen, he went into the woods to assist in cooking. Ten or more years were spent in this work and cooking in a restaurant, and then he came to the Murray country and took a placer claim. Selling this he prospected in the Priest river district. He took a piece of land, but as it was not surveyed he sold his right and went to the head waters of the Fraser river and took a mining claim. This was sold for one hundred dollars and the next year when he went back to it it was worth fifty thousand dollars. Some further traveling he did and then came to his present place, two and one-half miles west from Athol, which he secured as a homestead. Mr. McDonald has improved it in good shape and last year he received over two thousand bushels of grain, which will be increased annually. He has good buildings and raises some stock.

On July 31, 1896, Mr. McDonald married Miss Cora M., daughter of James K. and Mary (Ray) Bailey, natives of Illinois. They came to Washington in 1885 and located in Elma, where awful forest fires raged since, but they escaped. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. McDonald, Harry and Mary C. Politically Mr. McDonald is a Republican and is always ready to bear his part in the labor of the campaigns. He is now clerk of the school board and is interested in good schools. Recently Mrs. McDonald was called away from her home and loved ones by death.

GEORGE W. FLEMMING is one of the leading lumber men of northern Idaho, having his outfits at Athol, where he has made a good success in the years gone by. He is an industrious worker and displays executive force and skill that have enabled him to handle other men in the business to a profit to himself.

George W. Flemming was born in Sherburne county, Minnessota, on September 10, 1862, being the son of John and Sarah J. (Christie) Flemming, natives of Maine and New Brunswick, respectively. They settled in Minnesota in 1856 and there they remained until the death of the father in 1877, and two years later the mother passed away also. George was educated in his native place and in Wright county, the same state, whither his parents moved. When fifteen his father died and he went to do for himself. For seven years he worked in the woods and on the drive and then married Miss Mary J. Borthwick, a daughter of Alexander and Lydia (Hix) Borthwick, natives of Prince Edward Island and New York, respectively. They came to Minnesota and there remained until their death. In 1888 Mr. Flemming rented land and farmed until 1892, when he came to Rathdrum. Two years later he was called to mourn the death of his wife. Then he returned to Minnesota, spent a winter hunting in northern Idaho, spent some time in Everett, Washington, and finally came back to Rathdrum. He spent a year or so single handed in the woods and then bought a four-horse outfit and went to logging. He has had some fine contracts, for the Rogers & Dunsmore Mill Company to put in all the timber in one entire section, while also for the Phœnix mill of Spokane he put in seven hundred thousand feet. Prosperity has attended him and he is now located three and one-half miles southeast from Athol, where he has property.

On May 26, 1898, Mr. Flemming married Mrs. Martha Waddell, widow of George Waddell, of Rathdrum, and two children have been born to them, Mary E. and Cora D. By her former husband Mrs. Flemming has six children, Henry, Ida, Norah, Willie, Claudie and Zollie. All are at home with their parents. Mr. Flemming was formerly a Republican, but when the silver issue of Bryan came to the front he allied himself with it and holds firmly on that line since. Mr. Flemming is a man of due conservatism and wisdom, but is dominated by a progressive spirit and guided with a keen discrimination that have won for him his present success.

JOHN W. GREAVES. Although at the present time located two miles southeast from Elmira, the subject of this sketch is nevertheless a skillful and leading seaman and has descended from a family that has for three hundred years back been seafaring people and has furnished some of the best men in this line in the world. His people live on the shores of the Baltic sea and are all sailors, being captains, his maternal uncle is a teacher in navigation, while several others of the relatives are also instructors in the naval schools.

John W. Greaves was born in Rigga, Russia, on November 19, 1865, the son of Michael and Tiney (Sholts) Greaves, natives of Levonia province, in Russia. The father is now farming and fishing. The father was shipwrecked in 1871 on the coast of Norway and lost his ship but saved the crew. In 1880 he was wrecked again, this time on the coast of Denmark, and the ship went down but the crew was saved. Then he turned his attention to farming and fishing. Our subject was educated in the schools of his native place and took a thorough course in navigation. At fifteen he went on board as cabin boy and cruised for three years. He was wrecked on January 14, 1886, while sailing on the Sir Robert McCluer; the ship was a total loss but the crew were picked up by a French vessel four hours later. Returning to London, he went on board another ship and came to Qubec, where he farmed for about one year, then railroaded there and in Vermont. Next we see him in Boston where he shipped to Savannah, then he worked in Birmingham mills for a while, after which we see him successively in Memphis, Tennessee, Illinois, Louisanna and Utah. After this he came to Boise, Idaho, and thence to Portland in 1889. He assisted to build the Union Pacific railroad to that city, then came to Washington, and later harvested in Walla Walla. He went thence to Bonner's Ferry, then worked in British Columbia and then returned to Peck river, Idaho, where he took a squatter's right, but finding it railroad land, he removed to his present place and since that time he has continued in this place. Mr. Greaves has a fine body of timber, perhaps as excellent as can be found in the county. Mr. Greaves has part of his land under cultivation and also raises some stock and pays considerable attention to lumbering. He is genial and well liked and is an upright and substantial man. Mr. Greaves is a member of the Lutheran church and is a progressive and capable man.

JOHN McILHARGEY. Among the industrious and intelligent men of Kootenai county, we are glad to mention the subject of this article, who is well known and esteemed by his fellows.

John McIlhargey was born in Huron county, Michigan, on October 30, 1859, being the son of Charles and Mary (Young) McIlhargey, natives of Canada and Ireland, respectively. The mother came to Canada when five years old and was married there in 1858 and they at once removed to Huron county, Michigan. In 1882 they removed thence to Duluth, Minnesota, where they still reside, the father being engaged in lumbering. John was educated in his native place and labored in the woods there until 1881, when he went to Wisconsin and did lumbering work until 1888. Next we see him in Sandpoint and there he wrought at the same work until 1898. At that date Mr. McIlhargey took his present homestead, two and one-half miles north from Elmira, and to the improvement and cultivation of this he has devoted his energies since. He has nearly all of the farm under cultivation, raises many vegetables for market and handles some stock. He has good buildings and the farm bears the air of thrift and painstaking care.

In November, 1886, Mr. McIlhargey married Miss Lizzie, daughter of George and Margarie (Brice) Maxwell, natives of Scotland. The mother died in her native land while the father came with his family to Wisconsin in 1884, and there died in 1896. One child has been born to our subject and his wife, Viola M. M., now attending school. Mr. McIlhargey is a Democrat and takes an active part in the affairs of the county. He has the following brothers and sisters: Martha, wife of James Lahey, in Kootenai county; Viola M., wife of George Conners, of this county; Charles E., single, living in Duluth, Minnesota; James T. L., living in Duluth; Egnitious, married and living in North Dakota; William, single, and living in Duluth, Minnesota.

ROBERT McLELLAN. Three and one-half miles west from Athol lies the fine estate of Mr. McLellan. It consists of one-half section of land, half of which was taken as a homestead. Good buildings and all necessary improvements adorn the farm and it is one of the excellent places in this section. Mr. Mc-Lellan has shown commendable zeal as well as wisdom and skill in making his place one of the best and among the special features are the large barn forty by forty-five and a cistern that holds two hundred barrels. He does a general farming business and also raises stock.

Robert McLellan was born in county of Lanark, Canada, on April 3, 1839, being the son of John and Ellen (Fleming) McLellan, natives of fScotland and immigrants to Canada in 1812. Robert received a good education and then labored on the farm with his father, clearing the land and making potash. He was skillful at that and after he had reached his majority he continued at it for some three or four years. He came to the United States in 1865 and rafted in Minnesota, then turned his attention to farming for a dozen years. It was 1885 that he came to Spokane and worked at the carpenter trade, after which he did timber work for a few years and then took the homestead mentioned above. He has continued here since and is one of the leading men of the community, a man of substantial worth. His farm is largely under cultivation and an air of thrift and excellent taste pervades the entire premises.

In 1866 Mr. McLellan married Miss Ellen, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Mathis) Ferguson, natives of Canada, where they farmed until their death, having raised a family of eight children. Three children have been born to this household, Mary A., wife of William Ferguson and living in Canada; John, with his parents; Ellen, wife of Mr. Dote, in Libby, Montana. In political matters, Mr. Lellan is a liberal Democrat and always allies himself on the side of good government.

HENRY GECK. It is not frequent to have an opportunity to chronicle the career of one who has devoted so many years in the military service of his country as has the esteemed subject of this article and a more minute detail of the matter will be interesting to the readers of the history of northern Idaho.

Henry Geck was born in Baden, Germany, on May 18, 1840, the son of Charles and Lizzie (Veidener) Geck, who remained in Baden until the time of their death. Henry was educated in the common schools of his native place and at the age of seventeen, learned the baker's trade, then went to Vienna, Austria, until he was twenty and at that time returned to his home. After this he served three years in the German army and then migrated to the United States. He landed here in 1864 and two days later was in the ranks under General Burnside in the Forty-sixth New York Infantry and was fighting for the stars and stripes. He showed his loyalty in many hard contested fields, being a participant in the battles of Nashville, Fredericksburg, Cold Harbor, the Wilderness, Petersburg, in which last fight he was wounded three times. Two months in the hospital and he rejoined his regiment. September 26, 1865, he enlisted in the regular army and served for thirty years. He was on the ground where the brave Custer fell, four days after the massacre, being under General McKenzie. Mr. Geck has been quartered in every fort in the United States and for twenty-three years he was in the Twenty-third Cavalry. His record is exceptionally good and he has shown himself to have been a faithful and brave soldier, a good and upright man, and loyal and true to the noble flag of our country.

In 1890 Mr. Geck was quartered at Fort Sherman and in 1893 he was retired as a veteran on a stipend for life, of twenty-five dollars and twenty-five cents per month. Mr. Geck has a fine homestead on Fish lake and spends his time there and in Coeur d'Alene and Rathdrum. He is esteemed by all and is governed by sound principles and dominated with wisdom in all of his walk. Mr. Geck is a member of the G. A. R., Garfield Post, at Rathdrum and is a man of excellent standing and enjoys the confidence and good will of all who know him.

DUNCAN S. McKENZIE. A pioneer in many sections of the west where he has followed the arduous labor of prospecting and thus opened many sections to the ingress of civilization, and now a worthy and enterprising citizen of Kootenai county, we are pleased to grant to the subject of this article a representation in the volume of his county history.

Duncan S. McKenzie was born in Detroit, Michigan, on October 7, 1858, being the son of Daniel and Catherine (Stalker) McKenzie, natives of Scotland. The parents came to America in 1852 and dwelt in Michigan for about fourteen years, then migrated to Kansas and there lived in Rice county until 1896. The father died in 1890 and the mother moved to Elmira where she now lives, having married William Scott. Our subject received his education in Detroit and at the early age of eleven he went to Texas and for ten years could have been found in the employ of John King, one of the leading cattle men of the west, where he became skillful in all departments of the cattle business. Then he went to work for McKenny and soon found that his employer was one of the noted horse thieves of the state of Texas and so his relations were forthwith severed. Thence Mr. McKenzie went to New Mexico, Colorado, Montana, Utah and other places, prospecting, and during this time he made some good locations. In 1894 he came to Idaho and spent his time between prospecting and lumbering until 1899, when he located his present homestead, two and one half miles south from Elmira. Mr. McKenzie has good buildings, and raises considerable hay.

In 1890, Mr. McKenzie married Miss Elizabeth Cobb, of Pool, England, where her people remained until the time of their death. To our subject and his worthy wife there have been born three children, Catherine, John, and Daniel. In political matters, Mr. McKenzie is an intelligent Democrat and always takes the part of the interested citizen. He has held the office of school director and is zealous for good facilities in that line, has frequently been urged to hold other offices but always refuses. Mr. McKnezie is a member of the I.

O. O. F., North Lodge, No. 81; and of the M. W. A., Elmira Camp, No. 9185, while Mrs. McKenzie is a member of the Rebekahs at Bonners Ferry. They are both members of the Presbyterian church and are upright and well respected people.

JAMES M. STONE. In the enterprising little village of Elmira is the subject of our sketch located, having a hotel, which is handled in good shape while also he devotes some time to overseeing his ranch property which adjoins the town site. Also Mr. Stone has invested in other property, having good faith in the country and is an enthusiastic worker in helping to build it up; and it is just such workers that transform the wilds to rich regions.

James M. Stone was born in Cleveland, Ohio, on February 6, 1866, being the son of James and Ellen (Sloan) Stone, natives of England and Ireland, respectively. They came to Canada and located in Sault Ste Marie and ten years later removed to Cleveland, where they still live, the father operating a grocery and feed store. Five children, as follows, were born to this worthy couple, Daniel, in South America; James M., our subject; Jane, married and living in Los Angeles, California; Mary, Martha, both single and living with their parents. James studied in the public schools until seventeen and then worked with his father one year more, when he went to Colorado and labored in the mines and in the lumber regions for five years. In 1887 he came to western Washington and there wrought, mostly in King county, until 1897, when he came to his present location. He purchased the relinquishment of a settler and since that time has been an influential factor in the development of this virgin region. Mr. Stone is doing well and is making his efforts felt in his worthy work of progress.

In December, 1896, Mr. Stone married Mrs. Emily Dorn, daughter of John and Emily Buchholz, who came to this country but returned to Dantzic, Germany, where they now reside, Mr. Buchholz being a millwright. Mrs. Stone was born in Germany. They have one child, Elizabeth. Mr. Stone is a real Jeffersonian Democrat and takes the part of the intelligent citizen in the questions of the day.

JOHN C. GRANT. A man of broad and varied experiences in the affairs of life, successful in business, true and loyal as a friend and public spirited and patriotic as a citizen, the gentleman whom we now consider, is eminently fitted for representation in the history of Kootenai county.

John C. Grant was born on Faro Island on August 5, 1842, being the son of Iver and Mary (McGovern) Grant, natives of Scotland, which continued to be their home until 1868, when they removed to Australia. The father was a sea captain and followed a seafaring life for forty-five years. They died in Australia, having been the parents of eight children, Emma, Carrie, Bridget, Arlo, John C., Peter C., Sarah, Valberg, all deceased except the subject of this article. When John was a small child the parents removed to Scotland and there he was educated and when twelve went on a voyage with his father around the world. One year was occupied in this and then he sailed with his father until twenty. Then he sailed with Captain Bertrand Wallace three years, with Captain Alfred Anderson one year, with Captain Travis for one year, and with Captain Jordan a short time. Then he made a trip around the world again with his father and came back to England, whence he came to his oldest brother in Wisconsin. Our subject then, it being 1872, took up railroad contracting and for twelve years he was busy in Wisconsin and Minnesota, working on every railroad in those states up to the time he quit. The next move was to Devils lake, where Mr. Grant took a preemption and farmed for four years. Then he railroaded again, Montana being the place, after which, in 1894, he came to Hope, Idaho, thence to Elmira, where he settled on a homestead. In February, 1899, Mr. Grant was appointed postmaster, which important office he still holds. He also operated as a general merchant but in 1901 Mr. Grant turned his whole attention to tilling and improving his homestead. He has made it a fine property. Politically, Mr. Grant is an active Republican and in school matters he has always been zealous, having been the moving spirit to establish the first school in Elmira. At present, Mr. Grant is justice of the peace and is very efficient in this capacity. Mr. Grant is a man of intelligence and stability and is highly respected among his fellows.

JAMES C. FERGUSON. One-half mile east from Elmira is located the home of the subject of this sketch. The estate is now one of value, but was taken from the wilds of nature as a homestead and upon it Mr. Ferguson has bestowed much labor and expense. He now has fifty acres under cultivation, is putting out a good orchard, has erected a comfortable residence, good barns and outbuildings and is making the place a desirable and profitable property.

James C. Ferguson was born in Canada, April 15, 1837, being the son of Hugh and Rose (Colgan) Ferguson, natives of Ireland but immigrants to Canada in 1824, where they resided for forty years. Then they removed to Brant, Bruce county and lived there fifteen years, the father dying there in 1883, the mother having passed away at their first residence. James received a common school education and when nineteen married and settled down to farming. Twenty-two years he farmed in Bruce county and then removed to Swift county, Minnesota, and tilled the soil for four years. 1882 was the date of his removal to Montana and for fifteen years Mr. Ferguson was engaged there in railroading. It was 1887 that he came to Sandpoint and there resided until 1899, when he came to his present place, taking it as a homestead, and purchased more land of the railroad.

On October 6, 1856, Mr. Ferguson married Miss

Ann, daughter of James and Catherine (Delemore) Riley, natives of Ireland. They came to Canada in about 1824, and there remained until the time of their death. Our worthy subject and his estimable wife are the parents of eleven children, named as follows: Rose, wife of Mike Hanley, living in Tacoma, Washington; Kate, married to Tom Cox, at Portland, Oregon; Hugh, killed on the Northern Pacific, in Miles, Montana; James, living at Blacktail, Idaho; Mary, wife of William Harwood, in Mullan, Idaho; Charlotte, single and living at Lakeview, Idaho; John, single and living in Mullan, Idaho; Mike, single and living in Sandpoint; Hattie, in Portland, Oregon, with her sister; Thomas and Edna, both deceased. Mr. Ferguson is independent politically, and takes a zealous interest in the affairs of the county. He and his family are adherents of the Catholic church. He is a man of industry and substantiality and is of good standing among his fellows.

He bought the land now partly occupied by Sandpoint, of the railroad company.

LOUIS LA VERGNE. There are no people who do more to open new countries than the miners. They have pressed into the fastnesses of the globe, have climbed its mountains, searched its river beds, bored the rock-ribbed hills and ransacked nature generally, and to them is great credit due for the energy, skill and tireless enterprise manifested in this good work which not only yields great wealth to the nation but also opens the way for many thousands of settlers who still further develop the country. One of the sturdy western lads who has displayed stanch qualities in this line of industry is mentioned at the head of this article and he is deserving of representation in the history of his county.

Louis La Vergne was born in Ontario, Canada, on July 7, 1858, being the son of Bazil and Mary La Vergne. At the early age of fourteen he took up the exciting and invigorating life of the rafter on the Ottawa river, going five hundred miles to the interior and bringing timber to Quebec, making one trip each year. It is a life of great hardship and danger. The last year he went to the woods and worked for nine dollars per month. In 1877 Mr. La Vergne determined to seek new fields and accordingly came to Butte county, California, where he mined and remained until he received his citizenship papers. In 1886 while he was in California his two brothers, Oscar and Fred, came to Murray and mined and in 1888 he joined them there taking part in mining also. Our subject was prospecting at the time of the strike at Wardner. Since that time he has been active in the prospector's realm and has searched the country well adjacent to the Couer d'Alene river. He now has nine promising claims near Lane and also has an interest in the well known Hidden Treasure, which is doubtless to be one of the valuable mines of this district. Some of his claims are adjoining the Hidden Treasure and are properties which will doubtless make good payers later. Mr. La Vergne is a man who has the esteem and confidence of his fellows, has wrought with energy and skill and manifested integrity and intrinsic worth of character. He is making his home with his brother, who has a homestead about one and one-half miles northwest from Lane.

WILLIS H. COOK is one of the men who has ably assisted to open up this country of northern Idaho and is now one of the substantial and active residents of the vicinity of Elmira, his ranch of one hundred and sixty acres being located one mile north of town.

Willis H. Cook was born on June 13, 1867, being the son of John A. and Mary E. (Morlan) Cook, natives respectively of Kentucky and Maryland. They came to Adair county, Missouri, and there the father died in June, 1902, but the mother still lives on the old homestead. The father served in the Civil war. Children were born to them as follows: George W., John, Fenley, Fanny, all in Missouri; Permealy, deceased. Macon county was the native place of our subject and when young he went with his parents to Adair county. He obtained his education from the district schools in the winter and remained working with his father until twenty-two, excepting some time spent in working out. In 1885 he went to Colorado and spent two years on the range, then two years at home and next we see him in Spokane. He took a trip hunting and trapping up the Columbia river and in the spring of 1890, he came to Elmira. He labored in the woods in the winters and harvested in the Palouse in the summers, then took a squatter's right on unsurveyed land. This was sold in 1897 and in 1901 Mr. Cook took his present place, which he has improved with good buildings, orchard and so forth.

On November 7, 1899, Mr. Cook married Miss Effie, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Allen) Peasley, natives of Maine. They came to Wisconsin and thence, in 1894, to Idaho, settling in Kootenai county, where the mother still lives. The father was killed in the gold excitement at Pikes Peak. One child has been born to our subject and his estimable wife, John A. Mr. Cook is a charter member of the M. W. A. at Deep Creek.

JERRY RICHMOND. In the dual occupation of overseeing his farm and handling a general merchandise establishment at Naples, the subject of this article is engaged at the present time, and he has the distinction of being one of the earliest pioneers of this section and his hands have done a lion's share in opening up the country for the ingress of civilization's benefits.

Jerry Richmond was born in Northumberland, Canada, on February 21, 1838, being the son of R. C. and Mary (Alley) Richmond, natives of the same place. Later they removed to Isabella county, Michigan and there the father died in 1895, and the mother in 1890, after having raised nine children. Jerry was educated in the schools available to his native place, but at the best they were poor, as the country was new and so personal effort and careful application were needed to gain this training. He learned the carpenter trade and working at this and lumbering he was occupied until twenty-two, then he worked for himself until 1868 in the same lines and at that date went to Woodford and operated a hotel for a year. Retiring from that he went to Mount Pleasant, Michigan, where he bought a very valuable stallion which he later traded for a forty of land. Selling the land for five hundred dollars, he drove stage and carried mail for a year and ten years later he went to Nebraska, and soon after came to Idaho. He had also one time kept hotel. He spent one winter in Bonners Ferry and waited in a hotel, then made gloves one winter at Deep Creek, Idaho, and in 1884, Mr. Richmond located on his present homestead. It is the land where Naples stands and he has laid a portion of the ground into lots, renting to business men. In 1896 Mr. Richmond opened a general merchandise store and since that time he has conducted it with his son. They are doing a nice business and Mr. Richmond is well liked in all the surrounding country.

In 1868 Mr. Richmond married Miss Anna J. Morrow, a native of Orangeville, Canada, where also she was reared and her parents also died there. One child has been born to this marriage, William A., married and living with his parents, and also is interested in the store. Mr. Richmond is a Republican and takes an active part in the realm of politics.

PETER G. JOHNSON. In the development and progress of northern Idaho, the subject of this article has done a good part and is now one of the substantial and respected citizens of Naples, in Kootenai county. Mr. Johnson has a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres which he is fast improving, having a fine house, good barn and outbuildings, while he is also handling a considerable orchard.

Peter G. Johnson was born in Kalmar, Sweden, on February 8, 1851, being the son of Johans and Ava Johnson, both natives of the same place. The father died in 1867 and the mother still lives there. Six children were born in the family and five of them are still living. Peter received his education from the careful teaching of his mother, there being no available schools there. At the early age of eleven he went to work on the neighboring farms and in 1882 came to Chicago, there being employed until he made his way to Colorado, whence he came to Soda Springs, Idaho, and thence to Dillon, Montana. In all these places he was engaged in labor for wages and did well. In Dillon, Mr. Johnson spent ten years on a farm and in 1894 he came to Sunset, Washington, and thence to his present location, where he has prospered, owing to his industry, thrift and wisdom in handling the resources placed at his disposal.

In 1887 Mr. Johnson married Miss Manda Peterson, a native of Kalmar, Sweden. Her father died there in 1886, and her mother is still living there. Two children have been born to this happy union: Alfred H. and Edwin, both attending school. Mr. Johnson is a liberal Republican and reserves for his own decision the questions of the day, not pinning his faith to the tenets of any man. He is a charter member of the Northern Lodge, No. 81, of the I. O. O. F., at Deep Creek, Idaho.

DAVID BROWN. One mile north of Medimont, on the north side of the river is found the home place of the subject of this article. He has a fine estate of two hundred and fifty-two acres of valuable land which annually returns abundant crops of general produce, hay and fruit.

David Brown was born in Belleville, Ontario, on September 18, 1852, being the son of James and Mary Brown. He was educated in his native place and there learned the trade of making galvanized cornice and ornamental work for building. In 1880 he went to Winnipeg and opened business also handling hardware. He operated here for five years and then went to Minneapolis, where he went into partnership with his brother, Alex F., establishing a good business. The winter following the big fire in Spokane he came thither and did well at his trade. The firm was known as Brown Brothers and continued until 1891, when our subject withdrew and came to the Couer d'Alene county. He located a portion of his present fine estate as a homestead and bought the balance of it later. He has a fine house, large barn, two good orchards and is a well-to-do resident, being also a man of excellent integrity, uprightness and sound principles. Mr. Brown has some fine, thoroughbred Shorthorn cattle. He is considered one of the leading men of the community both as a man and thrifty agriculturist.

In 1900 Mr. Brown took a trip east, going clear to his native place to see his mother. He visited all the large cities between here and there and also took in the Pan-American exposition. He spent considerable time traveling and then came home satisfied that we have in this valley one of the best countries he has ever seen.

WALKER REID DAVIS is one of the substantial and prominent residents of the Couer d'Alene valley and is respected and esteemed by all. He was born in Maysville, Kentucky, on July 25, 1846, being the son of Dr. James M. and Catherine (Tebbs) Davis. The father was a native of Ohio and a graduate of the medical college of Cincinnati. He at once commenced the practice of medicine after his graduation and located in Maysville. When our subject was ten the family went to St. Louis where he received a good academic education and then commenced the study of law. At the breaking out of the Civil war he enlisted for three months in a company of the First Missouri Cavalry in the Confederate army and when those three months were up he enlisted for three years in Elijah Gates' regiment. He was in Price's army and fought in the battles of Springfield, Pea Ridge, Memphis, Iuka and at the siege of Vicksburg. In 1862 he was promoted to corporal and was wounded at the battle of Iuka. He was also in the battle of Murfreesboro. He served faithfully to the end of his enlistment and in 1864 was captured and taken to Memphis where he took the oath of allegiance. Then he went with mule team to Alder Gulch, Montana, and although the Indians were hostile, he came through with no loss. He mined for five years and in 1869 went to the Whitepine excitement in Nevada. The next year Mr. Davis took a position with an art and music house and travelled all over the west. During this time he met Miss Josephine, youngest daughter of Resin and Susan Reed, pioneers of 1847 in Oregon, who settled on a donation claim where Oakland now stands. On January 10, 1877, Mr. Davis married this lady and to them have been born the following named children: Susan L., teaching in the Coeur d'Alene public schools; Martha, attending school in California; Charles R. and Volney D., in Murray; Grace, attending school in Couer d'Alene; Maud, Mazel, Pritchard. Mrs. Davis was born on the old donation claim on July 26, 1858. After marriage, Mr. Davis engaged in raising horses and in 1879 came to the vicinity of Farmington, in Idaho. In 1883 he leased his horses and went to the Couer d'Alene country in the first excitement. Later he was in litigation with Mr. Pritchard and afterwards they settled the matter amicably and became partners. Mr. Davis located the Occident which he sold well. He is now interested in the Rising Sun and Denver properties and also holds a large interest in the Murray Development Company. Mr. Davis bought his present place, eight miles up the river from Harrison, on the north side of the river, in 1898. He has a valuable farm, good large residence, two barns and ten acres of orchards, besides much other valuable improvement. Mr. Davis also has a homestead near. He does general farming and raises cattle, having some good grades. Mr. Davis was named after Walker Reid of Maysville, who is his cousin. Mr. Davis is also related to General Smoothe, of Virginia, and to Colonel John Reid of Price's army.

TIMOTHY McCARTHY is one of the well known men of the Coeur d'Alene country having been a prominent miner and prospector since the earliest discoveries here and is still interested in some good properties as the Flynn group. Mr. McCarthy is now living on his valuable estate one mile north from Lane on the north side of the Couer d'Alene river, where he has a good home, does a general farming business and handles much hay from his land.

A detailed account of his career will be interesting to the pioneers of our county and we append the same. Timothy McCarthy was born in county Cork, Ireland, in the early fifties. In 1874 he boarded a sailing vessel for New Zealand and has never seen his native land since. He had a stormy voyage of one hundred and four days. He spent two years in that land after which he went to Melbourne, intending to go to the Hokinson gold fields in Queensland, but turned aside to work for Samuel McCaughey, now the largest sheep owner in the world. In 1880 he boarded the steamer City of Sidney, and came to San Francisco touching at Auckland and also at Honolulu, where he went to see the extinct crater near by. He spent about three years in California and then came to Rathdrum. On January 23, 1884, he set out with an old miner, Alexander Fraser, with their equipment on sleds to Coeur d'Alene city. They packed their blankets to Wolf Lodge which Mr. McCarthy says he thought the most dismal place he has seen in his travels and thought at that time he could not spend more than three months in the Coeur d'Alene country but he is here yet,—so much for first impressions—and he likes the country too. At Old Mission he met Judge Clagget and other noted ones of this country, and at Old Mission they forded the river and before they touched the Evolution trail they had forded the stream eleven times. Such were the hardships of the early and intrepid pioneers. They fell in with Captain Human's pack train which was the first to cross the mountains that winter, and when he got to Eagle City he began the search for placer, but later turned his attention to quartz. In the spring of 1885 he crossed over Sunset peak to where Burke is situated now. One log cabin adorned the place and two miners were developing the Tiger mine, the first lead and silver mine in the Coeur d'Alenes. In April he located the now well known mine, the Standard, and for seven years he and his partners did the assessment work and then sold for twenty-five thousand dollars, which gave him a good start. In May he located the Flynn group of twelve claims and still owns an interest in this property. In 1891 Mr. McCarthy came and bought his present place of one hundred and seventy-one acres. It is exceptionally fine land, has a good orchard and produces abundance of fine hay. He has raised as high as twelve tons of potatoes to one acre, so rich is his land. Mr. McCarthy stood in his orchard one day and distinctly heard the explosion of the Bunker Hill and and Sullivan mine at the time of trouble, which is twenty-five miles away. Showing the amount of hard labor done by Mr. McCarthy, we note that one day in a conversation with Colonel Wallace he was asked by that gentleman how many claims he possessed and Mr. McCarthy replied that he owned forty-nine claims and seventeen fractions. He and Larry O'Neal were the locators of the Crown Point, a portion of which he sold. In this mine occurred the shooting tragedy in which Jack McCauley was killed and one man wounded. The Crown Point is now owned by Burbridge and Burch. Mr. McCarthy is one of the most skillful prospectors of this entire country as his work will show where he is well and favorably known while his standing is of the best. It is his intention to devote considerable time in the future to the development of his mining properties in connection with operating his present home farm.

WASHINGTON SNYDER. In many ways has Mr. Snyder demonstrated his enterprise and capabilities to build up the west and to make substantial improvements in these new sections and as a real pioneer he deserves mention in the history of the county, being also a man of integrity and uprightness.

Washington Snyder was born in Lewis county, New York, on October 18, 1847, being the son of Levi and Louisa (Helmer) Snyder. When seven he went with the balance of the family to Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, where he was educated and grew to manhood. In the spring of 1865, Mr. Snyder enlisted in the Twenty-second Wisconsin. But on account of the change in the play of war he was not called from his state but received an honorable discharge in the summer following. He returned to his home and at once took up railroading and later learned to be a locomotive engineer. From 1869 to 1884 he followed that stirring calling and always proved himself a faithful and skillful engineer. He operated in various sections and on various roads and was on the eastern end of the Northern Pacific when he resigned his place in 1884. In February, 1884, Mr. Snyder went from Thompson Falls, Montana, to Murray, Idaho, with a sawmill, making thirteen camps in the journey and consuming three months in the undertaking. He succeeded in getting his mill in place and operated it successfully for three years and then sold it. During the time of his stay in Murray he had interests in various fine properties among which we may mention the Katie Burnette and the Chess. The latter is now called the Golden Chess. These properties are well known and valuable. In 1900 Mr. Snyder sold his entire holdings in the mines and came in the spring of the following year to his present place, opposite the river from Dudley. He bought eighty acres of good land and has it well improved with farm buildings, in addition to this Mr. Snyder has a fine chicken house over one hundred feet long and devotes much time to handling these fowls, having several hundred fine ones. He also raises cattle and owns some fine specimens of thoroughbred Herefords. Mr. Snyder's house and buildings are located on a fine spot overlooking the river and valley, where he has a pleasant and valuable home.

In 1886 Mr. Snyder married Mrs. Lula Sayre, in Murray. She has three children by her former marriage, William K., Mrs. Jennie Finlayson of Murray; Mrs. Lulu Erwin of Wallace.

CHARLES E. KAMLIN. A man of industry and thrift, a public minded citizen, a good neighbor, a substantial farmer and capable business man, it is fitting that the subject of this article should be granted space for an epitome of his career in the volume of Northern Idaho history.

Charles E. Kamlin was born in the vicinity of Stockholm, Sweden, on February 19, 1865, being the son of L. O. and Louisa Kamlin. The father died when our subject was a boy and in 1880, he came to the United States with his mother. They located in Burnett county, Wisconsin, where he railroaded and later farmed until 1890. In that year he came to St. Louis county, Minnesota, and worked in the iron mines and at lumbering until 1897. That was the year of his advent to Spokane, whence he came at once to Wardner and worked in the mines until the fall of 1898. In that year he came to the vicinity of Old Mission and took up logging for a time. Later he bought his present place, one quarter section of hay and timber land, two and one half miles northeast from Old Mission. He pays attention to general farming, timber work, and handling hay. Mr. Kamlin is a member of the M. W. A. at Old Mission. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran church and stanch supporters of the faith.

On August 29, 1899, Mr. Kamlin married Miss Maggie Gillies, whose parents live in the vicinity of Old Mission, and two children have been born to them, Neal J. and Clarris M.

WILLIAM P. DWYER. At the present time Mr. Dwyer is conducting a general merchandise establishment at Old Mission, where he does a good business, and also devotes some of his time to the oversight of his ranch adjacent. He is a man of uprightness and integrity and has won the esteem and good will of all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

William P. Dwyer was born in Grass Valley, California, on February 18, 1867, being the son of Patrick M. and Catherine (Powers) Dwyer. The father was born in Ireland and came to the United States with his parents when five. They located in the northern part of New York state and in 1850 Patrick M. went to Houghton, Michigan, and worked there in the copper mines until 1853. Then he came via New York and Panama to San Francisco and engaged in mining and the hotel business in Grass Valley. About 1864 he was married to Catherine Powers, who came to the United States when ten from her native land, Ireland. Her parents brought her to California via Panama. In 1869 the family went back to Buchanan county, Iowa, and the father took up farming. In 1870 they moved to Nevada, Gilpin county, Colorado, and mined until 1874, then they all went to Fayette county, Iowa, and farmed until 1888. Then the father came to the Cœur d'Alene country, bringing our subject. William P. remained while the father returned and brought the balance of the family. He located near Medical Lake, Washington, and our subject took a squatter's right near Old Mission. In 1892 the father and another son, Hon. P. J. Dwyer, representative of Kootenai county in the state legislature in 1900, came to the vicinity of Old Mission and took up and bought land. They remained there until 1902, then sold out and located near Newman's lake, in Spokane county, Washington. Our subject engaged in the general merchandise business in 1900, has a good store building and is doing well. He was married on August 13, 1902, to Catherine F., daughter of William and Catherine Ryan, near Cheney, who were early pioneers in that section. Mr. Dwyer is a member of the M. W. A. at Old Mission and is a representative man of excellent ability and first-class standing wherever he has dwelt. The father is a man of wide experience, of sterling integrity and uprightness and is a leading man in his community.

FRANK H. QUINN. This enterprising farmer of the vicinity of Old Mission is one of the sturdy and intrepid pioneers who pushed into this wild region and made it the abode of civilization and have since done worthy labors in this line of development and progress.

Frank H. Quinn was born in Rockford, Illinois, on May 11, 1861, being the son of Peter and Eliza (Dixon) Quinn, natives of New Jersey and early pioneers to Illinois. Our subject was educated in the common schools and in Fulton College and then went to Lyons, Iowa. He learned the carpenter's trade and then wrought at it for the years of 1877 and 1878 after which he went to Minneapolis and worked for a street railway company. Then he was night watchman for the Milwaukee railroad and in 1883 he came to Portland, going thence to San Francisco on the steamer Oregon. He followed street railroading there a time and then went to Los Angeles, after which we see him in Portland, Spokane and later in Farmington. Here he went to work in a saw mill and while planing there he lost one hand in the planer. After this great misfortune Mr. Quinn aroused his real grit and tenacity of purpose and renewed the battle of life with even greater vigor than ever. He came to his present place, one and one-half miles north from Old Mission, on the Mullan road. This was in the spring of 1889, and since that time he has labored with great tenacity of purpose and courage and now has a fine home of one hundred and twenty acres of hay and timber land. He has good buildings and other improvements, among which is an orchard, which ground he grubbed clear from the native timber with one hand. Mr. Quinn was one of the first settlers here and has always taken a great interest in the progress and upbuilding of the country. He is also active in educational lines and has given his time and attention to the office of director of schools for five years, always manifesting faithfulness and efficiency in his labors.

PATRICK J. WHALEN is one of the earliest pioneers of the Cœur d'Alene valley and is now the only one of those early days living here. He came when Father Joset and a Mr. Hayden were the only white people in this section and his neighbors were the Indians. He arrived here on January 15, 1883. A review of his career as an old pioneer is deserving a place in the history of the county.

Patrick J. Whalen was born in Rockland county, New York, on the Hudson river, on July 6, 1850. His parents were natives of Wicklow, Ireland, and came to the United States before the steamboats plied the Atlantic, being six months on the voyage. The father died when our subject was a child and he took care of his mother. He followed boating on the Hudson, worked at brickmaking and at railroading. On September 10, 1877, Mr. Whalen married Miss Agnes Mabes, of German and Irish descent. She was born in West Point, New York. When Mr. Whalen came to the Old Mission he at once located a squatter's right, and when the land was surveyed took a homestead, and added as much more by purchase. He platted the town of Cataldo, which was named from an early missionary, and now owns the land where the town stands, except what he has sold as lots. Mr. Whalen owns and operates a large hotel. In addition to this he does general farming. In early days he opened the first ferry across the Cœur d'Alene river and operated it until the railroad went through. Mr. Whalen used to go clear to Spokane for supplies in early days and has paid as high as a dollar for one letter. In 1884 he assisted Colonel Wallace to move to where Wallace now stands. A few years after Mr. Whalen came here he sent to New York state and brought out his mother and one sister. Another sister was left there, but she died shortly afterward. The sister that came here died soon after her arrival and the mother died in 1896. Mr. Whalen has no uncles, aunts or relatives that he knows of living except his children. He and his family are members and supporters of the Catholic church. The following named children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Whalen, and also five who are deceased: Dennis, Mary, the first white child born on the Cœur d'Alene river; Patsey D., Thomas F., John M., Catherine E. A. and Morris W.

ARTHUR E. FROST is a self-made man and as Mark Twain remarks, "He did not stop until the job was finished." He is now a popular and thriving merchant of Cataldo, where he carries a first class stock of well assorted general merchandise for the trade and has won by fair dealing and genial and accommodating ways the good will and patronage of the people of the surrounding country.

Arthur E. Frost was born in the vicinity of Berlin, Ottawa county, Michigan, on April 8, 1855, being the son of Oliver and Margaret (Thompson) Frost. The father died in 1863, Arthur being then eight years old. Practically he began doing for himself then and has been on his own resources for the intervening time. When he was ten, he went to Rome, New York, where he worked for his board at an uncle's place and went to school for six years. Then he went to Vicksburg, Michigan, and worked on a farm until twenty-two. In the spring of 1877 he made his way to Fort Worth, Texas, and railroaded and farmed for three years. In the spring of 1881 Mr. Frost came to Walla Walla and went on a ranch for one year and then came to Ellisport, Idaho. Thence in 1883 to Spokane, where he worked in a lumber yard and then drove stage to Ft. Spokane. In August, 1886, Mr. Frost came to Old Mission and opened a general merchandise estabdishment, which he operated successfully until April, 1900, when he came to Cataldo. Mr. Frost was postmaster at Old Mission as he is in Cataldo. When Mr. Frost came to Cataldo he opened a general store and has a good building and warehouse well filled with a choice selection of goods for this section. He also has a residence and is one of the leading men of this vicinity.

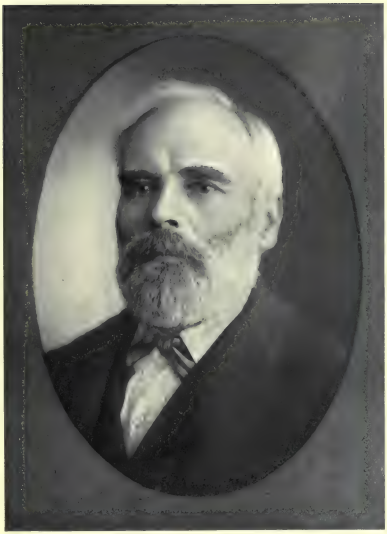
On June 5, 1893, Mr. Frost married Miss Ellen, daughter of George and Mary, and to them have been born five children, Alice M., Arthur E., Margaret, deceased, Mable M., Oliver D.

RICHARD SHARPLEY is a representative citizen and prosperous stockman of the Couer d'Alene valley where he settled on a homestead in 1891 and has since devoted his attention to handling stock and doing general farming.



Richard Sharpley was born in Buckingham, Canada, on April 20, 1844, being the son of Nelson and Jane (Parsher) Sharpley, among the early settlers of that section. Our subject was educated and reared in his native place and there on July 17, 1873, he married Miss Margaret Ann, daughter of Chancey and Mary J. (Timmons) Brewer, also early pioneers of that region. Mrs. Sharpley was born in Buckingham, on July 18, 1850. In 1880 Mr. Sharpley came to the United States and settled in Norway, Michigan, whence in a short time he went to Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and there worked in the lumber regions logging. In 1888 Mr. Sharpley came to the Old Mission, arriving in July. He went to work for salary at once and being so favorably impressed with the country he at once sent for his family and in 1891 located his present home place, three and one-half miles east from Lane on the south side of the river. He has the place well improved with good buildings, orchards, fences, and so forth, and is one of the prosperous men of the valley. Mr. Sharpley has always evinced a keen interest in educational affairs and is ever ready with a helping hand to aid the cause. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sharpley, Ida Ellen, wife of Wyvel Mitchell, of Ada, Washington; Emma M. M., wife of Charles W. Harbor, of Murray, Idaho; Richard J., deceased; Lillie May, wife of Sylvester Arbogast, near Lane; Ethel Lura, Wilford R.

WILLIAM L. TRIPLETT. As one of the leading stockmen of the Coeur d'Alene valley and an enterprising citizen and upright man, we grant to Mr. Triplett space for a review of his life in the volume that chronicles the history of his county.

William L. Triplett was born in Triplett, Missouri, on June 24, 1859, being the son of John E. M. and Nancy (Cawthorn) Triplett. The father was a native of Franklin county, Kentucky, and came to Chariton county, Missouri, in 1844, being one of the first settlers in that section. He took government land, married there and is now living on the old homestead. He platted some of his land and named the place Triplett when a branch of the Wabash came through his place. The mother died there in August, 1901. Our subject received his education from the common schools and grew to manhood there. On January 20, 1890, at Moberly, Missouri, Mr. Triplett married Miss Ella L., daughter of John and Emma (Wickes) Windel, living at Newmarket, Shenandoah county, Virginia, where Mrs. Triplett was born. The parents died there and she came to Moberly to live with her uncle, John N. Kring, who is a retired jewelry merchant. In 1891 Mr. Triplett came to the Coeur d'Alene river and liking the county so well he selected a place and brought his family the next year. His farm is south of the river and two and one-half miles east from Lane. He has a fine farm of meadow land and cuts many tons of hay each year. Mr. Triplett has devoted himself steadily to raising stock since the time he came here, being blessed with gratifying success and is now one of the well-to-do farmers and stockmen of the county. He bought eighty acres adjoining his homestead, besides owning a valuable piece of land of eighty acres in Missouri. Two children have been born to this union: Willie K. and Nannie P. Mr. Triplett has his farm well improved, having a good house, large barn, substantial outbuildings, excellent orchard and much other improvement. He is a man of excellent standing in the community and having the good will and esteem of all.

EDWARD C. RAY. Few men have had more varied experiences in responsible capacities in the range of the western mining country than the subject of this article, who is now living a retired life in Lane, being a man of stanch integrity, fine capabilities, possessed of worth and sagacity that have been demonstrated in a long career of activity and faithful walk.

Edward C. Ray was born in Randolph county, North Carolina, on December 13, 1835, being the son of Mark and Mary Ray. In 1853 Mr. Ray came across the plains with a mixed train of mule and ox teams and loose cattle. They made their way to Placerville, California, and he mined there for two or three years and then moved to Grass valley and in 1858 came thence to The Dalles. He bought a pack train and went to Fraser river, after which he went with Major Garnett to fight the Indians, having charge of the government herd. He was at various places in the northwest where exciting times had been had with the Indians, as near Spokane, where General Wright killed several hundred of the Indians' horses, and also in the Okanogan country. He then went to Walla Walla and rode express to Mullens camp, going through the Coeur d'Alene country in 1859. Then he speculated in cattle in California and in 1862 came to the excitement in the John Day country. In the summer of 1865 Mr. Ray was with the Wilson stampede that came as far as the present site of Wardner, but finding no gold they were gong to hang Wilson for a false report. Then he repaired to Helena and prospected until 1868, when the St. Joe excitement drew him thither. Also, in 1865, Mr. Ray was in the Sun river stampede, wherein ten thousand people were out in the wilds in the dead of winter and over one hundred were frozen to death. After the St. Joe excitement he went to Helena and mined until 1877 and then took charge of the Silver Bow in Butte. Then he went to the Wood river country and handled the Elkhorn until 1882. Next we see him superintending a mine in the Maiden region and thence he was sent to the Coeur d'Alene country. In 1886 he returned to the Coeur d'Alene country and was superintendent of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan, in 1887 of the Lost Chance, in 1888 of the Frisco, where he remained until 1891. Then he went to Nelson, British Columbia and developed a prospect. All this work was for the same company, known as the Helena, Montana, Company. In the spring of 1892 Mr. Ray came to the Coeur d'Alene river, where he bought a ranch and took up raising stock. He secured two car loads of registered Hereford cattle, paying fifty dollars per head for large and small. He has since paid attention to raising stock and is still engaged in this occupation, although he has sold his farm. Mr. Ray is an expert in the science of mining and has always commanded the best of wages and now in the golden years of his life he is entitled to the retirement and enjoyment of the good things which his labor has provided. In 1870 he went east to see his mother and his brother, E. W. Ray, arich banker of St. Joseph, Missouri. He is well liked by all and stands high in the esteem of the substantial people of the community.

EDWARD C. RAY.

TITUS BLESSING. A pioneer of the true grit and spirit, a man of sound principles and uprightness, a public minded citizen of worth and integrity, and always dominated with sagacity, keen foresight and manifesting energy and enterprise, the subject of this article is deserving of consideration in the history of his county.

Titus Blessing was born in Dubuque, Iowa, on August 4, 1855, being the son of Frank J. and Helen Blessing. When a child he went with his parents to Albert Lea, Minnesota, and when he was ten, they went to the vicinity of New Ulm. In 1876 Mr. Blessing came to Helena, Montana, and followed the mason trade, which he had learned in his youth. Later he mined and prospected in all the leading camps of the state. In 1879, May 31, Mr. Blessing married Miss Anna M., daughter of Conrad and Catherine Hoffman, seven children having been born to them: Amelia, Anna K., Rosa E., Walter L., Phillip R., Bessie, John W. Mrs. Blessing was born in Munster, Germany, on January 19, 1858, and came to California with her parents and thence by stage and wagon to Montana to see her cousin, where she met and married Mr. Blessing. In 1883 they came with team to Spokane, traveling over the Big Bend country. Then Mr. Blessing left his family in Spokane and came with pack train to the Coeur d'Alene country, being the first in there before the rush. He was one who helped draft the resolution against Chinamen coming into the Coeur d'Alene country, which is still in force. Mr. Blessing followed mining and prospecting for some time and then sold out and came to Trent, Washington, where he went into the stock business and in 1891, when the reservation was thrown open, he came to his present place at Medimont and took a homestead. He has one hundred and four acres of good land and is doing well. Mr. Blessing has held the office of justice of the peace and is an excellent officer, being faithful and impartial. He has been active in the advancement of educational facilities and is a progressive man in all lines. He has some fine placer ground in the Saint Joe region and is developing it well. Mr. Blessing and his wife are true frontier people and have done a good work in development and building up the country. Mr. Blessing fought Sitting Bull's band in 1877 and was a private scout under Buffalo Bill, who was the government scout for General Miles. He fought at Strawberry island and Ft. Peck. When the Nez Perces war broke out he came with eighty citizens of Helena to fight the redskins, but the government forbade them to do so unless they would enlist and be officered by the government. They objected and returned.

HON. JESSE P. QUARLES. This well known gentleman and patriotic and progressive citizen whose public spirited labors have redounded to the good of all and the advancement and development of the country, is well deserving a representation in the history that chronicles the items of Kootenai county history.

Jesse P. Quarles was born in Benton county, Arkansas, on November 15, 1845, being the son of Thomas and Rebecca (Cox) Quarles. He received his education in the log cabin school house of the day and remained with his parents until he had grown to manhood. In the time of the war, Mr. Quarles acted as guide for General Phillips and as the danger increased it was found necessary to remove the family to safer quarters and so they all went to Leavenworth, Kansas, whence they returned after the war to their home only to find all improvements destroyed. They went to work improving the place and on August 20, 1868, Mr. Quarles married Miss Margaret A. Coonfield. In 1873 they started across the plains with teams and wagon and landed in Waitsburg, Washington, four months later. Soon after that they came to where Farmington now stands, and there Mr. Quarles built a hotel, after having farmed for a time on a piece of land he bought. His hotel was the first in the town and he operated it successfully for a term of years. He was elected county commissioner for a period of two terms and also served as chairman of the board. Then Mr. Quarles sold his hotel and bought a farm across in Nez Perces county, where he lived until 1891. He was elected to represent Nez Perces county in the state legislature and did excellent service. He removed from that place in 1891 to his present location two and one-half miles east from Lane, where he took a homestead and has bought as much more land, having now a fine half section of meadow, being very fertile land. He has good improvements and is one of the progressive and substantial men of the section. In 1892 Mr. Quarles was elected county commissioner of Kootenai county and two years later he was called by the people to serve as county assessor and tax collector. He has been a stanch Republican all his life until the division on silver when he became a silver Republican and is a potent factor in the campaigns. Mr. Quarles has been a Mason since 1867, holding the master degree now in the Harrison lodge. Mr. Quarles is always interested in and assists all movements for the advancement of the country and especially is he zealous and active in promoting religious and moral institutions and improvement. Nine children have been born to this worthy couple: Thomas L., deputy assessor for four years and later chief clerk in the auditor's office and county auditor and clerk of the district court; Ora R., wife of G. M. Robertson, county treasurer of Idaho county for six years; Isaac L., Richard A., of Wardner; James N., deceased; Frank, deceased; William Clyde, Lula B., Milton Ray.

PAUL L. ZIMMERMAN. To the careful industry ,enterprise and good management of Mr. Zimmerman, is due the splendid success that is his now to enjoy. He is a general merchant in Lane and carries a fine stock of goods, well selected, and by honorable treatment of patrons he has built up a fine trade, being one of the successful and substantial men of the county.

Paul L. Zimmerman was born in Breslau, the capital of Silesia, Germany, on May 31, 1860, being the son of August F. and Agnes (Prang) Zimmerman. The father was a wholesale tobacconist and did a thriving business until 1870, when he died. Our subject attended school in Germany until 1874 and migrated to the United States with his uncle, Louis Prang, who is now in business in Boston. He attended college in New York for one year and then went to Malvern, Arkansas, to work on his uncle's fruit farm. Four years later he went to Lexington, Nebraska, and there operated a farm for his mother until 1891. Then purchasing a team and wagon and a stock of dry goods he started west. He had a fresh supply shipped to him at convenient places and sold all through the Palouse country until 1896, in which year he came and opened a small store in Lane, being the first one to settle there. He did well from the start and soon a postoffice was established with Mr. Zimmerman as postmaster and since that time he has continued in this capacity to the satisfaction of all. He has now a large and well filled store with a good warehouse packed full and does an extensive business. Mr. Zimmerman handles feed and flour and has a good trade in cordwood and mining timbers with his other business. He has a nice residence in the town and has always been a leader in any movement for the benefit of the country. He is a member of the M. W. A., Camp No. 928, of Lane, being clerk of the camp. Mr. Zimmerman is the oldest of five children, his mother is now living in Boston with one of his brothers. Mr. Zimmerman is a member and stanch supporter of the Lutheran church, being an exemplary man and a first class citizen.

JAMES W. SLAYTER. Doubtless due to the efforts of the subject of this article more than any other man is the establishment of the town of Medimont and also the bringing of it to the front. Mr. Slayter is now the leading merchant of the place, having a fine two-story structure well filled with a good selection of the goods needed in the vicinity. Also he owns a comfortable residence in the town and is one of the leading and prominent men of the section.

A detailed account of Mr. Slayter's life will be acceptable reading for the volume of the county history. We note that he was born in Plymouth, Indiana, on July 28, 1858, being the son of Abraham and Margaret Slayter. He attended school in his native place and then took a course in the Normal Institute and taught three years before he was twenty. In 1878 he came with his parents to Polk county, Wisconsin, and engaged as a salesman for a time after which he took up lumbering. There, in 1884, Mr. Slayter married Miss Minnie MaGee and two children were born to them, Winona and Grover. In 1886 Mr. Slayter came to Rockford, Washington, and after he came here his wife died in the east. Then he went to Wallace and took up general merchandising until 1890, when he located the townsite of Medimont. He at once established a store and since that time has done an ever increasing trade. Mr. Slayter succeeded in getting a postoffice established at the time he came here and he was appointed postmaster. Since then he has continuously held that office to the satisfaction of all. Mr. Slayter carries a large, well selected stock of goods and is popular and stands well with all.

On February 29, 1892, Mr. Slayter married again, Miss Myrtle, daughter of Charles and Jane Cahill, becoming his wife on this occasion. Mr. Cahill was a wealthy farmer of the vicinity of Dayton, Washington, and later removed to Fairfield, where he died. Mrs. Cahill lives there yet. To Mr. and Mrs. Slayter there have been born two children, Stanley and Dale.

HON. R. KING EMERSON. From the early days of '49 to the present the subject of this sketch has been on the frontier in all the leading camps of the west and is thoroughly acquainted with the labors, hardships, successes and disappointments incident to this rugged life and it is but right to say that the result of his labors has been much development and improvement in the various places it has been bestowed. At present, Mr. Emerson dwells on a valuable ranch about one mile south from Medimont and there devotes much of his attention to general farming and stock raising.

King Emerson was born in Clark county, Kentucky, on April 3, 1832, being the son of James and Mary Emerson. When a child he went with his parents to Randolph county, Missouri, where they remained until the spring of 1850, then they started across the plains with ox teams in a large train. Indians were hostile and they were forced to drive the oxen with whip in one hand and a trusty rifle in the other. The trip was fraught with great danger, hardship and deprivation but in four months and six days from the time of starting they landed in Eldorado county, California, and at once went to delving for the hidden treasures. Later they were in Solano county and followed farming and stock raising; then the parents returned to Missouri and our subject went back to Eldorado county. The father died in Missouri, on December 11, 1863, on his seventy-second birthday. The mother died three weeks later in Linn county, the same state. In 1866, Mr. Emerson went to Helena, Montana, and thence to Jefferson county. He followed stock raising and also kept the Emerson hotel. In 1872 he was elected representative to the state legislature on the Democrat ticket and later was chosen as county assessor. In 1879 Mr. Emerson came to Butte, Montana, and there remained until 1881, when he went to Missoula. In the fall of 1883 he established the half-way house between Trout creek and Eagle City and operated the same and prospected through the Coeur d'Alene country. Following this he was in business four years in Wardner; in 1892 Mr. Emerson came to the Saint Mary's country, homesteaded and went to raising stock. Later he sold that place and bought his present home which is a fine piece of land where he raises cattle. In addition to this Mr. Emerson operated in the mercantile field for two years.

On September 3, 1857, Mr. Emerson married Miss Mary A. Douglas, in Solano county, California. One child has been born to them, Nettie, wife of John Gillie, of Butte.

JOSIAH ROBERTS. This interpid pioneer and stirring business man is carrying on a farm and also operating a hotel which is known as the half-way place between Saint Maries and Santa, on the Saint Mary's river. Mr. Roberts secured his land by homestead right and since the date of settlement in 1893 he has constantly been active in developing the country and gaining new settlers for this fertile region.

Josiah Roberts was born in Nodaway county, Missouri, on September 10, 1863, being the son of John and Elizabeth (Corner) Roberts. In 1873 the family came west to Portland, Oregon, and the father took a homestead and gave his attention to farming, paying attention also to stock raising. Our subject was educated in the public schools and came in due time to the Inland Empire country, locating his homestead on the Saint Mary's as stated. When the mining excitement broke out at Tyson, Mr. Roberts was among the very first to locate in that section where he secured some mining claims. He also began to investigate and found some valuable diggings on his own homestead which was a surprise to all. Mr. Roberts is a member of the M. W. A. at Santa and is a man of excellent qualities and first-class standing. He has been a great traveler having made five trips across the plains, three of which were made in 1885. He has had much trouble with the Indians and lost one hundred head of stock besides having some of his men seriously wounded. He had several narrow escapes from the savages himself and the experiences of his travels would make an interesting volume themselves. He took fifteen thousand head of cattle to Texas and Old Mexico and in 1890 finished this work and settled down to farming, later coming to the favored spot of the Saint Mary's. Mr. Roberts is one of the prominent men of this vicinity and is a real pioneer with the courage and endurance to accomplish the frontiersman's labors.

SILAS RENFRO, deceased. No enumeration of the worthy pioneers of the Saint Marys region would be complete without special mention of the esteemed gentleman to whom we grant a memorial in the volume of his county's history.

Silas Renfro was born in Grayson county, Kentucky, on January 25, 1828, and Mrs. Renfro was born in the same county on July 6, 1848. They removed to Brown county, Illinois, and then to Linn county, Missouri, where they were married on July 7, 1862. Mr. Renfro was in the state militia under Captain Moses Roush and after his service he removed to Brown county, Illinois, and there followed farming until 1865. Then came a move to Henry county, Missouri, and two years later they went thence to Jasper county, in the same state. Later they were in Marion county, Iowa, and in 1878 came to Lane county, Oregon, where Mr. Renfro located a homestead. In 1888 they came with their cattle and drove their teams to Kootenai county and located near the mouth of the Saint Marys, where Saint Maries now stands. On January 12, 1889, Mr. Renfro passed away and the heavy burdens of caring for the family rested on Mrs. Renfro alone. The deceased was a man of good qualities and received the respect and esteem of all, doing excellent work in building up the west. Mrs. Renfro decided to sell her place at the first location and did so in May, 1890. Then she came and took the land where Santa now stands. She went to work with a will and a keen wisdom and foresight characterized her actions. That she was right in her calculations is evidenced by the signal success that has followed her. She soon saw the opening for a hotel on her ranch and built one. She secured a postoffice in 1894 and has since continued in the discharge of the duties of this office to the satisfaction of all. She soon sold the hotel, then built her present store building, having also operated a store before this was built. She has steadily pursued the way of business and is blessed with a good trade in the mercantile line, handles a feed stable, and is one of the leading personages of the southern portion of the county. In the spring of 1902 Mrs. Renfro platted a townsite and has sold many lots since that time. She is a capable business woman, has the good will and admiration of all and is deserving of the abundant success and good things that are hers now to enjoy. Eight children have been born to this estimable lady, named as follows: Stephen Edward, Mrs. Rhoda A. Post, John H., James B., Clark, Mary E., deceased, Harvey, Mrs. Nora A. Walkup, Cora. All the children are at home or near, except Mrs. Post, who is in Lane county, Oregon. In addition to the enterprises which we have mentioned, Mrs. Renfro has steadily pursued the occupation of raising stock and now has a fine band of cattle. In the fall of 1902 Mrs. Renfro caused to be constructed a residence in Santa, that has not its equal in the upper Saint Maries country. It contains seven rooms and is strictly modern and of neat design.

HENRY R. GRIFFUS. Although the subject of this article has been but a short time in this section of the country, still he has identified himself with its interests in such a practical and strong way that he is considered one of the substantial and leading men of the community. Mr. Griffus and son have some valuable mining property for which he has refused three thousand dollars. In addition to this he is a first class millwright and labors at his trade, being skillful and capable.

Henry H. Griffus was born in Saginaw county, Michigan, on February 9, 1856, where he grew to manhood and received his education. He learned the trade in his native place and at once commenced to labor in it and most of the time since that date he has wrought with industry and wisdom. On January 11, 1878, Mr. Griffus married Miss Anna R. Smeaton and to them has been born one child, John W., of Tyson. Mr. Griffus came to Idaho on September 27, 1901, and soon became interested in mining properties near Tyson. He has continued here since and has good properties, being respected and esteemed by all, a man of ability, industry and integrity. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Oakley Lodge, No. 198, in Michigan, and is past grand of the order.

ELISHA J. WILSON resides two and one-half miles southeast from Santa on the Saint Mary's river, where he owns a good farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which he secured from the government by homestead right in 1890. The place has some excellent timber and contains a cultivated portion of twenty acres. Mr. Wilson has good improvements and is one of the substantial and progressive citizens of the county. Mr. Wilson is the son of James and Elizabeth (Harboor) Wilson, natives respectively of Virginia and Ohio. They were married in Champaign county, Ohio, and there our subject was born on August 5, 1832. His great-grandfather on the mother's side was in General Washington's army and the son of this patriot served in the war of 1812. When Elisha was a child the family went to Defiance county, Ohio, but returned a few years later. In 1841 they went to Jefferson county, Iowa. In these places this son was educated and in 1859 he left home and returned to Ohio. At the breaking out of the war he was caring for his grandmother, a woman of ninety years, and he could not in honor leave her to enlist, although he desired to do so. At the close of the war this aged lady passed away and our subject returned to Iowa. In February, 1867, he married Miss Anna C. Nelson, a native of Sweden. She came to the United States when she was nine years old. Mr. Wilson farmed in Iowa for several years and then removed to Blanchard county, Missouri. Three years after that he went to Beatrice, Nebraska, and farmed until 1888, in which year he located near Moscow. In 1890 he came to his present place, being one of the first men to settle here. He has done a noble work in opening the country and is deserving of the credit always due the intrepid and courageous pioneer. Mr. Wilson does general farming and raises some stock. He has always been a progressive and public minded citizen and now in the golden years of his life he is entitled to enjoy the good things which his industry and thrift have provided. Seven children have been born to this household and they are named as follows: Frank, in Kootenai county; Mrs. Leticia Weigle, of this county; Mrs. Ophelia McGuire, of Moscow; Edward, of Moscow; Mrs. Elizabeth Renfro, of Santa, Marion, Clarence.

HON. SAMUEL E. HENRY. This young and prominent attorney has made a name for himself, not only in Kootenai county, but throughout the state of Idaho, which grants him prestige and an enviable distinction. This has been done by his masterly ability, not only in the practice of law, wherein he has gained a brilliant success, but also in the halls of state legislation, where he has left a record that causes his opponents to fear him and his friends to give warm approbation.

Reverting to his personal career, we note that he was born in Findlay, Ohio, on December 27, 1865, being the son of J. C. and Levina (Ferguson) Henry, natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania, respectively. There were twelve children in the family, named as follows: C. W., married and living in Kansas; Samuel E., the subject of this article; Cora, married; Daisy, wife of W. P. Buell, in Shreveport, Louisiana; Maggie, wife of James McKeever, in Fremont, Nebraska; G. A., married and living in Missouri Valley, Iowa; Albert, married and living in Deadwood, South Dakota; Francis, married and living in Omaha, Nebraska; J. C., Jr., married and living in Omaha, Nebraska; Laura, married and living in Missouri; Tutsey, deceased; Turwines.

The parents came to Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1871, and there the father did business as one of the leading shoe merchants until he retired. He is now there, aged seventy-six, and the mother is sixty-four.

Samuel E. was educated in the schools of Council Bluffs and at Drake University, Des Moines, then completing his law course in the same university in

HON. SAMUEL E. HENRY.

1889. He located in Council Bluffs and practiced until 1890, and then came to Bonner's Ferry and opened an office, where he has done a lucrative business since that time.

In 1894 Mr. Henry married Miss Gertrude M., daughter of A. F. and Kate Annis, and to them one child has been born, Patrick Henry.

In the political realm Mr. Henry has done a fine work and has shown his ability to the satisfaction of all who reposed confidence in him. He is a stanch Republican and imbued with the patriotism of the principles which that party holds forth. In 1894 he was nominated to represent Kootenai and Latah counties in the state legislature, and although the Democrats and Populists combined against him in their candidate, William Vangaske, he beat his opponent by three hundred. In the house he at once began to act and assisted materially in passing the irrigation bill, which was strongly opposed. He was the father of the county division bill, which would have divided Kootenai county and made Bonner's Ferry the county seat. The bill passed his house by twenty-one to eleven but was killed in the other house. Mr. Henry killed the bill that would have taken the institution from Moscow and placed a portion of it at Weiser. The next fight was between the candidates for United States Senate, they being Sweet and Shoop. Shoop was finally elected after a sixty-day fight. In the fight regarding the changing of the boundaries of the county of Blain and Logan, Mr. Henry held the house for three days, the house being in committee of the whole. At the expiration of that period, the house resumed regular session and reported progress. Again the house went into committee of the whole and Mr. Henry was appointed chairman. During this important sitting three of the most important bills of the entire session were prepared for passage and practically settled and the Idaho Statesman, commenting upon it, said if the house would allow Henry to act as chairman he would have cleared up the calendar in twenty minutes. In 1899 Mr. Henry was again before the people, but as his party was defeated, he went with it and since that time he has been paying his attention closely to the practice of his profession in which his native acumen, deep penetration, keenness, excellent fortification by constant and careful reading have made him eminently successful and he is sought after by a large clientage.

JOHN McLEAN, a farmer and miner near Santa, is the son of John and Ann McLean, natives of the highlands of Scotland. They came to the township of Erin, Wellington county, in the province of Ontario, in the early part of the nineteenth century, and there our subject was born on July 18, 1833. He was educated there and grew to manhood, remaining with his parents until 1866. In that year Mr. McLean migrated to Whitecreek, Huron county, Michigan, and engaged in lumbering. There, on November 27, 1868, Mr. McLean married Miss Mary Self, who is descended from German and English ancestry. Thirteen children were born to this marriage: Charles A., William J., George, Walter, Daniel, Frank, Arthur, Laughlin, Fred, deceased, Mrs. Maggie Trader, Rachel, Mary and Lorilla. Walter enlisted in the late war from Michigan, but was mustered out in the south before he got into active service. William J. and George enlisted in the Philippine war from Washington and went all through the struggle in the Philippine islands. George is now in Oregon City and William went to Great Falls, Montana. Walter went to Portland, Oregon, after the war and then shipped to Liverpol as a sailor, having had some considerable experience before the mast previous to this time. Charles A., the oldest son, came to Spokane and thence to Camas Cove mining section and located a claim which he and his partner sold for four thousand dollars. He also owns several mining claims with his father and has a timber claim which is valuable. He is also a heavy stockholder in the Richmond Mining Company. Our subject came to his present home in Santa in May, 1901, and located a homestead of one quarter section. He purchased another quarter and has some valuable property. Mr. McLean has always been an enterprising and progressive man, being one of the men whose labors count for development and upbuilding in all lines and whose walk is above reproach, being respected and esteemed by all.

JOSEPH T. DUGAN. No mention of southern Kootenai county would be complete were there failure to grant consideration to the well known gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, since he is prominent in educational circles of the county and also had much to do in opening the Tyson camp and is a man of ability and excellent standing.

Joseph T. Dugan was born in Bond county, Illinois, on January 3, 1871, being the son of John W. and Sarah (Williams) Dugan. The father responded to the first call for ninety-day men and then enlisted in Company —— for three years. He served out this time and then organized a company of Home Guards of which he was captain. In 1881 he went to Fayette county where he followed merchandising until 1896 and then went to Winslow, Arkansas, where he died in March, 1902. Our subject gained his primary education in the common schools and then took his degree from Almyra, now Greenville College, at Greenville, Illinois. After this he took a special course in Vandalia state normal and thus was especially well fitted for teaching. He followed this important occupation for four years in Illinois and in June, 1894, came to Rathdrum, Idaho, where he had two brothers and one sister living. Mr. Dugan at once took up teaching there and in the fall of 1900 took charge of the school between Fernwood and Santa. During vacations Mr. Dugan followed the highly interesting work of prospecting and has various claims in the vicinity. He was one of the very first to call attention to the pay dirt in the vicinity of Tyson and others went to work and the discovery was made. He located some of the first ground in the camp and now has a large holding there, including the Pittsburg Jane, Vandalia, Beauty and others, which he owns with his brothers in Rathdrum. Mr. Dugan located the Cedar Creek which he sold to D. C. Corbin of Spokane. Mr. Dugan has about as heavy interest in the camp as any individual and is one of the prominent men of the section. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Saint Maries Lodge No. 32, also of the M. W. A. of Rathdrum. Mr. Dugan is an enterprising and capable young man and has the esteem and good will of all.

AMOS D. VAN ORSDAL. Just south of Tyson is the home place of our subject. This was acquired from the government by homestead right and is one of the choice pieces of land in this vicinity, being both timber and hay land. Mr. Van Orsdal has labored here with enterprise and wisdom and has done a goodly share in developing the country.

Amos D. Van Orsdal was born in Keokuk, Iowa, on June 11, 1867, being the son of Valencourt and Louisa (Wright) Van Orsdal. The mother died the year of his birth. His father was born in Missouri and crossed the plains in the early fifties, taking part in the mining industry in California. He also raised stock and speculated in stock considerable. He returned to Keokuk via Panama and New York, and there married. He was one of the early settlers in Keokuk, owning a farm where part of the city now stands. He operated a livery there and also had a towing boat on the Mississippi and was well known in Iowa and Missouri until his death in 1892. Our subject gained his education in Keokuk and in 1888 came to Baker City, Oregon and later went on to Malheur county, where his brother-in-law, Charles Becker, lived near Westfall, engaged in the stock business. Mr. Van Orsdal rode the range until 1894 and then came to Grangeville and followed freighting until 1899, when he came to his present place, and since that time he has been identified with the interests of this section. Mr. Van Orsdal has good improvements and a valuable home place. He owns the Goldbug quartz and the Last Chance placer claims, being deeply interested in mining here. Mr. Van Orsdal is a member of the M. W. A. of Santa. He is a man entitled to and the recipient of the respect and confidence of the entire community.

SAMUEL B. RITCHEY. A well-known business man of Tyson, being the pioneer merchant and hotel man of the camp, while he also now handles, in addition to these industries, a feed stable and is postmaster.

Samuel B. Ritchey was born in Lane county, Oregon, on May 31, 1859, being the son of Matthew B. and Mary G. (Craig) Ritchey, natives of Indiana and Ohio, respectively. They were married in Iowa and in 1853 crossed the plains with ox teams and located on a donation claim in Lane county. There they remained until their death, the father passing away in 1891 and the mother in 1899. They were among the earliest pioneers of that section and were well known and highly respected people. Our subject was educated in his native place and came to Farmington, Washington, locating a homestead across the line in Latah county, Idaho. There he resided and did general farming until 1901, when he sold out and came to Tyson, taking up the industries mentioned above. He has proved himself a capable business man and is achieving a gratifying success in his labors. Mr. Ritchey was one of the first locaters of mining property here and now has one placer claim, interests in others and a portion of the stock of the Richmond Gold Mining and Milling Company. He is a member of the Maccabees, and when in Latah county was justice of the peace, and was also constable for three years.

On December 31, 1889, Mr. Ritchey married Miss Emma B., daughter of John and Martha Cummings, who were among the earliest pioneers of Latah county. They put out the first orchard of that county. At present their home is in Alberta, Canada. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ritchey—Melvin D., deceased; Hettie May. Mr. Ritchey has always shown himself to be a progressive and enterprising citizen, and has done a good part in the development of the country, being a man of public spirit and generosity. He has several valuable quartz claims and is secretary of the Miners' Association of the camp.

JOHN Q. TYSON. Among the pioneers of Kootenai county it is right that we should make especial mention of the gentleman whose name is at the head of this article, being a man of energy, integrity and sagacity, as his works and walk will show.

John Q. Tyson was born in Lane county, Oregon, on January 6, 1866, being the son of James B. and Mary A. (Price) Tyson. He remained with his parents near Eugene, Oregon, until 1877, and then they all moved to Farmington, Washington. He was educated here and in Oregon, and in 1886 took a trip to Santa Rosa, California, where he lived until 1890. Then he returned to Farmington and the same year he came to the section of country where he now resides. Mr. Tyson was pleased with the country and at once bought the relinquishment of a man by the name of Ritchey, who was the only settler here then, and the country was wild and new. Mr. Tyson went to work at farming and raising stock, and more or less he has continued at this since that time. He now owns eighty acres adjoining the town of Tyson and has it well improved. In addition to the labors mentioned he has paid considerable attention to mining and was one of the first to locate claims in the now well known Tyson camp. He has interests in several valuable quartz and placer claims and was one of the incorporators of the Wasco Mining and Milling Company, being one of the enterprising and progressive citizens of this country whose labors have done a great deal to bring it to its present development.

On June 10, 1894, Mr. Tyson married Miss Mary J., daughter of Hughes and Susan East, of Emida. Three children have been born to them—Guy, Richard Dewey, Ruth. Mr. Tyson has always been active in promoting educational facilities, as he has also in the general progress and building up the country and he is one of the substantial and well respected citizens.

PETER DESGRANGES, JR. A miner with the true spirit of '49, as will be developed in what follows, a man of energy and ability, well experienced in the ways of business, a public minded and progressive citizen, one of the leading promoters of the Tyson mining region, the subject of this article should be represented in this history and with pleasure we grant him this consideration.

Peter Desgranges was born in Buffalo, New York, on May 14, 1858, being the son of Peter and Sophia (Dushan) Desgranges. Our subject received his education in the schools of his native place and in 1870 he came with his parents to Waverly, Bremer county, Iowa, where he remained until 1880. In that year he came, via San Francisco, Portland, and Walla Walla to Rockford, Washington, the trip from Walla Walla being with teams. Two small houses were then the sum total of Rockford. Mr. Desgranges took a homestead and later was connected with his brother, H. W. Desgranges, in handling a newspaper in Rockford. At one time they were burned out and securing a small outfit, they continued the paper without the loss of a single issue. Mr. Desgranges was active and capable in the newspaper world and brought out a sheet that was prized and approved. On March 1, 1900, the discovery of gold was made at Tyson and our subject promptly locked the door of his office, bestrode a cayuse, packed another and made his way to the new fields. He was one of the first on the ground and swam the raging flood of the St. Marys river in his trip. He secured some of the most valuable claims in the vicinity and has stayed with the camp since that date. He was one of the organizers of the Richmond Gold Mining and Milling Company, it being the first company organized here. Mr. Desgranes is the heaviest stockholder and is also a stockholder in the Wasco company, which is very promising. The former company has the original discovery claims and Mr. Desgranges is secretary and treasurer. Mr. Desgranges is doubtless the man whose energy and interest has done more for Tyson than any other one man and he is deserving of great credit for his labors. On March 5, 1903, he married Elizabeth Evans, who was born August 21, 1870, at Belmont, Ohio.

PINK C. MASHBURN. This worthy and enterprising citizen, whose labors have wrought out an abundant success in the financial world of Kootenai county, is entitled to a place in its history because of his success, his ability, his standing, and his sterling integrity and intrinsic worth.

Pink C. Mashburn was born in Cherokee county, North Carolina, on July 29, 1849, being the son of Joshua and Sarah (McMahau) Mashburn. The father died in 1862. Our subject grew up on a farm and was married February 1, 1887, to Miss Allie, daughter of Henry and Mary (Hamphill) Whitener. The ancestors of both Mr and Mrs. Mashburn were early pioneers of the county of Cherokee, North Carolina. In 1892 Mr. Mashburn came west with his family, settling near Oakesdale, Washington. One year later he came to Indian creek, Kootenai county, near what is now Sanders. He took a squatter's right and improved the land until 1900, when he sold the property and bought his plesent place, at the mouth of Santa creek. He has a half section of fine land in that place and enough more in other places to make over seven hundred acres. He raises much hay and also handles and raises many cattle. Mr. Mashburn is one of the most prosperous men of this community and it is due to the great wisdom and industry that he has manifested in the manipulation of his business affairs in the time in which he has domiciled here. When Mr. Mashburn first came to the county, he was possessed of but little of this world's goods and his entire holding of stock and land which will doubtless aggregate twenty thousand dollars, has been gained here. When in Sanders, he was postmaster for some time. In political matters, he has evinced the interest that is becoming the intelligent citizen and is a progressive and public minded citizen. Seven children have been born to our subject and his estimable wife: Charlie, deceased, Florence M., Benjamin L., Luther W., Jessie L., Quincy I., deceased, and Olive B.

FRANCIS M. GUNN. In 1897 we find that Mr. Gunn came to the Santa and since that time he has been one of the leading stockmen of the country, now having a large band of cattle, numbering between one and two hundred. He is a substantial and esteemed citizen and has the good will of all.

Francis M. Gunn was born in Cass county, Missouri, on September 17, 1860, being the son of James M. and Eliza (Wallace) Gunn. The father, who was in the Union army, was killed in battle. Our subject grew up on a farm and in the spring of 1880, started across the plains with teams and wagon. His sister and brother-in-law, Perry Prettyman, accompanied him. They came direct to Whitman county and located near Oakesdale, taking a homestead and engaging in raising stock and general farming.

On February 16, 1882, Mr. Gunn married Miss Cora, daughter of Nathaniel L. and Angeline Strenge, who came from the state of Missouri. Mr. Strenge came to California in 1849, then went to Oregon where he was married. He lived in Linn county some time and there Mrs. Gunn was born on April 24, 1864. Soon after that date the family moved back to Missouri and later returned to the west by team. This time they located near Oakesdale where the parents now live, retired. Our subject remained in the vicinity of Oakes-dale until 1897. He was engaged in general merchandising in Oakesdale for a long time and in the year mentioned he came to his present place on Santa creek. He is living in the town of Emida and attends to his stock business from there. Mr. Gunn is considered as one of the substantial and capable business men of the country and has always been in the front in any line of improvement. Four children have been born to this happy couple, Stella Frances, Maude Pearl, deceased, Claude Earl, Nina Pearl.

HUGHES EAST. The esteemed and substantial gentleman and public minded citizen of whom we now have the pleasure of speaking was born in Lawrence county, Indiana, on December 11, 1842, being the son of Hughes and Rosa East. He grew to manhood and was educated in his native place. On September 20, 1861, he enlisted in Company F, Forty-third Indiana Volunteers, going in as a private and rising by merit to the position of corporal. He first served under General Buell in the Army of the Tennessee, then was transferred to Grant's army. He served in the sieges of Vicksburg and Memphis, was in the battle of Helena and many skirmishes in Mississippi and then was transferred to General Steele's army in Arkansas. He participated in the battle of Little Rock, fought Price several times and took part in the Red river expedition. From Camden his regiment was ordered to Pine Bluff and there he fought at Mark's Mill and received a wound in his leg. He languished in prison for a month and then was paroled. On his way home he volunteered to assist in driving out Morgan, who was troublesome, and having done that he went home, whence he soon returned to the front and served continuously until June 20, 1865, when he was mustered out. Mr. East's first battle was at Madrid, Missouri, and he also fought at Island No. 10, besides many conflicts not mentioned and numerous skirmishes. During the war Mr. East was forced to endure great hardships, was in the heat of battle or on the march almost constantly and was always found to be a faithful, courageous and unflinching soldier. He is now a member of the G. A. R. at Garfield.

While on the furlough home Mr. East married Miss Susan, daughter of Valentine and Harriet Rainbolt, the date of the wedding being July 12, 1864. Mrs. East was born in Greene county, Indiana, on February 11, 1842. In 1867 they removed to Jasper county, Iowa, then to Shelby county, where they farmed until 1879. In that year they started across the plains, having a family of six children. They came to the Palouse country and camped where Garfield now stands. They located a homestead about two miles south and commenced to improve. Mr. East, on a prospecting tour, came to his present home place in the vicinity of Emida in 1881. Being so well pleased with it he determined to make it his permanent home. In the spring of 1885 he came thither with two others and since that time he has constantly been in the good work of improving and building up the country. He has a valuable ranch, has handled considerable stock and is a leading citizen. In May, 1900, Mr. East engaged in general merchandise and in August, 1902, he sold out to his partner, Mr. Levi Crow. At present Mr. East is leading a retired life in Emida and is fully entitled to enjoy the good things his labor has provided, for he has materially assisted in building up this section and was one of its very first settlers. Mr. and Mrs. East are the parents of nine children: Annie L., wife of Joseph Gill, of Kootenai county; Lela, wife of Edward E. Dawson, of Emida; Louisa, wife of Guy Davis, of Harrison; Thomas J., married to Bessie Sherman, of Emida; Luther; Mary, wife of John Tyson, of Tyson; Katie, Jennie A., Grover. Mr. and Mrs. East have always evinced a great interest in religious and educational work and have done much toward uplifting the community and placing it on a better plane.

WILLIAM DAWSON. About a quarter of a mile from Emida postoffice we find the home of our subject and the thrift and industry that he has put forth have made the wild a fertile farm and given him a valuable and comfortable home place.

William Dawson was born in Jasper county, Missouri, on March 14, 1866, being the son of Levi M. and Charlotte (Hays) Dawson. The father enlisted for a short service in the Confederate army and then returned to his farm. Our subject grew to manhood in the native place and received his education there, as well as a good training on the farm. In 1879, with his parents, he came to Walla Walla, crossing the plains with teams. Later we see him in Spokane, and in the vicinity of Waverly the father took a homestead and there engaged in general farming and raising stock.

On January 19, 1888, Mr. Dawson married Miss Martha J., daughter of Mordecai and Dora Griffith, of Rosalia. In the fall of 1890 he came to his present place and entered land as a homestead. Few settlers were in this entire region and our subject, being a real pioneer, was forced to endure the hardships and perform the trying and arduous labors incident to making a fine farm from the wilderness. He has given his attention to general farming somewhat, but is mostly occupied in raising hay and stock. He has eighty acres seeded to timothy and has also some fine specimens of mutton sheep, as well as some cattle. Mr. Dawson is a member of the M. W. A. at Emida and is one of the leading and substantial men of this section. Four children have been born to this household: Corry William, Ollie, Bertha Pearl and Lillie May.

LEVI CROW. This well known business man is proprietor of a general merchandise establishment in Emida, where he is doing a thriving business and is both popular and sustains a reputation which has given him the confidence and good will of all.

Levi Crow was born in the vicinity of Carthage,

Missouri, on May 17, 1868, being the son of William and Catherine (Hays) Crow, natives of Kentucky and Ohio, respectively. The father enlisted in Company E, Thirteenth Kansas Cavalry and served in Kansas, Missouri and Arkansas all through the war and was honorably discharged at the close. He was married in 1866 near Carthage. In 1873 he was killed by the kick of a horse. Our subject remained with his mother until her death in 1879 and then in 1881 came across the plains with his uncle, George E. Ray, direct to Thurston county, Washington. He attended common school and finished his education in the Collegiate Institute at Olympia. Then he bought land and farmed until February 6, 1892, when he started for the Santa valley. He entered a homestead about two miles below the present Emida, where he has about sixty acres of timothy and here he gave his attention to raising stock until October, 1901, when he sold his stock and took a half interest in a general merchandise establishment with Mr. East. In August, 1902, Mr. Crow bought the interest of Mr. East and now has a fine store. The building is 24x40, well filled with a fine assortment for the trade and the entire establishment breathes of the business spirit and enterprise of the proprietor, while the community manifest their confidence and approval of Mr. Crow's methods by granting him a first-class patronage. Mr. Crow is a member of the M. W. A., at Emida, and has held the office of justice of the peace since 1893. He takes an active part in the educational advancement of the country and is a public spirited man.

On October 7, 1894, Mr. Crow married Miss Maud M. Davis, whose parents, Theodore and Sydney Davis, were among the first pioneers of the Santa valley. Three children were born to them: William G., Rosa M. and Myrton E. On June 20, 1900, Mrs. Crow was called away by death. On May 20, 1902, Mr. Crow took to himself a second wife, the lady being Mrs. Eugenia (Garton) Norton, who has, by her former husband, one child, Orla Norton. Our subject is one of the real builders of this section and his public spirit and enterprise have done a lion's share in pressing the country to the front and in building it up and bringing it to its present prosperous condition.

THOMAS H. FENN. A worthy pioneer, who descended from one of the pioneer families of the northwest, a reliable and upright man, a public minded and progressive citizen, it is proper that an epitome of the career of our subject be granted space in the history of Kootenai county.

Thomas H. Fenn was born in Springfield, Illinois, on March 29, 1845, being the son of John and Elizabeth (Jory) Fenn, natives of Illinois. In one of the most noted trips that a pioneer ever took, we refer to the train that Dr. Whitman led across the plains, our subject was brought by his parents from his native place to Oregon City. This was accomplished by ox teams about 1847. The father made a trip to California and was one of the fortunate ones in mining, and, returning, he took a donation claim near Albany, which was the home until the early seventies, when he came to where Rosalia now stands, took land and made a home, where he died in 1877. He was a veteran in the Indian fights in Oregon and had the hardships of hauling all his supplies from Walla Walla when at Rosalia. Our subject remained in the vicinity of Rosalia until 1887 and then came to the St. Marys river. The following year he came to the present site of Fernwood, where he took a squatter's right and began improving. He continued in raising general farm products until 1902, when he platted a portion of the land and established the town of Fernwood. The original name was Fennwood, from Mr. Fenn, but the postoffice department mistook and printed it Fernwood, and refused to rectify the mistake. It is a bright little hamlet and promises a prosperous future. Lumbering and mining are the principal industries and agriculture will be more pronounced in the future. The little log cabin where Mr. Fenn spent the first few years stands yet. It is a goodly specimen of the pioneer architecture and with its spacious fireplace, its smoke-begrimed walls and its diminutive size, speaks with eloquent voice of the pioneer's struggles and the charm even of the bare little hut which goes by the name of home. Mr. Fenn weathered all the hardships, made pilgrimages to the Palouse country, packing his blankets, to earn money to buy food and is now entitled to the prosperity that has come and is coming to crown his faithful labors. All honor to the intrepid pioneers, all honor to the courage that could pass the lonely winter nights and the lonelier days sometimes, and endure all the hardships of the rugged frontiersman with never a complaint or a sigh, that the grand new country could be opened up to the settlement and for the homes of the more timid one to follow. Such a worthy labor has been accomplished by Mr. Fenn and he is now privileged to see the crowning of the enterprise by the gathering settlers and opening industries.

CLARENCE CHAMBERS. Among those who deserve mention in the history of Kootenai county we are constrained to name the subject of this article and it is with pleasure that we can speak of him as an upright, capable and reliable citizen whose labors have done much for the development of the country.

Clarence Chambers was born in Knox county, Indiana, on January 2, 1870, being the son of William Carey and Mary (Maxwell) Chambers, natives of Indiana and North Carolina, respectively. In the fall of 1872 the family came to Linn county, Oregon, and in the spring of 1877 they came to Whitman county, where the father took land and improved it. This was near Moscow and in 1888 he sold the farm and moved to the Hoodoo mines in Latah county. Three years later he went to California and thence he returned to Palouse, where he remained until his death, November 10, 1901. The widow went back to San Francisco, where she still remains. Our subject early went into the lumbering business and also devoted considerable attention to trapping the various game of the mountains. He spent three winters thus in the Clearwater country and was successful in the enterprise. Next we see him engaged on the Saint Mary's river in the same occupation and many is the lusty bear and cunning cougar that have fallen into his snares, Mr. Chambers has been speculating in timber and has gained a gratifying success in this line. He is at present living in Fernwood, where he has a comfortable residence of five rooms and some other property.

On August 13, 1899, Mr. Chambers married Miss Elizabeth, daughter of William and Annie (Piper) Rusnell. Mr. Rusnell is now living in Fernwood. One child has been born to this happy union, Ray, born March 15, 1900. Mr. Chambers came to this country when it was wild and uninhabited and has remained continuously in the excellent labors of development and building up with a courage and enterprise that are worthy to be recognized and which have done much good for this section, not only in the actual labor accomplished, but in stimulating others to action and in leading many settlers here.

JOHN C. BOWMAN. Among those who have done excellent work in the development of southern Kootenai county we are constrained to mention the agriculturist and stockman whose name appears above.

John C. Bowman was born in Stone county, Missouri, on January 2, 1850, being the son of John C. and Elizabeth (Dewey) Bowman. Our subject grew up on a farm with his parents and during the awful times of the war the family were forced to flee from their home on account of the dire destruction that resulted from opposing armies, who were sweeping back and forth over the stricken country. All the settlers of this region were also forced to flee for their lives. Our subject and his parents went to Dallas county and when the smoke of strife ceased they returned to the farm only to find blackened ruins of all their improvements. Two uncles and one brother of Mr. Bowman were killed in the war. The father settled on his farm and went to improving it. Our subject remained there until 1873 and on December 24th of that year he as married in Taney county to Miss Mary, daughter of Benjamin and Martha May, who removed to California, where the father died, but the mother is still living in San Bernardino county. In 1875 Mr. Bowman started across the plains with ox teams. His family consisted of wife and one child when he started and two children when they landed in Crook county, Oregon, six months after the start. Soon they went to Lane county and thence in 1877 they journeyed to where Fairfield, Washington, now stands. He entered a homestead and improved it and was one of the prosperous farmers there until 1899, when he went to Mexico for the health of one of his boys. One winter was spent there and Mr. Bowman came to Saint Maries, purchasing his present place, two and one-half miles above the town. He has a quarter section, comfortable buildings and gives his attention to general farming and raising stock. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bowman, named as follows: Alvin, James Pope, deceased, Ada, wife of Levi Laird, an engineer on the steamer Schley; William, Elsie, deceased, and Earl. Mr. Bowman and his estimable wife are important additions to the society of this region and have made many warm and true friends and are highly respected, having the good will of all.

HENRI ROCHAT is one of the earliest pioneers of the Saint Joseph river country, coming here in 1884. His fine hay ranch is located nine miles above Saint Maries on the north side of the Saint Joseph river. We are especially pleased to grant him a representation in this volume, as he has always been an upright and loyal citizen and a valuable member of the community, having ever voiced and demonstrated the principles of truth and uprightness.

Henri Rochat was born in Le Pont, Switzerland, on July 5, 1828. He gained his educational training in the schools of his native place and then learned the watchmaker's trade. At the age of fifteen he commenced at this trade and more or less since that time he has continued it. In 1852 he emigrated from Switzerland to New York, then went to Virginia, but as the climate was too warm and he was opposed to slavery from principle, he returned to the banks of the Hudson and there wrought at his trade and also gave much of his time to the instruction of the free negroes. Two years later he returned to Switzerland. Soon afterward he came again to the United States, but desiring to seek his life helpmeet from his own countrywomen, he returned to Switzerland and there on September 2, 1856, Mr. Rochat married Miss Fanny Rosselet. She shared his life and faithfully walked with him until September 14, 1874, when she went to be with the Lord. Immediately after his marriage Mr. Rochat came to this country again and settled in St. Paul, Minnesota. He engaged there in the jewelry business and was favored with a fine patronage and abundantly prospered, but when the wife died he deemed it best to return to the old country, and, accordingly, in 1875, he took his little flock of six children and made the journey to Switzerland, settling in his old home place, which was known as the French Port. About eight years were spent in different places in the old country and then he brought the family back to this country and went to Walla Walla. His daughter, Matilda, had learned the watchmaking trade and started a jewelry store in Walla Walla and Mr. Rochat wrought with her. She was well known as the lady watchmaker. During that time Mr. Rochat went to the Sound country, taking his son, Paul. The latter remained there and the father came back to Walla Walla. Later he made another trip, taking his son William that time. As stated above, Mr. Rochat came to the Saint Joseph river in 1884 and in June, 1885, located his present place, which doubtless is one of the best places on the river. He and his two sons now own one section of land. He has a good six-room house, large barns and a band of cattle. Mr. Rochat is one of the thrifty and substantial men of the community.

The children born to Mr. Rochat and his devoted wife are named below: Eugene; Mrs. Eva Thomney, of Walla Walla; Mrs. Anna Berney, of Walla Walla; Matilda, now deceased; Paul, married to Miss Leah Jacot, to whom have been born five children, Mark, August, Helene, Rose and Emily; William, married to Helene De'Lepine, and to them has been born one child, Matilda.

Mr. Rochat was formerly a member of the Presbyterian church, but being exorcised as to the correctness of denominations, he gave the matter careful consideration in the light of the Scriptures alone and became thoroughly convinced that the church spoken of in the Bible, "The body of Christ," was a very different thing from the sects of man's organization. Believing this, he was forced to withdraw from his church membership, and since that time he has been without the "camp" gathered "unto His Name" alone. This position has of course brought him face to face in opposition to the popular teachings in religious matters of the day. While he firmly believes the truth of the principles that his stand bears a testimony to, how faithfully he has made his works show his faith is a matter in which all who know him may testify. Mr. Rochat has brought his children up in this faith of the Bible, always firmly believing that the Scriptures meant what they said and said what they meant. He is held in esteem by all who know him and the golden days of the years of his life are being spent in rest on the strong "Rock" where he has builded, in the security of the "strong tower" wherein he has run, and in the sweet consolation of the words spoken to the separated ones, "I will be a Father unto you."

ALBERT B. ALLEN. The valley of the Saint Joseph and the Saint Maries river has been opened as has the other frontier countries of the west, by the hardship and sturdy efforts on the part of the stanch pioneers who made their way hither in the early days and who fought and overcame the forces of nature congregated against them. Mr. Allen is one of the worthy number who has a goodly part in this development work and is to be mentioned with the pioneers of this section.

Albert B. Allen was born in Piketon, Ohio, on September 24, 1869, being the son of George W. and Catherine (Socks) Allen. The father served in the Union army. Our subject attended the common schools of his native place and grew up on a farm. Later he was favored with the training of the high schools. His mother died when he was twelve and his father is now living at Decatur, Illinois. In 1891 Albert came to Spokane, Washington, and shortly afterwards made his way to Harrison and thence in January, 1892, came over the ice to his present place. His farm is located near Saint Joe and consists of three hundred acres of fine meadow and timber land. It was a very different country when Mr. Allen tramped over the ice to take a home place and his labors have made a great change. He has good timothy meadows, fields and so forth and his residence is a fine new eight-room house. He has a large barn and handles Jersey and Shorthorn cattle. Mr. Allen owned and operated the Defender in 1898, but sold out.

On May 21, 1902, Mr. Allen married Miss Grace, daughter of Arthur A. and Cora E. Harvey, natives of Michigan. Mrs. Allen was born at Maple Rapids. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey now live on the Saint Joseph river near Saint Joe. Mr. Allen is a member of the I. O. O. F., Coeur d'Alene Lodge, No. 34. He is a well respected man and stands well in the community.

GEORGE L. HAYS. The name of Captain Hays is familiar to all dwellers in the regions of Saint Joe and the Coeur d'Alene lake. He is favorably known also wherever he is acquainted. His home is situated on the Saint Joseph river, a quarter of a mile above the town of Saint Joe. He has a fine meadow of ninety acres in timothy, good residence, commodious barns, and all outbuildings needed, and is one of the substantial and prosperous men of this section. In addition to the industry of raising hay Mr. Hays has a band of Jersey cattle.

Reverting to his personal career, we note that it began in Pike county, Ohio, on September 27, 1834, his parents being James and Margaret Hays. His native place was in the Scioto valley. He grew up on the farm and attended the public schools, some times held in the log cabins. On August 6, 1856, he married Miss Emily E., daughter of Joseph and Matilda Coleman, who came from Virginia to Ohio.

In September, 1862, Mr. Hays enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Seventeenth Ohio, and his regiment was afterwards transferred to the First Ohio Heavy Artillery. He went in as private, was promoted to a second lieutenancy in Company B, One Hundred and Seventeenth Ohio, was mustered out and received a commission as first lieutenant, was mustered out again and commissioned captain. He was in the Army of the Cumberland and served under General Sherman most of the time. He participated in the battle of Wataga river, was in many close places and hot skirmishes, where he did hard fighting, but was never wounded. Mr. Hays now has a copy of every return that he made as a commissioned officer and can give an account of every man in his company. He also has his muster out roll. Three years and twelve days he served and then took his honorable discharge and went to Ohio. He organized a couple of militia companies and drilled them, holding the position of captain in each one for five years. At the time of the riot on the Haymarket square in Cincinnati his company was called out to quell the affair. Captain Hayes has been commander of the Hibbens Post of the G. A. R. at Piketon, Ohio, for two terms. He is now a member of the A. T. McReynold's Post, No. 34, at Coeur d'Alene. In 1856 Mr. Hays was made a member of the I. O. O. F., Piketon Lodge, No. 323, and since that time he has held his membership there. He has never been behind in his dues and has taken a benefit but once.

In 1872 Captain Hays built a roller mill at Piketon and operated it until 1883. In 1889 he came to Spokane and in March, 1890, he came to his present location, taking one hundred and forty-eight acres as a squatter on the south side of the river. Few settlers were here then and the Captain has been a real pioneer in this section.

To Mr. and Mrs. Hays there have been born the following named children: Margaret, wife of John J. Patterson, of Portland, Oregon; Emily, wife of John J. Ross, on the Saint Joseph river; Hattie, wife of Frank Bishop, of Coeur d'Alene; George W.; Kate M., wife of Harris McConaughy, of Portland, Oregon. The Captain and his wife are devoted members of the Methodist church and are upright and highly respected people.

GEORGE O. NEWCOMB. The valuable estate of Mr. Newcomb lies on the Saint Joseph river about two miles above the town of St. Joseph and consists of something over on half section. It is valuable hay land and two hundred and fifty acres will raise timothy, one hundred acres being now in timothy. It is one of the fine hay ranches on the river that is noted for raising excellent timothy. Part of this land lies in Shoshone county and part lies in Kootenai county.

Mr. Newcomb is the son of George O. and Catherine A. (O'Conner) Newcomb. They were natives of New York and our subject's grandfather Newcomb was a native of Connecticut, while his great-grandfathers on both sides of the house were participants in the Revolution. The parents came to Mexico from New York state, thence to San Francisco and thence to Sacramento, in which last place their son, the subject of this sketch, was born on March 24, 1857. The father kept the Orleans Hotel in Sacramento for fourteen years and also operated the Brooks Hotel on the beach in San Francisco. Our subject received his early education in California and soon started in life for himself. He traveled all over the western states and many portions of the eastern ones. In 1880 he went to Oregon, then to Utah and in 1891 he came to his present place. He took a homestead and added by purchase until he has his present estate. Mr. Newcomb has a comfortable house, large barns, substantial outbuildings and all the improvements called for on the ranch and his place bears an appearance of thrift that bespeaks the industry and good management of the proprietor. He also owns a band of good graded Shorthorn cattle. Mr. Newcomb is a Royal Arch Mason, having been made a Mason in New York. He has held and still holds the position of justice of the peace in his precinct.

On March 29, 1898, Mr. Newcomb married Miss Rebecca J. Evans, of Buffalo, New York, and two children have been born to them, George Evans and Edward Revington.

EDWARD DIGHTON. Among the prosperous hay raisers of the St. Joseph valley is to be mentioned the gentleman whose name is at the head of this article. His fine place of one half section is located on the banks of the river at St. Joe and is one of the best hay ranches in the state of Idaho. He has three large hay barns, a good six-room house and all the improvements that are needed on the place.

Edward Dighton was born in India, on December 30, 1851, being the son of John H. and Caroline Dighton. The father was a captain in the British army and was stationed in India. He is now retired and lives in the old home place, known as the Oak House, in Newland, Gloucester county, England. The mother lives there also. When Edward was a child he was taken to England and educated in some of the leading colleges of that country. After his school days, he gave attention to the oversight of his father's estates until 1879, when he came to the United States. Landing at New York he came thence to St. Peter, Minnesota, and three years later went over the Northern Pacific to Rathdrum. Later he came to Coeur d'Alene and in 1884 he settled on his present place, taking a squatter's right. Mr. Dighton's place is not only a valuable place, but it is also a very beautiful place. He raises much stock, having some fine blooded cattle and also some good horses. Mr. Dighton came to this country with but very little of this world's goods, but now he has acquired a first-class holding of good dividend paying property.

On April 30, 1893, Mr. Dighton married Miss Annie Machen, an old acquaintance from the old country. Mr. and Mrs. Dighton are highly resepected people and are esteemed by all and have hosts of friends from all classes and are valuable members of society.

WILLIAM O'NEAL. At the head of navigation on the Saint Joseph river, in a spot where the river forms the boundary of the grounds on three sides, stands the attractive and tasty hotel and summer resort of the subject of this article. He has a fine two-story building, twenty-one bedrooms, large and airy office, excellent cuisine and dining apartments, while his parlors are fitted up in exquisite shape and the buildings are provided with pleasant nooks and porches and verandas, which offer inviting retreats of refreshments in this salubrious climate. The establishment is managed in a first class manner and all is provided for entertainment and comfort of guests that can be arranged and it is a pleasant place to retire from the worry of business and gain the joy and life to be had in the fresh air and charming surroundings.

William O'Neal was born in Harrisville, Alcona county, Michigan, on April 26, 1861, being the son of Matthew and Catherine (Miller) O'Neal. The father was a native of Canada and the mother of Germany and they were married in Monroe, Michigan, and later removed to Harrisville, being the earliest pioneers of that section. The father died in August, 1898, but the mother is still living on the old homestead. William was brought up on a farm and also followed lumbering, receiving, when a boy, a good education from the common schools. He was in the employ of Alger, Smith & Company for twenty-five years, Mr. Alger being the ex-secretary of war. Much of the time he had charge of a camp and understands the lumber business thoroughly.

On July 11, 1887, Mr. O'Neal married Miss Mary, daughter of David and Sarah Ducharme, whose parents were of French extraction and residents of Canada. In 1889 Mr. O'Neal came to Saint Maries and opened a hotel and in the spring of 1901 he came to his present place and purchased something over twenty acres and built the establishment spoken of above. He has, in addition, a separate building with a fine bar stocked with choice wines, liquors and tobaccos. In addition to this fine property Mr. O'Neal has a timber claim of one hundred and sixty acres. He is doing a good business and is being prospered.

Mr. O'Neal is a member of the Foresters at Harrison and is distributing clerk for this precinct.

JOHN W. SKELTON is a prominent business man of Saint Maries, being a member of the firm of Skelton & Warren, general merchants of that town, and he has made a good record and a gratifying success in his business enterprises, while he stands well and is one of the men whose numerous friends are numbered from every class.

John W. Skelton was born in Polk county, Tennessee, on November 11, 1861, being the son of William and Jane M. (Hannah) Skelton, natives of Tennessee. The father served in the Confederate army, under General Joseph E. Johnston, and the war devastated his property so that in 1866 he left Tennessee and went to Washington county, Arkansas, where our subject was reared and educated. His primary training was received in the common schools, and then in the Prairie Grove College he finished his education. He taught school for a time and in 1886 he married Miss Martha, daughter of Hardy and Elizabeth Warren, and together they came to Whitman county in 1887. They located near Oakesdale on a homestead and improved it and it formed the family home until 1898. In that year Mr. Skelton came to Saint Maries and in company with his brothers-in-law, Charles G. and James M. Warren, he started a general merchandise establishment. At first they opened on a small scale, but by kind and deferential treatment of patrons, a wise and careful handling of stock, they have built up a large trade and are leading merchants of the county. Charles G. sold out to our subject and to James M. Warren and the firm is composed as stated above. They carry a large stock of general merchandise and as well selected and appropriate for the country as is to be found anywhere. They also own a large two-story structure thirty by eighty feet, in the first story of which is their business. The second story is used for a lodge room and an opera house. In addition they have the building used by them before this was erected. Mr. Skelton has a fine residence and also other property.

Fraternally Mr. Skelton is affiliated with the M. W. A., Camp No. 8555, and with the Saint Maries Lodge, No. 32, of the I. O. O. F., being a charter member and past grand of the latter order. Mr. and Mrs. Skelton have been blessed with six children, named as follows: William Roy, deceased, Elizabeth I., Lou, James Robert, Maud and Una. Mr. Skelton has made a good record in his business career, having been universally successful since he came west and he has accumulated a goodly holding.

WILLIAM S. COLE. Saint Maries has been fortunate from the start in getting a class of men who are enterprsing and have the interests of the town at heart and are possessed of ability sufficient to carry forward the various industries that combine to make a live and progressive town. Among this number is to be mentioned the gentleman whose name initiates this article and who stands at the head of one of the most important industries of the section, namely that of cheese making. Saint Maries is, and will be, distinctively a dairy country and the early inauguration of home plants to handle the products of the ranches will be of untold benefit to the community. To the keen foresight and energy of Mr. Cole is to be credited the initial move in this direction. A brief review of his life will be interesting matter in the county history and therefore we append it.

William S. Cole was born in the vicinity of Springfield, Illinois, on December 26, 1859, being the son of John and Rebecca (Montanye) Cole. While he was a child the family went to Scott county, Minnesota, and he was reared on a farm. They dwelt a time in Renville county, and when William was twenty years of age he went to Page county, Iowa, where his parents had preceded him and in College Springs he apprenticed himself to learn the important business of cheese making. Having perfected himself in this labor he came west to Portland, Oregon, the date being 1887. The next spring he went to Ritzville, Washington, engaging in grain raising for a time, after which he bought railroad land and improved the same. In 1890 he went to Postfalls and in the fall of the same year he came to Saint Maries. He was one of the earliest pioneers and various labors engaged him until 1896, having in the meantime taken a preemption. Then he took a trip to his old home in Iowa. In the spring of 1897, accompanied by his brother, Joseph A., he came west and together they built the Saint Maries cheese factory and in 1898 started the industry. From the outset, the factory was a success and as the fine quality of its productions became more and more known, there could not enough be manufactured to allow of shipment, as the home demand was sufficient to consume it all. No higher commendation could be given to the institution than his. The skill and business ability of the management which rests in our subject are apparent in thus gaining a fine success from the start. The factory is a story and one-half structure, the upper part being rented out. In addition to a two-thirds interest in this business and plant, the brothers own a hay ranch of two hundred and forty acres above the town, a five-acre tract in the town, and a nice modern dwelling of eight rooms, also some town property. Joseph A. is purser on the Schley, one of the finest steamers on the lake.

The factory has a capacity of four hundred pounds per day and we consider it one of the most important industries in the entire valley. It is decidedly a step in the right direction and in time, under the skillful management of the capable overseer, will develop into a far reaching and very beneficial promoter of the wealth and advancement of the entire valley.

The parents came west in 1898, also another brother, John. They reside in Saint Maries, being retired. John owns a hay ranch and town property. Our subject is a member of the M. W. A., Camp No. 8555, and all the brothers belong to the I. O. O. F., Saint Maries Lodge, No. 32. He has one sister, Mrs. Mary Brummett, in Nodaway county, Missouri. The family are all adherents of the Methodist church and are devoted supporters of the faith.

SYLVESTER RAMEY. At one time Mr. Ramey was one of the sturdy pioneers of the west, did a good share in opening up different sections for the abode of men, has achieved success in his labors and is now one of the retired citizens of Harrison, where he is highly esteemed and respected for his worth and his integrity and stanch qualities.

Sylvester Ramey was born in Buchanan county, Virginia, on April 30, 1847, being the son of Charles and Nancy Ramey. He was educated in Virginia and at the breaking out of the war he enlisted in the Twenty-ninth Kentucky Cavalry and served eight months in the Union army. He was on scout duty much of the time, and being a mere boy he was worn out by his service and was discharged. He came with his parents to Minnesota and there in February, 1864, he enlisted again, this time in the First Minnesota, Company E, Heavy Artillery, and was stationed at Chattanooga, where he remained until the close of the war, being under General Curtis. When the war was over he received his honorable discharge and returned to Minnesota to take up the civilian's duties once more. He engaged in farming there and on March 17, 1867, he married Miss Delilah C. Gilbert. At his home place Mr. Ramey was supervisor for ten years. It was in 1880 that Mr. Ramey brought his wife and six children via San Francisco and Portland to Texas Ferry, on the Snake river, in Washington. Later he went to Rosalia, in the same state, and then to Rockford. He engaged in lumbering there and in 1890 came to the Coeur d'Alene river, near where Harrison is. He took up the stock business and also lumbering and he gained a good success in each line. He gave his undivided attention to the prosecution of his business until 1902, when he sold out and removed to Harrison, where he has a fine home, his house being in one of the choice locations of the town and a five room structure of modern architectural design. Mr. Ramey also owns some other valuable property in the town and is one of the substantial men. Mr. Ramey is a member of the J. B. Wyman Post, No. 44, Department of Washington and Alaska, of the G. A. R., at Rockford.

To Mr. and Mrs. Ramey have been born six children, named as follows: William J., of Nez Perces county; Mrs. Polly J. Roscoe, of Kootenai county; Mrs. Roxie VanAmburg, of Harrison; Mrs. Victoria Bailey, of Harrison; Charles P., of Nez Perces county; Mrs. Effie Ribstein, of Harrison.

JOSEPH FISHER is the real promoter of the town of Saint Maries, now a thriving village, and to his efforts more than to any other man is due the building up of the town and the success that has attended it. He is the pioneer of this section, has always labored for the advancement and progress of the community and the town and is a public minded and generous citizen of excellent standing and enjoys the esteem of all.

Joseph Fisher was born in Harrisville, Michigan, December 25, 1856, being the first white boy born there. His parents were Joseph and Rachel (Taylor) Fisher. He grew up on a farm and received his education in his native place. On September 26, 1878, he married Miss Addie, daughter of Guy C. and Mariah Lewis. In 1888 he migrated to Idaho, settling near his present location. He then took a trip to Oregon and later, in the spring of 1889, he returned to this place and purchased a forty-acre tract from the railroad. There he located the town of Saint Maries and he has been one of the enterprising builders ever since. In the fall of 1889 he sent for his family and in the same fall he was appointed postmaster, having succeeded in getting an office established. He held the office continuously for six years. He was the first one to open up a general merchandise store there, and to the upbuilding of his business he has devoted his efforts with becoming wisdom, to which he owes his success. In 1902 he was nominated by the Republican party for county commissioner and was elected by about 280 majority. In January, 1902, the fire fiend destroyed his entire store and building, but not to be daunted, he has erected a three-story structure, which he is finishing in good shape. He is doing a good business in the store, carrying a full and complete stock of groceries, feed, provisions, crockery and so forth. He rents some of the store rooms of the building to hardware and furniture establishments. Mr. Fisher has a good hotel in addition to the mercantile business and the upper rooms of his store building will be utilized as an extension of the hotel business, making him, all told, about fifty rooms, which gives him ample opportunity to entertain the increasing travel of that section. Mr. Fisher owns a third interest in the Interstate Telephone Company, a third interest in the townsite and a third interest in the cheese factory, and is a real leader in the development of the town. He is a member of the M. W. A., Lodge No. 8555; and of the I. O. O. F., Lodge No. 32, at Saint Maries. Mr. Fisher has thirteen children, named as follows: Mrs. Alice Lindstrom, of Saint Maries; Mrs. Sadie Brown, also of Saint Maries; Guy, deceased; Ethel, Bert F., Sherman, deceased, Grant, Edna, Addie, Josie, Harold, Ray, Fernie and Florence. Mr. Fisher has displayed commendable wisdom in the affairs of his business, has conducted himself in a worthy manner as a man and citizen and he stands well in the community, being a leading man.

PETER MOC-TIL-MA. It would be interesting to recount the various adventures and experiences in the life of this venerable and influential Indian. He has been one of the keen and energetic men of his tribe in whose remembrance the important items of pioneer history of the northwest have occurred. He is now considered one of the capable and keen men of the agency and has demonstrated his ability in numerous ways and at divers occasions.

Peter Moc-Til-Ma is the son of Old Chief Moc-Til-Ma of the Coeur d'Alenes and was born in 1840, where Spokane now stands. His life was spent largely with his people and he selected a fine piece of land at the time of the segregation of the reservation. This is an estate of four hundred acres of valuable grain land, about eight miles northwest from Desmet. He has it well under cultivation and improved in a becoming manner. He has enough land in addition to this to make an estate of two thousand acres. Peter married Agnes and they have four children, Lottie, aged thirty years; Bartholemew, aged sixteen; Ellen, aged fourteen; Felician, aged eleven. They are all able to read and write the English language well and are promising young people. Peter Moc-Til-Ma is a man held in high repute among his people and is influential and substantial.

EDWARD STUVE. It gives us pleasure to be able to give in this volume of the county history an epitome of the career of the respected and capable citizen and pioneer of Harrison whose name initiates this paragraph, both because of the good achievements he has accomplished in the business world and because of his own personal worth and integrity.

Edward Stuve was born in Norway, on March 21, 1862, being the son of Howell and Margaret Stuve, also natives of that land. In 1877 he came to this country with his parents, having been educated in his native land. They landed in New York and went thence to Jackson county, Wisconsin, where he remained with his parents until 1883, when he came to Clarkford, Idaho, and with his brothers established a sawmill and shingle mill. They did a good business there until 1891, when they removed their plant to where Harrison now stands. But very few people were here then and their mill was the first shingle mill and the first industry of the kind in the town. To the steady prosecution of this business, which was attended with good success, Mr. Stuve gave his undivided attention until 1901, when they sold the entire business. Since that time he has retired from active life and is investigating different lines with a view of again establishing himself in business. Mr. Stuve has a fine residence in Harrison and is one of the respected and leading citizens of the town.

In 1888 Mr. Stuve went to Jackson county, Wisconsin, and there married Miss Ellen Erickson, the nuptials occurring on July 29th of that year. To this happy marriage there have been born five children, named as follows: Edna M., Lula L., deceased, Helen M., Esther F., Howard A. Mr. Stuve is a member of the Maccabees and he and his wife are members of the Methodist church. He takes a warm interest in the advancement of educational facilities and he always is found allied on the side of of sound principles. Mr. Stuve came to the west without money and by his industry, his sagacity in business and the wisdom in handling his interests, he has gained a goodly competence and is a substantial and upright man.

LOUIS STUVE. Among the leading citizens of Harrison there should be mentioned the subject of this article, since he was one of the very first settlers here, since he started the first shingle industry where the town now is, since he has always manifested a public spirit and labored for the general progress, and since personally he is a man of untarnished reputation, is a power for good, has arrayed his influence for good morals and does a worthy part in supporting the churches and all good institutions.

Louis Stuve was born in Norway, on March 2, 1856, being the son of Howell and Margaret Stuve. He was reared on a farm and received his education in his native land. In 1882 he migrated to the United States, landing at New York, whence he went to Jackson county, Wisconsin, whither his parents had preceded him. In the summer of 1883 he came to Clarkfork and there engaged in the shingle business with his three brothers. In 1891 they came thence to Harrison and located a shingle mill here. Few settlers were here then and this mill was the first industry of its kind in the community. They continued in this business until the spring of 1901, when they sold out and since that time our subject has been retired from business, but expects soon to take up active business relations again. Mr. Stuve has a fine residence in the town and is one of the prominent citizens. He has always manifested an active interest in the welfare of the town and the educational facilities and other enterprises calculated to benefit all. Mr. Stuve is a member of the Maccabees and of the M. W. A.

On September 11, 1897, Mr. Stuve married Miss Emma, daughter of George W. and Samantha C. Glover, and to them have been born three children: Myrtle I., Lilly C., Roy H.

When Mr. Stuve came to this western country he came over the Northern Pacific and as the road was not finished he had to walk from Helena to Missoula. He helped to make the first wagon road from Sandpoint to Bonners Ferry and was with the first party that traveled on that road. Mr. Stuve has the respect and esteem of all in the community and he is a substantial and enterprising citizen.

IRAL RIGGS, manager for the Remington Typewriter Company, covering eastern Washington and the five northern counties of Idaho, the Kootenai district of British Columbia, the state of Montana, and the northern tier of counties in Wyoming, has his main office at No. 110 Washington street, Spokane Club building. He has a force of ten employes, which is to be increased in the near future, as business is being rapidly built up. He handles Remington typewriters, office furniture, such as desks, chairs and tables, also supplies for all makes of machines. There is, also, in connection a strictly first-class repair department. His traveling salesmen cover this territory regularly and thoroughly .

Mr. Riggs was born in Springfield, Illinois, June 6, 1877, being the son of George W. and Ann M. (Ellis) Riggs, who reside at Ceresco, Nebraska. The father is a rancher. At the age of fifteen our subject was matriculated in the Nebraska State University, Lincoln, Nebraska, taking the scientific course, and remaining three and one-half years. Until the opening of the Spanish-American war he was engaged as a shipping clerk in Chicago. June 24, 1898, he enlisted in Company K, Captain Rogers, Twentieth United States Regular Infantry. At Fort McPherson, Georgia, he did garrison duty until August 15th, when he was sent to Leavenworth, Kansas, and was discharged October 23, 1898. In 1899 he engaged with the Remington people and had charge of their office at Lincoln, Nebraska. Later he became city salesman at Omaha and afterward was assistant manager at that point. In March, 1903, Mr. Riggs came to Spokane and assumed charge of this territory as general manager for the Remington Company.

Our subject was united in marriage at Omaha, April 15, 1901, to Miss Jennie Hughes, daughter of Edward and Mary Hughes. Mrs. Riggs is a native of New York state. Her father is a building contractor at Lincoln, Nebraska. To Mr. and Mrs. Riggs have been born two children, Paul H. and Katherine.

The Remington typewriter was first owned and manufactured by E. Remington & Sons. Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict were their sole agents until about 1882, when they took over the entire business and it was conducted under their name until January, 1903, when it became known as the Remington Typewriter Company. The factory is located at Ilion, New York. The general offices are at Nos. 325 and 327 Broadway, New York. Offices are located in every important city in the world. The actual sales exceed two hundred machines a day, and they transact the most extensive business in this line in the world. The Remington typewriters are used by all nations.

MORRIS ANTELOPE is one of the bright and enterprising young men of his tribe, being born in 1868, to Louie Antelope, who is now one of the largest stockmen of the reservation and resides near Tekoa. Morris was reared in this section and made his home with his father until 1900, when he removed to his present place, a farm of two thousand acres, sixteen miles northwest from Desmet. This fine estate is all fenced and Mr. Antelope is endeavoring to make of it one of the fine farms of the reservation. His aggressiveness and spirit are shown in that he reads and writes the English language well, although he has never had the opportunity of school facilities. For nine years he operated a store in Desmet, but sold out at the end of that time and has since paid attention to raising stock and handling wood, being successful in his labors.

Morris Antelope married Mary, now aged twenty-nine and they have become the parents of three children, Louie, aged twelve, Mary, aged five, Annie, aged two.

BEER BARZA, one of the blacksmiths in the government shop and the owner of a fine farm of two hundred acres three miles northwest from Desmet, is one of the native Coeur d'Alenes, being born on the reservation in 1868. His father was a sub-chief and his mother one of the Coeur d'Alene tribe. She is now living with our subject. Mr. Barza married Josett, who is aged twenty-seven, and they have five children, Joseph, age twelve, Lizzie, age ten, John, age seven, Mary, age five, Madeline, age two. Mr. Barza has a dwelling in Desmet in addition to the property mentioned above. His farm is well fenced and improved in a fine shape and he receives good returns in crops annually. Mrs. Barza is of the Kalispell tribe, but was born in this reservation. Mr. Barza had little opportunity to receive educational training in the schools during his youth, but his burning desire to learn the English spurred him on until by careful personal research, he has enabled himself to read and write the English language. His ability in mechanics is evident in his work in the blacksmith shop and he is to be commended for the progress he has made.

BONA MACHA. Without doubt the subject of this article is one of the most progressive and advanced men of his tribe, being of strong determination, good judgment and ability to grasp and execute proper designs. He was born in 1854 in Montana. He is a descendant of the Coeur d'Alenes and spent his life in visiting between here and the tribes in Montana until this reservation was set aside, when he took up his permanent abode here. He owns one of the best dwellings in Desmet, and also has a fine farm of one thousand acres three miles west from town, which is well improved with good buildings and is handled with great credit to the owner. In addition to doing general farming, Mr. Macha raises considerable stock. He is captain of the police and has made his name a terror to evil doers. It is well known that when he goes after a man, he is sure to bring him and his firm and determined stand for law and order have done a great deal to advance the cause on the reservation. Mr. Macha is a member of the Council and is esteemed for his wisdom and excellent ways there.

Bona Macha married Isabelle, who is now aged twenty-four, and they have two children, John, aged eight and attending the Fathers' school; Bonamacha, the baby.

BARNEY CAMELL is one of the younger men of the Coeur d'Alene tribe who was born on the reservation in the vicinity of Desmet, the date being 1883. His parents are Peter and Pauline Camell, who now live about eight miles northwest from Desmet. The home estate consists of fifteen hundred acres of fine land, all of which is fenced and laid under tribute for pasture and grain. Our subject lives with his parents and assists in raising horses and general farming. The father has a goodly herd of horses and handles considerable grain. Barney was educated in the excellent school conducted at the mission by the Fathers and is well versed in the English branches. He gives promise of being one of the important and influential men of the tribe and his natural capabilities coupled with good training have fitted him well for weighty responsibilities among his people.

WILLIAM RYAN has been in Kootenai county for a good many years and during all this time he has been prominent in its affairs and a leading citizen, while his wisdom and integrity have made him one of the best of its citizens, in whom the people have confidence. He is at present deputy collector of customs at Porthill and is an efficient and well liked officer.

William Ryan was born in Cumberland, Alleghany county, Maryland, on May 15, 1842, the son of William and Mary (Dignan) Ryan, natives of Ireland. They came to the United States in 1818 and 1820, respectively, and were married in this country. When our subject was four years of age they removed to Iowa while it was still a territory and there he was educated, finishing this important part of his life training in the Table Mound seminary, near Dubuque. In 1859, Mr. Ryan crossed the plains to Pike's Peak, clerked in a store for one year and returned. After some time farming in Iowa, he returned to Colorado, and in June, 1865, went to Montana, where he mined and freighted for two years. In the fall of 1867 Mr. Ryan descended the Missouri from Ft. Benton to Sioux City in a Mackinaw boat and for six years thereafter he was engaged in farming and handling stock in Iowa. He then spent two years in the copper mines of northern Michigan, mining and butchering. From 1876 he spent five years in the Black Hills mining and contracting mining timber. Next we see him in the Puget Sound country and in 1887 he made his way to Kootenai county. He located near Rathdrum that fall and engaged in lumbering and tie contracting. In 1892 Mr. Ryan was elected county assessor and in 1894 was chosen sheriff. Following this in June, 1897, Mr. Ryan was appointed a member of the commission to classify the mineral lands within the boundary of the Northern Pacific land grant. March 31, 1900, he was appointed deputy collector of customs at Porthill and since that time he has continued in the office and is now discharging the duties of that incumbency with discrimination and wisdom. He is a popular officer and a man of excellent standing.

January 11, 1897, at Coeur d'Alene, Mr. Ryan married Mrs. Mary V. Ray and two sons have been born to them, William and Matthew. They also have a daughter, Hazel Editha, a child of Mrs. Ryan by a former marriage. Mr. Ryan is a member of the Masonic fraternity at Coeur d'Alene.

STANISLAUS ARRAPA. Among the substantial young men of the Coeur d'Alenes we should mention the subject of this article, who has a fine farm of six hundred acres, three miles northeast from Desmet and also a dwelling in Desmet. His farm is well improved with good buildings and he does a general farming business, being successful in his labors. Mr. Arrapa is a member of the Indian police and is known by all as a man of integrity and honor, being gifted in talent and principle. He was born in 1879 the son of Arrapa and Susan. The father died about twelve years since and the mother is living with our subject. The marriage of our subject and Emma, who is one of the Spokane tribe, was consummated about six years since and three children have been born to them, Louie, Gabriel and Damas. Stanislaus Arrapa stands well with the people of the agency, among his own people and wherever he is known, being a man who is governed by principles of honor and right and is a fine representative of his people.

PETER GIRARD has demonstrated his ability to so handle the resources of southern Kootenai county that a good degree of property of a substantial kind has accrued to him as the reward of his sagacity and thrift. He is a man whose labors have done much for the upbuilding of the country and its interests and he is now possessed of a good farm at St. Joe post-office which is well improved and productive of fine annual dividends of hay and general crops. He also possesses thirty or more head of cattle, which with other crops make him one of the substantial and prosperous citizens of this section. Mrs. Girard is postmistress of St. Joe and is well liked by all the patrons of the office.

Peter Girard was born in Canada, on March 29, 1874, the son of William and Mary Girard, natives of Canada. Our subject had but scanty opportunity to gain education in his youth and he was dependent upon his personal efforts also after eleven to support himself in this world. The lines being cast thus in hard places for him, he developed a self-reliance and sturdiness that have wrought well for him in later years. In 1886 Mr. Girard made his way to Spokane and later came to Desmet, where he worked for eighteen months. Next we see him in Coeur d'Alene, where he wrought for two years. His next move was to his present place, where he located a handsome homestead and went to raising stock. He has good buildings and a fine farm in every particular and is one of the leading citizens of this entire section.

On June 2, 1888, Mr. Girard married Miss Mary Morens, a native of Canada who died leaving no issue. On January 4, 1897, he contracted a second marriage with Mildred M. Humes, and to them have been born four children: William, born October 12, 1897; Marguerite, born April 12, 1899; Pauline, born January 26, 1901; and Rose, born December 1, 1902.

CHARLES O. WORLEY was born in Peoria, Illinois, on July 18, 1854, being the son of John J. and Sarah (Bradford) Worley, natives of Ohio. In 1856 the family went to Plattsmouth, Nebraska, where the father operated an Indian trading store until 1864. He was in the Second Nebraska Cavalry under General Sully and was discharged at the end of nine months on account of being wounded. In 1865 he crossed the plains to Montana and remained four years, during which period he had many fights with the Indians. In 1864 the family was driven out of Plattsmouth by the Indians; the settled in Scioto county, Ohio, near Portsmouth, until 1869, in which year they settled at Quenemo, Kansas, it being the Sac and Fox Indian agency. Our subject assisted his father in farming here until 1871, in which year he started out for himself. He made a trip to Colorado and returned in the following year. In 1875 he crossed the plains to California and worked there at carpenter work, which trade he had learned, until 1877, in which year he returned to Kansas and was married. He remained in Kansas until the spring of 1882, where he did carpenter work and then came to Washington territory. He located at Rockford and followed his trade until the spring of 1885 and then made the trip back to Kansas, where he lived until 1890. In that year Mr. Worley came to Rockford again, bringing his parents with him. The father died in Rockford in 1892 and the mother the year following and both are resting in the Rockford cemetery. Our subject had learned engineering in the years previous to this date and when he located in Rockford this last time he followed this business in connection with carpenter work, until the spring of 1896 when he received the appointment as engineer for the government mills at the Coeur d'Alene reservation. He continued in charge of the mills until July 25, 1901, when he was transferred to the position of sub-agent of the Coeur d'Alene reservation, which position he has since filled to the satisfaction of all. Mr. Worley is a member of the A. F. & A. M., Lodge 45; of the I. O. O. F., Fairview Lodge, No. 40; of the W. W., Camp No. 422, all of Rockford. He and his wife are members of the United Brethren church in Rockford. Mr. Worley was always allied with the Republicans and served as treasurer of Osage county for two years. He also has been deputy sheriff for three different terms, has been city councilman and also city marshal.

At Quenemo, Kansas, on August 22, 1878, Mr. Worley married Miss Novdee, daughter of Sylvester and Emmaline (Little) Washburn, who are now deceased. Mrs. Worley was born in Columbus, Iowa, March 3, 1855. Three children were born to this union: Frank, who died when he was twenty; William, deceased, aged twenty-one; Lawrence, aged nine. Mr. Worley has property in Tekoa and Rockford and also farm land, all of which he rents.

CHIEF SALTESE, deceased. Among the really great Indian chiefs of the Pacific Northwest, or of the entire west for that matter, none deserves greater recognition than Saltese, the late chief of the Coeur d'Alenes, whose mother was a Spokane and his father a Coeur d'Alene. Few there were among the red men who could equal this beloved chieftain in physical courage and strength, moral stamina and intellectual capacity and none has left a worthier record or a more potent influence upon his race. Saltese was a vigorous man until the last few days of his life, despite the fact that he had reached and passed the ripe age of ninety-two, and until he breathed his last he was an ardent champion of all that is good and a relentless enemy of wickedness. Surrounded by the members of the family at his home near the old Desmet Mission, in Kootenai county, on April 20, 1902, the aged warrior, ruler and Christian leader passed over the great divide of life into the better world beyond, which to him meant more than "the happy hunting ground." His remains were laid at rest at the Mission, a most fitting place.

From the days of his youth, Saltese was a powerful man in the tribe and was renowned for his valiant deeds in time of war. In council his eloquent voice was often heard. It was he who led the war against Colonel Steptoe in 1857. When the war councils were held and the older chiefs opposed hostilities, it is said that Saltese made the most thrilling speech of his life, a speech which was so persuasive that it drew to his side the younger element and they followed him to a successful war, driving Steptoe out of the country and nearly annihilating his little band in a fierce battle on the hill overlooking the site of Rosalia. All day the battle waged with disastrous results to the soldiers and at sundown, when the Indians withdrew, there were only four rounds of cartridges to the man and many members of this ill-fated expedition had lost their lives. During the night Timothy, a friendly Nez Perces, guided the remnant away in the darkness and they ultimately escaped across the Snake river to Fort Walla Walla. The next summer Colonel Wright came northward to punish the Indians, a mission which he successfully accomplished, subduing them for all time to come. None among the Indians was quicker to appreciate the situation than Chief Saltese, who thenceforth turned his strength and ability toward a better end and soon became the acknowledged leader of the more progressive class of Indians. He discarded the blanket for the white man's dress, acquired a knowledge of the English language, although he always preferred to converse in his native tongue, assisted the agents in carrying out many reforms, fought vigorously against the liquor traffic, ruled and advised his people well and by dint of hard work and unusually careful business management finally became a wealthy man, owning and farming 1,000 acres of the finest land on the reservation.

In personal appearance Saltese was a magnificent specimen of manhood and few would have guessed his age at over sixty. He walked firmly, his carriage was erect and dignified, and he generally wore a neatly fitting suit of some dark color, a negligee shirt, necktie and a black derby hat, always commanding the utmost respect wherever he went. He made frequent trips over the railroads and was each year granted an annual pass by the O. R. & N. Co. M. M. Cowley, of Spokane, who knew Saltese as early as 1866, in closing an eulogy on Chief Saltese, recently said: "He was not the hereditary chief of the Coeur d'Alenes, but in his younger days was one of the war chiefs, and when the hereditary chief, Seon Shinn, died Saltese had so risen from the ranks of his tribe that he was elected to the position, more than a third of a century ago. He was a born diplomat.

OTIS F. WARREN. This gentleman has occupied the position of inspector of customs at Porthill and Bonners Ferry, Idaho, since 1899 and is an efficient and capable officer whose standing is of the best and whose friends are numbered by legion from every quarter.

O. F. Warren was born in Naples, New York, on July 7, 1839, the son of Elijah and Eliza Ann (Fuller) Warren, natives of New York and Connecticut, respectively. The father was a farmer and held various offices of trust. Our subject is descended from Mayflower stock on both sides of the house and his grandfather was a cousin of the General Warren of Revolutionary fame. In his native place, O. F. Warren was educated, completing his training in the Naples Academy; he came to Wisconsin in 1857. In April, 1861, he enlisted in the three months service; the quota of Wisconsin being full, he re-enlisted for three years but owing to sickness was not mustered in. Later in the same year he was elected register of deeds of Buffalo county, Wisconsin, and in June, 1862, he entered Company A, Twentieth Regiment, Wisconsin Infantry and served at the headquarters of the military commander of Wisconsin until October 4th, when he was discharged on account of disability. In November of 1863 he was re-elected register and took the office again in 1867 and later was in company with his father-in-law in a flouring mill for ten years. In the meantime he took up general merchandising extensively, but the crash of 1876 caused him to lose heavily. From 1877 to 1883, Mr. Warren devoted himself to farming in Wisconsin. In the latter year he removed to Dakota. There he was installed in several offices of trust by the people, among others being assessor of Clark county for one term. In December, 1890, Mr. Warren came to Idaho and in March of the following year he located west of Deep creek and farmed. The next year we see him in Postfalls, being chosen by the Spokane assessor for much of the intricate work of that county. Then Mr. Warren embarked in the merchandise business again, buying out W. D. Plant. He continued this until July, 1898, when he sold to A. J. Manor. He was chairman of the board of county commissioners from 1895 to 1896. In January, 1899, Mr. Warren was appointed inspector of customs and has held the position since, being in Porthill in later years.

On May 14, 1865, at Mondovi, Wisconsin, Mr. Warren married Hannah Mary, daughter of Harvey and Hannah (Arnold) Farrington. Four children have been born to this union, Milton S., a farmer and hotel man at Postfalls; Myrtie E., wife of Thomas W. Foy, a hotel man in Hope; H. Clay, painter at Postfalls; Earl B., in the employ of the Fidelity Abstract Company, Spokane, having graduated from Blair Business College. Mr. Warren is a member of the G. A. R. and also of the I. O. O. F. and Knights of Pythias.

FRED C. FISHER is the owner and operator of a saloon in Porthill, where he is doing a prosperous busines at the present time. He also has numerous mining interests and owns a ranch south of Porthill.

Fred C. Fisher was born in Germany, in 1853, the son of Christian and Frederika Fisher, both natives of Germany. The father died when this son was five and the mother migrated with him and an older son to the United States when Fred was nine. They located in Illinois and there and in Wisconsin Fred received his educational training. After school days were over, he took up steamboating on the Mississippi and later learned the stone mason's trade. This occupied him until he came west. In 1888 Mr. Fisher came to Portland and there wrought until after the Spokane fire, when he went thither and did mason work in that city for some time. In 1890, he came to the Kootenai valley and homestead land four miles south from Porthill. In 1892 Mr. Fisher went to Portland and did masonry work. Coming back to his ranch in the fall of 1895 he opened the International saloon in Porthill and has continued in this, together with his mining and farming interests.

In 1887, while in Minnesota, Mr. Fisher married Miss Kate Bosl, a native of Germany, who came to the United States in 1881. Mr. Fisher has one brother. Ernest, a stone mason, living on a farm in Wisconsin.

H. L. GRAVES is a farmer and stockman in Kootenai county, whose estate of one-half section lies about three miles up the river from Laclede, where he does general farming and is prospered.

H. L. Graves was born in Wisconsin, on September 26, 1853, the son of Rufus and Ann (Knoll) Graves, mention of whom is made in another portion of this work. He was educated there in the public schools and remained with his parents until 1887, when he came to Sprague, Washington, and worked in the railroad shops for a year. In May, 1888, he came to Laclede and homesteaded a quarter section and also bought as much more railroad land. He has a goodly portion under cultivation and besides many other improvements has an orchard of two hundred trees. In addition to this property, Mr. Graves has a house and lot in town. In the political realm, he is a stanch and active Democrat of the Jeffersonian type. Mr. Graves is a member of the I. O. O. F. and of the Foresters.

On January 9, 1880, at Appleton, Wisconsin, he married Miss Mary, daughter of Thomas and Kate (Wilson) Campbell, natives of Ireland and Scotland, respectively. Mrs. Graves was born in Wisconsin. Nine children have been born to this union: Gladys, deceased, Grace, Glenny, deceased, Frank, deceased, Lillie, Earl, George, Effie, deceased, and Jennie, deceased.

WESLEY SULLIVAN is a veteran of the Rebellion, whose faithful service in the cause of the Union places him high in the esteem of every loyal citizen of this fair land today. He was in the heat and burden of the day and three times was wounded and suffered in the southern hospitals. A detailed account of his career will be interesting for the readers of the history of northern Idaho and we accordingly append the same.

Wesley Sullivan was born in Ohio, on September 16, 1840, the son of James and Rebecca Sullivan, natives of North Carolina. When Wesley was small the family removed to Ft. Wayne, Indiana, and there he was educated in the public schools and also worked on the farm. When eighteen years of age he left the parental roof and came to Danville, Illinois, where he wrought until October 3, 1861, then enlisted in Company F, Thirty-fifth Illinois Infantry. He was sent first into Missouri, then under Rosecrans in Tennessee and later with Sherman on the memorable march to the sea. He participated in all the battles of these well known commanders and was in constant action. He was mustered out at the expiration of his time and afterward re-enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Fiftieth Illinois for a year longer. He was sergeant during this period and at the close of the war was mustered out, at Springfield in 1865. He then returned to Danville, Illinois, and there wrought in the coal mines for twenty years. Next we see him in the Cascades, where he was in the coal mines for two years, after which he came to his present place. Here Mr. Sullivan cleared the right of way for the railroad and made ties. Then he took his present place two and one-half miles west from Laclede. Mr. Sullivan is a stanch and active Republican and is also a member of the G. A. R. In reminiscence we note that when Grant and Sherman came to Chattanooga, that Mr. Sullivan was detailed to fire on the steamboat Painted Rock, and run the blockade past the old Lookout mountain, which was done successfully under a most galling fire.

CHARLES W. FEELY is a man of stability and integrity, whose skillful labors in Kootenai county have produced the meed of a valuable holding of real estate five miles south from Rathdrum, where he makes his home at the present time. The home place is a quarter section which is well improved, with good buildings, orchard, and so forth and is annually laid under tribute to produce abundant returns of the cereals and general crops. In addition to this land, Mr. Feely owns other land in company with his brothers, who are all mentioned in this work.

Charles W. Feely was born in Shelby county, Iowa, on February 17, 1878, the son of Thomas N. and Alice M. Feely, who now reside near this son. They all came from Iowa in 1881, settling in Washington, where they continued their residence until 1890, at which time they located in Hoodoo valley and thence removed to their present place in 1895. Mr. Feely, with his brothers and father, has labored steadily in their occupation of general farming and abundant success has rewarded them all. Our subject is a man of independence and original thought and in political matters he is dictated by his own judgment as to the course in casting his vote. He is still unmarried and has one of his sisters to keep the house.

H. E. BURNHAM. As the following epitome of the career of Mr. Burnham will evidence, he is a man of energy and enterprise, possessed of that sterling quality of executive ability that puts through to a successful termination the undertaking to which he turns his attention. Kootenai county has been benefited much by his labors in various lines; at the present time he is operating a good sawmill about seven miles east from Rathdrum, where he has a body of two hundred and eighty acres of timber land. In addition to this he owns property in Postfalls and has also some in various other places.

H. E. Burnham was born in Dunkirk, New York, on March 12, 1854, being the son of Sydney and Louise L. Burnham, natives of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, respectively. The father was a stockman and butcher. Our subject worked with his father until the age of thirteen had been attained and he then sailed on the lakes for two years. Then came a period of nine years of railroading from which he was allured by the enticing features of the oil business in Pennsylvania. Thirteen years he was held in this occupation and in 1889 made the journey across the continent to Spokane. A short time was spent in that centre of the Inland Empire country when he came to Postfalls, where he purchased property and went into the grocery business. Later he followed butchering for two years and then turned his attention to dairying and stock farming for six years. The next industry to claim his attention was sawmilliilng and in the manipulation of a successful trade here we find him at the present time. In addition to this he is interested in real estate in different locations.

At Jamestown, New York, in 1877, occurred the happy event of the marriage of Mr. Burnham and Miss Phoebe C. Simmonds, a native of New York and the daughter of Zibe Simmonds. They have one child, Lyon. Mr. Burnham is a member of the K. O. T. M. Politically, he is independent and untrammelled by the party lines of any tenets; he reserves for himself the right to choose the man and the principles which his vote will support.

CHARLES W. CULP, one of the publishers of the Silver Blade, and of its successor, the Rathdrum Tribune, a paper of distinct vitality and merit at the county seat of Kootenai county, is one of the leading business men of the county and together with his brother, who is his partner, has conducted the Blade for some time and wielded an influence for progression and advancement throughout the county.

Charles W. Culp was born in Lincoln, Montana, on January 8, 1879, the son of David W. and Mary J. (Muffley) Culp, natives of Pennsylvania and still living. They were born at Shippinsburg, October 5, 1830, and at Mt. Eagle, February 4, 1846, respectively. The dates of their removal to Montana are 1865 and 1870, respectively, and they have been on the crest of frontier life ever since, being a worthy couple in their endeavors to assist in the progress of civilization. Our subject was educated at Thompson, Montana, and as soon as the school days were ended he was apprenticed to learn the printer's art, which he accomplished in due time with a skillful finish. He came to Rathdrum in July, 1902, with his brother, and purchased the Blade, which has been as its successor is now, the exponent of sound principles since and the champion of the interests of the citizens of the county, while its clear cut enunciation of the questions of the day and logical conclusions in reference to the same have made it one of the leading sheets of the northwest. In its devotion to the welfare of local interests, the Tribune has not forgotten to be free from local jealousies and prejudicies that embitter, and the kindly spirit manifested to all while correcting false moves and general good will and heartiness always expressed have made it a favorite and a power for good.

Mr. Culp has the following brothers and sisters: J. R. M., his partner; W. S., in Rathdrum; Thomas P., deceased; Jennie M. and Elizabeth C., living in Rathdrum. Mr. Culp is an active and intelligent Republican and with convincing force is able to give a reason for his political faith. He is an active worker in the M. W. A. and Knights of Pythias, and his standing in the county is of the very best. Mr. Culp and his people are members of the Presbyterian church.

CLARENCE H. FEELY is one of the wide awake, thrifty and sagacious farmers of Kootenai county. He is a young man of excellent habits and sound principles and is a loyal friend and progressive citizen. His estate of one hundred and sixty acres, lies four miles south from Rathdrum and its thrifty appearance, well kept and excellent buildings, choice orchard and broad fields all testify to the ability and skill of the proprietor. Mr. Feely also owns other land, being interested with his brothers. The boys and their father own one thousand acres together and it is one of the finest bodies of land in the county.

Clarence H. Feely was born in Shelby county, Iowa, on September 6, 1879, the son of Thomas N. and Alice M. Feely, who are mentioned elsewhere in the work. In 1881 the family came from their Iowa home to Washington, where our subject gained most of his educational discipline. In 1890 they located in Hoodoo valley and there the home continued until 1895 when a move was made to their present excellent location. The brothers have continued in their efforts together with their father and the wisdom of it is apparent in the valuable holdings now possessed by them. Our subject is still in the possession of the charms of celibacy, having never ventured to embark on the sea of matrimony. He is an exemplary young man and has wrought in a commendable manner. Mr. Feely is an independent thinker on all the questions of the day and his sturdiness of character is manifested in that he is not trammelled or bound by the tenets of any political party, but votes as his wisdom dictates.

IRVAN E. FEELY is a native of the occident, being born in Washington, Spokane county, and the date August 8, 1883. He received his education in that state and in Idaho and has continued with his parents until the present time. He came with them to Hoodoo valley in 1890 and thence to the present location in 1895. He is a young man of good qualities, has principles of uprightness and manifests intrinsic worth and sterling integrity. From his earliest youth he has been trained in the way of industry and thrift by a wise father and the result is that a man of reliability and stability is now the pride of his father and the rich reward of the excellent training.

Our subject owns land in connection with his brothers. They have so acted in unison in their business endeavors that they have conserved their interests in a remarkable manner and the excellent wisdom manifested in this course is a bright example to all. While Irvan Feely has not yet passed the mile post of his majority, still the qualities of a wise and capable man are manifest and it is to be expected that he will be one of the leading citizens of this great county for many years to come, gaining distinction and affluence as the proper result of his course.

WILLIAM F. ALLBAUGH is one of the leading business men of the thriving town of Hope, Idaho, being proprietor of the butcher shop there. He is a man of sterling worth and has manifested excellent capabilities in his business career.

William F. Allbaugh was born in Keithsburg, Illinois, on June 30, 1873, being the son of William and Martha (Catlin) Allbough, natives of Carroll county, Ohio, and now living in this county. Our subject received his education in his native state and there learned the butcher business and followed it for some time. He came west in 1889 and after exploring some time went to Spokane where he followed the grocery business. Three years there and then he came to northern Idaho, where he had previously been, and opened a meat market in Hope, which he is conducting at the present time and where he does a good business. Mr. Allbaugh has been on his own resources since he was sixteen years of age and has always shown an enterprising spirit and a tenacity that has given him the success that merit deserves.

Mr. Allbaugh has the following named sisters: Alice, Laura, Olive and Emma, all deceased; Carrie, wife of George Ferris; Louise, in Hope; Josephine, wife of T. C. Peck, in Nelson, B. C.; Edna, wife of A. Croy, in Hope.

At Rathdrum, on July 4, 1900, Mr. Allbaugh married Miss Addie E. Smith, whose parents are leading citizens of this county and are mentioned in another portion of this work. One child has been born to bless the marriage, Margaret. Mr. Allbaugh is a member of the W. W. and in political adherence is a Democrat. He is a man of sterling qualities and is one of the genial and popular citizens of Hope.

ALEXANDER QUIRIE. That the subject of this sketch is one of the highly esteemed and popular men of Kootenai county is evidenced by the fact that in 1902 he was nominated on the Republican ticket for commissioner of the county and although the county is Democratic, he was elected by the overwhelming majority of six hundred and twenty votes. He is a man of stanch worth and integrity and the people of the commonwealth are safe in entrusting the important interests of the county in his hands.

Alexander Quirie was born in Scotland, July 16, 1861, the son of John and Margaret (Walker) Quirie, natives of Aberdeen, Scotland. The father died in 1891 and the mother in 1862, in their native land. Our subject inherited the stanch qualities of the Scotch blood and from his youth manifested an integrity and stability that betokened the strong man of today. He was well educated in his native place and in 1887 left the scenes of youth and came to the United States. He landed in St. Paul, Minnesota, and engaged on a stock farm for two years. Next we see the adventurous spirit in Washington and for a year he was exploring the various portions of the northwest. He finally returned from the coast to Spokane and worked on a dairy farm for a time. On June 1, 1890, he came to Hope and for three years he was teaming for H. M. Casey. Then Mr. Quirie located his present place on Trestle creek, three miles west from Hope and opened a dairy. He furnished milk, cream and butter to Hope for eight years and then retired from that business and devoted himself to raising stock and general farming. He has a good place, well improved and productive of good crops. A fine orchard of one hundred trees embellishes the place. Mr. Quirie is a thrifty and up-to-date farmer.

Mr. Quirie has two brothers and two sisters: George and John, farmers in Scotland; Mary, wife of Alexander Aderson, and Margaret, wife of John Bagrie, both in Scotland. Mr. Quirie is a Republican from principle and in religious persuasion is a Presbyterian. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and is a man in whom his neighbors confide and who is worthy of the esteem and confidence reposed in him.

WILLIAM T. STONE, who dwells five miles south from Bonners Ferry, is one of the substantial and prosperous farmers of his section and a leading man in the community. He was born in Audrain county, Missouri, on January 13, 1855, the son of Thomas and Kizerie (Cardwell) Stone, natives of Kentucky. The father died in Oregon in 1898. Our subject has two brothers, Thomaston and J. D. He was educated in his native place and in Bedford county, Indiana, whither the family went when he was a boy. Later they went to Illinois, and in 1874 William made his way to Texas. He followed the basic art of agriculture until 1885 in the great state and then he was attracted by the varied beauties and resources to visit California. After one year in exploring the state he made his way to Oregon, and for nine years was numbered with the progressive and enterprising citizens of the Web-foot state. Next he journeyed on to Washington and after due deliberation he came to Idaho. Search revealed the land now known as government land and he homesteaded a quarter. Since that time Mr. Stone has devoted himself to the improvement and culture of his land, and now has a valuable farm. He is one of the stirring men of the section and takes an active part in the affairs of the county.

In 1878 occurred the marriage of Mr. Stone and Miss Alice Stillwell. The nuptials were celebrated in Montague county, Texas. Mrs. Stone's parents were natives of Virginia and came to Texas in very early days. Four children have been born to this happy marriage: Lottie, Robert F., Lulu, and Alice. Mr. Stone is independent in political matters, as also in settling the questions of the day he is untrammelled by the ties of party or sect. He is a man of worth and integrity and stands high in the esteem of the people.

JOSEPH M. JEANNOT, a capitalist and property owner of Hope, is a man whose industry and thrift, dominated by sagacity and keen discrimination, have given the reward of a fine competence and the good will of all as well. He was born in Kankakee, Illinois, on May 16, 1858, the son of Joseph and Philomina (Lambert) Jeannot, natives of Three Rivers, Canada. Mr. Jeannot has the following brothers and sisters; F. E., deceased; J. M., died in infancy; J. O., in Michigan; L. H., in Hope; G. E., in Hope; W. E., in Wisconsin; Arthur and Thomas, deceased; Sarah, in Spokane; Phoebe, Lenora and Georgia, in New York, all married but Phoebe; Susan, Mary, Angelena, Beatrice, Lorna, all deceased, with twins who died when infants. Our subject received his early education in Illinois and there he remained until July, 1871, when he took a journey to Kansas, where he farmed for ten years. Then he went to Colorado and mined for two years, after which he came to Idaho and railroaded for some time, then went to Portland. Next we see Mr. Jeannot in the Sound country, where he did logging and after a time returned to Portland and tended bar for three years. His next move was to the Coeur d'Alene country, where he operated a saloon and also did mining for three years. At the time of the chloride excitement he came to the Pend Oreille country and engaged in steamboating and other business at Hope. He has also followed mining since coming here, and is an active and progressive laborer for the upbuilding and advancement of the place. Mr. Jeannot has fine business property in the town and is contemplating the erection of a first-class hotel here.

In 1894 Mr. Jeannot celebrated his marriage with Miss Anna Sucker. He is a member of the Elks, the Foresters, the A. O. U. W., and is a man of influence and popularity in these relations. Mr. Jeannot is a well informed Democrat and an adherent of the Catholic church. He has shown marked capabilities in his business career and has made his present gratifying holding by his own unaided efforts, which is a real crown of enjoyment.

PART VI.

HISTORY OF SHOSHONE COUNTY

CHAPTER I.

CURRENT HISTORY—1860-1885.

It is a noteworthy fact that the leading county of Idaho in its mineral production was likewise the first in which mineral wealth was found. It was the discovery of gold within the limits of the present county of Shoshone by Captain E. D. Pierce that stimulated the first grand stampede into north Idaho and caused the subsequent settlement and subjugation of the country. But while Shoshone county furnished the stimulus to this development, it did share equitably in the results. Oro Fino and Pierce City did not long remain the magic names around which the gold-hungry population of the Northwest wove bright visions of fortunes to be made in a day. Subsequent discoveries turned the attention of gold hunters elsewhere, the mercurial population of the place was largely drawn away by more alluring prospects in other parts of the north Idaho country, and the support for a local government was for many years so inadequate that the question of dismemberment of the county was more than once mooted.

Prior to the discovery of the Cœur d'Alene mines the settled portions of this vast political division, imperial in its extent, were the country contiguous to Pierce City, the Moose creek mining country and the Weippe and Fraser stock raising and agricultural communities. The earliest history of the first mentioned has already found a place in these chapters. Like the rest of the old placer fields, its wealth soon began to show signs of exhaustion and eventually the placer fields passed largely into the hands of the Chinese. The white population dwindled to a comparatively insignificant number, yet there were present always a few representatives of the Caucasian race, and as the county-seat was located in their central town, they were naturally interested to do what they could for the maintenance of the county organization.

The Moose creek mines were discovered in 1862 by a wandering band of prospectors. They are situated on the headwaters of the north fork of the Clearwater, many miles to the northeast of Pierce. They paid their discoverers well for a short time, but were soon deserted, the rich deposits that attracted the attention of the first miners being apparently of limited extent. A second influx of population was stimulated in the late 'sixties by further discoveries made by prospectors named Ernest Hilton and William Shepard and Tommy O'Brien. It is said that fully two hundred people rushed in. This influx resulted in the founding of Moose City, which at one time had a saloon, restaurant, hotel and three general stores. For three years the diggings produced well, supporting a considerable population, but during the early 'seventies they began to fail again, though a few continued to mine in the district twelve or fifteen years longer.

The first permanent settler in the Weippe section, it is said, was Wellington Landon, who took up his abode on the present town site of Weippe October 6, 1875. Previous to this, however, there had been a few settlers, principally stockmen, among them a man named Petjade, who kept a station on Ford's creek during the early sixties; John Wilson, Martin Mauli and Peter Hourcade. In 1879 Patrick Gaffney settled with his family on land contiguous to the Landon place, and later came Harvey Setzer, William Gamble, Levi Goodwin and a family named French. These were the only inhabitants of this rich grazing section until after the country was surveyed in 1884, when a small addition to their numbers was attracted to the region.

What is known as the Fraser country lies between the country just described and Greer, along the brakes of Lolo creek and the Clearwater river. The earliest settler in this region, it is thought, was a man familiarly known as "Texas," who lived on a claim about two miles east of the site of Fraser postoffice. He took up his residence in these parts about 1863 or possibly a year earlier. For a few years he kept a station there, then sold his right and improvements to one Milo Thomas, who was succeeded some five or six years later by Mauli & Hourcade, stockmen. The next settler, probably, was John Alsop, who came about 1872 and located on what is called the Hole-in-the-ground ranch. In 1874 John D. Reed took a claim south of the present Fraser postoffice on the brakes of the Lolo, and some four years later Patrick Keane took a place half a mile west of the old Texas ranch. These were the pioneer settlers of the region and practically the only residents until the developments of the past few years began.

With so few communities to support a local government and these so small and weak, the mystery is that county organization could be maintained at all. Much credit is due the pioneer people of southern Shoshone for their successful fight against political disintegration. Their existence as a separate county was not maintained without sacrifice, and it is thought that had not the Cœur d'Alenes been discovered the struggle would soon have been given up.

The summary of assessments for the year 1865 gives us some idea of conditions obtaining in Shoshone county at that time. The persons owning assessable property numbered 273. Forty-six houses were assesed, seven ditches, namely, the Upper Shanghai, Lower Shanghai, Barclay's gulch, Rhoades creek, Lower Rhoades creek, McConnel's and George Kleasman's; three saloons—D. H. Jaume's, Stanford Capps's and James Connelly's; one drug store, Parker's; one saw mill, D. M. Fraser's; one store and gaming room, D. F. Leonard's; three general stores, J. P. Butler's, Levi Ankeny's and Seidner & Loewenberg's. The assessed valuation of this property, added to that of the two horses and 367 head of beef cattle assessed to A. J. Watson and the horse, wagon and harness and twelve cows assessed to John Corn, amounted in all to $41,960. Each of the 273 persons assessed was required to pay $4 poll tax and $1 military enrollment tax.

The revenue collectable from every source was small even in 1865 and it became much smaller later. Edward Hammond states that by the winter of 1869-70 the population of Pierce City and vicinity had fallen to about a hundred white men, though there were three hundred or more Chinamen in the camp, many of whom were doing well in their mining operations. On Weippe prairie were a few farmers engaged in raising cattle, horses, hay, vegetables, cereals and such other products as they could find a market for among the miners.

The people of southern Shoshone county, like those in other parts of north Idaho, were greatly disturbed by the Indian war of 1877, though happily comparatively little damage was done them and their numbers were not reduced by the fell wrath of the red man. The first news of the outbreak was brought to Pierce City by a friendly Nez Perces squaw named Louise, who lived on the North Fork. She was at that time about thirty-five years of age. By frequent visits to Pierce City with vegetables she had become well acquainted with the white residents of the town, for whom she had the kindliest sentiments. The white miners of Shoshone county had always been friendly to the Indians, purchasing from them grain and vegetables every year. When Louise announced that certain Indians had taken the warpath they felt they had nothing to fear from the Kamiahs, North Forks, Lapwais or Clearwaters, but they were afraid lest some marauding detachment from Joseph's band might do them harm. The inhabitants were in no condition to defend themselves in case of attack. Their number did not exceed twenty-five at the time, though they were reinforced a little later by the arrival of Wellington Landon, Patrick Gaffney and family, Martin Mauli, Peter Hourcade and John Reed from the Weippe prairie, and D. W. C. Dunwell from his ferry on the Clearwater near the site of the present Greer. Ed Hammond and Horatio L. Gray owned the only rifles in the town; Francis Carle was armed with a shotgun supplied with only one lock, and a few of the men had revolvers. The Chinese population was still more poorly armed and for some reason it did not seem anxious to prepare for defense.

The white people determined to fortify the home of Francis Carle, in the lower end of town, and around it they built a stockade of cordwood eight feet high, inclosing two wells that they might have an abundant supply of water. A small log fort was also built just east of town on the spot now occupied by the schoolhouse. Guards were thrown out around the town, but it was the intention of the people to treat for peace should the Indians appear, as they realized fully their inability to do more than make a show of defense.

Shortly after the warning had been given the whites by Louise, Edward Hammond determined to go through to Lewiston, if he could, and sue for aid. Starting in the morning, he reached Weippe prairie early in the afternoon and from a position in the woods which surrounded the little meadow, he saw seventy or eighty Indians in council. Their tepees had been erected and a temporary camp established. He also saw that Mr. Landon's house had been burned.

Hastily returning to Pierce City, Mr. Hammond informed his fellow citizens there of what he had seen. The people did not doubt but they would be attacked forthwith. All was quiet that night. Next morning, however, two friendly Kamiahs under flag of truce came into town with a message from Chief Lawyer to the effect that the hostiles were about to attack the settlement and that the whites should be on their guard. The settlers were unable to do more than remove their women and children to the woods southeast of town, as they had already made such meagre preparations for defense as lay in their power. Fortunately, the Indians never put in an appearance. It was subsequently learned that they had been dissuaded from attacking the town by those of their own number who had traded with the whites for years and consequently looked upon them as friends. Many of the Indians were very much in favor of the attack and gave it up only after a long and vigorous contest in the council.

The day following the arrival of the two Kamiahs with Lawyer's message the whites decided to send a company of men to Lewiston for arms and ammunition. Eight men volunteered to go on this dangerous journey, namely: John Greer, Horatio L. Gray, Elliot G. Cole, Hiram Nelson, Frank Capps, Patrick Keane, Lawrence T. Dunwell, Robert Yantis and Edward Hammond. Setting out from Pierce late in the afternoon unarmed, for they left their weapons to those in the fort, they descended to the north fork of the Clearwater via Quartz creek, crossed the river in a canoe which they were fortunate enough to find, and proceeded thence to Lewiston, at which town they arrived early next morning. They experienced no difficulty in procuring sixteen rifles and an abundance of ammunition. With these they set out forthwith on the return journey—all but Hiram Nelson, who went to his home in Walla Walla. Jacob Schultz, of Lewiston, took his place.

Being now well armed, the doughty eight did not fear to return by the main trail to Pierce. At the Clearwater they found the ferry burned, so were forced to build a raft in order to cross the stream. They arrived in town about noon next day after an uneventful journey, and strengthened the defenses by their presence and the arms they brought, but fortunately, the rude fortifications of the miners were not put to the test. The Indians did not attack the town when they could and opportunity to do so never returned, for they were soon driven to parts beyond Idaho. Shoshone county suffered comparatively little from the outbreak, though several score of cattle and horses were stolen from the ranges around Weippe, one house and one ferry were burned, the miners were compelled to desist from productive employment for several weeks, and men of all occupations were forced to neglect their usual work. The direct and indirect losses of the war were considerable.

In 1881 the assessed valuation of property in Shoshone county was only $38,981. The condition of things in the weak and struggling political organization may be gathered from the following editorial in the Lewiston Teller of July 21, 1881, based on information obtained from Edward Hammond:

> Our Pierce City correspondent announces the partial disorganization of Shoshone, leaving the people of that county without any executive officers. For some time past offices in that county have been compelled to go begging for men to fill them, and after once being filled, several substitutions have been made after periods of interregnum. The whole number of white residents in the county seldom exceeds seventy-five persons, and is more often less than that. Hence the burdens of supporting a county organization have been quite heavy upon each individual for some time past.

A natural county pride has induced the citizens to keep up the organization in the hope that immigration would soon reach them and swell their numbers. But the increase, when there has been any, has been principally among the Chinese, who have gone there for mining purposes and bought the greater portion of the mining ground that had been partially worked by the whites. Little new ground having been discovered that offered sufficient inducements for whites to remain in the county, the latter have gradually diminished in numbers until they are now reduced to what we have indicated above. It is true that on the north fork of the Clearwater in said county, a large number of men each year are engaged temporarily in the lumber business, but they do not acquire a bona fide residence or become citizens of the county.

There are about a dozen men in the county whose business is agriculture. These are principally engaged in furnishing supplies for those who are mining. They have no ready market for any surplus they could raise, and hence there is at present little inducement for persons to take up a residence in the county for agricultural purposes, notwithstanding several townships of the best agricultural land lie within the borders of the county in its southwestern portion, adjacent to the Nez Perces reservation, which has no outlet save across said reservation. We are of the opinion that the time is not far distant when this land will become utilized and be of great value, and no doubt this hope has hitherto inspired citizens of that county to keep up their organization till the time should arrive when they would find the organization much easier to maintain. Terms of the district court are fixed for that county once each year, but they are very expensive both to the county and to members of the court and bar. There is generally little business and when there is business to require a grand or petit jury, the number of citizens in the county is too small to make it practicable to secure an impartial jury. Several of the citizens of that county have heretofore expressed themselves as desirous of abolishing the county organization and becoming attached to Nez Perces county, while others have expressed themselves as against the change. As matters now stand, the condition of things is anything but pleasant, and the perplexities that arise are constantly becoming much more numerous and annoying. But we can see no legal relief till the next meeting of the legislature.

But the county organization was not given up in 1881, and fortunate it was, for even before that date, unknown to the residents, forces had been silently at work which were destined to cause the county speedily to become populous and to leap at a single bound to a position of prominence among its sister counties. From the earliest times the existence of gold in the Cœur d'Alenes had been suspected. While Lieutenant Mullan was constructing his well known military road through the region his men observed indications of the precious metals, if they did not actually discover them. His suspicions of the existence of gold in this region and elsewhere along the road are frankly expressed in the following interesting letter:

> WASHINGTON, D. C., June 4, 1884.
>
> Editor Eagle: I have received your very courteous letter of May 21, 1884. It is exceedingly gratifying to me to view and read of the developments that are now taking place in your section of the country, which for so many years was my camping ground, and where I became familiar with many of the difficulties of opening up so wild a region of our mountain system, and particularly when they are set forth in a sprightly journal like the Eagle, right in the heart of such development. I am not at all surprised at the discovery of numerous rich gold deposits in your mountains, because both on the waters of the St. Joseph and Coeur d'Alene, when there many years ago, I frequently noticed vast masses of quartz strewing the ground, particularly on the St. Joseph river, and wide veins of quartz projecting at numerous points along the line of my road along the Coeur d'Alene, all of which indicated the presence of gold. Nay, more, I now recall quite vividly one of my herders and hunters, a man by the name of Moise, a French-Canadian (the son-in-law of Louis Brown, then living at Frenchtown, a little village about fifteen miles below Missoula) coming into camp one day with a handful of coarse gold which he said he had found on the headwaters of the north fork of the Coeur d'Alene while out hunting for our expedition. This gold was so pure, so heavy and so free from quartz or matrix rock and weighing several ounces that it attracted not only a great deal of attention, but some degree of surprise at the time. And when he said he had found it his statement was scarcely credited by anyone then in our camp, because it was believed that he had traded for this gold with some parties passing up and down from the Frazier river mines. This was in '58-9.

Further on in our journey another gold deposit was discovered by a member of my party named Spangler, who was my assistant wagon maker, and who is still living in the state of Virginia. This was finer gold and was found on the south bank of the Bitter Root river, between the summit of the mountains and the present town of Missoula. But Spangler, whether justly or not, in the immaterial rush that was known in our camp to be a sort of Baron Munchausen, and his statement was not credited, there being then no disposition to confirm his discovery and because of the distance from the line of our road, where the alleged discovery was said to have been made.

Further on in our journey I remember distinctly camping on a certain Sunday on Pline creek, a tributary to Hell Gate river, and while some of my men were engaged in turning the stream in search of gold some of the miners with which it was known to be supplied, other men went to the hillside and taking up several pans of gravel and dirt washed the same, and in every instance found gold and in some instances considerable, it being, however, very fine scale gold.

Passing still farther eastward some of my party made the discovery of gold on what is now known as the American fork, where I am told extensive placer deposits have been worked. Passing still farther eastward, an old miner in my camp, whose name I cannot now recall, made the discovery of gold on the waters of the Prickly Pear, where since the rich deposits around Helena have been worked.

The members of my expedition were composed very largely of old miners from California, and having had more or less experience in noticing the indications of mineral deposits, their universal verdict was that the entire country from Coeur d'Alene lake on toward and including the east slope of the Rocky mountains was one vast gold bearing country, and I was always nervous as to the possible discovery of gold along the line of my road, and I am now frank to say that I did nothing to encourage its discovery at that time, for I feared that any rich discovery would lead to a general stampede of my men from my own expedition and thus destroy the probable consummation of my work during the time within which I desired to complete the same. I then regarded it as of the first importance to myself and to the public to open a base line from the plains of the Spokane on the west to the plains of the Missouri on the east, from which other lines could be subsequently opened and by means of which the correct geography of the country could be delineated.

My object at that time and the object of those whose views I was in the field to execute was not so much to discover gold as it was for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was a practical railroad route through the valleys and if there existed any practicable pass in the main range of the Rocky mountains through which, in connection with proper approaches thereto, we could carry a wagon road, to be followed by a railroad line and I did not hesitate to make all other considerations secondary or subordinate thereto, believing then, and knowing now, that if a railroad line was projected and completed through the valleys and the passes of the Rocky mountains, between the 45th and the 48th parallels of latitude, that all other developments would necessarily and naturally soon followd.

I am, therefore, not surprised to-day to see, as I saw last September, when going out to assist in driving the last spike on the N. P. railway, countless herds of stock grazing in perfect security from Indians upon the broad plains of the upper Missouri and Yellowstone and the entire road dotted with towns and villages, and being peopled by a hardy population; not surprised to find my old camp on the Hell Gate, the site of the beautiful town of Missoula, or to see the broad plains of the Spokane fenced in and reduced to cultivation, or the waste waters of the Spokane at Spokane falls, harnessed to busy the wheels of industry nor to know that the great waters of the Coeur d'Alene river and lake are being ploughed by steamers, right in the heart of the Coeur d'Alene mountains; and that the Hell Gate Roude in Montana and the Coeur d'Alene lake in Idaho, becoming the sites of two of the most important military posts along our exterme northwestern borders, because all these were foreseen and officially reported by me thirty years ago, and stated as likely to take place. To me it is peculiarly gratifying to know that I have been enabled to live sufficiently long to see these various matters fully realized. and I have no envy whatsoever against any of those persons who are now enjoying the partial development of the results of our early labors.

Your mines, if as rich and extensive as reported, are destined to build up many important interior centers of trade and promise to make the city of Portland, Oregon, a great and busy mart of commerce and an important center of population and industrial development. Fort Benton and Helena on your east are destined, too, to be large cities of the plains. Should your mining camps become even one-half what is expected of them, I would not be surprised to see the entire mountain system from Eagle City on the north to Pierce City on the south, becoming the sites of numerous mining camps and towns, connected by a system of narrow gauge railroads, with telegraphs and telephones extending as a network over a bed of mountains, where for so many ages silence has reigned supreme, and whose industrious residents, I hope, may be richly compensated for their arduous occupations, trials and exposures necessarily incident to so rugged a country and so severe a winter climate.

Very truly yours, etc.,

JOHN MULLAN.

There was a newspaper dispute shortly after the first rush of gold-seekers into the Cœur d'Alenes and while some of the earliest discoveries were in litigation as to who should be credited with the distinction of having first prospected in this region. Adam Aulbach, the editor of the Sun and the champion of those opposed to A. J. Prichard and his friends, made this statement: "The first prospector in the Cœur d'Alene was Tom Irwin, who came to these mountains fully six months before Mr. Prichard did. Irwin worked a quartz claim on the Mullan road at a place called Miners' Cabin as early as the spring of '79. Prichard made his appearance in that neighborhood in the fall from Montana, accompanied by William Gerrard, and went to Fort Cœur d'Alene. Prichard had no idea of prospecting, but came into the country to secure a lumber contract from Cannon, Warner & Company, of Spokane Falls, to which he gave his attention. Irwin in the meantime continued to prospect, going into the mountains north of Nigger prairie on the south fork of the Cœur d'Alene. He formed a favorable opinion of the country and thought that placers existed, but could not find any that would pay in his immediate line of search. He, however, repaired to Fort Cœur d'Alene, where Prichard was logging, and called the latter's attention to the mineral bearing nature of the region he had prospected and made an effort to induce Prichard and John Dason, a man working for him, to accompany him on an expedition. Both declared their willingness to go, but were not ready at the time. Irwin went back to his cabin on the Mullan road, accompanied by William Dobson, and resumed work on his quartz claim. Some time afterward Prichard came along and signified his willingness to accompany the party, and some prospecting was done, but nothing of value was discovered. This was in 1880."

In answer Mr. Prichard said:

"I came to the Cœur d'Alene country by way of Montana from New Mexico to Colorado in the fall of 1878, and had never heard of Cannon, Warner & Company before my arrival at the post. I found the quartz lead, known as the Evolution lead, on my way in in the month of November, 1878. On my way I left the road and followed the ridges, crossing small tributaries looking for quartz, and one night did not get into camp until midnight. It being late in the fall, I went to Post Cœur d'Alene, thence over to Heyden's lake, where I did some work for Heyden, and remained until January. While there, hearing that Cannon, Warner & Company wanted some logs, I went to Spokane Falls to see them and took a contract which was to have been completed by July 1, '79, that being about the time the water runs down so as to enable one to prospect, but early in the spring the unusual high water swept away Cannon & Company's boom, consequently they could not receive the logs. The money I brought to the country being invested in the contract, Cannon & Company sent for me and I went to the Falls, where they made further arrangements with me, increasing the contract so as to give me employment until they could replace the boom, which they failed to complete until late in the fall. My first acquaintance with Tom Irwin was in January, '79, while at the Falls. Finding him gentlemanly and an old prospector, we talked over the prospects of the country, in which I spoke of my finding what is now known as the Evolution lead. In the spring while I was at work Mr. Irwin came up on a prospecting trip on the South Cœur d'Alene. The water being high, he left some of his packs at the mission and went as far as Nigger prairie with some men going to Montana, one of whom had been working for me. They had to take the high water trail, and it's being blocked with fallen timber and brush, caused much delay. The men going to Montana being short of provisions, ate Irwin out, so he had to return, doing very little prospecting. On his return he found the lead near Miners' camp, to which he afterward returned and put up his cabin in the summer of '79. As the editor claims, with much emphasis, that I did not come until the fall of '80. I will add that I have a bill of goods bought of C. F. Yeaton, post trader of the Cœur d'Alene, lying before me dated July 7, 1879, and one of August 1, 1879, amounting up to that date to $610.26. I came in the fall before I put up my cabin at Evolution, the fall of '79, above Miner's camp and worked my lead through the winter, doing very little execution, having no tools to work with and no money to buy, having only a silver dollar left on arriving, and in February I commenced prospecting on a small gulch called Prospect gulch, putting in sluice boxes in March, and, to my knowledge, taking out the first placer gold on the Cœur d'Alene. It being a small gulch, the water did not last long, but I got some very nice specimens of coarse gold."

No means are available for determining whether the account of Mr. Prichard is or is not correct. John F. Vollmer, of Lewiston, stated to the writer that he and other merchants of that town outfitted a party of prospectors and sent them into the Cœur d'Alenes before either Prichard or Irwin had entered; that the party returned with some excellent specimens of gold-bearing quartz, was outfitted again the next season and sent back to develop further its first discovery; and that it failed to find either the ledge it had left the year before or any other prospects rich enough to justify its return. He asserts that he and his associates were the first to prospect systematically in the present Cœur d'Alene mining region.

In answer to a request by mail for further information, Mr. Vollmer sent along with a copy of the mining laws of the Agawam mining district the following letter, bearing date June 14, 1903:

Dear Sir: Answering yours of the 10th in regard to priority of prospecting the Coeur d'Alene, we can antedate Prichard five years. In June, 1873, Frank E. Peck, of Boston, Massachusetts, and myself fitted out a prospecting party at Lewiston, Idaho, for the purpose of prospecting the Coeur d'Alenes for gold. The party was made up of the following members: Frank E. Peck, of Boston, Massachusetts; John O. Barbour, George A. Frost, John Desmukes and — Delaney, all of Lewiston. On the 13th of June all preparations were completed and the party started. Arriving at St. Joe in due time they proceeded thence to the Mission, thence to a point where the town of Kingston now stands, thence along the Mullan road to Mud prairie, thence over the high water trail of the south fork of the Coeur d'Alene river to the St. Regis, thence down that river to the old Mullan camp near which they remained for a number of days. They then proceeded down the Missoula river and to the east side of Moose creek, thence up Fish creek to Fish lake. They then began a thorough system of prospecting between the St. Joe on the north and the Clearwater on the south, including nearly all those parts of the Coeur d'Alene that had until then not yet been prospected. The party in its search found numerous prospects and some rock assaying as high as $1,525 in gold to the ton. By this time winter was coming on and the party decided to return to Lewiston, where they arrived some time between the 14th and 20th of November, 1873.

The finds of 1873 being satisfactory, I decided, with Mr. Peck to have the party return to the Coeur d'Alenes in 1874 and organize a mining district to be called the "Agawam Mining District." (I enclose you a copy of the laws there adopted.)

On June 9, 1874, the party set out again from Lewiston, but though they traveled and prospected about for several months among the Coeur d'Alene mountains and streams, they failed to again locate the rich find of the year before and not deeming the other discoveries sufficiently rich to warrant their being worked under the conditions obtaining in those days, we decided to abandon further search. The party again reached Lewiston about October 1st, 1874. The foregoing is a brief narrative of that enterprise and is true.

Yours truly,

JOHN P. VOLLMER.

P. S.—I will state that our Mr. George A. Frost was in the Coeur d'Alenes in 1872. J. P. V.

But it is almost universally conceded that to A. J. Prichard rightfully belongs the honor of having made the discovery that first introduced the region to the notice of the world. Even Mr. Aulbach, who was an opponent of Mr. Prichard in the early disputes, has conceded this, as appears from the following extract from an article written by him and published in the Oregonian during the year 1896:

"Gold was discovered in the Cœur d'Alenes in 1882 by A. J. Prichard on what is now known as Prichard creek, one of the tributaries of the north fork of the Cœur d'Alene river. In early days, or, to be more definite, in 1884, some controversy arose as to whether Prichard should have the credit of the discovery or his companions. The writer, however, who came into the Cœur d'Alenes early in 1884, after considerable research and interviewing, concluded that Prichard deserved the honor. Prichard was preceded though by prospectors who left the country shortly before the discovery of gold. * * * Near the site of the present Murray the actual discovery of placer gold is said to have been made, but as the party became separated, it is doubtful who made it, Gelatt or Prichard. It is, however, certain that the party was under the direction of Prichard and that if he did not dig the first prospect hole and wash the first pan of pay dirt, he was entitled to be considered the discoverer of the creek."

Unfortunately, the few extant accounts of the preliminary prospecting which resulted in the discovery of the Cœur d'Alene placers can not be harmonized. Mr. Prichard and the men who were with him have either died or left the country, so that it is impossible to interview them, and as far as known, they have left no complete accounts of their doings. Mr. Prichard prepared a history of his adventures and experiences, but it was destroyed by fire while yet in manuscript form. According to the account of Adam Aulbach, who claims that his article in the Oregonian was the result of careful and exhaustive research, made in 1884, when all the original discoverers could be seen and interviewed, Irwin traded his stock of provisions in 1881 to W. Edson and Bob Fanning for a horse and departed for Colorado. Fanning and Edson met Prichard and arranged with him for an expedition into the mountains to the north. Proceeding to Beaver creek, they prospected it for several days without finding anything, then returned to Miner's cabin, about twelve miles distant. They then made a trip to Canyon creek, at that time named Miller creek, which they also prospected without success. Disgusted, Fanning and Edson set out for civilization, while Prichard again returned to the "cabin."

Some letters Mr. Prichard had written to outside parties either having been too enthusiastic or having been misconstrued, a crowd of gold-seekers was incited to rush into the "cabin" and Evolution. When Prichard could not show them any placer ground they threatened to lynch him and came near carrying their threat into execution, but wiser counsels eventually prevailed.

In June, 1882, Prichard again went to Beaver creek, accompanied this time by —— Gelatt and Philip Markson. In a little gulch near the site of the present Delta they found an old prospect hole, dug, as was learned later, by Dawson, Kirby, Dempsey and Perry. No pay dirt was discovered. The party then cut its way through the forest to the north fork of the Cœur d'Alene, losing Gelatt en route. The old man, though sixty-five years of age, was active, robust and independent, and it was his custom to separate himself from his companions whenever he chose. This time his absence was protracted through several days. The other members of the party gave up hope of ever seeing him again and pushed on up the north fork through the forest to the mouth of what is now named Prichard creek, which they resolved to explore, notwithstanding the fact that their supply of provisions was getting low. At the site of old Eagle City they stopped to rest and prospect. Here they were rejoined, to their great joy, by Gelatt, who had been doing a little prospecting on his own account, but had found nothing. William Gerrard came into camp next day with a small supply of provisions, having been true to his promise to follow up the other prospectors. This party discovered, it is claimed, some gold near their camp and one of its members made the discovery near Murray which caused the great influx of miners.

The same story is told by Mrs. Prichard, who is simply rehearsing what her husband told her, in substance as follows: Prichard remained at Evolution on the south fork during 1880, developing and prospecting, but in 1881 he started alone for the north fork of the Cœur d'Alene on his regular annual prospecting trip. He crossed Evolution mountain north of Beaver creek, having to cut his way through the heavy timber and undergrowth that then covered the country. From Beaver creek he crossed the low range on to what is now Prichard creek, then turned up Eagle creek and ascended that stream nine or ten miles, or about to the mouth of what later became known as Tributary gulch. Here he found some excellent prospects, so good indeed that he remained until the first heavy snow fell, when he turned his face toward home. Upon reaching Prichard creek he found that rain had been falling there instead of snow, so he determined to prospect in that vicinity awhile. He worked the site of the present Murray on one corner of what afterward became known as Widow's claim, obtaining excellent results. After six weeks of toil he was driven back to Evolution by the heavy snowfalls. From one pan of Prichard creek dirt he washed $42.

In 1882 he returned to the north fork, accompanied by William Dempsey, —— Fanning, Gelatt and Phil Markson. They found some diggings near the mouth of Eagle creek and spent most of the summer building and preparing to work the ground. Prichard for some reason unknown did not lead the party to his discovery of the year before on Prichard creek.

In March, 1883, Mr. Prichard located, in the vicinity of the present Murray, the Discovery group, consisting of four claims, one of which was for his son Jesse, one, the Pacific, later known as the Murray, for Mrs. C. A. Schultz, of Michigan; one, the Lane, for Mrs. Mary H. Lane, of Illinois (this is the claim which subsequently became known as the "Widow's claim"), and one for Willard O. Endicott, a son of Mr. Prichard's old lieutenant. In each of these Prichard was to have a half interest for working and management. Besides the Discovery group he took a great many other claims on the creek bank for different friends by power of attorney. Gelatt took a claim which developed into one of the leading producers in the camp. Dempsey located placer ground about a mile above Eagle.

Mrs. Prichard gives it as her belief that there is no truth in the assertion that the man who afterward became her husband was threatened with lynching in 1882, or at any other time. Robert T. Horn, who came to the country in August of that year, believes the story, however, and William Osburn says he was with the party who threatened to inflict this summary punishment for an imaginary wrong, but he fixes the date as May, 1883. He says the gold-hunters came to Prichard and urged that he show them the place where he had made his discoveries. The latter expostulated with them that a trip to the place was useless at that season of the year and very arduous. They said the journey could not be worse than the one they had taken and still urged him to become their guide. At length he yielded. He led them to the spot where gold had been discovered, but the ground was covered so deep with snow that no prospecting could be done. The gold-hunters then became angry and talked of lynching their guide, whereupon William Osburn, who was with the party, called their attention to the fact that they came to the country against Prichard's wishes (for he desired to keep his discovery a secret from all except the members of a certain order of liberalists to which he belonged), that they had been accommodated by him and that they were utterly without excuse for a display of anger or violence. Apparently they saw the injustice of their position, for they desisted from further threats against Prichard's life.

As just intimated, Mr. Prichard wished very much to save the best locations, and indeed all locations, for his friends of the Liberal League. In 1888 the Spokane Review published what it claimed to be a copy of one of these letters. Though the writer can not be absolutely sure of its authenticity, it is here reproduced and given for what it is worth:

EVOLUTION, Jan. 7, 1883.

Mr. C——:

Dear Sir—As I came across your name in the Truthseeker, I take the liberty of addressing you a few lines in hopes of giving my "liberal friends" a little assistance. I can not enter into details in a short letter, but will give enough to give you an understanding of what I wish and will ask you as a gentleman and brother liberal not to make it known outside the Liberal League and its members.

I have made a discovery of a gold-bearing country that will give employment to at least 15,000 to 20,000 men. There are two streams that I have prospected well; one is sixteen to twenty-five miles long, as near as I can judge; the other twelve to sixteen miles and an average width of sixty to seventy rods; have found gold on three other streams of near the same size, but have not tested them enough to know how they will pay. The two streams I speak of will pay their whole length and probably the most of their tributaries, with an abundance of good timber and water. Bedrock from five to twelve feet. Gold coarse and of good quality. There are two good and natural town sites where will be built cities representing thousands in less than two years, and the country is traversed with hundreds of mineral bearing lodes of quartz. And now for good reasons which I have not time to explain I would like to see as much of this go into the hands of the liberals as possible, and also see them build a city where they can have their own laws and enough of this vast mining region to support it, which they can do if they will go at it cool and work together. I have spent four years here by myself looking and working it up. I first discovered and located a lode on the Mullan road, and not having much means to open it up, I spent all of my spare time looking for placers, not anticipating finding extensive mines, only something to help me open my lode, but I have found a richer and bigger section than I supposed lay undiscovered in the Rocky range, and now if you will convey the purport of what I give you to as many leagues as you can on this coast, and request them to get together and keep this information to themselves, they can secure the "lion's share." I am in the mountains, fifty miles from a postoffice, and can do but little in winter, for the snow gets from three to four feet deep here. I will give directions how to get there and what is needed. My location I call "Evolution," as that is the name of my lode. It is on the old Mullan road to Montana. I am fifty miles east of Fort Cœur d'Alene and twenty-three miles east of the old mission. The Northern Pacific railroad runs within twelve miles of the post, where there is a town called Rathdrum. Parties coming will want pack animals, as the new mines are back from my place on the road forty miles in the mountains, with but poor pack trails yet, as I have not had time to cut them out more than enough to get through, and they will want supplies for a month or two, as there will be no chance of getting anything after leaving the post at present. Probably the best place for those that have to buy horses would be to stop at Spokane Falls, Washington Territory, which is thirty miles from the post, and perhaps they might do better in provisions and groceries, tools, etc.

Now, if there are many that conclude to come they might leave the impression along the road that they were going to Montana and give as many liberals as possible a chance to get in before they get up an excitement.

I shall be down about the middle of April and that is as soon as they need to get to the post, as they can't get into the mountains until the water runs down, and sometimes it keeps up until the middle of May, so they need not be in a hurry getting an early start. There are but three or four that have a knowledge of it (the discovery of gold) here, and that is merely a suspicion. They have agreed to keep it. I am a little afraid of one of them or I would have waited a little longer, but shall try to get ready. I wanted to prospect a little more before a rush commenced, for it will surely come. Now, hoping that my friends may profit by the knowledge I have given them, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

A. J. PRICHARD.

Such letters as the foregoing sent to members of Liberal Leagues in Montana, Colorado and elsewhere induced quite a stampede into the gold belt of the Cœur d'Alenes in 1883. The secret was not well kept by the liberal people. The news was spread abroad and soon reached the miners of the Black Hills, who began pouring into the new Mecca of the gold-seeker in June. When they arrived they found that nearly all the valuable placer ground along the creek had been taken by Prichard for his friends through power of attorney. Not to be baffled, they at once began jumping the best claims. Prichard, Gelatt, Fisher and Boblett saw that their locations for absent persons would not be respected, so they sent to the Palouse country for friends residing in that farming district. At least fifty responded, coming in by every species of conveyance and soon reaching the gold fields, for they had only a short distance to come. Mr. Horn tells us that about the same time a third district party of twenty or thirty, under the leadership of William Stilwell, Barney McAleer, William Osburn and a man named Eumas, came in and that the three-cornered clash naturally arising out of those conditions was the beginning of the troubles in the gold mining district. At first claims were held by those who could muster the greatest show of force to defend their real or pretended rights, but the numerous disputes were later taken into the courts and made the subject of protracted and costly litigation.

The rush of the spring and summer of 1883 was a small affair compared with that of the ensuing fall, winter and spring. Among those whose attention was attracted to the new mining district by the reports circulated in the early months of 1883 and confirmed by subsequent developments was H. C. Davis, of the Northern Pacific railroad, who saw in the Cœur d'Alene mining excitement an opportunity to secure patronage for his line and also perhaps to induce the permanent settlement of a region contigous to his road. He therefore caused the circulation of a pamphlet describing the new mining district in glowing language. The Northern Pacific gold circular has become famous in the history of the camp as the chief cause of that great winter rush of 1883-4. It represented that $100 a day to the man were being taken out of the rimrock of the gulches, while in the gulches $25 to $40 per diem per man were being panned.

"The claims are very rich," says this circular, "and are located in the gulches of the north fork of the Cœur d'Alene river, Eagle, Prichard and Beaver creeks, streams running into the Cœur d'Alene river. Rich placer deposits have already been discovered for a considerable distance on Prichard creek and the same distance on Eagle creek, the creeks being known by the latter name from the point where they come together. Nuggets have been found which weigh $50, $100, $166 and $200. An intense excitement has sprung up in regard to the quartz deposits of this district, the immediate occasion of this being a 'find' of a valuable quartz lode at the head of Prichard creek. The vein has been traced on the surface for a distaince of five hundred feet and the outcroppings are very prominent. The ore taken from the vein shows a great amount of free gold, in fact, it fairly glistens. * * *

"The most extensive galena belt known at the present day is being developed on Beaver creek. The vein can be readily traced on the surface for five or six miles, the ore carrying from eighty to ninety ounces of silver and 35 to 40 per cent. lead. * * *

"Such is a brief sketch of the Cœur d'Alene mines, which surpass in richness and volume the most fabulous quartz and placers ever discovered, even the famous deposits of 'Potosi' being inferior to those which underlie the mountains of the Cœur d'Alenes. As the mines of the old world, some of which have been worked since the eleventh century, are still employing thousands of men, the conclusion to be drawn in regard to the Cœur d'Alenes, a region far superior in every way, is that they are inexhaustible, and although thousands may work them, there will still be room for thousands more."

Unquestionably the many who poured into the Cœur d'Alene country over the crests of snow-clad and forbidding mountain ranges during the memorable winter of 1883-4 knew that the statements of the circular were gross exaggerations, but they all thought that without doubt a rich mining region had been discovered, and they accordingly poured into the country despite the warnings of the press and of experienced men. It was estimated that there were fully one thousand men in the district by the middle of February.

Of course, there were ambitious towns in Montana and Washington desirous of gaining as much as possible by the rush and in a very short time numerous routes to the mining districts had been constructed and their promoters were vieing with each other for public favor. As a matter of historical interest, the principal routes of travel may be alluded to briefly.

The Jackass trail was one of the best. In order to take it the traveler left the railroad at Rathdrum, in Kootenai county, traveled by stage to Cœur d'Alene City, thence by steamer to Kingston, where a train of thirty saddle horses were in readiness to convey passengers to Jackass, a point on the Mullan road three miles above Kingston, and from that over the divide to Eagle City by way of Beaver. It was stated that by this route passengers reached their destination in the evening of the day upon which they started from Cœur d'Alene City.

The North Fork route was over a trail used by the Indians long before the foot of white man ever rested on the soil of the Northwest. It was also the high water trail used in early days by packers between Wallula and Helena.

The Thompson Falls route was in course of construction in the spring of 1884. It left Thompson Falls, Montana, the most easterly point on the railroad from which access could be had to the mines, and proceeded up Prospect creek to the summit, thence past the head of Prichard creek and through the towns of Sullivan City, Raven City and Murrayville and down the creek to Eagle.

The Belknap trail was an important route, connecting the town in Montana from which it took its name with Eagle City. It became the mail route as soon as a postoffice was established in Eagle, and later a telegraph line between the two towns followed it. The town of Belknap was favored by the wealth and powerful influence of the Northern Pacific, which of course advocated the Belknap route.

By no means least in importance, though mentioned last in this review, was the Trout Creek trail. This was referred to by the Eagle as "the great snow trail about which so many columns of description were written during the winter." "Hundreds of people," says that newspaper, "wrote glowing accounts of the perils of the passage to Eagle City by way of Trout creek, but never an accident occurred from the time it was opened until the bottom fell out of it when the snow went off. During the winter it was the main inlet and outlet for the mines, and it is reported that with some little work a good trail and wagon road can be built into Eagle. Trout Creek is a station on the railway midway between Belknap and Thompson Falls and distant from Eagle about thirty-five miles."

The first town laid out in the Cœur d'Alenes was Eagle City. It took its name from Eagle creek, which was so denominated, it is said, from the fact that from time immemorial a certain tree on its bank near the spot on which the town was built was used by eagles as a nesting place. The tree was a high cottonwood without limb or branch below forty feet. At this height, however, a cluster of limbs branched out, furnishing support for the weather-beaten and time-worn nest in which the eagles had reared their young, the Indians said, for at least forty years.

Eagle City was a magic word in the years 1883-4. The history of the town was that of a pioneer mining camp; its decline was as rapid as its rise. We are informed that in March, 1884, town property was in great demand, lots bringing from $200 to $2,000; also that for one or two established business houses offers of $10,000 were refused. The Cœur d'Alene Nugget March 22, 1884, tells us that twenty new business houses were opened in the mining district during the preceding week. By the same issue we are informed that stoves were the highest-priced commodities in camp, the Sibley variety, which were nothing more than conical sheet-iron structures, each with a door and place for a stovepipe, selling for from $30 to $40; sheet-iron box stoves for from $20 to $80, and ordinary cook stoves from $75 to $150; also that Hood & Company, at an enormous expense and in the face of tremendous obstacles, had established the first saw mill in the mines, a steam mill with a capacity of 14,000 feet each twenty-four hours. The mill was brought on sleighs through Fourth of July canyon and by boat up the north fork. It tells us that the Eagle City Bank had the honor of having brought the first safe into the mines; a Herring's fire proof, weighing about two hundred and fifty pounds. The safe was dragged in over the Trout Creek trail by two men. In the same number appears a fiat, promulgated by the residents of the district, that no Chinaman shall ever enter the camp on pain of expulsion or death and the expulsion of the person importing such Chinaman. The business directory set forth in its columns is:

Lawyers: S. C. Hyde, W. H. Johnson, Charles W. O'Neil, French, Woody & Marshall, William Scallon, W. T. Stoll, L. H. Prather, L. B. Nash, J. M. Kinnaird, Maloney & Trumbull; real estate agents: L. F. Butler & F. A. Wickersham, A. P. Benton & Company (W. E. Hunt), Charles A. Webster; general stores, MacKenzie & Evans, Samuel H. Hays (First and leading merchant), Shelton & Cunningham; meat market, Moffitt & Wise; hardware, H. J. Plume; Eagle City Bank; saw mill, Hood & Company; forwarding company, B. C. Eckers & J. F. Wardner; barber shop, Parker & Boyer; physicians, E. Thiele, Fred Quimby, H. O. Beeson & P. B. Williams, J. B. Patterson; restaurants, Matt Brown & Company, the Pioneer, E. Y. Jeffrey, proprietor; lodging houses, the Cœur d'Alene, Carey & Carlton, proprietors, the Arlington, Kuebler & Vedder, proprietors; paints, L. P. Coughlin; builders, D. W. McIntosh, J. A. Rives; mining recorder and justice of the peace, Frank Points; notary public, James F. Topliff; saloons, Cole Brothers, the Daisy, Coy & Hess, proprietors, the Comstock, Fender & Shaw, proprietors.

"The most aggravating evil which vexes this camp at present," says the Nugget, "is not poorly cooked beans, bad whiskey, dead beats nor the dreadful condition of our trails. All these are bad in their way, but are glorious when compared to the difficulty and uncertainty of getting our mail. In the early days of the camp a weekly mail was established by the way of Fort Coeur d'Alene. It was brought in on snow shoes, or otherwise, as the conditon of the trail allowed. Those who subscribed certain amounts per month, say $30, received all their mail for this sum. All others paid fifty cents a letter. This system worked very satisfactorily to the public and paid very remunerative wages to the carriers so long as there were only two or three hundred men in camp. Now that thousands are here, and tens of thousands coming, the carriers may be making money, but the public are far from happy. No contracts can now be made by the month and no less than fifty cents will secure a letter. This works a great hardship upon business men, who have lately established themselves in the mines. The mail comes very slowly and with perplexing uncertainty, two weeks being frequently required to bring a letter from Spokane Falls. But this is not all. There is no postoffice in the mines. Out of mere accommodation and without a cent of remuneration W. J. Shelton & Company have permitted letters to be left at their store. The constant interruptions and vexations occasioned of late, however, have caused Mr. Shelton to object, and Kuebler & Vedder have accepted the irksome task of keeping and distributing the mail. Something must be done and that right speedily. Many a poor fellow is in camp who cannot pay fifty cents for a letter; many a one who could do so cannot get his letters with any degree of promptness or certainty."

But the trouble about mail was of short duration, for in April A. F. Parker received his commission as postmaster, also a mail key, supply of stamps, etc., and by about the 20th a postoffice, known as Eagle, was opened for business. Mail arrived and departed Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week.

The Eagle, another pioneer paper of the district, gives us the following picture of conditions in Eagle City in April, 1884:

> At this stage of its growth and development, Eagle presents the appearance of a "hard" place. Its buildings are located on lots from which snow to the depth of four feet has been excavated and dumped into the street, so that between the buildings and the streets there is a solid wall of snow. The buildings are composed of logs and shakes. Great tents with gaudily painted signs loom up in endless variety before the spectator, while from within come the sound of revelry and strains of music, the click of chips and the metallic chink of hard cash as it passes over the bar. The streets and places of public resort are thronged night and day with miners and prospectors waiting for the snow to disappear so they can get off into the mountains on their annual prospecting tour. Then there are the packers and transient population, a tough looking crowd, but very orderly, who stand around enjoying the luxury of a sun bath. On the corners are knots of men talking mines and mining, and criticizing ore specimens that pass from hand to hand. The stores are thronged discussing the locality and merits of the last new thing in rich strikes; the centers are strewn with specimens of quartz from the different districts; while on the street there is an ever changing panorama of countenances as the crowd diverges itself. The report of a pistol shot will bring a hundred men to their feet for an instant, and the saloons will disgorge twice as many more in the same moment, all on the alert to catch a sensation, which has never occurred yet. Then there are the arrival of pack trains and toboggans, in a more or less advanced stage of dilapidation from hard usage on the different trails. On all hands carpenters and mechanics are busy erecting shanties for temporary occupancy, but talk with whom you will you find that the utmost confidence is expressed in the outcome of the camp; that we have the mineral here to make the biggest camp in America and that the business men are conservative enough not to be guilty of exaggerating the mineral wealth of our placer fields and quartz ledges in order to encourage a wild stampede. On all hands there is a general disposition to tell the truth, to let the camp sustain itself and to await developments on the more promising quartz prospects before booming the camp. The business men of Eagle include representatives of every state in the union, and it is a promising sign that they are purchasing town property and mining ground and are all preparing to erect larger and more commodious places of business as soon as the material can be procured. This is about the status of Eagle to-day. Every branch of business is well represented. We have two banks, several stores of general merchandise and more saloons and lodging houses than you can shake a stick at.
>
> Thousands of dollars worth of real estate transfers are made and recorded daily, and thousands more are being invested in substantial buildings and other business enterprises. No lawlessness exists.

While in 1883 Eagle City was practically the only town, the influx that winter and in 1884 gave it numerous rivals and by the fall of that year Murrayville had gained the lead. Other towns which came into existence during the twelvemonth were: Beaver City, which in April had three stores, two saloons and a number of dwelling houses; Carbon City, six miles further up Beaver creek, near the then famous "Sunset" galena lode; Butte City, later named Littlefield, on Prichard creek, about seven miles west of Eagle City, which contained in May about thirty buildings; Raven City, on Prichard creek, six miles above Murrayville, a way station on the Thompson Falls route, and supplied in April with eleven saloons, three general merchandise stores, and a number of restaurants and lodging houses; and Myrtle, on Trail creek at the intersection of Placer and Potosi gulches, containing business establishments owned by Wardner & Company, Coy & Hess, William Osburn, William Buzzard and E. Bolger. It is probable that other towns were also laid out in 1884.

The placer mines of the Coeur d'Alenes were really rich, and while many who flocked in were disappointed, as is invariably true of mining excitements, many others reaped a rich harvest. Perhaps the principal drawback to development was the unfortunate litigation arising out of conflicting claims to the same ground. The United States statutes allowed each man to claim twenty acres of placer ground, and to hold it legally by doing a comparatively small amount of development work each year. Many farmers from the Palouse country and elsewhere and many others whose business was not mining, took advantage of the law to hold rich ground, while they gave much of their attention to other pursuits. Mining men who had come long distances to secure claims and make a stake working them were naturally chagrined at this condition of things and jumped claims without scruple whenever they found the letter of the law had not been complied with. According to established custom among mining men, miners' meetings were held at different times and laws governing the districts were enacted. By this means it was sought to reduce the size of a claim to ten acres. Of course the United States statutes were held paramount to any local enactments, where disputes were taken into the courts, and the original claimant eventually secured the ground in all cases where the testimony clearly showed priority of location, and a disposition to comply with the law in good faith.

One claim which became the subject of litigation was especially famous in the early days, not alone for its richness, but because of the wit and humor which grew out of the trouble concerning it. This was the "Widow's claim," heretofore mentioned as having been located by A. J. Prichard. It, along with other claims, was jumped by miners. Perhaps the most persistent of the widows who claimed it was Mrs. A. M. Eddington, a woman of about forty-five summers. Mrs. Prichard says she was an impostor out and out; that she had no right whatever to the mining claim and no color of right, and that she sought to secure an interest in it by inducing Mr. Prichard to marry her. This he refused to do. The real widow, the one for whom the claim was taken, was Mrs. Mary H. Lane, of Illinois, who came to the mines in 1884 and was an important witness for Mr. Prichard in his various lawsuits.

Another subject of litigation was the location of the mining region, jurisdiction over it being claimed originally by both Kootenai and Shoshone counties. At the June term of court the case was decided by Judge Norman Buck in favor of Shoshone county.

The year was one of great activity on the gulches of Prichard and Eagle creeks in developing placer mines, and in all parts of the region in prospecting for both placer and quartz locations. While many claims yielded an ounce of gold a day to the man and some others gave even larger cleanups, it was found that the greatest wealth of the country was beyond the reach of the poor man and could only be garnered by men with capital to install large enterprises. Accordingly, some effort was made to interest capital in ditch schemes and other developments, and a few enterprises of the kind were begun.

In its issue of May 7, 1884, the Coeur d'Alene Nugget gave a general view of activities at that time. As affording a glimpse of the golden days, it is here quoted at length:

All the mines have yielded finely this week. The George B. Ives, H. E. Wolf and the Widow continue to yield over an ounce a day to the man. Missoula gulch lacks water, but is recognized as ranking among the best paying claims. Lucky gulch and the Gelatt are getting ready to turn out handsome quantities of dust. This week settles the fact that Eagle creek is as rich as the most sanguine have predicted. Oregon and all the side gulches are giving first-class prospects. Everybody in camp is excited over quartz. Discoveries are reported daily that are too fabulous for belief. The richness of the placers is universally acknowledged and the day of croaking has passed. Many an old prospector, however, will not condescend to look for placer ground, because such magnificent returns are assured from the quartz. Gen. A. P. Curry has interviewed the bankers and business men of Eagle and found that exactly 58 1-3 pounds of gold dust were handled by them in the last two weeks. This is doubtless only a small part of the dust taken out, most miners preferring to keep the dust themselves.

Buckskin gulch has given the camp the principal excitement of the past week. Hundreds of men have flocked thither to witness the very unusual spectacle of men picking gold from the earth instead of washing it out in a pan. This is about what they witnessed. Robert Williams, David Bryant, John F. Hennessy and Frank Barnes own claim No. 3 and upon striking bedrock got from $2 to $20 to the pan. The entire bedrock averaged $5 to the pan. One nugget weighed $45. The excitement was intensified by Nate Vestal at the mouth of Buckskin finding ounce diggings in the gravel.

Two cleanups on the Widow this week netted 60 ounces and 8 pennyweights and 88 ounces respectively. Work has been commenced on a ditch to be taken from Alder creek. This ditch will be two and one-half miles long and greatly increase the production of the Widow. From the Webfoot, Gen. A. P. Curry washed $21.50 from one pan of dirt selected at random. The total yield of the Webfoot thus far has been something over 71 pounds or $10,052.65.

Frank L. Robertson's claim in Fancy gulch is being worked by a force of eight men. Fancy gulch is a tributary to Eagle creek and flows in on the east side about a mile above Eagle. The gold is identical in appearance with that taken from Dream gulch. Fancy and Dream gulches head close together and flow in opposite directions. The Robertson claim is known as No. 6, being the sixth from the mouth. J. M. Robinson has No. 3, but has not yet opened it. A. J. Prichard located claim No. 1 in Fancy gulch, Captain James A. Fisher, No. 2, Frank Grove, No. 4 and C. C. Fink, No. 5.

One of the largest ledges yet discovered in the district is the Golden Chief. It crosses Fancy gulch at right angles and dips to the westward at an angle of about 35 degrees. It was located in December of last year by James Cronin. Messrs. Porter & Henderson are the present owners of the mine. It contains free gold in paying quantities and carries some silver. The ledge is of mammoth size, cropping out to a height of ten or twelve feet on one side of the gulch, and is from eight to forty feet wide. It can be traced readily for 1,500 feet. J. B. Stevens owns the southern extension and C. R. Teems, the northern.

The New Comstock, owned by the Homestake Company, is working four men on its ledge with excellent results. This mine is in the side of the mountain below Eagle and can be seen from portions of the town.

Ruby gulch is a tributary to Daisy, which empties into Eagle creek about a mile above town. Irvin B. Hopkins, J. M. VanHoose, George Oswalt, George Wortman, J. J. Johnson, Henry Moots and Patrick Sullivan own seven 20-acre claims in Ruby. They have been working for about eight weeks. They are digging through wash gravel and have got fair prospects from the surface down.

Dr. H. R. Littlefield, T. M. Pugh, M. C. Rudder and J. F. Calbreath own claim No. 4 on Butte gulch. A force of 14 men are at work.

The Butte Company is working on bedrock and taking out good pay. Patrick Flynn, the gentlemanly superintendent, did not wish the exact cleanups stated, but assured a Nugget reporter that they were entirely satisfactory. The Last Chance is operating a set of sluice boxes only a few yards from the sluices of the Butte Company. No other claims are being worked so far up Prichard creek.

Prospecting parties were very aggressive throughout the entire year. Encouraged, it is said, by Mr. Prichard, a number of men visited Canyon creek in April, 1884, found what they considered prospects and staked out claims. Nine-Mile was also prospected and staked and quite a rush to these canyons and to Nigger prairie was incited. It is stated that some of the early placer prospectors filed claims covering the very ground upon which the now famous silver-lead mines were later discovered, but they were looking for placer gold, and were, perhaps, without much skill in their business, so failed to see the riches that lay before their eyes.

It was stated that by the middle of August two thousand locations of placer mining ground, embracing tracts varying from 160 acres to fractions, were recorded on the books of the Coeur d'Alene district alone, and it was only one of five districts then in existence, the other four being Summit, Beaver, Evolution and Eagle. Of course the usual excitement and stampeding attended this activity, and the population showed itself true to the usual instincts of a mining class in flocking en masse to each point where a find was made or reported. Several discoveries of real merit were made this year in the now famous silver-lead belt of the south fork country, but of these more anon.

The Coeur d'Alenes fortunately did not experience any such reign of outlaws and desperadoes as did Oro Fino and Florence placer districts, but there was some bloodshed during the early days. The first homicide of the region was committed in April, 1884, by T. F. Richards, who shot and killed Walter McDonald. The deed was held justifiable by the coroner's jury, as the killing was plainly in self-defense.

The second, of which record has been found, was the shooting of Thomas Steele by D. S. Ferguson. From the testimony adduced by the coroner's inquest it appears that Steele was ill-treating a drunken cyprian and that Ferguson interfered in her behalf, whereupon Steele drew a revolver and struck him a violent blow over the head. He then stepped back a few paces and fired at Ferguson, but missed his mark. Ferguson then shot him, inflicting a mortal wound.

A homicide which attracted wide attention and roused the community to a high pitch of excitement was the killing of John Enright by Henry Bernard, July 2, 1884. The victim was a compositor in the office of the Pioneer, of which paper Bernard was editor. It appeared from the testimony at the preliminary hearing that Enright had been discharged and paid the afternoon of the homicide; that he came to the office for his blankets, but instead of taking them and going quietly about his business kept complaining to Bernard of the shabby treatment which he claimed had been given him. Bernard told him to go two or three times, but he still hung around the office. Finally Bernard drew a revolver and pointed it at him, telling him he must leave or get hurt. Enright received the threats in a jocular manner, and soon the fatal shot was fired.

By change of venue Bernard was tried at Lewiston in September. The jury found him guilty of manslaughter; Judge Buck sentenced him to eight years' imprisonment, and he was confined in the state penitentiary for a time, but was eventually pardoned by Governor Shoup.

Ever since the first settlement of northern Shoshone county a natural desire had existed among the people to have the county seat nearer than Pierce City. There was some talk of dividing the county, and giving the southern portion to Nez Perces county, but objection to this was made by the few residents still in Pierce and on Weippe prairie. One hundred and eighty thousand acres had just been surveyed; of this one hundred thousand was thought to be good farming land and it was felt that such a rich section of country could not long remain unsettled. The residents hoped that as soon as it became peopled they might have a more convenient county government than Nez Perces could furnish. The matter was finally compromised by the passage, in the legislature of 1883-5, of a bill providing for the removal of the county seat temporarily to Murray and for a special election to be held in Shoshone county the first Monday in June, 1885, for the purpose of selecting a county seat. The bill was signed by the governor just before Christmas, 1884.

At the special election held pursuant to the provisions of this act the vote was as follows: Summit precinct—Murray, 636, Delta, 31; Beaver precinct—Murray 25, Delta 264; Littlefield precinct—Murray 70, Delta 14; Myrtle precinct—Murray 100, Delta 77; Mullan precinct—Murray 121, Delta 2; Canyon Creek precinct—Murray 19, Delta 5; Kingston precinct—Murray 7, Delta 30; Coeur d'Alene precinct—Murray 42, Delta 1; Ellensburg precinct—Murray 53, Delta 3; Big Jam precinct—Murray 1, Delta 6; Pierce precinct—Murray 1, Delta 15; Murray's total, 1,075; Delta's, 457. Add to these two votes cast for Beaver (the former name of Delta), two for Eagle and one for Littlefield, and we have a total vote in the county of 1,537.

A comparatively few persons, perhaps 4,000, spent the cold winter of 1884-5 in the Coeur d'Alenes. One rather amusing incident, illustrative of the character of a mining people, occurred on New Year's day, when about fifty men concluded they had urgent business at the head of Eagle creek. What caused the stampede none seemed to know definitely, but notwithstanding the fact that the thermometer's finger was down below the zero mark and playing around the figure twenty-five, the miners trudged through two feet of snow for fifteen miles to locate claims on land they could not see, much less prospect. Claims were staked on the main stream and on the various tributaries and the adventurers, having peacefully accomplished the object of their mission, returned to Murray.

As the season advanced the camp took on an air of activity and progress. A correspondent of the Lewiston Teller, writing under date March 5, 1885, speaks of the great confidence manifested in the district by almost all the miners, and states that he counted eleven buildings under construction in Myrtle, some of them large ones, that there was a steady rush to the bars of Beaver creek and Beaver City was enjoying a healthy boom in consequence. "Murray," he said, "is fast building up and assuming the air of a mining metropolis, and property here has a value outside of what is justified by present appearances. Real estate changes hands daily and business prospects are bright. Two shingle mills are the latest improvements and parties are daily in search of business locations. There are twelve stores where goods of all kinds can be procured, three drug stores, several restaurants and a hotel."

In the south fork country there was also considerable activity. Only four men wintered on Nigger prairie, but by April 1st twenty-three were there and a new town known as McFarland had been laid out. In a short time McFarland had a rival half a mile distant, named Mullan from the man who constructed the military road through the country. The occasion for the platting of these towns was the discovery of the Hunter, Evening, Morning and other mines.

While the year 1885 was one of great development in the gold belt and much mining was done by the primitive methods in vogue during the earliest days of the placer fields, yet it is plainly evident that the district was in a state of transition from primitive mining to more advanced methods. Even in the creek bottoms, where the gold could be most easily secured, many of the miners spent the early spring months in preliminary work, rather than in direct production, and considerable was this year invested in ditches and other essentials of hydraulic mining. The Coeur d'Alene Water & Supply Company was busy constructing what, in its inception, had been known as the Coulter canal, intended to furnish water for the supply of Murray and for the working of hillside claims, also to float to points where needed along its course mining timbers, lumber, fuel, etc. In October there were 285 men at work on the bed rock flume at Eagle, an enterprise which was claimed to be the most gigantic ever undertaken in the history of placer mining up to that date. According to contract with miners, the Bedrock Pool, which was constructing it, was obligated to put in a bedrock flume from the north fork of the Coeur d'Alene river at a point below the mouth of Eagle creek, along said Eagle creek to its confluence with Prichard creek; thence along said Prichard creek to the mouth of Butte creek, the excavation to be sixteen feet wide at the bottom.

By November the last pipe on the Beaver and Potosi ditch was put in place, completing an aqueduct from the head of Beaver creek to American gulch, distance thirteen miles. Across Pony gulch 1,584 feet of twenty-inch piping were laid. The mass of heavy iron was put in place by the aid of water power so applied as to haul the large pipes up the mountain side to the places where needed. It was planned to continue the ditch to Placer and Trail gulches and beyond. The same company also constructed a smaller ditch from Beaver creek, below Carbon, to Potosi gulch.

But while these larger enterprises were being pushed with vigor, the miner who for lack of capital must content himself with smaller things was busily at work. That his labor did not in all cases go unrewarded is illustrated by the day book of the Myrtle Mining Company, consisting of Pat. Mahoney, James Osborn, Mike Conners, Dick Buckingham and Dave Alvord. These men, with five or six employees working with wheel barrows on a claim a mile above Delta, are shown by their day book to have made the following clean-ups: March 24 to 28, inclusive, 1885, $495; March 30 to April 4, $1,621.50 (this clean-up included one nugget worth $165); April 7-11, $1,054.50; April 14-18, $689.50; April 21-25, $1,158; April 27-May 2, $1,188; May 9, clean-up, $1,010; May 11-16, $1,690.50; May 19-23, $1,700.15; May 26-30, $905.50; June 2-6, $585.50; June 8-13, $865.25; June 18-20, $935; June 22-27, $2,595; June 30-July 4, $2,282; July 6-11, $2,040; July 13-18, $1,916.50; July 21-25, $803; July 27-August 1, $935; August 3-4, $168; August 29-September 4, $553.50; September 5-12, $561; September 14-20, $2,878; September 21-27, $3,891; September 28-October 4, $4,131.50; October 5-11, $2,167; October 12-18, $1,385; October 19-25, $1,826.50; October 26-November 1, $2,814; November 3-8, $1,896.50; November 9-15, $1,638.50; November 16-22, $1,030; November 24-29, $1,549.50; December 1-6, $1,131; December 7-11, $707. One nugget worth $300 was taken out of this claim.

More important, however, as subsequent events proved, than all other developments of the year 1885 was that of the silver-lead properties of the south fork. These were found to produce from the surface, and such large bodies of ore were uncovered by the small developments resulting from a few months of effort that the eyes of capital were already turned in their direction and railway magnates began looking toward the Coeur d'Alenes as a promising field for future operations.

One entering the country from the west in the fall of 1885 with an intention of examining these properties would doubtless first pass up Milo creek and visit the Bunker Hill mine. This was the first claim discovered in the district. It was found in the late summer of 1885 by N. S. Kellogg and Phil. O'Rourke. The location was filed by O'Rourke September 10, 1885. By November developers starting from the discovery cut had reached one wall fifty-two feet to the south, but the north wall of the vein had not yet been found. On the same ledge with this mine was the Jackass, with a thirty-foot tunnel. Further down the creek on the third parallel vein of the system was the Omaha, located September 18, 1885, by Frank McElroy and Mike McHale, and the Buckeye, an extension of the Lackawanna, located by the same individuals. Besides these were the Stemwinder, located by F. R. Devine, J. P. Smith and C. E. Tyler, and the Tyler, located by the same persons on the same vein.

On the opposite side of the canyon from the Bunker Hill was the Sullivan, located October 2, 1885, by Con. Sullivan and Jacob Goetz, better known as "Dutch Jake." It was being opened at the time of which we are writing, and a vein 28 feet 6 inches from wall to wall had been uncovered. The Iuka, an eastern extension of the Sullivan, had been taken by J. M. Pannel and Albert Allen, and was a promising prospect. These were the principal mines in what was then known as the Yreka district in 1885. Kentucky was the name of an ambitious town in the vicinity.

Proceeding up the river six miles the visitor would arrive at Evolution, the oldest mining settlement on the river, and the first mine to attract his attention would be the Polaris, located by W. B. Heyburn, Clem Matheson and others in May, 1884. Half a mile south of this, on the same vein, was the Edner, discovered in October, 1884, and owned by Brown & Stringer. Assays of ore from these mines were said to have given as high as 303 ounces of silver and 60 per cent. lead. In the same vicinity were the Blake Brothers, the Silver Crown, the Badger and the General Grant, all slightly developed.

Between Evolution and Placer Center (Wallace) were a large number of claims, among them the Cap. Place, so named from its discoverer, Captain Place; and the George, located November 1, 1885, by Lee George, who took a ranch in the valley of the river near his claim. Near the head of Placer creek were the Silver Tip, located by Messrs. McKinlay, Holohan and Arthur; the Charter Oak, discovered by the same persons, and the Iron King, located at the same time by the same individuals, with E. J. Livermore added to their company.

Proceeding up the river nine miles from Placer Center, the visitor of 1885 came to Hunter creek, some three or four miles up which was the Hunter mine, the second claim in the entire south fork system to be discovered, Tiger being the first. Its discoverers were J. G. Hunter and F. A. Moore, Montana prospectors, and the time of its uncovering was May 15, 1884. Inside of eighteen months it was developed by a main tunnel 175 feet. Its vein was 57 feet wide, and its ore was remarkably rich. At this time the mine was bonded to Franks & Martin for $50,000. The Yolande was a northwestern extension of the Hunter, located by the same men June 3, and producing similar ore. The Evening lode, an extension of the Yolande, and belonging to the same group, was discovered by a sixty-five-foot tunnel.

Returning to Placer Center the visitor would naturally be impelled to ascend Canyon creek to the Tiger, eight miles upstream. This mine was the first silver-lead claim to reward the search of the south fork prospector, being discovered May 2, 1884. John Carton and Almeda Seymore were the fortunate mineral hunters. As soon as they had well opened their vein they bonded it to John M. Burke, of Murray, who in turn bonded it to S. S. Glidden, of St. Paul, for $35,000. In 1885 the mine was Mr. Glidden's property, with Burke and Carton holding a contingent interest. It was at that time developed by three tunnels, 575 feet long in the aggregate. Eighteen men were employed in the mine at $3.50 a day.

Directly opposite the Tiger, on the other side of Canyon creek, was the Lelande, closed in 1885 by litigation. Up the creek from the mines just described was the Silver Chief, located and owned by the Blake Brothers. Between the Tiger and the mouth of the creek, on different sides of the stream, were the Union, the Diamond Hitch, discovered May 16, 1884, by J. P. Smith, C. E. Tyler, Frank Bell and John Lennahan; the Ore-or-no-go, by Colonel W. R. Wallace, J. M. Arasmith, Oscar B. Wallace, T. H. Doud, J. B. Flute and Theodore Davis; the Black Bear, located May 4, 1884, by John Bartlett and W. S. Haskins, R. C. Vanderford buying on interest later; the Cape Horn, located by same parties May 4, 1885; the Badger, located May 10, 1885, by John Bartlett, E. J. Lee, W. S. Haskins and F. M. Prichard; the San Francisco (or Frisco), located May 16, 1885, by Charles A. Pearson: the Gem of the Mountains, located the same day by R. C. Vanderford, William Gaughn, Thomas Cavanaugh, R. M. Howell and William Barens.

On Nine Mile, which empties into the south fork near the mouth of Canyon creek, was the Black Cloud, located by Oscar Wallace May 7, 1884; the Ohio, located August 29, 1885, by Benj. McElroy, John J. Johnson and Scott McDonald; the California, located by Scott McDonald, John J. Johnson and Benj. F. McElroy August 24, 1885; and the Contact and Sweepstakes, located by these same prospectors May 7, 1884. Between Nine Mile and Canyon creeks was the Granite, located by Bartlett & Vanderford July 13, 1885, and there were several prospects in the immediate vicinity of Placer Center.

From the foregoing review of silver-lead discoveries on the south fork it will be seen that nearly all the mines which have since made the Coeur d'Alene country famous the world over were discovered and were being developed in 1884 and 1885, the years of greatest excitement, if not of greatest activity, in the gold belt of the north fork.

Some other improvements brought by the busy season of 1885 must now be mentioned. During the session of the Montana legislature that body empowered Missoula county to levy a special tax of two mills for the purpose of building a road from Thompson Falls to the Idaho line. In March the Missoula commissioners visited Murray to confer with the Shoshone county board, and the result of their conference was that a highway connecting the two territories was constructed. This road is today the only one for wagons over the Bitter Roots to Montana from this region, and it is still in use by summer immigrants.

